The minimum capital required by this act is of course higher than the requirements of existing law. This is intended to ensure greater financial strength of banks and bank and trust companies, and to prevent the influx of a great many banks and bank and trust companies of very small capital, which may be executed to follow the present period of depression. This is the whole trend of modern banking statutes. Thus the Illinois Banking Law of 1930 establishes minimum capital requirements substantially the same as those of this proposed section, while the California Banking Act of 1931 has even more stringent requirements than those of this draft, requiring for example that a bank and trust company in a city of more than two hundred thousand population have a capital of at least five hundred thousand dollars, while a bank in the same community is required to have a capital of at least three hundred thousand dollars. The commissions appointed in Indiana and Delaware to study proposed changes in banking laws have in December of 1932 and February of 1933 respectively, recommended marked increases in the minimum capital requirements of their states. The population brackets have been increased from two to three to provide greater elasticity of requirements.

With two exceptions, the minimum capital which is required by this proposed section is the same as that provided in the case of national banks. The first of these differences is that in the case of national banks, although like this draft a minimum capital of fifty thousand dollars is required in cities, boroughs, or townships the population of which is between three thousand and six thousand, a minimum capital of twenty-five thousand dollars is permitted in cities, boroughs, or townships of less than three thousand inhabitants. The trend of modern laws is away from banking institution with a capital of only twenty-five thousand dollars. In a recent statement, F. G. Awalt, Acting Comptroller of Currency, pointed out the undesirability of permitting any corporation with a capital as low as twenty-five thousand dollars to carry on a banking business, and showed by figures that the failure of such institutions during the present depression has been completely disproportionate to the number of such institutions in existence. In the recent referendum of the membership of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States on proposed banking changes in the Federal reserve system, the resolution to limit membership in the Federal reserve system to institutions with a capital of at least $50,000 was almost unanimously adopted.

Consequently this draft does not permit any bank or bank and trust company to be formed with a capital below fifty thousand dollars. The laws of Massachusetts, Maine, Arizona, Florida, California, Virginia, Nevada, Illinois, and New Jersey likewise do not permit the formation of any bank with a capital of less than fifty thousand dollars.

The second difference is that the Federal act provides that in the outlying districts of a city the population of which exceeds fifty thousand, the Comptroller of the Currency may permit the organization of national banks with a capital of one hundred thousand dollars, provided that state banks in the same area are permitted to organize with a capital of one hundred thousand dollars or less. In Pennsylvania, of course, the Comptroller cannot under this provision authorize the formation of such banks. The Federal requirement as to the acquisition of trust powers by a national bank is that it must meet the minimum requirements which the State laws establish for State bank and trust companies.

Section 402. Requisite Capital for Existing Banks or Bank and Trust Companies; Required Method of Increase.—A. The capital of a bank or a bank and trust company incorporated prior to the effective date of this act shall not be less than the minimum capital required in the case of any bank or bank and trust company, as the case may be, incorporated under this act, except that no bank or bank and trust company incorporated prior to the effective date of this act shall be required to maintain a capital of, or to increase its capital to, more than one hundred per centum above the minimum which was required by law for such bank or bank and trust company, prior to the effective date of this act.[1]

A bank or a bank and trust company which, upon the effective date of this act, has a capital below that required by this section, but not below that required by law prior to the effective date of this act, may continue to do business with such capital as it has, but it shall forthwith proceed to increase such capital by one of the following methods:

(1) It may increase its capital out of surplus or otherwise, provided that after such increase out of surplus, the bank or bank and trust company has a capital equal at least to the minimum required by this act and a surplus equal to at least twenty-five per centum of such capital.[2]

(2) It may increase its capital by the sale of additional shares at a price equal at least to the par value of such shares plus twenty-five per centum thereof, provided that the assent of the directors and of the shareholders to such increase is procured in the manner prescribed by this act for any increase in capital.[3]

(3) If such increase is not made by either of these methods within six months after the effective date of this act, the bank or bank and trust company shall increase its capital to the minimum required by this act, in the following manner. It shall, at the close of each dividend period, or at least annually, if no dividend is paid, credit to its surplus an amount equal to not less than one-half of its net earnings for such period, until the capital and the surplus together equal an amount not less than twenty-five per centum above the minimum capital required by this act, at which time a sufficient portion of the surplus shall be credited to capital to make the capital at least equal to the minimum required by this act and to leave a surplus of at least twenty-five per centum thereof.[4]

B. Unless such increase is made by an actual sale of shares,[5] a bank or a bank and trust company may increase its capital to the minimum required by this act without action of its shareholders. The cashier or treasurer, as the case may be, or any other officer to whom such duties are delegated by the by-laws, shall, at the time such increase has actually been made pursuant to the provisions of this section, file articles of amendment with the Department of State, procure a certificate of amendment, and file such articles and certificate with the recorder of deeds, in the manner provided by this act, except that such articles need not, unless the increase is made by an actual sale of shares, state that advertisement has been made, or notice given, or action taken by the shareholders.[6]

1. This entire section is new.

The minimum capital requirements established by this draft for banks or bank and trust companies to be incorporated hereunder is based upon considerations both of practicableness and of affording protection to parties interested in such institutions. Clearly, they should be applied to existing institutions. For practical reasons, however, it has been provided that the minimum requirements established by this act shall not require any existent institution to have a capital of more than one hundred per centum above the requirements of present law. The only population bracket affected by this rule is that of cities the population of which exceeds fifty thousand, in which case the respective requirements would be one hundred thousand dollars instead of two hundred thousand dollars in the case of banks and two hundred fifty thousand dollars instead of three hundred thousand dollars in the case of bank and trust companies.

Of course a great many existent banks and bank and trust companies would not under this act have to change their capital structure at all under this act, or at most would only have to convert from surplus to capital. Thus, of the one hundred seventy-six banks now operating in Pennsylvania, one hundred, or 56.82% would not be required to change their capital structure at all, or at most, would merely have to convert surplus into capital, while of the two hundred eighty-six bank and trust companies, two hundred two, or 70.63% would likewise not have to change their capital structure at all, or at most, would have to convert surplus into capital. The remaining banks, as pointed out in footnotes 3 and 4 to this section, are permitted to make such increase of capital either by a sale of shares or gradually and in a manner which will not work hardship upon them.

2. If a bank or a bank and trust company has a surplus which is so great that such bank or bank and trust company can convert from surplus into capital enough to render the capital sufficient to meet the minimum requirements of this act, without impairing surplus below the minimum required by this act, it seems clear that it should be permitted to do so. In the case of a bank or bank and trust company to be incorporated under this act only a twenty-five per centum paid-in surplus is required, although provision is made for the accumulation of an ultimate surplus of fifty per centum. It is not reasonable to require that existing banks or bank and trust companies, in attempting to credit capital from surplus in order to attain the minimum capital required by this act, have a greater paid-in surplus than is provided by this act in the case of banks or bank and trust companies to be incorporated hereunder.

3. It seems equally clear that if a bank or a bank and trust company, wishes, within a reasonable time, to increase its capital by a sale of shares, it should be permitted to do so in the regular manner prescribed by this act for an increase of capital. However, it should not be permitted to delay for an unreasonable time, the transfer of net earnings to surplus on the pretext that it plans to increase its shares. The six-month limitation is therefore introduced.

4. In the event that a bank or a bank and trust company does not choose, or is unable, to increase its capital by either of the methods discussed respectively in footnotes 2 and 3, it is required to increase its capital by an accumulation from earnings. However, in order that the shareholders may not be deprived entirely of cash dividends during such period, it is provided that only fifty per centum of net earnings must be transferred to surplus. It is, of course, clear that the fifty per centum which is temporarily transferred ultimately redounds entirely to the benefit of the shareholders. In any year, or dividend period, as the case may be, if there are no net earnings, no accumulations need, of course, be made.

5. See footnote 3 supra.

6. The increase of capital, in effect an amendment of the articles of the bank or bank and trust company, is necessitated by this act. Actually, therefore, when the conversion from surplus into capital, or the accumulation pursuant to the provisions of this act, has been completed, the effect is that by operation of law the articles have been amended. In order to keep the records accurate, however, articles of amendment should be filed and a certificate of amendment issued. This act provides for such procedure.

Section 403. Consideration for Shares.—A. Subscriptions for shares of a bank or a bank and trust company shall not be made payable in whole or in part with any other consideration than cash, nor to an amount less than the par value of such shares plus twenty-five per centum thereof.[1] A share shall not be created, nor a share certificate issued, until paid for in cash in full.[2] Shares of a bank or bank and trust company issued and thereafter acquired by it, in the manner authorized by law, may be disposed of by such bank or bank and trust company for such consideration as may be fixed from time to time by its bord of directors.[3]

B. The consideration for the issuance of shares by a bank or a bank and trust company as a share dividend shall be that part of the surplus or undivided profits of such bank or bank and trust company which is by this act required to be transferred to capital upon the issuance of such shares.[4]

Comments:

1. Aticle XVI, Section 7, of the Constitution provides: "No corporation shall issue stocks or bonds except for money, labor done, or money or property actually received; and all fictitious increase of stock or indebtedness shall be void". Section 17 of the Corporation Act of 1874 as amended, supra, contains a similar requirement. However, it seems clear that in the case of a bank or a bank and trust company shares should be paid for solely by cash, particularly where all capital is required to be paid-in as is the case under this act. It seems clear, also, that subscriptions for shares of a bank or a bank and trust company should not be sold for less than par plus the minimum paid-in surplus which is required by this act.
2. The proposed Business Corporation Law provides only that the certificate shall not be issued until the share is paid for. This does not seem wise in the case of a bank or a bank and trust company.
3. Where a bank or a bank and trust company has lawfully acquired shares which it has issued, it seems that in exceptional cases the bank or bank and trust company should be permitted by action of its board of directors to sell such shares for less than par, for example where it has acquired such shares by virtue of a failure of the owner thereof to pay a debt to the institution. The actual cost to the bank or a bank and trust company of such shares might be half of its par value. Although usually such procedure would not be followed by its directors, there seems to be no harm in following Section 603 of the proposed Business Corporation Law to the extent of permitting such shares to be sold for less than par.
4. See Section 402 of this draft.

Section 404. Payment of Subscription.—A. Unless otherwise provided in the subscription agreement, subscriptions for shares, whether made before or after the organization of a bank or a bank and trust company, shall be paid in full at such time, or in such installments and at such times, as shall be determined by the boards of directors.[1] Any call made by the board of directors for the payment of subscriptions shall be uniform as to all subscribers. The board of directors shall cause notice of the amount of any call and of the time and place of payment to be given at least thirty days before the call is due.[2]

B.A share of a bank or a bank and trust company shall not be created, nor a share certificate issued, until paid for in full in cash. Until such time, a subscriber shall not, by virtue of his subscription or of a partial payment thereon, become a shareholder, exercise any voting or other rights of a shareholder, or participate in any dividend of the incorporated institution.[3]

C. In the case of shares issued prior to the effective date of this act, any installments which are due shall be collected in the manner, and the incidents of such subscription or shares shall be as, provided by law prior to the effective date of this act.[4]

D. This section shall not be construed to affect in any way whatsoever the requirement of this act that the authorized capital of a bank or a bank and trust company shall be paid in full before it can commence business.[5]

Banks

Bank Act of 1876, Section 9, 7 PS Sec. 121.

Comments:

1. This proposed provision pemits subscriptions to be paid in installments, at the call of directors. This is now permissible under Section 11 of the Corporation Act of 1874, as amended, which provides, interalia, that "all subscriptions to the capital stock shall be paid in such installments and at such times as the directors may require". Section 9 of the Bank Act of 1876 simply provides that upon incorporation the remaining fifty per centum of the capital which does not have to be paid in shall be paid in installments of at least ten per centum per month.
2. While the General Corporation Act of 1874 contains no provisions for notice, the corporation laws of many other states require notice ranging from thirty to sixty days. In New Jersey and Delaware, thirty days' notice is required. Notice seems to be desirable in view of the discretionary power of the board of directors to demand payment of installments on unpaid subscriptions, and the right of a bank or a bank and trust company, under Section 605, to sell the right of a subscriber to have shares created and issued upon the payment of the balance due on his subscription.
3. This subsection is a marked deviation from the general corporation law. The nature of a share of a bank or a bank and trust company and the whole financial set-up of such institution is such that it is distinctly undesirable to have shares outstanding which are not fully paid. The Federal act provides that after the installments on the original shares have been paid no increase of capital shall even be authorized until fully paid for.
The laws of a number of the other states, which have been cited as requiring capital to be paid in full before commencing business, provide that shares shall not be issued until fully paid. This draft makes such a requirement.
4. It is clearly necessary to make special provision for the payment of installments and the incidents of shares or subscriptions thereto, issued or provided for prior to the effective date of this act. This probably would be effected by the saving clause of Section 4 of this draft. However, it seems desirable to include this provision specifically in this section.
5. This subsection is introduced as a safeguard to preclude the possibility of an interpretation that the provisions of this proposed section as to subscriptions, installments, and calls are intended as a modificaton of the rule that the authorized capital of a bank or a bank and trust company must be paid in full before it can commence business.

Section 405. Defaults in Payment of Subscriptions.—When any subscriber shall fail to pay any call upon his subscription properly made by the directors, at the time when such payment isdue, the directors may proceed to collect the amount due in the same manner as any debt to the bank or the bank and trust company, or they may sell at public sale the right of such subscriber to have a share or shares created and issued in his favor upon the payment of the balance due, but such right shall not be sold below the balance due plus the expenses of the sale, or if such right of more than one subscriber shall be put up at such sale, the proportionate expense thereof.[1] The purchase of such right, shall upon payment in full in cash of the amount bid, if in accordance with the provisions of this section, be entitled to the creation of a share and the issuance thereof to him according to the terms of the contract between the original subscriber and the bank or bank and trust company. Notice of the time and place of such sale, and of the sum due on each subscription shall be given by a single advertisement in a newspaper not more than one week prior to the day fixed for the sale. Notice shall also be given by the secretary of the bank or bank and trust company, as the case may be, to the delinquent subscriber at least twenty days prior to the day fixed for such sale.[2] If no one shall bid at least the amoutn due, plus the expnse, or the proportionate expense of the sale, as the case may be, or if the amount due, together with costs, is not collected from the subscriber, by an action at law, the amount previously paid in by the delinquent subscriber shall be forfeited to the bank or the bank and trust company and shall be credited to undivided profits.[3] If an amount in excess of the balance due and of the expense or proportionate expense, as the case may be, is obtained, such excess amount, up to the amount he has paid on his subscription, shall be paid to the subscriber.[4]

Bank Act of 1876, Section 11, 7 PS Sec. 123.

Comments:

1. Under the Corporation Act of 1874, and its amendments, supra, subscriptions may be enforced by an action at law or by sale at public auction. In the case of an action at law, the subscriber in default is made liable to the amount called for and unpaid and a penalty "at the rate of one-half of one per centum per month for the delay of such payment". A public sale may be held if the subscriber remains in default for a period of thirty days. In such event the treasurer of such a company is directed to "give notice of the time and place appointed for such sale, and of the sum on each share, by advertising the same three weks successively before the sale in some newspaper published in said county".
The Bank Act of 1876, supra, provides that upon such default the directors "may allot the same (that is, the shares which were subscribed for) to the other shareholders in the proportion they shall hold shares in the capital stock, or to those who shall desire to take the same; should such shareholders not take the stock * * *, it shall be sold at public auction * * *; * * public notice thereof shall be published for not less than three weeks in a newspaper of general circulation in the city or county * * * if no bidder can be found who will pay the amount due * * * and the expenses of sale, the amount previously paid shall be forfeited to the corporation, and such stock shall be disposed of as the directors may order within four months * * *, and if not sold it shall be cancelled and deducted from the capital of the corporation; * * *"

In the first place it is clear that under the provisions of this draft, any discussion of shares would be confusing since a share cannot be created until paid for in full. Therefore this proposed section does not discuss any lien on shares, or any disposal of shares if the balance due on the subscription is not sold or recovered from the subscriber.

The laws of the several states provide different methods for the enforcement of subscription. In practically every state the corporation is permitted to maintain an action at law for unpaid subscriptions. The laws of the several states differ in the methods for forfeiture or the sale of the shares of defaulting shareholders. (In passing it may again be noted that, correspondingly, provision in this proposed section is made for the sale of the right to have shares created upon the payment of the balance due, rather than the sale of the shares.) Thus, in New York the board of directors may declare the subscription, and also previous payments thereon, forfeited after the expiration of sixty days' notice to the defaulting subscriber. The forfeited shares are permitted to be reissued by the corporation. In Illinois and Indiana the by-laws are permitted to prescribe penalties for failure to pay installments or calls that may become due. In the event of the sale of shares by reason of any forfeiture, the excess of the proceeds realized over the amount due and unpaid is required to be paid to the delinquent subscriber or his legal representative. In New Jersey and Delaware the corporation is allowed to sell the shares at public auction.

In this proposed section an attempt has been made in so far as possible, to follow the provisions of Section 605 of the proposed Business Corporation Law.

Bank and trust companies may proceed against a subscriber in default of his subscribed payments: (1) by an action at law to recover the delinquent payments, or (2) by public sale, or (3) by forfeiting the amounts paid on the subscription, in the event that either of the foregoing remedies is unsuccessful.

2. The provisions for notice have been considerably shortened It seems clearly undesirable to provide for advertisement for three weeks, particularly in view of the additional requirements (1) that notice of any call shall be given to the subscriber and (2) that twenty days' notice of a sale shall be given to him. All parties are fully protected by such notice plus the advertisement in a newspaper within one week prior to the date of the sale. In addition, if expenses are permitted to grow to too great proportions, too high a price will be required for such subscription in order to bring the sale within the terms of this proposed section.

3. As explained in footnote 1, supra, provision is not made for the return of shares to capital or the reissuance thereof, since of course no shares can have been created until the full consideration therefor has been paid. If the amount is to be forfeited, the proper place to credit any moneys which have already been paid on such subscription seems to be undivided profits. This proposed section therefore so provides.

4. If perchance on public sale the delinquent subscriber's rights are sold for an amount in excess of the amount due on his subscription and of the expense or proportionate expense of the sale, as the case may be, it seems equitable to pay such excess amount to such subscriber, provided that it does not exceed the amount actually paid by him.

Section 406. Share Certificate.—A. The shares of a bank or bank and trust company shall be represented by share certificates, which shall state.[1]

(1) That the bank or bank and trust company is incorporated under the laws of this Commonwealth.

(2) The name of the registered holder of the shares represented thereby.

(3) The number of shares which the certificate represents.

(4) The par value of each share represented.

(5) The total capital of the bank or bank and trust company.

B. Every share certificate shall be signed by the president and secretary, or by such officers as the by-laws may provide, and sealed with the corporate seal, which may be a facsimile, engraved or printed. In case any officer who has signed any share certificate shall have ceased to be such officer because of death, resignation, or otherwise, before the certificate is issued, it may be issued by the bank or bank and trust company with the same effect as if the officer had not ceased to be such at the date of its issue.[2]

C. Every shareholder of record shall be entitled to a share certificate representing the shares owned by him.[3]

Comments:

1. In so far as possible, this proposed section follows Section 607 of the proposed Business Corporation Law.

The Act of 1895, as amended, supra, which applies to all corporations organized under the laws of Pennsylvania, does not specify what the "certificate of stock," shall set forth. However, the Uniform Act and virtually all of the recent corporation revisions of other states state exactly what the share certificate shall contain. In the case of banks and bank and trust companies, this seems particularly desirable.

2. This proposed provision is a restatement of Section 1 of the Act of 1895, as amended, supra, and is substantially similar to corresponding provisions in the Uniform Act and the laws of other states. However, all reference to transfer agents, transfer clerks, or registrars is omitted, since they seem to have no particular application to banks or bank and trust companies.

Most statutes prescribe the particular officers by whom share certificates must be signed, but as different institutions may delegate different types of duties to its officers, it seems desirable to permit the provisions of this draft to be varied in this respect by the articles or by-laws. In Idaho, Illinois, Maine, Michigan, Rhode Island, Texas, and Virginia, this may be regulated by the by-laws. In Arizona, Mississippi, Missouri and Nebraska there is not statutory provision as to the manner of executing share certificates and this subject must, therefore, be covered by the by-laws. In the District of Columbia it seems that the statutes do not specifically require share certificates. In New Hampshire, Oregon, Pennsylvania and West Virginia, the statutes provide for execution by one named officer and such other officer as the by-laws require. Under this draft the by-laws may prescribe the officers who are to sign share certificates.

3. The proposed Business Corporation Law provides that "a share certificate shall not be issued by a corporation to any shareholder until the shares represented thereby have been fully paid for." This provision is taken from Section 16 (I) of the Uniform Act and makes a change in Pennsylvania law. Under the Act of 1895 as amended, supra, a shareholder who has not paid for his shares in full is entitled to a share certificate Under Section 607 of the proposed Business Corporation Law just quoted, a certificate cannot be issued until shares are fully paid for. That proposed act contemplates that shares may be issued on an installment basis and that one may be a shareholder even though his shares are not fully paid for. This draft however does not permit the creation or issuance of a share or the acquiring by anyone of any of the rights of a shareholder, until the share is fully paid for. There is, therefore, no need to add in this proposed section a statement corresponding to the portion quoted in this footnote from the proposed Business Corporation Law.

Section 407. Issuance of Shares; Shares to be Identical; Shares as Personal Property. A. Except in the case of its original capital, which, as provided in this act, shall be created, issued, and paid in full before a bank or a bank and trust company shall commence business,[1] and except as otherwise provided in its articles or by-laws, the board of directors of a bank or a bank and trust company shall have the power, by resolution duly adopted, to create and to issue from time to time, in whole or in part, the shares authorized in the articles, provided that no share shall be created or issued until paid for in full.

B. Every share shall in all respects be equal to every other share.[2]

C. Shares of a bank or a bank and trust company shall be deemed personal property.[3]

Comments:

1. See Section 310 of this draft.

2. In this respect banks and bank and trust companies, of course, differ from other corporations. It seems unquestionable that the requirement of this clause is sound. It is part of the banking law of almost every state in the country.

3. This is the accepted viewpoint in Pennsylvania today and has been included also in the proposed Business Corporation Law.

Section 408. Par Value of Shares; Change of Par Value.—A. The capital of a bank or a bank and trust company shall be divided into shares of a par value of not less than ten dollar each, nor more than one hundred dollars each,[1] but every share have the same par value as every other share.[2] Any bank or bank and trust company may, by amending its articles in the manner prescribed by this act, change the par value of its shares, but such change shall not be to an amount less than ten dollars nor more than one hundred dollars each. Such change of the par value of the shares shall not increase or diminish the total par value of the entire capital of such bank or bank and trust company, but shall change only the number of shares into which such capital shall be divided.[3]

B. Whenever such change in par value is made, such bank or bank and trust company shall, upon the surrender and cancellation of its outstanding shares, issue to each shareholder the proper number of shares of capital at the new par value. The bank or the bank and trust company shall withhold any cash or share dividends due on a share certificate which has been exchanged within six months after the date upon which the change in par value was effected, but upon the shareholder's thereafter exchanging such certificate, the bank or bank and trust company shall pay to him any dividends which were thus withheld.[4]

Comments:

1. The Bank Act of 1876, supra, provides that the par value of shares of bank stock shall not be less than fifty dollars each. However, as a result of the informal opinion of Deputy Attorney General Paul C. Wagner to First Deputy Secretary of Banking, James A Taylor, discussed in footnote 3, this provision is netiher followed nor enforced. The laws of many states establish minimum and maximum par values for shares of bank or bank and trust company stock. The most common minimum is ten dollars, as for example in New Jersey, Illinois, and Maryland. The most frequent maximium is one hundred dollars as in the National-Bank Act, Mississippi, and Illinois. The laws of some states, as in Kansas and Ohio provide that the par value shall be set amount, in those states one hundred dollars. It seems desirable to follow the Illinois rule establishing both a minimum and a maximum, with as great a leeway as is reasonable. The Illinois act usese a ten dollar minimum and a one hundred dollar maximum and this is the uniform practice which seems to be adopted by the Comptroller in the case of national banks. It is adopted in this draft.

2. As explained in footnote 2 to Section 407 it is clearly desirable to follow the almost unanimous rule that every share of a bank or bank and trust company should be exactly the same in every particular as every other share.

3. In an informal opinion, under date of December 27, 1928, Deputy Attorney General Paul C. Wagner, advised First Deputy Secretary of Banking, James A. Taylor that the provisions of the Act of 1901, supra, superseded the provisions of charters of banks created under special act and of Section 5 of the Bank Act of 1876, supra, and that therefore any bank or bank and trust company could proceed under the provisions of the Act of 1901, supra, for the purpose of reducing the par value of its shares in the manner there prescribed. The provisions of this proposed section are based on the Act of 1901.

4. This provision has been introduced in order to add some incentive for the shareholder to turn in nis share certificate to be cancelled and to have a new certificate issued therefor. It does not permantly deprive any shareholder of any rights, but merely provides for the withholding of any dividend accruing more than six month after such shareholder should have turned in his share certificate for cancellation and exchange.

Section 409. Issuance of Fractional Shares or Scrip.—A bank or a bank and trust company may, in paying a dividend or in pursuance of a plan of merger or consolidation,[1] issue a certificate for a fractional share, and by action of its board of directors may issue in lieu thereof scrip or other evidence of ownership which shall entitle the holder to receive a certificate for a full share upon the surrender of such scrip or other evidence of ownership aggregating a full share, but which shall not entitle the holder to exercise any voting right.[2] However, such holder shall be entitled to receive a proportionate amount of any dividends or to participate proportionately in any of the assets of the bank or bank and trust company in the event of liquidation.[3] The holder of such scrip or other evidence of ownership shall be subject to the same liability as is provided by this act in the case of a holder of a full share, except that his liability shall bear the same ratio to that of the holder of a full share as his scrip or other evidence of ownership bears to a full share.[4] The board of directors may cause such scrip or evidence of ownership to be issued subject to the condition that it shall become void if not exchanged for share certificate before a specified date, or subject to the condition that the shares for which such scrip or evidence of ownership is exchangable may be sold by the bank or bank and trust company and the proceeds thereof distributed to the holders of such scrip or evidence of ownership, or subject to any other conditions, not prohibited by this act, which the board of directors may deem advisable.

Comments:

1. It is a common practice for corporations issuing additional shares to issue to shareholders scrip or other evidence of fractional parts of shares to which the shareholders are entitled, particularly in the case of shares dividends or in pursuance of a plan of merger or consolidation where, on the division of shares in the new or continued corporation, it is found necessary to issue fractional portions of shares. This proposed section, different from Section 608 of the proposed Business Corporation Law, which it follows in so far as possible restricts the issuance of fractional shares or scrip to these two situations.

2. Section 608 of the proposed Business Corporation Law, and the general corporation acts cited under references, provide that the corporation may, by specifically so providing, permit the owner to exercise a voting right on the basis of such scrip or other evidence of a fractional share. This draft forbids the attaching of any voting right to such scrip or other evidence of a fractional share.

3. Section 608 of the proposed Business Corporation Law provides that such scrip or other evidence of a fractional part of a share shall not entitle the holder to receive dividends or to participate in any of the assets of the corporation in the event of liquidation, unless otherwise provided. In view of the provision of this draft for the liability attaching to such scrip or other evidence of a fractional share, it seems clearly necessary to require also that certain rights attach thereto.

4. In view of the rights which are required by this proposed section to be incidents of the ownership of a scrip or other evidence of a fractional share, it seems both equitable and constitutional to attach to them the liability provided by this proposed provision.

Section 410. Transfer of Share Certificates and Shares.—The transfer of share certificates and the shares represented thereby may be regulated by the by-laws, provided such by-laws are not inconsistent with the provisions of the Uniform Stock Transfer Act, approved the fifth day of May, one thousand nine hundred eleven (Pamphlet Laws, one hundred twenty-six), its amendments and supplements.

Comments:

This provision follows Section 613 A of the proposed Business Corporation Law, which is taken from the Uniform Act, supra. Section 11 of the Corporation Act of 1874, supra, provides: "the shares of the capital stock of every such company may be transferred on the books of such company in person or by attorney, subject to such regulations as the by-laws may prescribe."

Section 5 of the Bank Act of 1876, supra, simply provides for the transfer of rights without the transfer of shares.

As the Uniform Stock Transfer Act applies also to corporations beyond the scope of this act, that act is not included in this draft. A note to the Uniform Act points out that this proposed section is necessary, as Sections 1 and 15 of the Uniform Stock Transfer Act explessly refer to possible by-law or other corporate regulation of transfer. By the inclusion of this section, this act and the Uniform Stock Transfer Act would be made to dovetail without unnecessary repetition. Michigan, which has adopted the Uniform Stock Transfer Act, has a similar provision in its new corporation act.

Section 411.—Increases of Authorized Capital and Increase of Capital Pursuant Thereto.—A. A bank or a bank and trust company may amend its articles to increase its authorized capital, in the same manner and with the same approvel as is required by this act for any amendment to the articles of a bank or a bank and trust company,[1] except that written notice of a proposed amendment for increasing the authorized capital of the institution shall be given to each shareholder entitled to vote thereon at least sixty days prior to such meeting.[2]

Such increase of authorized capital shall however become invalid and inoperative, unless the actual increase of capital which is authorized, shall be made within one year from the date of the issuance of the certificate of amendment.[3] If any portion of such authorized capital shall be created and issued within such one-year period, only such portion as remains uncreated and unissued within such period shall become invalid and inoperative. In the case of a bank or a bank and trust company, which upon the effective date of this act, has an authorized capital which exceeds its actual capital, such one-year period shall date from the effective date of this act. Such actual increase of capital may be made from time to time within such period of one year, but no such increase shall be made until paid for in full, pursuant to the provisions of this act as to the creation or issuance of any share.[4] Such increase may, however, be made by the declaration of a share dividend in accordance with the provisions of this act concerning share dividends.[5]

B. A share shall not be created or issued, pursuant to such increase of capital, for a cash consideration of less than the par value of such share, plus twenty-five per centum thereof, unless a share can be created and issued for a consideration less than such amount without reducing the surplus of the bank or bank and trust company below fifty per centum of the capital as increased,[6] but in no case shall such share be created or issued for a consideration which is less than the par value thereof.

C. Upon effecting an actual increase in its capital, a bank or a bank and trust company shall issue to its shareholders new share certificates, setting forth the changed capital of the institution, in exchange for the outstanding shares of such shareholders, which shall then be cancelled.[7] The bank or bank and trust company shall withhold any cash or share dividend due on a share certificate which has not been exchanged within six months after the date upon which the increase in capital was created and issued, but upon the shareholder's thereafter exchanging such certificate, the bank or bank and trust company shall pay to him any dividends which were thus withheld.[8]

Comments:

1. See Article VIII of this draft.
2. This deviation from the regular procedure for an amendment is necessitated by Article XVI, Section 7 of the Constitution of Pennsylvania.
3. Section 10 of the Bank Act of 1876, supra, provided that "no increase of capital shall be valid unless the same shall be actually paid-in within one year from the date of the written consent as aforesaid to such increase." However, in a formal opinion under date of May 8, 1912, Assistant Deputy Attorney General Trinkle advised Commissioner of Banking, William H. Smith, that Section 10 of the Bank Act of 1876, supra, is repealed by inference by the Act of 1901, supra, and an authorized increase may be actually made at such time as shall be determined by the directors of the institution though at such time the whole amount of the authorized increase is not paid-in within one year from the date of the requisite consent to the increase. Apparently there has never been any similar provision applicable to bank and trust companies.

However it seems undesirable to permit institutions to increase capital in pursuance of an authority which has been granted more than a year prior to such increase. The shareholders may be different shareholders and the justification for the increase may have disappeared. It is not unduly harsh to add a one year requirement, since the statutes of a number of states, for example Michigan, Wisconsin, and Kansas, provide that the increase must be fully paid-in before the Secretary or Commissioner of Banking will even grant any approval to such increase. The Federal act likewise contains such a provision.

This act permits the bank or bank and trust company a period of one year in which to obtain subscribers and to procure the full consideration for the shares. If it cannot do so, the authorized increase becomes invalid and inoperative.

4. See Section 407 of this draft.
5. See Section 701 of this draft.
6. The provision that a share shall not be created or issued for a cash consideration of less than the par value of such share plus twenty-five centum thereof is included in order to assure the maintenance of at least the twenty-five per cent surplus which is required in the case of all new institutions. In most cases, of course, as a practical matter a bank or a bank and trust company not issuing new shares will not disturb its surplus ratio. However, full provision is made, should it desire to do so, for such a situation.
7. Section 5 of the Act of 1879, supra, requires the issuance of new share certificates. This seems clearly desirable, since otherwise share certificates will be outstanding which do not tell the true story of the financial set-up of the bank or bank and trust company.
8. This provision has been introduced in order to add some incentive for the shareholder to turn in his share certificate to be cancelled and to have a new certificate issued therefor. It does not permanently deprive any shareholder of any rights, but merely provides for the withholding of any dividend accruing more than six months after such shareholder should have turned in his share certificate for cancellation and exchange.

Section 412. Decrease of Capital.—A bank or a bank and trust company may amend its articles to decrease its capital, either by reducing the number of its shares, or by reducing the par value of each share, or by both such methods, in the same manner and with the same approval as is required by this act for any amendment to the articles of a bank or a bank and trust company[1] but the capital of a bank or a bank and trust company shall not be decreased to an amount below the minimum prescribed by this act for such bank or bank and trust company.[2]

B. The responsibility for the contracts, debts, or engagements, of the bank or bank and trust company, to which its shareholders are subject upon the date when the certificate of amendment is issued, shall continue for one year thereafter.[3]

C. Any excess of capital created by such decrease of the capital of a bank or a bank and trust company, shall forthwith be transfered to the surplus of such bank or bank and trust company, or it may, with the approval of the Department, be returned to the shoreholders in the form of a cash dividend, provided that the surplus of the institution, after the payment of such cash dividend, equals at least fifty per centum of the capital as reduced.

D. Upon effecting a decrease in its capital, a bank or a bank and trust company shall issue to its shareholders new share certificates, setting forth the changed par value of each share or the changed capital of the institution, in exchange for the outstanding shares of such shareholders, which shall then be cancelled.[4] The bank or bank and trust company shall withhold any cash or share dividend due on a share certificate which has not been exchanged within six months after the date upon which the certificate of amendment authorizing the decrease in capital was issued, but upon the shareholder's thereafter exchanging such certificate, the bank or bank and trust company will pay to him any dividends which were thus withheld.[5]

COMMENTS:

1. See Article VIII of this draft.
2. See Sections 401 and 402 of this draft.
3. The Act of 1883, supra, provides that such responsibility shall not be divested but sets no limit on the time for which such shareholders remain responsible. It seems unreasonable to continue such responsibility indefinitely and therefore this draft specifies a one-year period.
4. The Act of 1789, supra, and the Act of 1901, supra, require the issuance of substituted share certificates upon a decrease of capital. Such a requirement seems clearly desirable, since otherwise there would be a great many share certificates outstanding which would not tell the true story of the financial set-up of the bank or bank and trust company.
5. Like the existing statutes in the case of an increase in capital, the statutes covering decrease of capital do not provide any penalty on a shareholder who does not turn in his share certificate to be cancelled and to have a new certificate issued thereon. For the reasons set forth in footnote 8 to Section 411, a substantially similar provision has been included in this proposed section.

Section 413. Surplus for Banks or Bank and Trust Companies Incorporated Under This Act; Impairments Thereof.—A bank or bank and trust company incorporated under this act shall maintain a surplus of at least fifty per centum of its capital.[1] Before it shall be granted a certificate of authorization to commence business, such bank or bank and trust company shall have a surplus equal to at least twenty-five per centum of its capital, such surplus to be created out of payments for shares in excess of the par value thereof.[2] If the surplus of such a bank or a bank and trust company is not equal to at least fifty per centum of its capital, upon the date upon which it commences business, or if, at any subsequent time, its surplus becomes impaired below such fifty per centum minimum it shall, at the close of each dividend period, or at least annually, if not dividend is paid, credit to its surplus an amount which shall not be less than one-half of its net earnings for such period, until its surplus shall equal at least fifty per centum of its capital.[3]

Bank Act of 1876, Section 16, 7 PS Sec. 151.

COMMENTS:

1. Section 16 of the Bank Act of 1876, supra, requires that in the case of a bank one-tenth of the net profits of each dividend period shall be credited to a surplus fund until such fund amounts to twenty-five per centum of capital. However, no provision is made requiring such surplus to be maintained or setting up a system for its accumulation in the event of impairment.

This draft requires a paid-in surplus of at least twenty-five per cent and an accumulated surplus of at least fifty per centum which shall be maintained and which shall be accumulated out of net earnings in any case in which it has become impaired. The laws of Massachusetts, Louisiana, Kansas, Wisconsin, Texas, Nebraska, Maine, Colorado, and Michigan all require a surplus of fifty per centum to be accumulated and maintained out of net earnings. The commissions appointed respectively by the states of Indiana and Delaware to study changes in banking laws of those states have, after extensive research, recommended that surplus be accumulated to one hundred per centum of capital. The whole trend of modern legislation is in the direction of providing greater buffers in the financial set-ups of banking institutions. There seems to be no justification for the present condition in Pennsylvania law, under which it is possible for institutions to continue without any surplus and still to pay dividends in full.

2. A twenty-five per centum paid-in surplus is provided, rather than a fifty per centum paid-in surplus, in order not to place too great a burden upon incorporators attempting to sell subscriptions for a proposed bank or bank and trust company. In the first days of a newly incorporated bank or bank and trust company this seems to afford adequate protection.

3. The method provided by this draft for accumulating surplus to meet the requirements of this act is substantially similar to that in existence in most of the states which require a maintenance of surplus, although the percentage of net earnings vary considerably. It is obvious of course, that the shareholders in fact lose nothing when a portion of net earnings is carried on surplus rather than paid as a dividend. This is the easiest and most equitable method of accumulating surplus.

Section 414. Surplus for Existing Banks or Bank and Trust Companies.—A bank or a bank and trust company incorporated prior to the effective date of this act shall maintain a surplus of at least fifty per centum of its capital.[1] If, upon the effective date of this act, the capital of such bank or bank and trust company is equal to the minimum requirement established by this act for such bank or bank and trust company, or if its capital upon such date does not meet such minimum requirement, then when it has accumulated such capital in the manner provided by this act,[2] such bank or trust company shall, if its surplus is not equal to at least fifty per centum of its capital, increase its surplus as follows: it shall at the close of each dividend period, or at least annually, if no dividend is paid, credit to its surplus an amount which shall not be less than one-half of its net earnings for such period, until its surplus shall equal at least fifty per centum of its capital. If at any subsequent time, the surplus of such bank or bank and trust company shall become impaired to less than fifty per centum of its capital, it shall forthwith proceed to accumulate surplus in the same manner.[3]

COMMENTS:

2. See Section 402 of this draft.
3. See footnote 3 to section 413 of this draft for discussion of this method of accumulation of surplus.

Section 415. Expense Fund.—A bank or a bank and trust company, incorporated under this act, shall not be granted a certificate of authorization to commence business until it shall have as a reserve for expenses a fund of at least five per centum of its capital. Such expense fund shall be created out of payments for shares in excess of their par value plus twenty-five per centum thereof.

Such expense fund may be charged for the expenses incurred by a bank or bank and trust company in its organization and operation. Any balance remaining in such expense fund may, at the expiration of not less than one year from the date of the issuance of such certificate of authorization, be credited to undivide profits.

Comments:

This proposed section, like the Banking Law of Illinois, Section 5, provides for a paid-in reserve of five per centum of the capital, to meet the organization and operating expenses of a bank or a bank and trust company. Under existing laws a financial set-up which is deemed desirable for banks and bank and trust companies is set up to be demolished in many cases, immediately, by impairments necessitated by the organization and operating expenses of the institution. A special reserve fund such as is provided by this proposed section, precludes any such possibility. If such reserve shall prove to be more than is actually needed, it is, by the provisions of this proposed section, required to be transferred to undivided profits, from which it will probably be returned to the shareholders in the form of dividends.

ARTICLE V

Officers and Employes of Institutions; Directors and Trustees of Incorporated Institutions

Section 501. Number and Election of Directors and Trustees; Excutive Committee.—Subject to the provisions of this act, the number, qualifications, terms of office, manner of election time and place of meeting, compensation, and powers and duties of the directors of a bank or a bank and trust company may be prescribed from time to time by the by-laws.

Subject to the provisions of this act, the number, qualification, manner of election, time and place of meeting, compensation, and powers and duties of the trustees of a savings bank may be prescribed from time to time by the by-laws.

Except as otherwise provided in the by-laws, or, in the case of a savings bank, in the special act creating such savings bank, its amendments and supplements.

(1) A director shall be elected for a term of one year; a trustee until he becomes disqualified or resigns.[1]

(2) The number of directors or trustees shall be the same as that stated in the articles.[2]

(3) Vacancies in the board of directors or in the board of trustees caused by death, resignation, disqualification, or otherwise, shall be filled by the remaining members of the board, and each person so elected shall, in the case of a bank or a bank and trust company, be a director until his successor is elected by the shareholders, who may make such election at the next annual meeting of the shareholders or at any special meeting duly called for that purpose and held prior thereto, and in case of a savings bank created by special act, by the persons specified in such act. In the case of any other savings bank, he shall serve until he shall become disqualified, or shall resign.[3]

(4) The meetings of the board of directors or of the board of trustees shall be held at such place within this Commonwealth as a majority of the directors or of the trustees may from time to time designate.[4]

(5) A majority of all the directors or trustees shall be necessary to constitute a quorum for the transaction of business, and except as otherwise provided in this act, or in the articles or by-laws of a particular incorporated institution, the acts of a majority of the directors or trustees who are present at a meeting at which a quorum is present shall be the acts of the board of directors or the board of trustees, but if the directors or trustees shall severally or collectively consent in writing to any action to be taken by the incorporated institution such action shall be as valid corporate action as though it had been authorized at a meeting of the board of directors or the board of trustees.[5]

(6) The board of directors or the board of trustees may, by resolution passed by a majority of the whole board, delegate three or more of its number in the case of a bank or a bank and trust company, and five or more of its number in the case of a savings bank, to constitute an executvie committee which to the extent provided in such resolution, shall have and exercise the authority of the board over the ordinary operations of the business of the incorporated institution between the dates of the monthly meetings of the board. Every such committee shall keep full minutes of all business transacted by it and shall present detailed reports of all such transactions at each monthly meeting of the board.[6]

Comments:

1. This is in accord with existing law.

2. Section 303 requires the articles to set forth the number, names, and addresses of the first directors or trustees of an incorporated institution. After incorporation, the number of directors or of trustees may be changed by amending the by-laws, but until this is done, the number stated in the articles will govern.

3. These provisions for the filling of vacancies are in accord with existing laws. The rules governing the election of trustees have been in a confused state. The Act of 1889 refers only to vacancies. This draft attempts to clarify the mater, but specifically refrains from changing any practice established by special act of the General Assembly creating a so-called "special charter" savings bank.

4. Section 402 of the proposed Business Corporation Law permits meetings to be held within or without the Commonwealth. In accordance with the general policy of this draft, as expressed in several sections, meetings of directors or trustees, like meetings of the shareholders of a bank or bank and trust company, may be held only within the Commonwealth.

5. This proposed subsection is in accord with the existing law of Pennsylvania.

It is also the common law rule that a majority is necessary to constitute a quorum, and that is the number usually required by statute in the absence of a contrary provision in the articles of incorporation or by-laws.

The proviso to the proposed subsection is new. If follows Section 402 of the proposed Business Corporation Law, which is taken from Section 13 (4) (d) of the Michigan general corporation act.

6. This proposed subsection is new. It is an adaptation, with limitations, of Section 402 of the proposed Business Corporation Law. It is quite true that the demands of a modern incorporated institution require many matters of importance to be acted upon promptly. Except where the board is small and all members readily available, it is frequently impossible to procuse the requisite board action without undue delay. However, in the case of incorporated institutions, the special limitations imposed by this act that the business transacted by the executive committee shall be only such as is transacted in the ordinary course of business, and that full minutes of the meetings of the executive committee should be presented to the whole board seem to be clearly desirable.

The minimum number of trustees being larger than the minimum number of directors, it seems that the executive committees representing the trustees should be correspondingly larger.

Section 502. Term of Office and Qualification of Directors and Trustees.—A. The business and affairs of every incorporated institution shall be managed, in the case of a bank or a bank and trust company, by a board of at least five[1] directors, and in the case of a savings bank, by a board of at least fifteen trustees.[2] Except as otherwise provided by this act or by the articles or by-laws of the incorporated institution, such board of directors or board of trustees shall exercise all the powers and fulfill all the duties granted to, or imposed upon, the incorported institution by this ct.

B. Each director shall hold office for the term for which he is elected and until his succesor shall have been duly elected and qualified. The names and terms of office of the first directors shall be stated in the articles.[3] Except as otherwise provided in this act for the filling of vacancies, directors, other than those constituting the first board of directors, shall be elected by the shareholders.

C. Except as otherwise specifically provided in any special act of the General Assembly creating a savings bank, or in any amendment or supplement thereto, each trustee shall hold office, until he resigns or becomes disqualified. The names of the first trustees shall be stated in the articles.

D. Every director or trustee shall, during his term of office, be a citizen of the United States, at least two-thirds of the directors or trustees shall, during their terms of service, be bona-fide residents in this Commonwealth, and at least one-third of the directors, and two-thirds of the trustees, shall, during their terms of office, be bona-fide residents in the county in which the incorporated institution has its place of business.

E. Every director shall own, in his own right and free of any lien or encumbrance, shares of the bank, or bank and trust company to the aggregate par value of at least one thousand dollars, but the number or par value of the shares required to be owned by any person who is a director of a bank or a bank and trust company upon the effective date of this act shall be the same as was required prior to the effective date of this act, so long as such director shall serve continuously.[4] The share certificates for the minimum number or par value of shares which each director must own shall be filed, unendorsed, unpledged, and unassigned by him, with the cashier or treasurer of the bank or bank and trust company. Such shares shall remain in the custody of the cashier or treasurer during the term of service of such directors.[5]

Any director who, during his term of service, pledges, assigns, or in any other manner ceases to be the owner in his own right of the shares required by this section, shall forthwith cease to be a director of the bank or the bank and trust company, and his office shall be vacant. He shall not be eligible for reelection as a director of such bank or such bank and trust company for the remainder of the term for which he was elected and for a further period of one year from the expiration of his term. Any vacancy thus occurring shall be filled in the regular manner for filling vacancies in the board.

F. The following shall not be eligible to be directors or trustees in any incorporated institution:

(1) A judge of any court of record in this Commowealth;

(2) Any person holding office under this Commonwealth in the Department of Banking, the Treasury Department, the Auditor General's Department, or the Department of Revenue;

(3) Any person authorized to receive and account for the public moneys of this Commonwealth;

(4) The treasurer of any county, city, township, borough, or other political subdivision of this Commonwealth.[6]

G. A trustee of a savings bank shall not at the same time be a trustee, officer, attorney, or employe of any other savings bank.[7]

Act of May 20, 1889, P. L. 246, Sections 9, 11, 13, and 28, 7 PS Secs. 581, 551, 555 and 552.

Comments:

1. Section 401 of the proposed Business Corporation Law requires only three directors in the case of general business corporations. This draft in accordance with Section 12 of the Bank Act of 1876, as amended, supra, applicable to banks, and the Act of 1926, supra, applicable to "banks, banking corporations or trust companies" requires five directors.

2. The Act of 1889, supra, requires only thirteen trustees in the case of a savings bank. This draft raises this number to fifteen. The position of trustee being virtually a lifetime position, it seems desirable to have as many of them known to the Department at the time it grants authority for the formation of a savings bank as possible. This draft therefore provides for two addition trustees to be named in the articles.

3. This draft requires that both the directors and trustees be named in the articles. Section 9 of the Act of 1889, supra, requires, in the case of trustees, that they be named in the articles. The Corporation Act of 1874, supra, likewise requires that the certificate of incorporation (articles) must set forth, inter alia: "the number of its directors and the names and residences of those who are chosen directors for the first year." The purpose of this requirement is merely to show an organization in proper form for incorporation, and not to restrict to the individuals named in the certificate, the personnel of the board of directors during the first year after the creation of the corporation. Accordingly, a Pennsylvania corporation, organized under the Corporation Act of 1874, may, during the first year, elect directors in place of those named in the certificate. Commonwealth et al. v. Helms et al., 8 Pa. C. C. 410 (1890).) This draft will make no change in the existing Pennsylvania practice.

As pointed out in the Uniform Act in the case of general corporate law, states are now divided between the practice of naming the first directors in the articles and the practice of having no directors until the first ones are elected after incorporation. The first practice seems preferable. Incorporators cease to be incorporators and become shareholders to the extent that their shares are full-paid immediately upon incorporation. A corporation cannot act through its shareholders, but only through its board of directors; therefore it ought to be equipped with a board of directors the moment it comes into existence.

In the case of trustees of a savings bank, it is almost indisputable that they should be named in the first articles. They will in most cases serve for many years as the trustees, and it should be on the basis of their character and abilities, that the Department should determine whether or not to grant a charter. The laws of most states require that the trustees be named in the articles, or in the certificates which in those states correspond to the articles.

4. Under the existent laws, a director of a bank qualifies with ten shares, regardless of par value, and a director of a bank and trust company qualifies with shares to the aggregate par value of three hundred dollars. This proposed section increases the share qualification of a director to a minimum holding of shares of a par value of at least one thousand dollars. The office of director of a bank or bank and trust company is in its nature such that the director should have some real interest in such bank or bank and trust company. It does not seem oppressive that this interest be at least to the extent of one thousand dollars. The minimum established by this proposed section is also contained in the laws of many other states, including New York, Massachusetts, Illinois, and Kansas. In the case of national banks having a capital in excess of twenty-five thousand dollars, directors are likewise required to own shares of a par value of at least one thousand dollars.

However, it does not seem desirable to apply this provision either retroactively or even in the future, to directors who now hold office, even though they are subsequently reelected. Constitutionally, of course, this provision could apply to any director who is reelected after the effective date of this act. and perhaps, it seems unwise, particularly in view of conditions, to impose requirements which might necessitate the resignation of directors, the presence of whom on the board may be a source of confidence to the members of a particular community.

5. The provision of this proposed section requiring the filing of the qualifying shares of any director with the cashier or treasurer is new. It will apply likewise to the qualifying shares required of existent directors. This cannot be regarded as a hardship, since the law requires, and has heretofore required, that such shares shall not be pledged or assigned. The bank laws of Illinois have a similar provision.

6. This proposed subsection substantially reenacts the prohibition established by the Act of January 27, 1819, P. L. 42, which was repealed by the Act of March 18, 1927, P. L. 48. This provision is included, since it is felt that at least a discussion should be held on the quehtion of whether a public official, whose duties are so closely allied with the deposit of moneys in institutions, or the judicial determination of cases involving such institutions, should be permitted to be a director.

7. This subsection is based upon Section 13 of the Act of 1889, supra.

Section 503. Classification of Directors.—If the articles or by-laws of a bank or a bank and trust company so provide, the directors may be classified in respect to the time for which they shall severally hold office. In such case, each shall be as nearly equal in number as possible, the terms of office of at least one class shall expire in each year, and the members of a class shall not be elected for a shorter period than one year, or for a longer period than four years. At each ensuing election of directors after such classification, only the number of directors equal to the number of the class whose terms expire at the time of the election shall be elected, and such directors shall be elected for the longest term for which any class may have been elected as provided in this section.

Comments:

This proposed section corresponds to Section 403 of the proposed Business Corporation Law. It is subtantially similar to the Act of 1887, supra, which applies to all corporations of any kind formed under any law of this Commonwealth. A similar provision is contained in the laws of many states. The purpose of such classification is that the terms of all the directors shall not expire at the same time, the directors of one class only being elected each year.

When the Act of 1887, supra, permits classification of directors by a majority vote of the shareholders, this draft, like the laws of the other states, permits classification of the directors only if the articles or by-laws so provide. This draft, like the present acts of Pennsylvania and New Jersey, permits directors to be classified into four classes. Some states, particularly Delaware and Illinois, permit the classification of directors into not more than three classes. Also, the new general corporation act of Illinois permits classification of directors only if the corporation has nine or more directors.

Section 504. Oaths of Directors.—A. Each director of a bank or a bank and trust company, and each trustee of a savings bank shall, within thirty days after his election, and before assuming the duties of his office, take an oath or affirmation that he will, so far as the duty devolves upon him, diligently and honestly administer the affairs of the incorporated institution, and will not knowingly or willingly permit to be violated any of the provisions of law applicable to the incorporated institution of which he is a director or a trustee; that he meets the requirements of this act and of the articles and by-laws of the incorporated institution for directors or trustees, and, in the case ofa director of a bank or a bank and trust company, that he has met the requirements of this act and of the articles and by-laws with respect to his ownership of shares and filing them wit hthe cashier or treasurer of the institution.

B. Such oath or affirmation shall be signed by the director or trustees making it and shall be immediately transmitted to the Department, where it shall be filed.

Act of June 3, 1911, P. L. 652, Section 1, amended by Act of April 4, 1929, P. L. 143, 7 PS Sec. 184.

Comments:

This draft corresponds substantially to the Act of 1911, as amended, supra, which applies to several types of corporations, incluading the following: "bank of discount, banking company, ... trust company, ... and savings bank". The word "director" is used, but the word "trustee" is not. It seems clear that there is no reason to require oaths of directors and not to require them of trustees. The provisions of this proposed section therefore are applicable to both groups.

Section 505. Meetings of Board of Directors or of Trustees; Notice Thereof.—A. The board of directors or the board of trustees of every incorporated institution shall hold a regular meeting at least once in each month.[1] Meetings of the board of directors or the board of trustees shall be held upon such notice as the by-laws may prescribe. Attendance of a director or a trustee at any meeting shall constitute a waiver of notice of such meeting, except where a director or a trustee attends a meeting for the express purpose of objecting to the transaction of any business because the meeting was not lawfully called or convened. Neither the business to be transacted at, nor the purpose of, any meeting need be specified in the notice or waiver of notice of such meeting.[2]

B. The board of directors or the board of trustees shall keep complete records of their proceedings in a minute book kept for that purpose alone. When a director or a trustee shall request it, the vote of each director or trustee upon a particular question shall be recorded in the minutes.[3]

Comments:

1. The existent law contains no requirement as to when meetings of directors or trustees shall be held. It seems clear that a proper safeguarding of the interests of depositors and other creditors of an incorporated institution requires that its directors or trustees meet regularly. It certainly does not seem to be imposing a hardship to require that they meet once a month. As a practical matter, the boards of most incorporated institutions meet more frequently than that. It does seem desirable, however, to impose a minimum limitation.

2. The provision that attendancy at a meeting constitutes a waiver of notice of such meeting corresponds to Section 404 of the proposed Business Corporation Law. A general provision that notice of any meeting of directors or trustees may be waived in writing by any director or trustees is contained in Section 10 of this draft.

3. This proposed subsection is based on Section 20 of the Bank Act of 1876, supra. It extends the provisions of that act to the boards of all incorporated institutions.

Query: In view of the protection afforded the shareholders by the regular examinations of the Department, should this draft include the provision of Section 20 of the Bank Act of 1876, supra, that the "minutes shall at all times, on demand, be procured to the stockholders at a general meeting, and shall be subjected, also, together with their other books and papers, to the inspection of any committee who shall be authorized by the Legislature to require the same"?

Section 506. Compensation of Directors or Trustees.—A. The directors of a bank or a bank and trust company shall be entitled to such compensation for their services as directors as is provided in its articles or by-laws.[1] Trustees of a savings bank shall not receive any compensation for their services as trustees, but shall be entitled to such compensation for their services, upon the executive committee of the savings bank as is provided in its articles or by-laws.[2]

B. Except as otherwise specifically provided in this act, a director or a trustee may also be a salaried officer of the incorporated institution.[3]

Savings Banks

Act of May 20, 1889, P. L. 246, Sections 12 and 27, 7 PS Sec. 554 and 559.

Comments:

1. This provision substantially reenacts the Act of 1917, supra.

2. This provisions substantially reenacts the Act of 1889, supra, but the provision as to payment or services upon the executive committee a savings bank is new. As a practical matter, a number of savings institutions are paying the members of their executive committees for services performed thereon. There seems to be no reason for differentiating between services of a trustee performed as a salaried officer and those performed by him as a member of the executive committee.

3. Subsection B likewise continues the provisions of existent law.

Section 507. Examination and Report by Board of Directors or Trustees.—A. The board of directors or the board of trustees of every incorporated institution shall, at lease once in each year, make or cause to be made by at least three of its members or by accountants employed for the purpose, a detailed examination of the books, papers, and affairs of the incorporated institution and the loans and discounts thereof, with the special duty of ascertaining the safety and present value of the loans, discounts, and investments of the incorporated institution and the value of the collateral security, if any, held in connection with any loans or discounts, and into such other matters as the Department may require. The board of directors or the board of trustees shall have the power to employ such assistants as they may deem necessary to make such examinations.

B. As soon as any such examination is completed, a detailed written report thereof, signed under oath or affirmation by the directors or trustees or by the other persons making such examination, shall be sent to the Department. A copy thereof shall be placed on file in the incorporated institution and properly noted on the minutes.

Act of May 20, 1889, P. L. 246, Section 25, 7 PS Sec. 557.

Comments:

The only provision in existing law requiring the board of directors or the board of trustees to conduct a regular examination of the officers of an incorporated institution is that contained in Section 25 of the Act of 1889, supra, which applies only to savings banks. However, it is the accepted banking practice in Pennsylvania for an examination to be conducted by, or under the auspices of, the directors of a bank or of a bank and trust company at lease once in each year, and often more frequently than that.

The laws of most other states contain some provision requiring the board to examine the affairs of an incoporated institution regularly. The laws of Ohio provide, as does this proposed section, and Section 25 of the Act of 1889, supra, that such examination shall be made at least once in each year. The laws of New York, New Jersey, Michigan, and Wisconsin require two examinations a year. The laws of Mississippi require that the board conduct three, and the laws of Kansas provide a minimum of four examinations in each year by the board.

Query: Should this draft require at least two examinations, rather than at least one examination in each year, to be conducted by the board of directors or the board of trustees of an incorporated institution or by accountants appointed by them?

Section 508. Communications from Department of Banking.—Every official communication directed by the Department to an incorporated institution, or to any officer thereof, shall be transmitted by the officer receiving it to the board of directors or the board of trustees at the next meeting of such board and shall be duly recorded in the minutes of such meeting.

Comments:

This proposed section is new in Pennsylvania law. It is intended to assure the disclosure to the board of directors or the board of trustees of any official communications received by an incorporated institution or by any officer thereof. It is similar to the provisions in the banking laws of several other states, particularly the Banking Law of New York, supra.

Section 509. Disqualification of Directors or Trustees.—A. If a director or trustee shall, for sx successive months, fail to attend any of the regular meetings of an incororated institution, without having been, during such period excused by the board for such failure to attend, his office shall forthwith become vacant but he shall be eligible for re-election.

B. If a trustee of a savings bank shall become trustee, officer, clerk, or employe in any other savings bank, or if he shall accept directly or indirectly, either as a loan or otherwise, any of the funds of the savings bank of which he is trustee, or if he shall become surety or guarantor for any money borrowed from such savings bank, his office shall forthwith become vacant.

Comments:

This section is based on the Act of 1889, supra, which applies only to savings banks. In the case of Subsection A it has been applied to directors as well as to trustees.

Section 510. Officers of Instituion; Removal; Compensation.—A. Every institution shall have a president; a vice-president, a secretary, and a cashier or treasuer, and may have such other officers as the institution may require,[1] but in the case of an incorporated institution, such additional officers shall not be elected unless provided for in the by-laws. Any two or more offices may be held by the same person, except the offices of president and cashier or treasurer, but in the case of an incorporated institution, two offices shall not be held by one person unless specifically authorized by the by-laws.

B. The officers of an institution shall be selected at least annually.[2] In the case of an incorporated institution, they shall be elected by the board of directors or the board of trustees, unless the by-laws provide a different method. The president and at least one vice-president shall be required to be members of the board of directors or the board of trustees of the incorporated institution. Unless the by-laws specifically provide otherwise, the cashier or treasurer, or any other officer, may, however, be a member of the board of directors or of the board of trustees.[3]

C. Unless specifically provided otherwise in the by-laws, the board of directors or the board of trustees shall fix the compensation of all officers.

D. An officer elected or appointed by the board of directors or the board of trustees may be removed by such board whenever in its judgment the best interests of the incorporated institution will be served thereby, but such removal shall be without prejudice to the contract rights, if any, of the person so removed.[4]

E. Unless specifically provided otherwise in the by-laws, the board of directors or the board of trustees shall have the power to fill any vacancies created by the death, removal, resignation, or otherwise, of any officer.

F. The officers, as between themselves and the institution, shall have such authority and perform such duties as shall in the case of a private bank, be given to them by the private banker or private bankers, and in the case of an incorporated instituiton, be specified by the by-laws.

Comments:

1. The office of secretary is mentioned in Section 5 of the Corporation Act of 1874, as amended, supra, but it is not mentioned in either the Act of 1876, supra, or the Act of 1889, supra. Most incorporated institutions today have a secretary, as this office is an important one in the conduct of corporate affairs. For such as do not wish to have a secretary, it is as pointed out post in these footnotes, possible to combine this office with another, which in most cases would, of course, be the cashier or treasurer.

2. There is nothing in existing law which requires the election of officers annually. However, this seems a desirable provision and is therefore included in this draft.

3. Under Section 12 of the Bank Act of 1876, as amended, "no cashier, clerk, or teller * * * shall be eligible as a director thereof." This proposed section permits a cashier to be a director. There seems to be no good reason for the prohibition of the Bank Act of 1876.

4. The general rule is that officers selected by the directors may be removed by them without any cause being assigned, Brindley v Walker, 221 Pa. 287 (1908); Spahn v Bielefeld and Spahn Company, et al., 256 Pa. 543 (1917). This rule would, of course, seem to apply in the case of trustees. If an officer lawfully elected has been improperly removed, manramus will lie to prevent his further exclusion from office. Spahn v Bielefeld and Spahn Company, supra; also Riddell v The Harmony Fire Company, 8 Phila. 310 (1871).

Section 511. Eligibility for Cashier, Treasurer, or Assistants; Restrictions upon Office. A. The following persons shall not be eligible to be cashiers or treasurers, or assistant cashiers or assistant treasurers, of any institution:

(1) A judge of any court of record in this Commonwealth;

(2) Any person holding office under this Commonwealth in the Department of Banking, the Treasury Department, the Auditor General's Department or the Department of Revenue;

(3) Any person authorized to receive and account for the public moneys of this Commonwealth;

(4) The treasurer of any county, city, township, borough, or other political subdivision of this Commonwealth.[1]

B. A cashier, treasurer, assistant cashier, or assistant treasurer of an institution shall not engage in any other profession, business, occupation, or calling, either directly or indirectly, but this shall not be construed to affect the right to be at the same time a member of the board of directors or the board of trustees of the incorporated institution in which he is cashier, treasurer, assistant cashier, or assistant treasurer.[2]

Comments:

1. The reasons for the prohibition upon the holding of office of cashier or treasurer by the persons named in this subsection are the same as those stated in footnote 6 to Section 502 of this draft.

2. This proposed subsection is based upon the provision of the Bank Act of 1876, supra, but enlarges its scope to include assistant treasurers or assistant cashiers.

Section 512. Bonds of Officers and Employes.—A. The officers and employes of every institution shall, before entering upon the performance of their duties, furnish to it bonds in such amount as is specified, with such corporate surety as is approved, in the case of an incorporated institution, by the directors or trustees, and in the case of a private bank, by the private banker or bankers. Such bond shall be conditioned upon the faithful performance of the duties of such officers or employers. The cost of such bonds may be paid by the institution.

B. The Department shall have the power to require any such officer or employe at any time during his term of office or employment, to furnish a bond in an amount greater than that required by the board of directors or trustees of the incorporated institution, or by the private banker or bankers, as the case may be, or it may require new or additional corporate surety.

Comments:

Section 18 of the Bank Act of 1876 requires a bond to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in such amount as the board of directors may require, the security for which shall be approved by the court of common pleas. As a matter of practise these bonds today are all for nominal amounts There seems to be no reason for requiring such officers to give a bond to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. Rather, it seems desirable to include a provision such as that included in this draft, giving the Department the power to require bond in a greater amount or new or additional surety whenever the circumstances seem to warrant. This seems more logical and seems to afford greater protection.

The banking laws of several other states likeswise empower the Department of Banking to require bonds or to require bonds of a larger amount or a more reliable surety. Included among such states are Ohio, Mississippi, Kansas, and Texas.

Comments:

In view of the doubt existing in Pennsylvania prior to the Act of 1919, as to the eligibility of a married woman to act as incorporator, director, or officer of a corporation, it seems advisable to include the provisions of the Act of 1919 in this draft. See Section 301, which makes married women eligible to be incorporators of incorporated institutions.

This proposed section is based upon Section 408 of the proposed Business Corporation Law.

Section 514. Relation of Directors, Trustees, and Officers to Incorporated Institution.—Officers, directors, and trustees shall be deemed to stand in a fiduicary relation to an incorporated institution, and shall discharge the duties of their respective positions in good faith and with that diligence, care, and skill which ordinarily prudent men would exercise under similar circumstances in like positions.

Uniform Act—Section 33, Michigan—Section 47.

Comments:

This proposed section corresponds to Section 407 in the proposed Business Corporation Law. According to a note contained under this section in the Uniform Act, the section is necessary in view of the unsettled state of the case law upon the question of the relation of directors to the corporation. Some cases liken the relation of directors to the corporation to that of a trustee to a cestui que trust (Bent v. Priest, 86 Mo. 475); other cases liken directors to mandataries (Spering's Appeal, 71 Pa. 11 (1872); The Citizens Building, Loan and Savings Association of Plainfield v. Coriell, et al., 34 N. J. Eq. 383 (1881); still other cases hold that directors are agents of the corporation (Ten Eyck v. R. R., 74 Mich. 227; Briggs v. Spaulding, 141 U. S 132 (1891); Hun v. Carey, 82 N. Y. 65 (1880). There is a conflict also in the decisions as to whether directors should use that degree of care that the ordinary prudent man would use in his own business (Hun v. Carey, supra; Hanna v. Lyon, 179 N. Y. 107 (1904); Kavanaugh v. Commonwealth Trust Company, 223 N. Y. 103), or that amount of care that an ordinary prudent director would use (Briggs v. Spaulding, supra; Allen v. Roydhouse, 232 Fed. 1010 (1916); Stone v. Rottman, 183 Mo. 552 and Spering's Appeal, supra). The draftsman of the Uniform Act states that the weight of authorities supports the rule adopted in this draft, and that this rule is the most fair and the most practicable.

This proposed section will effect a change in Pennsylvania law. In 1872, Judge Sharswood, in Spering's Appeal, supra, said: "It is by no means a well-settled point what is the precise relation which directors sustain to stockholders. They are undoubtedly said in many authorities to be trustees, but that as I apprehend is only in a general sense, as we term an agent or any bailee intrusted with the care and management of the property of another. It is certain that they are not technical trustees. They can only be regarded as mandataries—persons who have gratuitously undertaken to perform certain duties, and who are therefore bound to apply ordinary skill and diligence, but no more."

It is held in Pennsylvania that directors receiving no compensation are required to exercise only ordinary skill and diligence, and are personally liable only for fraud or for such gross negligence as amounts to fraud, and for acts clearly ultra vires. Spering's Appeal, supra.

In Commonwealth v. Anchor Building and Loan Association, 20 Pa. Super. 101 (1902), it was stated: "This rule of law is based upon the fact that directors are gratuitous mandatories. * * * the insignificant payments to directors when attending meetings of the board, were not compensation and did not change the measure of duty and liability of the directors."

In Swentzel v. Penn Bank, 147 Pa. 140 (1892), Judge Paxson, in reiterating the rule of ordinary care laid down in Spering's Appeal, stated: "The ordinary care of a business man in his own affairs means one thing; the ordinary care of a gratuitous mandatory is quite another matter. The one implies an oversight and knowledge of every detail of his business; the other suggests such care only as a man can give in a short space of time to the business of other persons, from whom he receives no compensation. * * * care must be taken that we do not hold mere gratuitous mandatories to such a severe rule as to drive all honest men out of such positions."

From the foregoing, it is obvious that in Pennsylvania today a director is seld to but the ordinary skill and diligence of a directors in the business of the corporation and not to the ordinary kill and diligence which a man takes of his own business.

These cases, of course, do not specifically cover trustees.

Section 515. Power of Attorney to Make Entries of Record.—A. Every institution shall, by power of attorney filed of record in the office of the recorder of deeds in any county in which it may have occasion or which it may be required to enter acknowledgment of payments, assignments, extension, postponement, release or satisfaction of, or to take any other action affecting the lien of any mortgage which appears upon the records in such office, designate a person or persons who shall be authorized in the name of such institution to make such entries.

B. Such recorder of deeds shall not permit any person, other than the person or persons so designated to act in such manner for such institution.

C. Any entry on any record in an office of a recorder of deeds, if made in violation of this act, shall be of no effect.

This proposed section is a summary of the Act of 1921, as amended, supra.

Section 516. Acceptance of Fee or Commission by Director, Trustee, Officer, Attorney, or Employe.—A. Neither an officer, attorney, or employe of an institution, or in the case of an incorporated institution, a director or trustee, nor an officer, attorney, or employe of an affiliated institution or an affiliated national banking association, or in the case of an affiliated incorporated institution, or national banking association, a director or trustee, shall stipulate for, or agree or assent to receive, or receive, any fee, commission, gift, or other property of value from any corporation or person, for procuring or for endeavoring to procure for such corporation or person, or for any other corporation or person, any loan from, or any investment by, or any purchase or discount of any paper, note, draft, check, bill of exchange, or other commercial paper by such institution.

B. Any officer, attorney, or employe of an institution, and in the case of an incorporated institution, any director or trustee thereof, or any officer, attorney, or employe of an affiliated institution or an affiliated national banking association, and in the case of an affiliated incorporated institution or national banking association, any director or trustee thereof, who knowingly violates the provisions of this section, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction thereof, be subject to an imprisonment for a period not exceeding one year, or a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or both; he shall also be subject to a further fine of a sum equal to the amount, or the value of the property, which he receives as such fee, commission, or gift.

Comments:
This proposed section is new in Pennsylvania law, except that in the case of trustees, Section 11 of the Act of May 20, 1889, P. L. 246, 7 PS Sec. 554 is probably broad enough in its terms to make illegal the practice prohibited by this proposed section.

The common law in England and in this country has always been clear that an agent in most situations cannot represent both his principal and the party with whom he is negotiating for his principal. Yet in thecase of institutions, the practice by directors, officers, attorneys, or employes of receiving fees or commissions for procuring loans or discounts, et cetera, is most widespread. The practice is unquestionably a most reprehensible one. Such individuals cannot in good conscience, represent both parties, nor can they possibly have the welfare of both parties in mind in engaging in such practice. The laws of many other states prohibit, or make criminal, or both, this practice, for example, California, Massachusetts, Ohio, Virginia, Kansas, Wisconsin, Louisiana, and the national act.

It is to be noted that most of the prohibitions imposed by this proposed article upon directors, trustees, officers, attorneys, or employes include directors, trustees, officers, attorneys of employes of affiliated institutions or affiliated national banks. This seems logical. It also precludes the obvious means of evasion of the effect of these proposed sections by means of reciprocal agreements between affiliated institutions.

Section 517. Preferential Rate of Interest to Directors, Trustees, Officers, Attorneys, or Employes.—An institution shall not pay to any of its officers, attorneys, or employes, or in the case of an incorporated institution, any of its directors or trustees, nor shall it pay to the officers, attorneys, or employes of an affiliated institution or an affiliated national banking association, or in the case of an affiliated incorporated institution or national banking association, to any of the directors or trustees thereof, a greater rate of interest on the deposits of such director, trustee, officer, attorney, or employe, than that paid to any other depositor on similar deposits with such institution, nor shall a lower rate of interest be charged to any such director, trustee, officer, agent, or employe, on any loan or discount granted than that charged other borrowers under similar circumstances on the same types of loans or discounts.

Comments:
This proposed section is new in the law of Pennsylvania. The justice of the rule established by it is too obvious to require discussion. It is based upon the Federal Reserve Act, supra.

Section 518. Overdrafts by Directors, Trustees, Officers, Attorneys, or Employes.—A. An institution shall not permit any of its officers, attorneys, employes, and in the case of an incorporated institution, any of its directors or trustees, nor any of the officers, attorneys, or employes of an affiliated[1] institution or affiliated national banking association, or in the case of an affiliated incorporated institution or national banking association, any of the directors or trustees, to overdraw his account.

B. Any officer, attorney, or employe of an institution, and in the case of an incorporated institution, any director or trustee thereof, who knowingly ovedraws his account with such institution, or any officer, attorney, or employe of an affiliated institution or an affiliated national banking association, and in the case of an affiliated incorporated institution or national banking association, any director or trustee thereof, who knowingly overdraws his account with such institution, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction thereof, be subject to imprisonment for a period not exceeding one year, or a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or both; he shall also be subject to a further fine of a sum equal to the amount to which his account is overdrawn.[2]

Comments:
1. See Section 1007D for definition of affiliated institutions or national banking associations.
2. There does not seem to be any possible argument in favor of overdrafts by directors, trustees, officers, attorneys, or employes of institutions, or of affiliated institutions or affiliated national banking associations. The laws of New Jersey, California, and Louisiana not only forbid this practice, but also contain a criminal provision to enforce it. The provisions of this proposed section are similar to the laws of those states.

Section 519. Purchases from and Sales to Directors, Trustees, Officers, Attorneys, or Employes.—A. An institution shall not contract for or purchase from any of its officers, attorneys, or employes, and in the case of an incorporated institution, from any of its directors or trustees, nor from any of the officers, attorneys, or employes of an affiliated institution, or affiliated national banking association, and in the case of an affiliated incorporated institution or national banking association, from any of the directors or trustees, any securities or other property, unless such purchase is made in the regular course of business upon terms not less than favorable to the institution than those offered to any other corporation or person, unless such purchase could not be made from another reliable source at a more favorable price or upon more favorable terms, and, in the case of an incorporated institution, unless such purchase is authorized by the vote of a majority of all the members of the board of directors or of the board of trustees of such incorporated institution, who are not interested in such transaction except in their capacity as directors or trustees of the incorporated institution.

B. An institution shall not sell securities or other property owned or held by it to any of its officers, attorneys, or employes, and in the case of incorporated institutions, to any of its directors or trustees, nor to any of the officers, attorneys, or employes of an affiliated institution, or affiliated national banking association, and in the case of an affiliated incorporated institution, or national banking association, to any of the directors or trustees, unless such sale is made in the regular course of business upon terms not less favorable to the institution than those offered to any other corporation or person, unless such sale could not be made elsewhere at a more favorable price or upon more favorable terms, and unless, in the case of an incorporated institution, such sale is authorized by the vote of a majority of all the members of the board of directors or the board of trustees of such incorporated institution, who are not interested in such transaction except in their capacities as directors or trustees of the incorporated institution.

C. For the purposes of this section, a purchase from or a sale to, a corporation of which any director, trustee, officer, attorney, or employe described in this section owns ten per centum or more of the outstanding shares, or a purchase from or a sale to, an unincorporated association of which any such director, trustee, officer, attorney, or employe, is a member, shall be considered a purchase from or a sale to, such director, trustee, officer, attorney, or employe.

D. Any officer, attorney, or employe of an institution, any director or trustee thereof, or any officer, attorney, or employe of an affiliated institution or an affiliated national banking association, and in the case of an affiliated incorporated institution or national banking association, any director or trustee thereof, who knowingly violates the provisions of this section, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction thereof, be subject to an imprisonment not exceeding one year, or a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or both; he shall also be subject to a further fine equal to any profit which he shall have made upon the transaction.

Comments:

This proposed section is based upon the provisions of the Federal Reserve Act, supra, except that that act includes only directors. The purpose of this proposed section is obvious. It seems that a proper safeguarding of the interests of depositors and other creditors makes the inclusion of some provision preventing the continued relations between directors and trustees and the incorporated institution of which they are members of the board from continuing on the same basis as it has heretofore. This proposed section does not prevent purchases and sales in which the directors or trustees are either purchasers or vendors and conversely the institution is vendor or purchaser. It merely attempts to prevent recurrences of the type of violation discussed in this footnote.

In general, an individual stands in a very high fiduciary relationship to the incorporated institution of which he is director or trustee. A sale of the assets of an individual to the estate of which he is a trustee or other fiduciary has always been looked upon with suspicion by the law. There is certainly as much reason, if not more, for a careful circumscribing of the authority to engage in such transactions in the case of directors and trustees.

Finally, it should certainly be the privilege of all the directors or trustees to know of any business transaction being conducted between one of their number and the incorporated institution.

While the violations on this score have not in the past been so flagrant, it seems desirable to include in the prohibition of this proposed section, any officer, attorney, or employe of the institution, or of the affiliated institution or national bank.

The Federal Reserve Act provides that the limitation of this section shall apply to "any firm or which any of its [the incorporated institution's] directors is a member." If this is intended to mean that if a director owns a single share in a corporation, this should bring such corporation under the operation of the provision of the Federal Reserve Act cited above, it seems unduly harsh. Therefore, the provisions of this proposed section are extended only to corporations of which such director or trustee owns ten per centum of the outstanding shares.

Section 520. Purchases of Evidence of Debt Below Face Value by Directors, Trustees, Officers, Attorneys, or Employes.—A. Neither an officer, attorney, or employe of an institution, or in the case of an incorporated institution, a director or trustee, nor an officer, attorney or employe of an affiliated institution or an affiliated national banking association or in the case of an affiliated incorporated institution or national banking association, a director or trustee shall purchase, or directly or indirectly be interested in the purchase from such institution of any promissory note or other evidence of indebtedness issued by such institution for less than its face value.

B. Any such director, trustee, officer, attorney, or employe, who knowingly purchases such evidence of debt below its face value in violation of this section, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction thereof, be subject to a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or to an imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both; he shall also be subject to a further fine equal to the face value of the evidence of debt.

Comments:

This proposed section is new in Pennsylvania law. A similar provision exists in the laws of New York which apply to banks and bank and trust companies. This proposed section, in addition to a fine which is all that is imposed by the New York act, adds an imprisonment of not more than one year as a possible punishment. This is consistent with the other sections in this draft on restrictions in the relationships between directors, trustees, officers, attorneys, employes, and an institution.

It seems clear that none of the members of the institution, to whom this proposed section applies should, under any circumstances, purchase an evidence of debt of an institution below its face value.

ARTICLE VI

MEETINGS, RIGHTS, AND LIABILITIES OF SHAREHOLDERS OF BANKS AND BANK AND TRUST COMPANIES

Section 601. Meetings of Shareholders.—A. Meetings of the shareholders of a bank or a bank and trust company shall be held within this Commonwealth[1] at such place as may be provided in the by-laws of the bank or the bank and trust company. Unless the by-laws provide otherwise, all meetings of the shaneholders shall be held at the principal place of business of the bank or the bank and trust company.

B. The by-laws may provide for the number and the time of meetings of shareholders, but at least one meeting of the shareholders shall be held in each calendar year for the election of directors at such time as shall be provided in the by-laws.[2] If the annual meeting shall not be called and held within one month after the designated time, any shareholder shall have the power to call upon the Department to issue an order in the manner provided by law to compel the calling and holding of such meeting.[3]

C. Special meetings of shareholders may be called at any time by the president, the board of directors, the holders of not less than one-fifth of all the shares outstanding and entitled to vote at the particular meeting, and by such other officers or persons as may be provided in the articles or by-laws. At any time upon written request of any person entitled to call a special meeting, it shall be the duty of the secretary of the bank or the bank and trust company to call a special meeting of the shareholders to be held at such time as the secretary of the bank or bank and trust company may fix, not less than ten nor more than sixty days after the receipt of the request. If the secretary shall neglect or refuse to issue such call, the person or persons making the request shall have the power to call upon the Department to issue an order in the manner provided by law to compel the calling and holding of such meeting.[4]

D. Any annual or special meeting may be adjourned for any period of time, but any meeting at which directors are to be elected shall be adjourned only from day to day until such directors have been elected.[5]

Comments:

1. Section 501 of the proposed Business Corporation Law provides that meetings may be held within or without the Commonwealth. This changes the existent Pennsylvania law. However, in the case of bank or bank and trust company it seems clear that it is undesirable to permit meetings of the shareholders to be held outside the Commonwealth.

2. Section 501 of the proposed Business Corporation Law provides that failure to hold the annual meeting at the designated time shall not work any forfeiture or dissolution of the corporation. It is unnecessary to make any such provision in the case of a bank or a bank and trust company, since the proposed Department of Banking Code provides for the rights of the Department upon the commission of any offense by an institution.

3. Section 5 of the Corporation Act of 1874, supra, provides that the by-laws "shall prescribe the time and place of meeting of the corporation." Under existing law, directors are required to be elected annually, unless they are devided into different classes. See Section 503 and 501 of this draft for election of directors.

4. Section 501 of the proposed Business Corporation Law provides that if the secretary shall neglect or refuse to issue a call for a special meeting, the person or persons making the request shall do so. However, in the case of a bank or a bank and trust company it seems desirable to provide for such person or persons to call upon the Department to compel the calling of the meeting. The Department is the proper authority for the compelling of compliance with the laws regarding the business of a bank or bank and trust company. In addition, this provision will make more certain the Department's learning of undesirable practices by an institution or its officers.

5. This provision is substantially similar to Section 501 D of the proposed Business Corporation Law, which is taken from Section 27 (III) of the Uniform Act and expresses the general rule on adjournments of meetings of shareholders. See Savidge on Pa. Corps., Volume 1, Section 729, Page 596. The provision relating to the adjournment of meetings called for the purpose of electing directors is intended to insure the election of directors by preventing indefinite adjournments.

Section 602. Notice of Meetings of Shareholders.[1]—Written notice of every meeting of the shareholders of a bank or a bank and trust company shall be given by, or at the direction of, the person authorized to call the meeting, to each shareholder of record entitled to vote at the meeting, at least five days prior to the day named for the meeting, unless a greater period of notice is required elsewhere in this act.[2] The notice shall specify the place, day, and hour of the meeting, and, in the case of a special meeting, the general nature of the business to be transacted. When a meeting is adjourned it shall not be necessary to give any notice of the adjourned meeting or of the business to be transacted at an adjourned meeting, other than by announcement at the meeting to which such adjournment is taken, unless otherwise provided in the by-laws.

Comments:

1. There is no general statutory provision in Pennsylvania on the subject of notice. Particular statutes prescribe the period of notice required of meetings called for increasing capital stock or indebtedness, for amending charters, or for merger or consolidation proceedings, and the like.

Generally speaking, the by-laws, in the absence of statutory regulation, usually provide how much notice shall be given in advance of a meeting. If the statute and the by-laws both are silent on the subject, the notice must be given a reasonable time before the day of the meeting. The Mercantile Library Hall Company v. The Pittsburgh Library Association, et al., 173 Pa. 30 (1896). This draft prescribes a minimum period of five days.

Unless unusual business is to be transacted, it is not necessary for notice of a regular meeting to specify the object of the meeting, but the notice of a special meeting must specify the character of the business to be transacted. Bagley v. Reno Oil Company, 201 Pa. 78 (1902). Unless the by-laws otherwise provide, stockholders are not entitled to any notice of an adjourned meeting other than that implied in the adjournment. Savidge on Pa. Corps., Volume 1, Section 729.

Section 10 of this draft permits the waiver of notice of a shareholders' meeting.

2. The details as to notice which are contained in Section 502 of the proposed Business Corporation Law are omitted in this proposed section, since Section 8 of this draft contains general provisions on notice applicable to all sections in this draft in which notice is required.

Section 603. Quorum of Shareholders.—A shareholders' meeting duly called shall not be organized for the transaction of business unless a quorum is present. Unless otherwise provided in the articles:

(1) The presence in person, or by proxy, of the holders of a majority of the outstanding shares entitled to vote shall constitute a quorum.[1]

(2) The shareholders present at a duly organized meeting can continue to do business until adjournment notwithstanding the withdrawal of enough shareholders to leave less than a quorum.[2]

(3) If a meeting cannot be organized because a quorum has not attended, those present may, except as otherwise provided in this act, adjourn the meeting to such time and place as they may determine, but in the case of any meeting called for the election of directors, those who attend the second of such adjourned meetings, although less than a quorum as fixed in this section or in the articles, shall nevertheless constitute a quorum for the purpose of electing directors.[3]

Corporation Act of 1874, Section 6, 15 PS Sec. 60.

Comments:

1. This provision is identical with Section 503 of the proposed Business Corporation Law, which is taken form Section 30 (11) of the Uniform Act and is substantially similar to Section 6 of the Corporation Act of 1874. Unlike the Act of 1874, this draft requires the articles, instead of the by-laws, to specify the requirements of a quorum, if the corporators desire a greater number than a majority to constitute a quorum.

A note to the Uniform Act points out that the prevailing practice is to leave to the shareholders the determination of what constitutes a quorum, by provision either in the charter or by-laws, but in view of the conflict in the case law on the question of what constitutes a majority, it seems best to have the matter regulated by statute subject to control by shareholders to meet their particular requirements, such control to be expressed in the articles of incorporation rather than in the by-laws.

2. This provision is also identical with Section 503 of the proposed Business Corporation Law, which is taken form Section 30 of the Uniform Act, and is consistent with the Pennsylvania view that a meeting properly constituted cannot be deprived of the right to transact the business for which it was called by the refusal of certain members present to participate therein, or by their capricious withdrawal, Commonwealth v. Vandegrift, 232 Pa 53 (1911); Lutz v. Webster, 249 Pa. 226 (1915). A few other states, representing the minority view on this point, hold that there must be a quorum at the time of voting. Bridgers v. Staton, 150 N. C. 216.

3. This provision is likewise the same as Section 503 of the proposed Business Corporation Law, which is taken from Section 30 (II) (c) of the Uniform Act. The purpose of this provision is to insure the election of directors by preventing indefinite adjournments, or by preventing the majority from defeating a quorum by failing to attend the meeting. Without the latter part of this provision, an intrenched board of directors could prevent the holding of an election.

As pointed out in a note to the Uniform Act, the provisions of this subdivision should accelerate the settlement of controversies over management and accord to any minority group of shareholders the right of such preferential representation on the board of directors as their shares entitle them to. It is provided by statute in New York (Section 30, C. G. L.), that if directors are not elected at a regular meeting, a special meeting may be called, and at such special meeting "the members attending shall constitute a quorum."

Section 604. Shareholders May Vote in Person or by Proxy.[1]—Every shareholder of record of a bank or a bank and trust company shall have the right, at every shareholders' meeting, to one vote for every share standing in his name on the books of the bank or the bank and trust company.[2] Every shareholder may vote either in person or by proxy executed in writing by the shareholder, or by his duly authorized attorney in fact and filed with the secretary of the bank or the bank and trust company. A proxy, unless coupled with an interest, shall be revocable at will notwithstanding any other agreement or any provision in the proxy to the contrary, but the revocation of a proxy shall not be effective until notice thereof has been given to the secretary of the bank or the bank and trust company. No unrevoked proxy shall be valid after eleven months from the date of its execution, unless a longer time is expressly provided therein but in no event shall a proxy, unless coupled with an interest, be voted on after three years from the date of its execution. A proxy shall not be revoked by the death or incapacity of the maker unless before the vote is counted or the authority is exercised, written notice of such death or incapacity is given to the secretary of the bank or bank and trust company. A shareholder shall not sell his vote or execute a proxy to any person for any sum of money or anything of value.[3]

Comments:

1. This proposed section of the draft is almost the same as Section 504 of the proposed Business Corporation Law, which is modelled on Sections 28 (IV) of the Uniform Act, and is substantially similar to the Act of 1903, supra, except that it changes the time limit on proxies. Under existing law, the statutory time limit of a proxy is two months. Under this draft, and the Uniform Act, the validity of a proxy that contains no time limit will automatically expire in eleven months, but a definite time limit contained in the proxy will be given effect up to, but not exceeding, three years.

As pointed out in a note to the Uniform Act, the statutory time limit on the validity of proxies in the general corporation laws of the various states varies. In Delaware, New Jersey, and North Carolina, it is three years from the date of execution; in New York, Illinois, Connecticut, and California, it is eleven months; in Maine and Maryland, it is ninety days. In the great majority of states, the statutory limitation is made to control only in the absence of a period of validity being fixed in the proxy itself. In a small minority of states, it is provided that the validity of a proxy cannot, by its own terms be made to exceed the period limited by statute.

2. Section 504 of the proposed Business Corporation Law excepts from the provision that every share shall be entitled to one vote, any different rule established elsewhere in that act or in the articles of a particular corporation. This is omitted in this draft, since every share in a bank or a bank and trust company shall have the same rights as every other share, see Section 407 of this draft.

3. The Bank Act of 1876 prohibits an officer, clerk, teller, or bookkeeper, of a bank from acting as proxy. Such a prohibition is not included in the proposed Business Corporation Law. It does not seem necessary to make an exception in the case of a bank.

Section 605. Election of Directors; Cumulative Voting.—Unless otherwise provided in the by-laws, elections for directors need not be by ballot, except upon demand made by a shareholder at the election and before the voting begins. In all elections for directors, every shareholder shall have the right, in person or by proxy, to multiply the number of votes to which he may be entitled by the number of directors to be elected, he may cast his whole number of such votes for one candidate or he may distribute them among any two or more candidates. The candidates receiving the highest number of votes up to the number of directors to be chosen shall be elected.

Comments:

In Pennsylvania, the right to cumulative voting is conferred and guaranteed by Article XVI, Section 4, of the Constitution. This right is also expressly conferred by the Act of 1876, supra. This proposed section is the same as Section 505 of the proposed Business Corporation Law, which is taken from Section 28 (III) of the Uniform Act.

Section 606. Voting by Trustees and Pledgees.—Shares of a bank or a bank and trust company, held in a fiduciary capacity by a fiduciary appointed by last will and testament or by decree of the orphans' court shall be voted by such fiduciary, either in person or by proxy, in the manner and under the circumstances provided by law.[1] Shares standing in the name of a fiduciary other than one appointed by last will and testament or by decree of the orphans' court, or shares held by an assignee for the benefit of creditors, or by a receiver, may be voted by such fiduciary, assignee, or receiver, either in person or by proxy. A shareholder whose shares are pledgfed shall be entitled to vote thereon, in person or by proxy, until the shares have been transferred on the books of the bank or bank and trust company to the pledgee, and thereafter the pledgee shall be entitled to vote the shares in person or by proxy.[2]

Comments:

1. The voting of shares by fiduciaries, subject to the orphans' court, is now covered by Section 43 of the Fiduciaries Act of 1917, which is a restatement of Section 1 of the Act of 1905, supra, which formerly governed the voting of shares by all fiduciaries. The Fiduciaries Act repealed the Act of 1905 only in so far as it related to fiduciaries subject to the jurisdiction of the orphans' court, as the "act of 1905 is apparently intended to include trustees appointed by the common pleas, though it makes no provision as to trustees appointed by deed." Report of Commission appointed to Codify and Revise the Law of Decedents' Estates (1917) Page 209.

While practically all corporation statutes have provisions covering voting rights of fiduciaries, Section 43 of the Fiduciaries Act of 1917 was not embodied in this draft, as it was deemed unwise to mutilate that act, but in order to preclude the interpretation that this act implied by amendments the Fiduciaries Act, it has been expressly incorporated into this Act by reference.

2. This provision is taken from Section 28 (V) of the Uniform Act, and makes a change in existing law. Section 3 of the Act of 1893, supra, directs that as between a pledgee and pledgor of shares, the pledgor shall be entitled to vote the shares unless the agreement provides otherwise. Under the Uniform Act, and this draft, the pledgor may vote the shares as long as they are registered in his name on the books of the bank or bank and trust company, otherwise, the pledgee may vote them.

Section 607. Voting by Joint Holders of Shares.—Where shares of a bank or a bank and trust company are held jointly by more than one corporation or person, the will of the majority of such joint holders shall control the manner of voting or the giving of a proxy. If the shares are held jointly by two corporations or persons, and they disagree, the shares shall not be voted. If only one of the joint holders is present in person or by proxy, he shall have the right to vote all such shares, and all of the shares standing in the names of such corporations or persons shall be deemed to be represented for the purpose of determining a quorum. The same shall be true in the case of fiduciaries, other than those appointed by last will and testament or by decree of the orphans' court, unless such fiduciaries have been appointed under an instrument or a decree of court which directs otherwise. Where in any case, such fiduciaries are equally divided upon the manner of voting the shares jointly held by them it shall be lawful for the court of common pleas, upon petition filed by any of the fiduciaries, or by any beneficiary, to direct the voting of such shares in the manner which, in the opinion of the court, will be for the best interests of the parties beneficially interested in the shares.

Where shares of a bank or a bank and trust company are held jointly in a fiduciary capacity by two or more fiduciaries appointed by last will and testament or by decree of the orphans' court, they shall be voted in the manner and under the circumstances provided by law.

Comments:

The provisions of this proposed section relating to votign by joint holders, other than fiduciaries, were taken from Section 320 (e) of the new California act. Shares standing in the name of a firm on the books of a bank or a bank and trust company may be voted by any partner, but if the partners disagree as to the vote, neither can vote the shares. The same is true where shares are owned by two or more persons jointly. Fitcher Cyclopedia Corporations (Permanent Edition), Volume 5, Section 2038; Savidge on Pa. Corps., Volume 1, Section 758.

In regard to executors, administrators, guardians, and trustees, the Act of 1905, supra, and Section 43 of the Fiduciaries Act of 1917, permit a majority of such fiduciaries to determine how shares held jointly by them may be voted. The Act of 1905 was repealed by the Fiduciaries Act of 1917 in so far as it related to fiduciaries under the jurisdiction of the orphans' court. Accordingly, the Act of 1905 now applies only to trustees appointed by deed or by the court of common pleas. This distinction is maintained by this section of the draft by specific reference to existing law.

The provision authorizing a petition to the common pleas court by fiduciaries in a deadlock is similar to a provision in Section 43 of the Fiduciaries Act of 1917, permitting fiduciaries who cannot agree to petition the orphans' court for advice.

Section 608. Voting Shares Held by an Incorporated Institution.—An incorporated institution or any other corporation, owning shares in a bank or bank and trust company, or an incorporated institution owning shares in any other corporation may vote them by its president, or by proxy appointed by him, unless some other person, by resolution of its board of directors or board of trustees, shall be appointed to vote such shares, in which case such person shall be entitled to vote the shares upon the production of a certified copy of such resolution. Shares of its own capital belonging to a bank or a bank and trust company shall not be voted, directly or indirectly, at any meeting, and shall not be counted in determining the total number of outstanding shares at any given time, but shares of its own capital held by a bank and trust company in a fiduciary capacity may be voted and shall be counted in determining the total number of outstanding shares at any given time.

Comments:

This proposed section is based upon Section 508 of the proposed Business Corporation Law which deals with voting of shares in one corporation held by another corporation. This proposed section deals with the case of an incorporated institution, or any other corporation, which owns shares in a bank or a bank and trust company; it likewise deals with the case of shares in any other corporation owned by a bank or a bank and trust company. Both these provisions seem necessary in order to supplement the provisions of the proposed Business Corporation Law.

Section 508 of the proposed Business Corporation Law is taken from Subsections (VI) and (VII) of Section 28 of the Uniform Act, and is substantially similar to the Act of 1901, supra, which provides that a corporation which owns the stock of another corporation "may exercise all the rights, powers and privileges of ownership, including the right to vote thereon."

This draft forbids the purchase of shares by an institution, but of course, institutions now owning shares may continue to do so, see Sections 1009 and 1018 of this draft.

The provision prohibiting a bank or a bank and trust company from voting its own shares is the common law rule (14 C. J. 904), and many of the corporation laws of the states contain a similar provision.

Section 609. Determination of Shareholders of Record.—Unless the by-laws otherwise provide, the board of directors of a bank or a bank and trust company may fix a time, not less than ten or more than forty days, prior to the date of any meeting of shareholders, or the date fixed for the payment of any dividend or distribution, or the date for the allotment of rights, or the date when any change or conversion or exchange of shares will be made or will go into effect, as a record date for the determination of the shareholders entitled to notice of, and to vote at, any such meeting, or entitled to receive payment of any such dividend or distribution, or to receive any such allotment of rights, or to exercise the rights in respect to any such change, conversion, or exchange of shares. In such case, only the shareholders of record on the date so fixed shall be entitled to notice of, and to vote at, such meeting, or to receive payment of such dividend, or to receive such allotment of rights, or to exercise such rights, as the case may be, notwithstanding any transfer of any shares on the books of the corporation after any record date fixed, as aforesaid. The board of directors may close the books of the bank or the bank and trust company against transfers of shares during the whole or any part of such period, and in such case written or printed notice thereof shall be given at least ten days before the closing thereof to each shareholder of record at the address appearing on the records of the bank or bank and trust company or supplied by him to such bank or such bank and trust company or supplied by him to such bank or such bank and trust company for the purpose of notice. While the stock transfer books of such corporation are closed, no transfer of shares shall be made thereon.[1] Unless a record date is fixed by the by-laws or the board of directors for the determination of shareholders entitled to receive notice of, or to vote at, a shareholders' meeting, transferees of shares which are transferred on the books of the bank or the bank and trust company within ten days next preceding the date of such meeting shall not be entitled to notice of or to vote at such meeting.[2] Nothing herein contained shall be deemed to abridge the constitutional requirement of sixty days' notice of a meeting called for the purpose of increasing the authorized capital stock or indebtedness of a corporation or to deprive anyone who was a shareholder of record, sixty days prior to the meeting, of his right to vote at the meeting.[3]

Comments:

1. This proposed section corresponds to Section 709 of the proposed Business Corporation Law.

This part of this proposed section is taken from Section 28 (I) of the Uniform Act, and is substantially similar to the Act of 1929, supra.

2. This provision is taken by the proposed Business Corporation Law from the new Indiana and Michigan corporation acts, and appears to be desirable in view of Section 602 of this draft, which provides that a shareholder must receive at least five days' notice of a shareholders' meeting, and Section 610 which requires a voting list to be prepared at least five days before a meeting.

3. This provision appears necessary in view of Article XVI, Section 7, of the Constitution of Pennsylvania, which requires sixty days' notice to be given of a meeting called to consider an increase of the capital stock or indebtedness of a corporation. In this respect, the Act of 1929, supra, provides "No transfer or transfers of shares of such corporations, within sixty days of any election or meeting of stockholders, shall deprive the holder of said shares of the right to vote in respect of the same at such election or meeting, if otherwise entitled thereto."

Section 610. Voting Lists.—A. The officer or agent having charge of the transfer books for shares of a bank or a bank and trust company shall make, at least five days before each meeting of shareholders, a complete list of the shareholders, entitled to vote at the meeting, arranged in alphabetical order, with the address of and the number of shares held by each, which list shall be kept on file at the principal place of business of such bank or such bank and trust company and shall be subject to inspection by any shareholder at any time during usual business hours. Such list shall also be produced and kept open at the time and place of the meeting, and shall be subject to the inspection of any shareholder during the whole time of the meeting. The original share ledger or transfer book, or a duplicate thereof kept in this Commonwealth, shall be prima facie evidence as to who are the shareholders entitled to examine such list or share ledger or transfer book, or to vote, in person or by proxy, at any meeting of shareholders. An officer or agent having charge of the transfer books who shall fail to prepare the list of shareholders, or keep the same on file for a period of five days, or produce and keep the same open for inspection at any meeting, as provided in this section, shall be liable to any shareholder suffering damages on account of such failure, to the extent of such damages.[1]

B. A complete list of the shareholders, arranged in alphabetical order, with the address and number of shares held by each, shall be sent to the Department at least once in each year, upon a date to be designated by the Department.[2]

Comments:

1. This proposed subsection corresponds to Section 510 of the proposed Business Corporation Law. It is new to Pennsylvania law, and is taken from Section 31 of the Illinois Business Corporation Act. A substantially similar provision is found in the statutes of many states, including New Jersey, Delaware, Illinois and Michigan. Some states, like Delaware, require a list to be prepared only in the case of an election of directors. There seems to be no reason why such a list should not be prepared prior to every meeting of shareholders, and this draft so provides. Under this section, as under the Act of 1889, supra, the transfer books are prima facie evidence of the shareholder's right to vote, but the certificate of stock is not such evidence. Therefore, if the stock list omits a name which the stock book or ledger shows, the record holder is entitled to vote.

Section 15 of the Bank Act of 1876, supra, places the duty to keep records of shareholders upon the directors and requires them annually to transmit the list to the Department. This latter provision exists in the banking laws of many states and it is adopted in this draft.

Section 611. Voting Trusts.—A. Two or more shareholders of a bank or bank and trust company may, by agreement in writing, transfer their shares to any person or persons, or to any bank and trust company or bank and trust companies, but in no case to the bank and trust company in which such shares are held, for the purpose of vesting in the transferee or transferees all voting or other rights pertaining to such shares for a period not exceeding ten years, and upon the terms and conditions stated in the agreement. An unexecuted copy of the agreement shall be filed in the principal place of business of the bank or bank and trust company and shall be open daily, during business hours, to the inspection of any shareholder, or any transferor under the agreement, or the attorney of any shareholder or transferor. Such appointment of a voting trustee shall not relieve any shareholder of any liability for the payment of the debts of the bank or bank and trust company, which attach to such shares, notwithstanding any provision to the contrary in the agreement.

B. Upon the filing of the agreement, the share certificates of shares so transferred shall be surrendered and cancelled, and new certificates therefor shall be issued to the transferee or transferees, as voting trustee or trustees, in which new certificates it shall appear that they are issued pursuant to the agreement. In the registration of the transfer of the shares on the books of the bank or bank and trust company, it shall be noted that the transfer is made pursuant to the agreement. The trustee or trustees shall execute and deliver to the transferors voting trust certificates which shall be transferable in the same manner and with the same effect as share certificates, under the provisions of the Uniform Stock Transfer Act, approved the fifth day of May, one thousand nine hundred eleven (Pamphlet Laws, one hundred twenty-six), and its amendments and supplements, upon the transfer and registration of the shares. The trustee or trustees shall possess all voting and other rights pertaining to the shares so transferred and registered, subject to the terms and conditions of, and for the period specified in the agreement, but the shareholders transferring such shares under such conditions shall be subject to any liability in the payment of the debts of the bank or bank and trust company, which attach to such shares under this act.

C. Unless otherwise provided in the agreement:

(1) The trustees may vote in person or by proxy.

(2) If there are two or more trustees, the manner of voting shall be determined as heretofore provided in this act for the voting of shares by joint holders.

(3) Vacancies among the trustees shall be filled by the remaining trustees.

(4) A trustee shall incur no responsibility as trustee except for his own individual neglect or malefeasance.

(5) Any other shareholder may transfer his shares to the same trustee or trustees upon the terms and conditions stated in the agreement, and thereupon shall be bound by all the provisions of the agreement, and in every such case a new voting trust shall be deemed to have been formed.

Comments:

This proposed section corresponds to Section 511 of the proposed Business Corporation Law. It has no counterpart in existing Pennsylvania statutes and is substantially the same as Section 29 of the Uniform Act.

The tide of opinion is now away from condemnation of voting trusts toward a discriminating approval of them. See Fletcher Cyclopedia Corporations (Permanent Edition), Volume 5, Section 2078. Voting trusts are not contrary to the public policy of this Commonwealth. Boyer v. Nesbitt, 227 Pa. 398 (1910); Shermerdine v. Welsh, 20 Phila. 199 (1890); but it is difficult to form a valid one in Pennsylvania, see Morgan v. Hartley Oil and Gas Company, 30 Pa. C. C. 22 (1904); Commonwealth v. Roydhouse, 233 Pa. 234 (1911); Murphy v. Baker, 6 D. and C. 479 (1925). By the weight of authority, a voting trust will be held invalid only when it has been created for a purpose which is illegal or against public policy (i. e., in violation of the anti-monopoly laws), or when it results in working a fraud in the minority stockholders. See Fletcher Cyclopedia Corporations (Permanent Edition), Volume 5, Chapter 14.

Voting trusts are governed by statute only in Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Michigan, and California. The permissible duration of such a trust is five years in Maryland; in Delaware, New Jersey, New York, Ohio and Michigan, it is ten years; in California, it is twenty-one years. This draft permits a voting trust to be formed for a period of ten years.

Under the typical voting trust statute, as under this draft, the shareholders are required to transfer their stock to trustees, who, in turn, issue to the shareholders voting trust certificates. Most, but not all, of the voting trust statutes expressly provide that every other shareholder may come into a voting trust agreement. The Uniform Act contains a similar provision. The statutes of Delaware, New Jersey, Michigan, and California do not so provide. Such a provision in the New York statute was construed in the recent case of In re Morse, 247 N. Y. 290, 160 N. E. 374, to mean that no voting trust could be formed without this provision and that the trust remains inchoate until those come in who may. Accordingly, it appears that in New York a voting trust which includes any number less than all stockholders is invalid, that a voting trust remains inchoate, and, therefore, revocable, unti lthe last shareholder has come in, and that the trustees may vote the stock, although the voting trust is yet inchoate and incomplete.

Accordingly, this draft departs from the Uniform Act in two respects; (1) It permits a closed voting trust if the agreement so provides. (2) If the agreement does not so provide, then every other shareholder is entitled to come into the trust, and, in order to prevent the trust from being inchoate, as in New York, the draft provides "in every such case a new voting trust shall be deemed to have been formed."

This proposed section is a complete innovation in Pennsylvania statutory law. There seems to be no reason why, if it is permitted in the general corporation law, it should not be permitted in the law applicable to banks or bank and trust companies.

Section 612. Judges of Election.—A. In advance of any meeting of shareholders of a bank or a bank and trust company, the board of directors may appoint judges of election to act at such meeting or any adjournment thereof. If judges of election be not so appointed, the chairman of any such meeting may, and on the request of any shareholder, or his proxy shall, make such appointment at the meeting. The number of judges shall be one or three. If appointed at a meeting on the request of one or more shareholders or proxies, the majority of shares present shall determine whether one or three judges are to be appointed. No person who is a candidate for office shall act as a judge.

B. In case any psreon appointed as judge fails to appear or fails or refuses to act, the vacancy may be filled by appointment made by the board of directors in advance of the convening of the meeting, or at the meeting by the person or officer acting as chairman.

C. The judges of election shall determine the number of shares outstanding and the voting power of each, the shares represented at the meeting, the existence of a quorum, the authenticity, validity, and effect of proxies, receive votes or ballots, hear and determine all challenges and questions in any way arising in connection with the right to vote, count and tabulate all votes, determine the result, and do such acts as may be proper to conduct the election or vote with fairness to all shareholders. The judges of election shall perform their duties impartially, in good faith, to the best of their ability, and as expeditiously as is practical. If there be three judges of election, the decision, act, or certificate of a majority shall be effective in all respects as the decision, act, or certificate of all.

D. On request of the chairman of the meeting, or of any shareholder or his proxy, the judges shall make a report in writing of any challenge or question or matter determined by them, and execute a certificate of any fact found by them. Any report or certificate made by them shall be prima facie evidence of the facts stated therein.

Comments:

This proposed section corresponds to Section 512 of the proposed Business Corporation Law which section is substantially similar to Section 321 (b) of the new California act. It changes existing law in that (1) judges need not be appointed unless those participating in a meeting desire them, and (2) the judges are not required to go through the formality of taking an oath, and they are not subject to penalties prescribed in the election laws.

Under the Act of 1903, supra, three judges are required, and under the Act of 1874 they must take an oath and are subject to all the penalties imposed by law on election officers for the violation of their duties.

Section 613. Informal Action by Shareholders.—Except for the action required by this act for increasing or decreasing the capital of a bank or a bank and trust company, any action required by this act to be taken at a meeting of the shareholders may be taken without a meeting, if a consent in writing, setting forth the cation so taken, shall be signed by all of the shareholders who would be entitled to vote at a meeting for such purpose and shall be filed with the secretary of the bank or the bank and trust company.

Comments:

This proposed section corresponds to Section 513 of the proposed Business Corporation Law which is substantially similar to Section 146 of the new Illinois act. The exception is necessary in view of Article XVI, Section 7 of the Constitution of Pennsylvania, which provides: "The stock and indebtedness of corporations shall not be increased * * * without the consent of the persons holding the larger amount in value of the stock, first obtained at a meeting to be held after sixty day notice * * *." It has been ruled that the requirement of notice may be waived, but the meeting must be held. Bellefonte and

Section 614. Liability of Shareholders.—A. Every shareholder of a bank or a bank and trust company incorporated under this act,[1] and every shareholder of a bank incorporated under the act approved the thirteenth day of May, one thousand eight hundred seventy-six (Pamphlet Laws, one hundred sixty-one) entitled "An act for the incorporation and regulation of banks of discount and deposit," its amendments and supplements,[2] and every shareholder of any other bank or bank and trust company the shareholders of which were, prior to the effective date of this act, subject to a liability similar or substantially similar to that imposed by this section,[3] shall be individually liable, equally and ratably not one for another, for all contracts, debts, and engagements of such bank or bank and trust company, to the amount of the par value of their shares therein, in addition to the par value of such shares.[4] If a bank or a bank and trust company, the shareholders of which are not subject to the liability imposed by this section, or a substantially similar liability, shall merge or consolidate with a bank or a bank and trust company, the shareholders of which are so liable, every shareholder of the new or surviving bank or bank and trust company, as the case may be, shall be subject to the liability imposed by this section.[5]

If any shareholder shall, within sixty days prior to the date of the taking of possession of such a bank or bank and trust company by the Department and of the taking over of possession by the Secretary of Banking as receiver, have made a valid bona fide transfer of his shares to another corporation of person,[6] or if any shareholder of such a bank or bank and trust company shall, upon the date of such taking of possession by the Department and taking over of possession by the Secretary, as receiver, be registered upon the books or other records of the bank or bank and trust company as the owner of the shares, despite the fact that he has made a valid bona fide transfer thereof to another corporation or person more than sixty days prior thereto,[7] he shall be responsible to the same extent as if he had not made such transfer, to the extent that the subsequent transferee shall fail to pay an assessment made by the Secretary of Banking as receiver, within ninety days after the making of such assessment.[8] The Department shall, at the end of such ninety-day period, have the option of proceeding either against such transferor and such transferee severally, or of proceeding against both of them jointly, and an action against one shall not be a bar to an action against the other for any balance which may remain unrecovered and uncollected. This section shall not be construed to affect in any way whatsoever any recourse which such transferor might otherwise have against the transferee of the shares.[9]

However, any corporation or person holding shares as trustee, guardian, executor, administrator, receiver, or in any similar fiduciary capacity, and any corporation or person holding shares in pledge of as collateral security, shall not be individually responsible as shareholders, but the assets or funds in the possession or custody of any such corporation or person, constituting the estate of which it is fiduciary, shall be available to the extent to which the testator, intestate, ward, cestui que trust, or other person interested in such assets or funds would be liable if living or competent to act, as the case may be.[10]

B. An action to enforce the liability imposed by this section shall be brought within six years after the cause of action has accrued.[11] If such liability is assessed by the Secretary of Banking as receiver, the cause of action shall be considered to have accrued upon the day upon which he shall have taken possession of the institution, as receiver.[12]

Act of May 11, 1874, P. L. 135, Section 1, 7 PS Sec. 79; Bank Act of 1876, Section 5, amended by Act of May 3, 1909, P. L. 412, Section 1, 7 PS Sec. 78.

Comments:

1. In Gordon v. Winneberger, January Term, 1932, No. 293, decided by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, February 1, 1923, it was held that the provisions of the Act of May 11, 1874, supra, do not apply to bank and trust companies incorporated under the Corporation Act of 1874. Therefore, the shareholders of such bank and trust companies are not subject to any responsibility such as that imposed by the Act of May 11, 1874. The shareholders of banks incorporated under the Bank Act of 1876, and certain of the banks and bank and trust companies incorporated under special act, are subject to a liability virtually the same as that imposed by this proposed section.

In the majority of the states of this country and in the case of national banks, the shareholders of banks and bank and trust companies are subject to a liability substantially the same as that imposed by this section, including the following: Arizona, Arkansas, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Maine, Marylend, Michigan, Mississippi, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New York, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota, Vermont, Washington, Wisconsin and Wyoming. It seems desirable to provide for such liability wherever constitutionally possible, in the case of banks and bank and trust companies in this Commonwealth.

2. Such shareholders, of course, have the same liability as is imposed in this proposed section, under the Bank Act of 1876, supra.

3. This proposed clause is introduced to continue the responsibility of shareholders of banks or bank and trust companies incorporated under special act, where such responsibility existed prior to the effective date of this proposed act.

4. The exact expression of the extent of the liability has been copied from the Bank Act of 1876, supra. It is the wording used in the national act and in the acts of many other states. Since there have been many decisions in state and Federal courts, construing this wording it seems desirable to retain it verbatim.

5. It seems clearly constitutional to provide that if a bank or a bank and trust company, the shareholders of which are not responsible under the provisions of this section, wishes to accept the benefits of this proposed act and merge or consolidate with a bank or a bank and trust company the shareholders of which are subject to the liability imposed by this section, that the shareholders of such surviving or new bank or bank and trust company, as the case may be, shall be subject to such liability. Such a provision seems necessary. The shareholders of a bank or a bank and trust company, who are responsible in accordance with the provisions of this proposed section for the obligations of the institution, should not be permitted to divest themselves of such responsibility by merging or consolidating with an institution, the shareholders of which are not so liable.

6. The National-Bank Act and the laws of Ohio contain a similar sixty-day provision. The reasons for such a provision are obvious.

7. The laws of New York contain a somewhat similar provision. It seems clear that the registered owner of the shares should remain liable if possession of the bank or bank and trust company is taken by the Secretary of Banking as receiver. Such shareholder can easily divest himself of such liability if he makes such transfer more than sixty days prior to such taking of possession, by making certain that such transfer is recorded on the books or other records of the bank or the bank and trust company. On the other hand, since a shareholder may, under this act, transfer his shares in any manner stipulated by the by-laws, it seems equally clear that the transferee of such a valid transfer would likewise be responsible.

8. The ninety-day limitation is added so that the Secretary of Banking will not be prohibited from proceeding against such transferor until he shall have exhausted his remedies against the transferee, which in many cases might extend over years.

9. This provision seems clearly equitable. It also exists in the National-Bank Act and in the laws of Ohio.

10. This provision likewise seems clearly desirable. A similar provision is contained in the banking laws of Michigan and Texas.

11. The matter of a specific statute of limitations applicable to such liability seems apparent. The laws of New York and those of several other states have such statutes and set such period at six years. This draft establishes the same period.

12. This clause is introduced to preclude disagreement as to the date of the accrual of a cause of action. Six years from the date of taking of possession by the Secretary of Banking is certainly not too short a period for him to determine the full responsibility which it is desirable for him to assess.

Section 615. Preemptive Rights of Shareholders.—Unless otherwise provided in its articles, a bank or a bank and trust company may issue shares, without first offering them to its shareholders. The right to shares to be issued, which has been offered to shareholders having a preemptive right thereto, at a price or upon terms duly fixed, and which has not been subscribed for by them within the time duly fixed by the articles or the board of directors, may thereafter offered for subscription to any other corporation or person at a price and upon terms not more favorable than that which it was offered to shareholders.

Act of July 12, 1923, P. L. 1083, Section 2, 15 PS Sec. 137.

Comments:

This draft corresponds to Section 611 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and makes a change in existing Pennsylvania law. It will clear up the existing doubt in our present law relating to preemptive rights of shareholders.

At common law, existing shareholders have a preemptive right to subscribe, pro rata, for, or purchase original unissued shares of, a corporation, or new shares issuing from an increase in capital stock. Shellenberger v. Patterson et al., 168 Pa. 30 (1895); Electric Company of America v. Edison Electric Illuminating Company, Appellant, 200 Pa. 516 (1901); Glenn v. Kittanning Brewing Company et al., 259 Pa. 510 (1918). This right is expressly conferred by the Act of 1923, supra, where shares having a par value are issued at a price in excess of their par value. On the other hand, the statutes authorizing new kinds of shares are conspicuously silent on the preemptive rights of shareholders in regard to such shares. Accordingly, it is not clear what such rights are.

The corporation laws of other states are not uniform on this subject. The Delaware, New Jersey and Illinois laws permit the articles of incorporation to limit or deny the preemptive rights of shareholders. In New Jersey, these rights may also be limited or denied by a by-law adopted by a two-thirds vote of the shareholders. The new Michigan act, adopted in 1931, attempts to set forth in detail the preemptive rights which various classes of shareholders may have. The Indiana and California laws, adopted in 1929 and 1931, respectively, deny shareholders the preemptive right to subscribe to additional shares, except to the extent, if any, that such rights are fixed and stated in the articles of incorporation.

This section of the draft, like the Indiana and California acts, makes the preemptive rights of shareholders a matter of contract in each instance between the corporation and its shareholders, by the inclusion of appropriate provisions in the articles. If the articles are silent on this question, the shareholders will have no preemptive rights. This appears to be more desirable than to attempt to enumerate by statute the preemptive rights which various clases of shareholders may have, or to permit existing preemptive rights, which are not clear in Pennsylvania, to be curtailed or denied by the articles.

The words the right to "shares to be issued" rather than the right to "shares" is necessitated by the fact that shares of a bank or a bank and trust company are not issued until fully paid for.

ARTICLE VII

DIVIDENDS BY BANKS AND BANK AND TRUST COMPANIES

Section 701. Declaration and Payment of Cash and Share Dividends.—A. Except as otherwise provided in this act and subject to any restrictions contained in the articles of incorporation, any bank or bank and trust company, by its board of directors, may declare and pay dividends upon its outstanding shares, out of its undivided profits, as hereinafter provided, from time to time, but not more frequently than once in every three months, and to such extent as the board of directors may deem advisable.[1] A dividend shall not be declared or paid, unless, both upon the day such dividend is declared and upon the day it is to be paid, the capital, the surplus, and the reserve fund, required by this act would, despite such dividend, be unimpaired.[2]

B. Such dividends may be paid to the shareholders in cash, or, if such increase of capital has been authorized in the manner provided by this act,[3] it may be paid in shares of the bank or bank and trust company. If the dividend is in the form of shares of the bank or the bank and trust company, it may, if properly authorized, be paid out of unimpaired surplus, provided that such surplus is not thereby reduced to an amount less than fifty per centum of its capital as increased by virtue of such share dividend, but this provision shall not be construed to affect the power conferred by this act upon a bank or a bank and trust company incorporated prior to the effective date of this act, to credit to capital a sufficient portion of surplus to make the capital equal to the minimum required by this act and to leave a surplus of at least twenty-five per centum thereof.[4]

C. Such dividend shall be paid to the shareholders entitled thereto not less than twenty, and not more than thirty, days after the declaration thereof.[5]

Bank Act of 1876, Sections 16, 17 and 24, 7 PS Secs. 151, 152, and 153.

Comments:

1. See Section 702 of this draft.
2. The only provisions in the present law covering dividends are those of the Act of 1913, supra, relating to all corporations, and the Bank Act of 1876, supra, relating only to banks incorporated under that act.

The Act of 1913, supra, provides that dividends shall be paid out of net profits. The Bank Act of 1876, supra, likewise provides that dividends shall be paid out of net profits. This draft, except as later developed in these footnotes, requires that dividends be paid out of undivided profits as defined in Section 702.

3. Both the Act of 1913 and the Bank Act of 1876, supra, provide that dividends may not be paid out of capital. This draft makes such provision but also provides, as does the law of many other states, that such dividend cannot disturb the reserve required by this act to be maintained against deposits.
4. See Section 402 of this draft.
5. The provision as to share dividends is new. It seems clearly desirable. There is no reason why, if the surplus of a bank or a bank and trust company exceeds the minimum required by this act, and if, in addition an increase in capital has been duly authorized, such bank or bank and trust company should not be authorized to declare a share dividend. Of course, in accordance with the provision of Section 402 of this draft, if the share dividend is being declared out of surplus which was accumulated by a bank or a bank and trust company incorporated prior to the effective date of this act, it may be declared even though the surplus remaining equals only twenty-five per centum of the capital. The Bank Act of 1876, supra, provides that the dividend must be paid within fifteen days after the declaration thereof. This draft provides that such dividend must be paid within not less than twenty days and not more than thirty days after such declartion. The minimum period is imposed in order to give the Department some time to ascertain whether the dividend is legally declared, and the maximum period is correspondingly increased.

Section 702. Determination of Undivided Profits; Definitions of Gross and Net Earnings.—A. Such portion of the net earnings of a bank or a bank and trust company as is not required by this act to be credited to surplus,[1] may be credited by it to its profit and loss account, or itf its expenses and losses for such dividend period exceed its gross earnings, such excess shall be charged to its profit and loss account. The credit balance of such account shall constitute the undivided profits at the close of such dividend period and shall be available for dividends.[2]

B. To determine the amount of gross earnings of a bank or a bank and trust company for any dividend period, the following items shall be included:

(1) Earnings actually received during such period.

(2) Profits actually received during such period from the sale of its securities, its other personal property, and its real property.

(3))Sums recovered on items previously charged off.[3]

C. To determine the amount of net earnings of a bank or a bank and trust company for any dividend period, the following items shall be deducted from the gross earnings, as herein defined:[4]

(1) Expenses paid or incurred, both ordinary and extraordinary, in the transaction of its business, in the collection of debts owing to it, and in the management of its affairs.

(2) Interest paid, or accrued and unpaid, upon deposits and debts owing by it.

(3) Losses sustained by it. In the computation of such losses, assets which have been disallowed by the Department, or by the board of directors of the bank or bank and trust company, shall be included. Debts due such bank or such bank and trust company, upon which principal or interest is due and unpaid for six months, shall like wise be included in the computation of losses, unless such debt is adequately secured and is in the process of collection.[5]

(4) Unrealized appreciation in the valuation or revaluation of its assets.[6]

(5) Deferred assets in proportion to their use, and prepaid expenses in proportion to the use of the service represented thereby.[7]

The balance thus obtained shall constitute the net earnings of such bank or such bank and trust company for such period.

Banks

Banking Law of New York, Article III, Sections 116 and 118.
Pennsylvania
Bank Act of 1876, Sections 16 and 24, 7 PS Secs. 151 and 153.

Comments:

1. See Section 413 of this draft.
2. The Banking Law of New York, supra, likewise provides for payment of dividends out of undivided profits. This seems clearly to be the best practice. Except for the greater particularity of terms and the definition thereof, this proposed section does not differ very radically from the existing Pennsylvania law.
3. This section corresponds substantially with the provisions of the law of New York, except that numerous references therein to accruals which have not been paid, are omitted, since in recent years it has not been the policy in Pennsylvania to credit such accruals to gross earnings, and the regulations of the Department have uniformly prohibited such practice.
4. The method of determining net earnings, likewise, is based upon the Banking Law of New York. Here again, and for the same reason, reference to accruals which have not been paid has been omitted.

5. The provision as to debts upon which principal or interest is due and unpaid for six monhts corresponds to the provision in the national law, 12 USCA Sec. 56. It seems clearly undesirable to permit debts which have been due and unpaid for six months, and which are not adequately secured and in the process of collection, to be computed in determining the right to declare dividends. If perchance such debts should later be paid, this seems the proper time for the shareholders to derive the benefit from such payment in the form of dividends.

6. Mark-ups hardly constitute proper items to be computed in figuring dividends, and the uniform practice of the Department has been to forbid this. This clause merely enacts this regulation into law.

7. It seems obvious that this clause, which also enacts into practice a regulation of the Department, is desirable. There seems to be no reason not to deduct, proportionately and in accordance with their use, deferred assets and prepaid expense, rather than to permit them deceptively to be carried as though they were not current expenses, and then when they are completely exhausted, to deduct them in full.

Section 703. Statement to Directors by Cashier or Treasurer Prior to Declaration of Dividend.—Prior to the declaration of a dividend by a bank or a bank and trust company, the cashier or treasurer thereof shall furnish to the board of directors a detailed written statement, under oath or affirmation, of the condition of the bank or the bank and trust company as of the last date of the period for which the dividend is to be declared. Such statement shall set forth in detail all the items required by this act to be considered by the board of directors in determining whether to declare a dividend, and if so, to what amount.

Bank Act of 1876, Section 17, 7 PS Sec. 152.

Comments:

This section is based on the Bank Act of 1876, supra. That act sets forth in considerable detail all items to be included in the report of the cashier or treasurer to the board of directors. This seems unnecessary and this proposed section therefore merely provides for the supplying of a statement and the setting forth of all the items to be considered by the directors in determining whether a dividend shall be paid.

Section 704. Lien on Dividends.—A shareholder who is liable to the bank or the bank and trust company, either as principal debtor, surety, or otherwise, for any obligation which is overdue and unpaid, shall not be entitled to receive any dividend on such shares so long as such obligation to the bank or the bank and trust company remains overdue and unpaid, but all such dividends shall be retained by the bank or the bank and trust company and applied to discharge such obligation.[1]

This section shall not be construed to affect the right of a shareholder who is indebted to the bank or the bank and trust company to transfer his share or shares.[2]

Comments:

1. Section 21 of the Bank Act of 1876 provides inter alia, that a bank shall have a lien upon the dividends of a shareholder who owes to it a debt that is overdue and unpaid. In so far as that section subjects the rights of a pledgee of shares to the lien of debts due by the shareholder it has been repealed by inference by the Act of June 24, 1895, P. L. 258, Bank of Millvale v. Ohio Valley Bank, 234 Pa. 1 (1911). Although there is some doubt on this point, it seems that the provision as to a lien on shares is still in effect.

In general ,it seems that a bank or a bank and trust company should have a lien upon any assets in its possession belonging to a corporation or person indebted to it upon an obligation to it which is overdue and unpaid.

2. This provision is introduced in order not to impede the transfer of shares and not to conflict with the provisions of the Uniform Stock Transfer Act.

Section 705. Report to Department After Declaration of Dividend; Penalty.—A. Every bank and every bank and trust company, shall, within ten days after the declaration of any dividend, make a written report to the Department of the amount of the dividend declared and the amount of its gross and net earnings, determined in the manner provided by this act. The report shall be made in the form prescribed by the Department and shall be attested by oath or affirmation of the president or the cashier or treasurer of the bank or the bank and trust company.[1]

B. Any bank or bank and trust company which fails to make the report required by this section, shall pay to the Department a penalty of one hundred dollars for each day that it delays making such report, but the Department may, in its discretion, relieve any bank or bank and trust company from the payment of such penalty, in whole or in part, if good cause be shown to it for the failure of such institution to make such report. If a bank or a bank and trust company fails to pay a penalty from which it has not been relieved by the Department, the Department may, through the Department of Justice, maintain an action at law to recover it.[2]

Comments:

1. The requirement of this section is likewise contained in national law, 12 USCA Sec. 163. It seems clearly desirable to provide that the Department should receive notice within ten days after the declaration of a dividend, in order that it may have an opportunity to determine whether the dividend is legal and should have been declared. Under Section 801 of this draft the bank or the bank and trust company is prohibited from paying such dividend until twenty days after it shall have been declared. Therefore, the Department would have ten days in which to check on the legality of the dividend.

2. The national law, 12 USCA Sec. 164 likewise provides a penalty for failure to file the report required. However, this draft allows the Department to relieve an institution from payment of the penalty, since there may be occasions where the failure to give notice is due to unavoidable causes and inflicts no injury upon anyone.

Section 706. Liability for Unlawful Dividends and Distributions.—A. The directors of a bank or a bank and trust company shall not declare or pay dividends, or authorize or ratify the withdrawal or distribution of any part of its assets, to shareholders, except as authorized by this act. If any dividend shall be paid, or if any withdrawal or distribution of the assets shall be made, except as provided in this act, the directors under whose administration the same were made, except those who shall have caused their dissent therefrom to be entered on the minutes of the meeting at which such action was authorized, or who being absent at the time shall have promptly filed their written objection thereto with the secretary of the bank or the bank and trust company upon learning of such action, shall be jointly and severally liable to the bank or the bank and trust company in an amount equal to the amount of the unlawful dividend or the unlawful withdrawal or distribution of assets. Any director against whom a claim shall be asserted under or pursuant to this section and who shall be held liable thereon, shall be entitled to a contribution from the other directors who are likewise liable thereon, pro rata, according to the number of directors. Any two or more directors may be sued in the same action.[1]

B. Any shareholder who shall accept or receive any dividend or distribution of the assets of a bank or a bank and trust company not authorized by this act to be made shall be individually liable to the bank or the bank and trust company in an amount equal to the amount so accepted or received by him. Any two or more shareholders may be sued in the same action.[2]

Bank Act of 1876, Section 16, 7 PS Sec. 151.

Comments:

1. The Bank Act of 1876, supra, provides that directors consenting to the payment of dividends which impair the capital of a bank shall be responsible in an action of debt or a bill in equity in their individual capacities for the amount of the capital impaired, and Gunkle's Appeal, 48 Pa. 13 (1864), even prior to the Bank Act of 1876, held that where the directors of a bank have decreased its capital by declaring dividends, they are personally responsible. The provision of this proposed section is substantially a restatement of Section 707 of the proposed Business Corporation Law, which is based upon Section 8 of the Act of July 12, 1919, P. L. 914, 15 PS Sec. 188, which deals with no par value shares, and is therefore not applicable to banks or bank and trust companies. In Pennsylvania, directors are trustees of the capital of the corporation and liable for any breach of duty respecting its application, Cornell v. Seddinger, 237, Pa. 389 (1912); Hechelman v. Geyer, 248 Pa. 430 (1915); and a corporation has a right and is under a duty to compel replacement by directors of capital illegally distributed as dividends, Loan Society of Philadelphia v. Eavenson, 248 Pa. 407 (1915); Cochran v. Shetler, 286 Pa. 226 (1926), even when the corporation is solvent, Prudential Loan Society v. Mayer, 25 D. R. 885 (1916). Under the Corporation Act of 1874, Section 39, Clause 5, the directors of any corporation who declare a dividend when the corporation is insolvent, or the payment of which would render it insolvent, are made jointly and severally liable for all the corporate debts then existing and for all thereafter contracted so long as they respectively continue in office. Section 8 of the Act of 1919, relating to shares without par value, provides that directors who pay dividends out of capital, or out of anything except net profits or surplus earnings, are jointly and severally liable to the corporation and the creditors thereof, to the full amount of any loss sustained by the corporation or by its creditors by reason of such dividends. Accordingly, in view of the acts and decisions discussed above, this draft makes no change in existing law. Like the Uniform Act, the Bank Act of 1876, supra, makes the liability of the directors run to the corporation. Under the Acts of 1874 and 1919, supra, the directors are liable "to such corporation, and to the creditors thereof." As pointed out in a note to the Uniform Act, the liability of the directors should run to the corporation. An an asset of the corporation, it may be availed of by a creditor who resorts to equitable execution or similar court remedies. To pursue such a remedy, the creditor must first obtain a judgment against the corporation, and have it returned unsatisfied.

The laws of other states differ on this point. Thus, in Delaware and New York, the directors are liable "to the corporation and the creditors thereof," while in Michigan and Illinois the directors are liable to the corporation. In New Jersey, the directors are liable to the shareholders or, in the case of insolvency, to the corporation or its receiver.

2. This provision increases the existing liability of shareholders in Pennsylvania, and a similar provision is contained in the laws of some of the other states. Under this provision of the draft, innocent shareholders, as well as those who knowingly participated in the illegal dividend or distribution, are made liable to the corporation for the amount they received. As pointed out in a note to the Uniform Act, the authorities are in conflict as to whether a shareholder who has innocently received a dividend paid out of capital when the corporation is solvent can be made liable for the amount received. Of course, if the payment to the shareholder causes insolvency, or is made at a time when the corporation is insolvent, that payment can be treated as a fraud on creditors, and the shareholder, even though innocent, can be made to repay the amount of such payment. This would be true though the payment were made from surplus or profits.

The only statutory provision in Pennsylvania on this subject is Section 39, Clause 4, of the Corporation Act of 1874, supra, which makes shareholders liable for the debts of the company contracted before any part of the capital of the company is withdrawn and refunded to the shareholders. The statutes of other states are not uniform on this point. In some states, as in this draft, all shareholders are made liable to the amount of any unlawful dividend or distribution of the corporate assets received by them. In other states only those shareholders who knowingly receive any unlawful dividend or distribution of assets are made liable to the corporation for the amount received. In some states, like Pennsylvania, there is no specific statutory provision on this point.

To require shareholders receiving illegal dividends or distributions to return the same to the corporation would seem to be logical and just. Accordingly, this draft so provides.

ARTICLE VIII

AMENDMENT OF ARTICLES OF INCORPORATED INSTITUTIONS

Section 801. Amendment of Articles Authorized.—Except as otherwise specifically provided in this act, an incorporated institution may, by the method hereinafter established, adopt any mendment whatsoever to it as articles of incorporation, provided that the articles as so amended would be authorized by this act as original articles of incorporation.

Act of June 13, 1833, P. L. 122, Sections 1 and 2, 15 PS Secs. 401 and 402; Act of June 13, 1883, P. L. 122, Section 3, amended by Act of March 31, 1905, P. L. 93, Section 1, 15 PS Sec. 403.

Comments:

Preliminary Note to Article IX: Except for the Act of 1883, supra, there is no law in this Commonwealth applicable to incorporated institutions, which treats generally of the power to amend the articles of incorporation of any incorporated institution and the method for doing so. Numerous acts discuss the power to affect particular changes, such as increase or decrease of capital, change of place of business, assumption of fiduciary powers by a bank, et cetera, and this draft cites and discusses these acts in the sections which deal specifically with these particular subjects.

It seems desirable to provide a general method to be followed in making amendments of any kind whatsoever to the articles of an incorporated institution. This is the method which has been uniformly followed in all the recent corporation codes adopted by other states, and it is likewise followed in the proposed Business Corporation Law.

The present article, which deals with amendments to the articles of incorporated institutions, for the sake of uniformity follows, in so far as possible, Article VIII of the proposed Business Corporation Law, which deals with the same subject in connection with business corporations. The provisions of that proposed act have been drafted after a careful study of the recent codifications of corporation laws in the various states, and of the Uniform Act adopted by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws. It seems unnecessary in this draft to give the citations and to discuss the reasons for these changes, since they are fully and adequately discussed therein.

In addition, the present article follows the procedure adopted in Article V of this draft on the formation of incorporated institutions. Here, as there, the Department of State is retained as the clearing house for amendments to articles; the Department of Banking is established as the authority to approve the substantive changes proposed by the amendments. In Article V of this draft the footnotes discussed in detail the reasons for this procedure. These comments are therefore not repeated in this article.

Section 802. Proposal of Amendments to Articles of Incorporated Institutions.—A. Except as otherwise specifically provided in this act,[1] every amendment to the articles of a bank or a bank and trust company shall first be proposed by the board of directors by the adoption of a resolution setting forth the proposed amendment and directing that it be submitted to a vote of the shareholders entitled to vote thereon at a designaed meeting, which may be either an annual or a special meeting of the shareholders entitled to vote on the amendment.

B. Except as otherwise specifically provided in this act, every amendment to the articles of a savings bank shall first be proposed by a vote of two-thirds of the trustees present at any meeting of the board, if a quorum is present, directing that it be submitted to a vote of the board at a designated regular or special meeting at least ten days thereafter.[2]

C. The resolution of the board of directors or of the board of trustees, respectively, shall establish the language of the proposed amendment to the articles by providing that the articles shall be amended so as to read as therein set forth in full, or that any provision thereof be amended so as to read as therein set forth in full, or that the matter stated in the resolution be added to or stricken from the articles.

Comments:

1. In most of the sections of this article on amendments, the words are included "except as otherwise specifically provided in this act." These words refer to those changes, like the acquisition of fiduciary powers, see Section 1101 of this draft, and the change of place of business, see Section 203 of this draft, which are considered so important that a two-thirds vote of the board of directors and of the shareholders, rather than merely a majority vote, should be required.

2. In the case of a savings bank, there are, of course, no shareholders. Therefore, a somewhat different procedure from that followed in the proposed Business Corporation Law is necessary. This draft provides that the amendment shall be proposed by a two-thirds vote of the board of trustees of the savings bank, and that it be ratified by two-thirds of all the trustees. A two-thirds vote of those present, if a quorum, is tall that is required for a proposal, while a two-thirds vote of all the trustees of the savings bank is required for ratification. The affirmative vote required is two-thirds, rather than the majority required in the case of banks or bank and trust companies, because in the case of a savings bank there are no shareholders to ratify the action. A proper safeguarding of the interests of depositors seems to require that the trustees be at least sufficiently strong in favor of an amendment to muster a two-thirds vote.

Section 803. Adoption of Amendments.—A. Except as otherwise specifically provided in this act, every proposal of an amendment to the articles of a bank or a bank and trust company, made by its board of directors, shall be adopted at the shareholders' meeting designated for that purpose pursuant to the provisions of this act, by the holders of at least a maojrity of the outstanding shares entitled to vote at such meeting, unless the articles require a greaer number.

B. Except as otherwise specifically provided in this act, every proposal of an amendment to the articles of a savings bank, made by a two-thirds vote of its board of trustees, shall be adopted at the meeting of the board of trustees designated for that purpose pursuant to the provisions of this act, by at least two-thirds of all the trustees of the savings bank, unless the articles require a greater number.

C. Any number of amendments may be voted upon by the shareholders or the trustees, respectively, at one meeting.

Section 804. Notice of Meetings to Adopt Amendments to Articles of Incorporated Institutions.—A. Except as otherwise specifically provided in this act, written notice shall, not less than ten days before the shareholders' meetings called by the board of directors for the purpose of considering any proposed amendment to the articles of a bank or a bank and trust company, be given to each shareholder of record entitled to vote on the proposed amendment.

B. Except as otherwise specifically provided in this act, written notice shall, not less than ten days before the meeting of the board of trustees scheduled by such board for the purpose of considering any proposed amendment to the articles of a savings bank, be given to each trustee who was not present at the meeting at which the amendment was proposed and the meeting scheduled.

C. Such notice to the shareholders or the trustees, respectively, shall state the place, the day, and the hour of the meeting, and shall set forth the proposed amendment or a summary of the changes to be effected thereby. Notice of such meeting shall also be given by publication in a manner similar to that prescribed in this act in the case of the formation of the particular type of incorporated institution.

Section 805. Articles of Amendment.—A. After an amendment to the articles of an incorporated institution has been adopted in the manner provided by this act, triplicate originals of the articles of amendment shall be executed under oath or affirmation and under the seal of the institution, by two duly authorized officers of the institution, and shall set forth:

(1) The name and locaton of the principal place of business of the institution.

(2) The Act of Assembly under which the institution was formed, and the date when and the place where the original articles were recorded.

(3) The time and place of the meeting of the shareholders or of the trustees of the bank or bank and trust company and of the savings bank, respectively, at which the amendment was adopted, and the kind and period of notice given to such shareholders or trustees.

(4) In the case of a bank or a bank and trust company, the number of shares outstanding and the number of shares entitled to vote on the amendment.

(5) In the case of a bank or a bank and trust company, the number of shares voted for and against such amendment, respectively, and in the case of a savings bank, the number of trustees voting for or against adoption of the amendment.

(6) The amendment adopted, which shall be set forth in full.

Section 806. Filing of Articles of Amendment; Payment of Fees; Approval by Department of State.—A. The triplicate originals of the articles of amendment and the proof of publication of the advertisement, required by this act, shall be delivered to the Department of State.

B. The Department of State shall examine such articles of amendment and such proof of publication to determine whether they contain all the information and are in the form required by this act. After all the bonus fees, taxes, and other charges have been paid as required by law, except for the costs of any examination made by the Department of Banking, pursuant to the provisions of this act, to determine whether to approve the amendment, or any other charges made by the Department of Banking,[1] the Department of State shall, if the articles of amendment and the proof of publication contain the information and are in the form required by this act, endorse its approval upon each of the triplicate originals of the articles of amendment and shall forthwith transmit them to the Department of Banking.

C. If the Department of State shall disapprove the articles of amendment, pursuant to the provisions of this act, it shall forthwith give notice thereof to the incorporated institution, stating in detail its reasons for doing so, and stating how such incorporated institution can remedy the nonconformance with the provisions of this act. Upon remedying the defect such incorporated institution may in the same manner file the same or amended articles, whichever the particular case may require.

Comments:

The procedure in this proposed section differs from that in Sections 305 and 309 of this draft. Those sections in dealing with the costs of the examination to be conducted by the Department of Banking to determine whether or not articles should be approved by it, requires such costs to be paid by the incorporators to the Department of State, at the time of the filing of the articles. This is necessitated by the fact that there had not yet at that time been any dealings by the incorporators and the Department of Banking. Therefore, the applications of the provisions of the proposed Department of Banking Code, relating to assessments by the Department of Banking upon institutions, could have no application. In addition, if the articles are disapproved, then the Department would have no means of reimbursement except against the incoporators, for the costs of the examination.

However, when an amendment to the articles is being made it will, of course, always be by an existing institution. In such case, there seems to be no reason for disturbing the well established procedure for assessment by the Department of Banking upon institutions, in accordance with the provisions of Section 204 of the proposed Department of Banking Code.

Section 807. Approval of Articles of Amendment by Department of Banking.—A. The Department of Banking shall, immediately upon the receipt of the articles of amendment from the Department of State, conduct such examination as it may deem necessary to ascertain from the best sources of information at its command, whether such amendment or amendments will be lawful, not injurious to the community, and in accordance with the purposes of the articles of incorporation. The costs of such examination, and any other charges of the Department of Banking bearing upon the filing of articles of amendment, shall be assessed upon the incorporated institution in the manner provided by law for assessments by the Department of Banking of costs of examinations or other charges.

B. Within thirty days after the receipt of the articles of amendment from the Department of State, the Department of Banking shall, upon the basis of the facts disclosed by the investigation provided for by this section, either approve or disapprove such articles. It shall immediately notify the Department of State in writing of its action. If it shall approve the articles of amendment, it shall sign its approval upon the three triplicate originals, and shall retain one of them.

C. If the Department of Banking disapproves the articles of amendment, it shall return them to the Department of State, stating in detail its reasons for doing so. The Department of State shall immediately give notice to the incorporated institution, of the action of the Department of Banking and of the reasons therefor as stated to it by tha Department. The incorporated institution may, within thirty days after the Department of State sends it notice of the disapproval of its articles of amendment, appeal from such disapproval to the Governor who shall hear such appeal promptly, and, within thirty days thereafter, decide the matter and certify a decision to the Department of Banking. The decision of the Governor shall be conclusive and not subject to any review. The Department of Banking shall act in accordance therewith.

Section 808. Issuance of Certificate of Amendment.—Immediately upon receipt of the two signed triplicate originals of the articles of amendment of an incorporated institution from the Department of Banking, the Department of State shall file and record one of the triplicate originals and shall issue a certificate of amendment. The remaining triplicate original of the articles of amendment and the certificate of amendment shall be sent by the Department of State to the incorporated institution. The incorporated institution shall then have the articles of amendment recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds of the county in which the principal place of business of the incorporated institution is situated. The triplicate original of the articles of amendment, upon being recorded by the recorder of deeds, shall be returned to the incorporated institution.

Section 809. Effective Date of Amendment.—Upon the issuance of the certificate of amendment by the Department of State, the amendments shall become effective and the articles of incorporation shall be deemed to be amended accordingly. The certificate of amendment shall be conclusive evidence of the performance of all conditions required in this act in proceedings to amend the articles of incorporation, except as against the Commonwealth. No amendment shall affect any existing cause of action in favor of or against the incorporated institution or any pending suit in which such incorporated institution shall be a party, or the existing rights of persons, other than shareholders in the case of a bank or a bank and trust company; and, in the event the corporate name shall be changed by the amendment, no suit brought by or against the incorporated institution under its former name shall be abated for that reason.

ARTICLE IX

DEPOSITS IN INSTITUTIONS AND RESERVES THEREFOR; MONEYS DELIVERED TO INSTITUTIONS FOR TRANSMISSION

Section 901. Records of Deposits; Receipts Therefore; Inclusion of Rules Therein.—A. Every institution shall keep complete records of al ldeposit smade in it. Such deposits shall constitute liabilities of the institution and shall be so carried upon its books or other records.

B. Every institution shall furnish to each depositor a receipt in full, by pass book or otherwise, for all deposits made by him. Such pass book or other receipt shall also state clearly the rules and regulations, and in the case of an incorporated institution, the by-laws, which relate to such deposit. Such depositor shall then be bound by all the provisions of such rules, regulations, and by-laws.[1]

The requirement of this section that the receipt by pass book or otherwise shall contain the rules and regulations, and, in the case of an incorporated institution, the by-laws, which relate to the particular type of deposit, shall not be construed to require all institutions to call in all receipts or pass books outstanding upon the effective date of this act, which do not meet the requirements of this act, in order to issue therefor new ones which do. It shall apply only in the case of accounts opened or deposits made afther the effective date of this act.

Comments:

1. This proposed section, applicable to all institutions, is similar to the provisions of Section 15 of the Act of 1889, supra, applicable solely to savings banks, and to the provisions of the Act of 1907, supra, applicable to all incorporated institutions. It seems clear that every institution should furnish to each depositor a receipt for each deposit and a statement of the rules and regulations covering such deposit. This is, as a practical matter, the procedure followed by most existent institutions. This proposed section therefore merely enacts into law the generally accepted sound banking procedure.

2. It would of course be a hardship to require that all institutions call in all outstanding pass books or other receipts which do not conform to the requirements of this proposed section, in order to issue new pass books or receipts, or to correct the former ones. However, as new deposits are made, and as therefore the depositor brings his pass book into the bank for entries, the changes should be made.

Section 902. Deposits in the Name of Minors.—Any institution may receive deposits by or in the name of a minor, and shall pay such deposits and any interest or dividends thereon to such minor, upon his proper check, order, or receipt as the case may be, without the assent of his parent or guardian. The parent or guardian of such minor shall not, in his capacity as parent or guardian, have the power to attach, or in any manner interfere, with such deposit.

Comments:

This draft follows substantially the acts cited above .

Section 903. Joint Deposits; Death of One of the Parties.—A. Whenever a deposit shal be made in an institution in the names ow two or more persons, the institution shall not pay out such deposit, any part thereof, or interest or dividends thereon, except upon the proper check, order, or receip,t as the case may be, of both or all of such persons, unless at the time of making the deposit a different arrangement shall have been specifically provided for, or unless at a subsequent time all the parties agree to a different arrangement.[1]

B. Whenever a deposit shall be made in an institution in the names of two or more persons, and such deposit shall have been made under an arrangement with the institution, whereby such deposit and any interest or dividends thereon may be paid upon the check, order, or receipt of either or any of such persons, the institution may pay such deposit, any part thereof, or any interest or dividends thereon, upon such check, order, or receipt of either or any of such persons, pursuant to the arrangement provided for in this section, notwithstanding the fact that one or more of the other persons may be dead and the institution has notice thereof.[2]

C. This section shall not be construed to affect deposits made in the names of a husband and his wife.[3]

Comments:

1. This proposed section is new in Pennsylvania law.

The provision of Subsection A is in accordance with the uniform practice of most institutions in this Commonwealth.

2. This provision is logical and corresponds to similar provisions in the laws of thirty-eight other states. If one of two or more joint depositors is permitted during the lifetime of the other or others to withdraw money on his own signature and without the consent of the other depositor or depositors, there seems to be no reason why this power should not continue after the death of the other depositor or depositors.

3. Of course deposits by a husband and wife in a bank in their joint names are held by entireties, and upon the death of either, the survivor is entitled to the whole deposit, see Klenke's Estate (No. 1), 210 Pa. 572 (1905). It does not seem advisable for this section to try to enact into statutory law the case law governing tenancies by the entireties.

Section 904. Death of One Making Deposit as Trustee.—Whenever a deposit shall be made in an institution by any person describing himself, in making such deposit, as trustee for another, and no other notice of the existence and terms of a valid trust than such description shall have been given in writing to the institution, such deposit or any part thereof, together with interest or dividends thereon, may, upon satisfactory proof of the death of the person so described as trustee, be paid to the person for whose benefit the deposit was thus stated to be made, upon his proper check, order, or receipt, as the case may be.

Act of May 20, 1889, P. L. 246, Section 16, 7 PS Sec. 584.

Comments:

This proposed section, applicable to all institutions, enacts into law substantially the same provisions as are contained in Section 16 of the Act of 1889, supra, applicable solely to savings banks. This provision in modified form is part of the laws of twenty-seven other states. A provision substantially similar to this proposed section, but excluding any mention of satisfactory proof of the death of the depositor, is recommended as part of the Program of State Legislation of the American Bankers' Association, corrected to January, 1932.

Section 905. Adverse Claims to Deposits.—A. Notice to an institution of an adverse claim to a deposit standing on its books to the credit of any corporation or person shall not be effectual to cause such institution to recognize such adverse claimant, unless he shall also either procure other appropriate process against the institution from a court of competent jurisdiction in a cause of action therein instituted by him, wherein the corporation or person to whose credit the deposit stands, or his executor or administrator, is made a party in the manner provided by law, or unless he shall execute to the institution, in form and with sureties acceptable to it, a bond, indemnifying the institution from any liability, loss, damage, costs, and expenses, on account of the payment of such adverse claim or the dishonor of the check or other order of the corporation or person to whose credit the deposit stands on the books of the institution.

B. This section shall not apply in any instance where the person to whose credit the deposit stands is a fiduciary for such adverse claimant, and the facts constituting such relationship, as well as the facts showing reasonable cause of belief on the part of the claimant that such fiduciary is about to misappropriate the deposit, are made to appear by the affidavit of such claimant.

Comments:

This proposed section is new and, in slightly modified form, is included in the Program of State Legislation recommended by the American Bankers Association, corrected to January, 1932. This proposed section is almost exactly the same as that enacted into New York law in 1931, and is substantially similar to provisions in the laws of fifteen other states.

Section 906. Deposits with Other Corporations or Persons Authorized to Receive Deposits; Reserve Agents.—A. Except as otherwise specifically provided in this act, any institution may deposit any of its funds in any other institution, national banking association, or any corporation or person doing business in another state, authorized by the laws of such other state to receive deposits and subject to the supervision of the banking authorities of such other state, but an incorporated institution shall not deposit any of its funds in such other institution, national banking association, or corporation or person unless it has been designated as a depository by a majority of all the members of the board of directors or of the board of trustees, as the case may be, of the depositing incorporated institution.[1]

B. An institution shall not have on deposit at any one time with any other institution, national banking association, or other corporation or person doing business in another state, authorized by the laws of such other state to receive deposits, and subject to the supervision of the banking authorities of such other state, an amount in excess of ten per centum of the unimpaired capital plus ten per centum of the unimpaired surplus of the depositing institution, if a bank and trust company, or an amount in excess of ten per centum of its unimpaired surplus if a savings bank, or an amount in excess of ten per centum of its net worth if a private bank, unless such other institution, national banking association, or other corporation or person has been duly approved by the Department, pursuant to the provisions of this act, as a reserve agent, as herein defined.

C. A director of a bank or a bank and trust company or a trustee of a savings bank shall not have a vote in designating as a depository any institution, national banking association, or other corporation or person of which he is an officer or director, or if the proposed depository is a private bank, of which he is one of the owners, or if it is an incorporated institution, a national banking association, or any other corporation, of which he owns five per centum or more of the shares of its capital.[2]

D. A reserve agent of an institution, for the purposes of this act, shall be any institution, national banking association, or corporation or person, designated as a depository of such institution in the manner provided by this act, and approved by the Department as a depository for any moneys of such institution which are part of the reserve fund against deposits and demand liabilities, as defined herein, which is required by this act to be established and maintained by such institution.[3]

Comments:

1. This proposed section is new. It seems clear that if an incorporated institution wishes to deposit funds in another institution, such other institution should be designated as a depository by at least a majority of the board of directors or board of trustees.

2. The laws of Ohio, supra, forbid the deposit in any depository of more than fifty per centum of the capital and surplus of the depositing institution. The national act, supra, restricts deposits in state banks or bank and trust companies to ten per centum of the capital and surplus of the depositing national bank. It does not seem desirable to permit an institution to deposit with any other institution more than ten per centum of its own capital and surplus. Otherwise the safety of one institution might be entirely dependent upon that of another institution with which it has no other affiliation than the fact that it has deposited funds therein.

3. This provision follows the Act of 1907, as amended, supra, in requiring that reserve agents be approved by the Department.

Section 907. Money Delivered for Transmission; Receipt and Time Limit; Burden of Proof of Delivery.—A. Every institution shall give to every corporation or person delivering to it money for transmission, a receipt stating the date when such money is received, the amount thereof in terms of dollars and cents, the date not later than which such money is to be transmitted by such institution, and, if the money it to be transmitted to a foreign country, the amount thereof in terms of the money standard of the country to which such money is to be transmitted. All moneys received by an institution for transmission shall be forwarded to the corporation or person designated to receive it, within five days after the receipt thereof, unless a later date is fixed in such receipt, in which case it shall be transmitted by such later date.

B. In an action by a corporation or person against an institution to recover money delivered by such corporation or person to such institution for transmission, the burden of proving the transmission to, and the receipt of the money by, the corporation or person to whom such money was directed to be paid, shall be upon the institution, but a statement under oath or affirmation of the duly authorized agent or correspondent of the institution that such agent or correspondent has paid the money to the corporation or person to whom payment was directed to be made, and a receipt for such money signed by such corporation or person, shall be prima facie evidence of the delivery of such money to the corporation or person to whom payment was directed to be made.

Comments:

This proposed section is similar to the Act of 1911, supra, which applies specifically to private banks. Since all institutions accept money for transmission, there seems to be no reason for not applying the terms of this proposed section to them all.

Section 908. Reserve Fund against Deposits and Demand Liabilities.—A. Every institution[1] shall establish and maintain a reserve fund in an amount equal to at least fifteen per centum of the total of its demand deposits and demand liabilities, as herein defined, plus seven and one-half per centum of its total time deposits, as herein defined.[2]

B. The term "deman deposits" shall be construed to refer to all deposits, payment of which can legally be required on demand or within any period less than thirty days after demand.[3]

The term "demand liabilities" shall be construed to refer to all obligations of the institution, other than deposits payment of which can legally be required on demand.[4]

The term "time deposits" shall be construed to refer to all deposits, payment of which cannot legally be required within thirty days.

C. The total of such reserve fund may, and at least one-third thereof shall, consist of gold bullion, gold coin, United States gold or silver certificates, notes or bills issued by any national banking association or Federal reserve bank, or any other form of currency of the United States, and be kept on hand at the place of business of the institution, unpledged, unassigned, and unhypothecated.

One-third of such reserve fund may consist of bonds, which under this act constitute lawful investments for savings banks. Such bonds, while being carried in the reserve fund, shall be computed at their current market value. They shall be the absolute property of the institution and shall not be pledged, assigned, or hypothecated in any manner whatsoever.

The balance of such reserve fund, or any part thereof, but not exceeding two-thirds of the total reserve fund, may consist of moneys on deposit, subject to call without notice, in any reserve agent, as hereinbefore defined.[5]

Act of May 8, 1907, P. L. 189, amended by Act of July 11, 1917, P. L. 791, 7 PS Secs. 351-356.

Comments:

1. This proposed section imposes upon private banks the same duty of establishing and maintaining a reserve fund as in the case of banks and bank and trust companies and savings banks under existing law. This is in accordance with the policy adopted in Article VIII of this draft on private banks. Section 1308 of that article provides when and how such reserve shall be created in the case of private banks.

2. The percentages established by this proposed section are the same as those of Sections 2 and 3 of the Act of 1907, as amended, supra, except as indicated in footnotes 3 and 4. Under date of April 2, 1908, in a formal opinion, Attorney General Todd advised Banking Commissioner Berkey that the words "immediate demand liabilities" in Section 2 of the Act of 1907, supra, must be construed in view of the provisions of Section 4 of that act, to include bills payable on demand, cashiers' checks, paper payable on demand given for borrowed money, and similar claims, as well as deposits payable on demand. This has been the practice that date, if not before. This opinion was affirmed by the opinion of Deputy Attorney General Brown, rendered under date of January 21, 1924, to First Deputy Secretary of Banking Morrison.

3. Section 2 of the Act of 1907, supra, bases the percentage of reserve required upon "deposits of money subect to check or payable on demand." As a practical matter, this has meant, and the Department has uniformly so interpreted it, deposits for which at least a thirty-day notice could not be demanded by the institution. The Federal and New York acts, as well as the laws of many other states, include in the definition of demand deposits, any deposits payment of which can be demanded in less than thirty days. This draft follows the present practice in this Commonwealth and the provisions of the laws of other states and the Federal government.

4. As pointed out in footnote 2, supra, the existing law of Pennsylvania as interpreted by the opinions of the Attorney General, requires the inclusion of demand liabilities in computing reserves. This clause is included to eliminate the existing confusion as to the meaning of demand liabilities and is in accordance with the formal opinion of Deputy Attorney General Brown given to First Deputy Secretary of Banking Morrison, under date of January 21, 1924.

5. See Section 906 of this draft.

Section 909. Deficiency in Reserve Fund; Notice to Department; Penalty.—A. Except as otherwise specifically provided in this act,[1] if the reserve fund of an institution shall be less than the amount required by this article, such institution shall not grant any new loan or declare or pay any dividends, until the reserve fund required by this act shall have been restored in full.[2]

B. Every institution shall give immediate written notice to the Department, in the manner prescribed by the Department for such notice, whenever its total reserve fund has been deficient for five consecutive business days or for a total of ten business days during any thirty-day period.[3]

C. Any institution which fails to give the notice required by this section, shall pay to the Department a penalty of one hundred dollars for each day that it does not do so after the time fixed by this section for the giving of such notice, but the Department may, in its discretion, relieve any institution from the payment of such penalty, in whole or in part, if good cause be shown to it for the failure of such institution to give such notice. If an institution fails to pay a penalty from which it has not been thus relieved, the Department may, through the Department of Justice, maintain an action at law to recover it.[4]

Comments:

1. See Section 910 of this draft.
2. This provision is in accordance with the provisions of the Act of 1907, supra.
3. It seems clearly desirable that the Department also should promptly be given notice of the deficiency in the reserve fund. A similar provision exists in the laws of Louisiana.
4. The penalty inflicted by this proposed section is uniform with that imposed upon institutions in the case of a failure to file other reports or give other notice required by this act or by the proposed Department of Banking Code.

Section 910. Maintenance of Reserve Fund by Federal Reserve Members.—An institution which, upon the effective date of this act, is a member of a Federal Reserve Bank, or an institution which, after the effective date of this act, shall become a member of a Federal Reserve Bank, in the manner provided by this act, shall comply with the requirements of the Federal Reserve Act, its amendments and supplements, for the establishment and maintenance of a reserve fund. Compliance therewith by such institution shall relieve such institution from compliance with the requirements established by this act for the creation and maintenance of a reserve fund, but it shall, in accordance with the provisions of this act concerning notice after a deficiency in reserves, give written notice to the Department whenever its total reserve fund has, for a period of five consecutive business days or for a total of ten business days during any thirty-day period, been below the minimum required by the Federal Reserve Act, its amendments and supplements, and shall be subject to the penalty for failure to give such notice provided by this act.

Comments:

This provision coincides substantially with the Act of 1917, supra, except that the provision for notice is included to make this proposed section consistent with Section 909 of this draft. The Department should certainly receive notice of a deficiency in the reserves of any institution, whether the amount of such reserves is determined by State or by Federal law.

ARTICLE X

POWERS AND LIMITATION UPON POWERS OF BANKS AND BANK AND TRUST COMPANIES

Section 1001. Powers of Banks or Bank and Trust Companies.—In addition to the general corporate powers granted by this act, and in addition to any powers specifically granted to a bank or bank and trust company elsewhere in this act, a bank or a bank and trust company shall have the following powers, subject to the limitations and restrictions imposed by this act:[1]

(1) To receive money on deposit and to pay interest thereon;

(2) To receive money for transmission either to a foreign country or otherwise;

(3) To rediscount and borrow money, bonds, or other securities and to pledge collateral therefor;

(4) To lend money either upon the security of real or personal property, or otherwise; to charge or to receive in advance interest therefor;

(5) To discount, buy, sell, negotiate, or assign, promissory notes, drafts, bills of exchange, trade and bank acceptances, bonds, or other evidences of debt; but the business of buying and selling investment securities shall hereafter be limited to buying and selling without recourse, marketable obligations which evidence indebtedness of any corporation or person in the form of bonds, notes, or debentures, commonly known as "investment securities." under such further definition of the term "investment securities" as may by regulation be prescribed by the Department;

(6) To buy and sell exchange, coin and bullion;

(7) To purchase, hold, or convey real estate;

(8) To improve or to lease real property for its accommodation;

(9) To accept for payment at a future date, drafts or bills of exchange drawn upon it;

(10) To issue letters of credit authorizing the holders thereof to draw drafts or bills of exchange upon it or its correspondents;

(11) To become a member of the Federal Reserve Bank;

(12) To receive for safe-keeping, jewelry, plate, coin and other similar personal property, or bonds, mortgages, shares of stock, securities, and other valuable papers; and to rent out receptacles or safe deposit boxes for the deposit of such papers or of such personal property.

(13) To invest in the shares of an institution engaged in a foreign banking business.

Comments:

1. The general corporate powers referred to are those in Section 314 of this draft. The other power of a bank which is particularly referred to elsewhere in this act is the power to acquire fiduciary powers by becoming a bank and trust company. The other powers of bank and trust companies refererd to are, of course, the fiduciary powers discussed in Article XI.

This proposed section is merely a listing of the powers most of which are self-evident and most of which are discussed very much more in detail elsewhere in this article.

Clause (3) is copied from the national act, 12 USCA Sec. 24.

Section 1002. Power to Receive Deposits; Conditions and Notice of Withdrawal.—A bank or a bank and trust company shall have the power to receive money on deposit. It shall repay such deposits upon due demand in such manner, upon such notice, and under such other regulations as shall be prescribed in its articles or by-laws, but if no mention is made in its articles or by-laws of the requirement of notice or of any special conditions, or if the notice of such articles or by-laws required by this act to be given to the depositors is not given, such deposits shall be repaid upon demand without notice.

Comments:

This section is new and seems necessary for completeness. It seems clear that where a bank does not stipulate any special conditions, or any special notice, or notify in the proper manner of any special requirement for notice, the deposit should be a deposit payable upon demand and without notice.

Section 1003. Interest on Deposits.—A. A bank or a bank and trust company shall have the power to credit and pay on all deposits such interest as is provided in its articles or by-laws. Such interest shall be paid to the respective depositors or credited to their accounts at least annually, except that in the case of certificates of deposit, interest shall be paid at least annually or shall be set aside annually in a special fund, which shall not be available for any purpose other than to pay, upon due demand and notice, the interest due upon such certificates of deposit.[1]

B. A bank or a bank and trust company shall not credit or pay any interest on any deposit for a longer period than it has been deposited with the bank, except that deposits made not later than the tenth business day of the month commencing any annual, semi-annual, or quarterly interest period, or not later than the fifth business day of any month, or deposits withdrawn upon one of the last three business days of the month ending any annual, semi-annual, or quarterly interest period, may, if the articles or by-laws so provide, have interest declared upon them for the whole of the period or month in which they were so deposited or withdrawn. It shall also be lawful for the articles or by-laws to provide that deposit accounts closed between interest periods may be credited with interest, computed from the last interest period to the date when closed.[2]

Comments:

1. The provisions requiring the payment or crediting of interest seems necessary. In many banks, possession of which has been taken by the Secretary of Banking, it seems to have been the practice to credit interest only if the depositor actually brought his pass book into the bank to have such interest added therein. In the case of some banks it has been found that no interest was credited in years. This practice is clearly undesirable.

2. This provision permits by law a practice which is actually very widely followed today.

(2) Funds deposited by the Secretary of Banking as receiver of an institution of which he has, pursuant to the provisions of law, taken possession.[3]

(3) Funds deposited by a bank and trust company, or by a national banking association which is authorized to act as a fiduciary within this Commonwealth, which funds are being held by such bank and trust company or national banking association in a fiduciary capacity, and are being deposited by it pending investment or distribution.[4]

Comments:

1. The Bank Act of 1876 contains no provision authorizing banks to pledge assets to secure deposits. There is not, however, anything in that act or in any subsequent legislation which prohibits a bank from doing so. In Ahl v. Rhoads, 84 Pa. 319 (1877), the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania held that the Farmers' and Mechanics' Bank of Shippensburg which was incorporated under special act of April 11, 1862, had the power to pledge a mortgage to secure the deposit of a private individual.

In Dana v. The Bank of the United States, 5 W. and S. 233 (1843), it was held that the Bank of the United States through its board of trustees, could exercise the power belonging to a corporation as to an individual, to assign its property and the effects in trust to pay certain preferred creditors without the authority or consent of the shareholders, unless it be restrained by the charter or other legal provision.

There seems to be no subsequent decision of our courts on the question whether a Pennsylvania bank may pledge its assets as security for deposits. There is nothing in the cases overruling the decision of the court in Ahl v. Rhoads.

The corporation Act of 1874 as amended, supra, provides that bank and trust companies have the power "to receive deposits of money and other personal property and issue their obligations therefor." This has been interpreted by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania to mean that at least in certain, if not in all, instances trust companies can pledge assets to secure deposits. In Cameron v. Christy, 286 Pa. 405 (1926), the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania held that under the Corporation Act of 1874, as amended, supra, a bank and trust company has authority to pledge its assets to secure county funds deposited in the name of a delinquent tax collector. Although the facts in that case dealt entirely with a bank and trust company incorporated under the provisions of the Corporation Act of 1874, the court said in dictum that a bank created under the Bank Act of 1876 had the same power. Interpreting the decision just cited in the exact manner just developed, Deputy Attorney General Saylor in a formal opinion under date of September 10, 1931, advised Secretary of Banking Gordon that banks and bank and trust companies had the power to pledge assets to secure deposits of public funds.

In view of Ahl v. Rhoads it seems clearly necessary to include in this act a specific prohibition against the pledging or hypothecating of deposits to secure assets in any cases except those which are specifically enumerated in this proposed section. This is therefore done by this draft.

2. Cameron v. Christy, supra, indicates very clearly the power to pledge assets to secure public funds. This proposed clause merely continues this existent power.

3. Under Section 722 of the proposed Department of Banking Code, the Secretary of Banking as receiver of an institution is required to deposit moneys of the institution of which he is receiver with State or Federal depositories and to require of them such security as he shall deem adequate. This proposed clause permits banks and bank and trust companies to pledge their assets in order to secure such deposits which cannot, by law, be made without security which the Secretary deems adequate.

4. Under Section 1008 of this draft as in existent law, a bank or bank and trust company may deposit funds awaiting investment in another bank or bank and trust company provided that it secures a pledge of assets therefor. This draft therefore includes such funds as one of the exceptions.

Section 1005. Borrowing Money and Pledging Assets Therefor; Limitations on Total Indebtedness.—A. A bank or a bank and trust company may borrow money and may pledge or hypothecate any of its assets or security therefor,[1] but whenever it shall appear to the Department that a bank or a bank and trust company is borrowing habitually for the purpose of relending, it may require such bank or bank and trust company to cease such practice.[2]

B. A bank or a bank and trust company shall not, at any time, be indebted, or in any way obligated, whether upon such borrowings, or otherwise, to a total amount exceeding the amount of its unimpaired capital, but the following debts or obligations shall not be included in this limitaiton:[3]

(1) Moneys deposited with the bank or bank and trust company or collected by it for its customers.

(2) Bills of exchange or drafts drawn against money actually on deposit its credit, or due it.

(3) Liabilities created by the endorsement by the bank or bank and trust company of accepted bills of exchange actually owned and discounted by it.

(4) Liabilities to the shareholders of the bank or bank and trust company for dividends which have been declared.

(5) Liabilities to the holders of undivided interests in any pool of bonds secured by mortgages or any pool of other securtites, created by the bank or bank and trust company, or to the holders of undivided interests created by the bank or bank and trust company in any particular bond secured by a mortgage, or in any other security or asset, regardless of whether certificates of participation in such mortgage or securities pool, or in such mortgage, security, or other asset have been actually issued.

(6) The amount of the surplus, the expense fund or other reserves, and the undivided profits of the bank or bank and trust company.

(7) If the bank or bank and trust company is a member of a Federal Reserve Bank, liabilities incurred by it to, or rediscounts of commercial paper made by it with, the Federal Reserve Bank, as a member thereof.

(8) Rediscounts of commercial paper or borrowing of money by such bank or bank and trust company during any continuous period, not exceeding three months, unless a longer period is approved by the Department.

Banks

Bank Act of 1876, Section 7, 7 PS Sec. 204; National—12 USCA Sec. 82.

Comments:

1. The Bank Act of 1876, supra, merely provides "all associations incorporated under the provisions of this act shall have the power and may borrow * * * money for such period as they may deem proper." It seems clear, however, that a bank or bank and trust company may pledge its assets as security for such borrowing and this draft therefore adds such authority. The further limitation of this proposed section seems necessary for the reasons explained in the successive footnotes.

2. This clause is substantially similar to that appearing in the acts of many other states, particularly the more recent ones, including Wisconsin, Kansas, and Michigan. The other acts, however, provide that the Secretary of Banking may require the bank or bank and trust company to repay such money borrowed. This seems inadvisable since frequently, it would put a bank or bank and trust company in a very precarious position to require the repayment of such money at any given time. This draft therefore merely provides that the Secretary of Banking may—and it is to be noted that the power is permissive—require a bank or bank and trust company to cease the practice of habitually borrowing money solely for the purpose of re-lending. It does seem that the Banking Department should have this power, to be exercised in its discretion.

3. There is, of course, no limitation such as that imposed by this clause in present Pennsylvania law which is almost silent on borrowings except for the section already discussed. The laws of many other states, for example, Illinois, Ohio, Kansas, Mississippi, Texas, Michigan, and Wisconsin, and the laws of the Federal government, limit the amount to which a bank or a bank and trust company may be obligated, the limitation varying in different states. The limitation contained in this proposed section is made intentionally liberal in order not to place any bank or bank and trust company during the present depression in an unduly embarrassing position. This is the reason, for example, for the provision contained in Subsection B (8). The reasons for the inclusion of the other types of obligation which are exempted from the limitation of this proposed section are obvious and are based substantially on the Federal Act, which also limits all obligations, other than those listed, to the amount of the capital of the national bank.

Section 1006. Limitations upon Loans to and Investments in Securities of One Corporation or Person.—A. A bank or a bank and trust company shall not directly or indirectly lend to, or invest in the obligations of, any corporation or person, an amount which, including any extension of credit to such corporation or person by means of letters of credit or by acceptance of drafts for, or the discount or purchase of the notes, bills of exchange, or other obligations of, such corporation or person, shall exceed ten per centum[1] of the unimpaired capital and ten per centum of the unimpaired surplus of the bank or bank and trust company. However, this restriction shall have no application whatsoever to the following:

(1) Loans to the United States or investments in the bonds or other interest-bearing obligations of the United States or in those for the payment of the principal and interest on which the faith and credit of the United States is pledged.

(2) Loans to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, or investments in the bonds or other interest-bearing obligations of the Commonwealth or in those for the payment of the principal and interest on which its faith and credit is pledged.

(3) Loans to any county, city, borough, township, or school district of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, or investments in the interest-bearing obligations of such county, city, borough, township, or school district, or those for the payment of the principal and interest on which the faith and credit of such political subdivision is pledged.

(4) The discount of drafts or bills of exchange drawn in good faith against actual existing values.

(5) The discount of trade acceptances or other commercial paper actually owned by the corporation or person, negotiating it to the bank, and endorsed without restriction by such corporation or person.

(6) The discount of notes secured by shipping documents, warehouse receipts, or other similar documents conveying or securing title to readily marketable, non-perishable staple goods, including live-stock, when the actual market value of the property securing the obligations is not at any time less than one hundred fifteen per centum of the face amount of the notes secured by such documents and when such property is fully covered by insurance.

B. However, a bank or a bank and trust company may, in addition to the ten per centum authorized by this section, lend to, or invest in, the obligations of any corporation or person, an additional fifteen per centum of the unimpaired capital and fifteen per centum of the unimpaired surplus of the bank or the bank and trust company, if such additional fifteen per centum is secured by bonds or other interest-bearing obligations of the United States, of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, or of any county, city, borough, township, or school district of this Commonwealth, or by bonds or interest-bearing obligations for the payment of the principal and interest on which the faith and credit of the United States, of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, or of any county, city, borough, township, or school district of this Commonwealth is pledged, provided that such collateral shall have an ascertained market value of at least fifteen per centum more than the amount of the obligations for which it is pledged.[2]

C. In computing the total loans made by a bank or a bank and trust company to, and the total investment in the obligations of an individual, there shall be included all loans made by the bank or bank and trust company to, or investments in the obligations of, a partnership or other unincorporated association of which he is a member, all loans made either for his benefit or for the benefit of such partnership or other association, and all loans to or for the benefit of, and all investments in, the obligations of a corporation of which he owns fifty per centum or more of the capital.

In computing the total loans made by a bank or a bank and trust company to, and the total investments in the obligations of, a partnership or other unincorporated association, there shall be included all loans to, or investments in the obligations of its individual members, all loans made for the benefit of such partnership or other association or of any member thereof, and all loans to or for the benefit of, and all investments in the obligations of, any corporation of which the partnership or other unincorporated association, or any member thereof, owns fifty per centum or more of the capital.

In computing the total loans made by a bank or a bank and trust company, to and the total investments in the obligations of, a corporation, there shall be included all loans made for the benefit of the corporation and all loans to or for the benefit of, and all investments in the obligations of any individual who owns fifty per centum or more of the capital of such corporation.

A loan shall be deemed to be made for the benefit of a corporation or a person to the extent that the proceeds of such loan are credited or transferred to such corporation or person.[3]

Comments:

1. The present law of Pennsylvania, makes no limitation on the amount which may be loaned by a bank or a bank and trust company to a single corporation or person, except, that imposed by the Act of June 14, 1901, P. L. 561, Section 1, amended by Act of April 26, 1929, P. L. 812, 7 PS Sec. 188, which prohibits the making by a bank or a bank and trust company, of any loan to any of its officers or directors which exceeds ten per centum of the capital and surplus of the institution. This seems unjustified. It can hardly be said to be the purpose of a bank or a bank and trust company to lend sums in excess of ten per centum of its unimpaired capital and ten per centum of its unimpaired surplus to any one corporation or person, nor can it be said to be good banking practice thus to concentrate loans or investments. The provisions of this section are based substantially upon those of the Banking Law of New York, supra, and of the Federal Act. The exceptions to the operation of this rule are included for reasons which seem obvious and serve to eliminate the only type of loans or investments which seem justified in excess of the limitation of this section.

2. The power contained in this subsection permits a bank or a bank and trust company to lend as high as twenty-five per centum of its unimpaired capital and surplus to a corporation or person, or to invest such amount in its obligations, if the additional fifteen per centum, above the original ten per centum, is secured by any of the specified government obligations to the specified amount. This provision is substantially similar to that in the National Act.

3. This provision is merely definite. It is based upon the Banking Law of New York, supra.

Section 1007. Loans to Directors, Officers or Employes of a Bank or Bank and Trust Company or of Institutions Affiliated With It; Definition of Affiliated Institutions; Penalty.—A. A bank or a bank and trust company shall not grant any loan to a director, officer, or employe thereof, or to a director, officer, or employe of a bank, bank and trust company, or a national banking association with which such bank or bank and trust company is affiliated without (1) the prior affirmative vote, or the prior written assent filed in the place of business of the institution, of a majority of all the directors of the bank or bank and trust company granting the loan, except that if it is a director who is directly or indirectly interested in obtaining the loan, he shall not have a vote, or (2) the prior unanimous vote of the executive committee of the board of directors subsequently ratified by an affirmative vote of a majority of all the members of the board of directors.[1]

B. A bank or a bank and trust company shall not grant a loan in excess of one thousand dollars to a salaried officer or employe thereof, or to a salaried officer or employe of a bank, bank and trust company, or a national banking association with which such bank or bank and trust company is affiliated, unless the amount of the loan in excess of one thousand dollars be secured by readily marketable collateral the market value of which shall at no time be less than one hundred per centum of the amount of the loan in excess of one thousand dollars.[2]

C. For the purposes of this section a loan to or for the benefit of a corporation of which a director, officer, or employe owns fifty per centum or more of the capital, or a loan to or for the benefit of a partnership or other unincorporated association of which the director, officer, or employe is a member, shall be considered a loan to such director, officer, or employe. A loan shall be deemed to be made for the benefit of a corporation or of a partnership or other unincorporated association to the extent that the proceeds of such loan are credited or transferred to such corporation or such partnership or other unincorporated association.

D. A bank, bank and trust company, or national banking association shall be deemed to be affiliated with a bank or bank and trust company for the purposes of this act if:

(1) It is owned, directly or indirectly by such bank or bank and trust company; or

(2) It owns directly or indirectly such bank or bank and trust company; or

(3) It is owned, directly or indirectly, by the same corporation or person which owns directly or indirectly such bank or bank and trust company; or

(4) The election of a majority of its board of directors is controlled, directly or indirectly, by any instrumentality, agency, or arrangement that controls, directly or indirectly, the election of a majority of the board of directors of such bank or bank and trust company; or

(5) A majority of its directors or a majority of the members of the executive committee of its board of directors are also directors of such bank or bank and trust company; or

(6) Members of its board of directors constitute a majority of the board of directors or a majority of the executive committee of the board of directors of such bank or bank and trust company; or

(7) Substantially all of its principal executive officers constitute a majority of the board of directors of any such bank or bank and trust company, or comprise all or substantially all of the executive officers of any such bank or bank and trust company; or

(8) Its board of directors is composed of executive officers of any such bank or bank and trust company ;or

(9) It dominates or controls, in whole or in part, the business or policy of such bank or bank and trust company, either by contract or otherwise; or

(10) Its business or policy is dominated or controlled, in whole or part, either by contract or otherwise, by such bank or bank and trust company.

For the purposes of this section, the ownership of fifty per centum or more of the total number of shares voted upon at the last meeting of the shareholders of a bank, bank and trust company, or national banking association for the determination of its directors shall be deemed to be ownership of such corporation.

Shares of stock held in the name of a nominee of any bank, bank and trust company, or national banking association for the benefit of such corporation shall be deemed to be shares owned or controlled by the corporation.

E. Any director, officer, or employe of a bank or a bank and trust company who on behalf of such bank or bank and trust company knowingly grants a loan in violation of this section or grants a loan under such circumstaces that he should have known that he was committing a violation of this section, and any director, officer, or employe of such bank, bank and trust company, or national banking association affiliated with such bank or bank and trust company, who willfully accepts such a loan with knowledge that it was granted in violation of this section, or who under all the circumstances surrounding the loan should have known that it was granted in violation of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction thereof be subject to imprisonment for a period not exceeding one year, or a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or both; he shall also be subject to a further fine of a sum equal to the amount of the loan; he shall furthermore be forever disqualified from acting as a director, officer, or employe of any institution in this Commonwealth.

Comments:

1. Except for the act limiting loans to any officer or director to ten per centum of the capital and surplus of a bank or bank and trust company, the existing law contains no limitations on the loans which may be made to officers, directors, or employes of a bank or bank and trust company. The laws of most other states contain specific limitations applicable to such loans. The provisions of this subsection requiring all such loans to be specifically approved in the manner provided is substantially the same as the provisions in the laws of New York, Maryland Ohio, Mississippi, Wisconsin, Illinois, and New Jersey.

2. The laws of Wisconsin prohibit all loans to salaried officers or employes, unless such loan is fully secured. The Bank Act of California likewise prohibits all loans to any officer or a bank or on the endorsement surety guarantee of any such officer, or to any corporation of which he owns a majority of the stock. The Virginia Banking Act prohibits loans to officers, directors, clerks, or employes of banks except upon good collateral or other ample security, and even then only after approval by the board of directors. The Bank Act of Illinois requires that the security and amount of loans to salaried officers or employes must be approved by the board of directors.

As a general rule it seems undesirable for a bank or a bank and trust company to make loans to its salaried officers or employes. However, frequently it would be a hardship upon an employe not to be enabled to borrow small sums of money from the bank or bank and trust company where he is employed and is therefore viewed with confidence. Such small loans it seems should not be prohibited. There seems likewise no reason why a loan above one thousand dollars to a salaried officer or employe should not be permitted if adequately secured and if approval by the board of directors is secured. This draft, therefore, rather than adopting the more drastic provisions of several other states, takes this middle course.

3. The penalty is made intentionally drastic. The seriousness of violations of this proposed section seems to justify such possible punishment.

Section 1008. Limitation on Loans or Discounts Secured by Shares or Obligations of a Corporation.—A. A bank or a bank and trust company shall not take or hold as collateral security for loans or discounts the shares or other obligations of any national banking association, or of any bank, bank and trust company, or other corporation, whether such bank, bank and trust company, or other corporation, was incorporated under the laws of this Commonwealth or of any other State, which, together with the amount of loans to and investments in the obligations of such national banking association, bank, bank and trust company, or other corporation, will in the aggregate at any one time exceed twenty-five per centum of the unimpaired capital plus twenty-five per centum of the unimpaired surplus of the bank or bank and trust company granting the loan or discount.[1]

B. A bank or a bank and trust company shall not take or hold at any one time as collateral security for loans or discounts more than ten per centum of the capital of a national banking association, or of another bank or bank and trust company, whether incorporated under the laws of this Commonwealth or of any other state.[2]

Comments:

1. There is, of course, no such limitation as that imposed by this proposed section in the law of Pennsylvania today. The capital and surplus of a bank or bank and trust company is the buffer for the depositors and other creditors of the institution. It is precarious enough for such margin even in the eventuality, to depend to the extent of twenty-five per centum of its total upon one corporation. It does not seem unduly harsh to provide that the depositors' and other creditors' margin of safety shall not be invested in or loaned on the security of the shares or other obligations of a single corporation.

2. This provision is new and is intended to prevent undue concentration of credit on the security of the shares of another bank or bank and trust company or a national banking association. It is based upon the law of New York, supra.

Section 1009. Prohibition Upon Investing in Shares.—Except as otherwise specifically authorized by this act,[1] a bank or a bank and trust company shall not purchase or invest in the shares of capital of any corporation whatsoever, but this section shall not be construed to affect the power of a bank or a bank and trust company to take or hold shares of capital of a corporation, in accordance with the provisions of this act, as security for loans granted by such bank or bank and trust company.[2]

Comments:

1. Two exceptions are the investments under certain circumstances in the shares of capital of a foreign banking corporation, and in the shares of a Federal Reserve Bank. See Sections 1010 and 1019 of this draft.

2. There is no specific power granted in any of the acts applying specifically to banks or bank and trust companies to purchase or invest in shares of capital of a corporation. However the terms of the Act of 1901, as amended, supra, are broad enough to include banks or bank and trust companies. Of course, this act will be repealed if the proposed Business Corporation Law is enacted. However it seems desirable to mention a prohibition on such investments specifically in this draft.

Investments in the shares of capital of another corporation do not seem to be proper bank investments. They constitute unsecured investments in the prospective earnings of other corporations. They are in most cases speculative and constituted one of the chief causes, if not the chief cause, of capital and surplus impairments during the recent bank crisis. The failure of many banks can be directly traced to tremendous losses upon purchases or investments in shares. National banks are prohibited from investing in the shares of capital of corporations. The law of California, likewise, prohibits any such investments, except such as to permit a bank to be allied with one bank and trust company or one safe deposit company. The laws of Kansas specifically prohibit such investments.

Section 1010. Power to Invest in Shares of Banks Engaged in Foreign Business.—A bank or a bank and trust company, the unimpaired capital and the unimpaired surplus of which total at least one million dollars, may invest not more than ten per centum of its unimpaired capital plus ten pe rcentum of its unimpaired surplus, in the shares of capital of one or more corporations or associations, chartered or organized under the laws of the United States or of any State thereof and principally engaged in international or foreign banking, or in banking in a dependency or insular possession of the United States, either directly or through the agency, ownership, or control of local institutions in foreign countries or in such dependencies or insular possessions, but a bank or a bank and trust company may make such investment only with the previous written approval of, and under such terms and conditions as shall be prescribed by the Department.

Comments:

This proposed section is based substantially on the Federal Act, supra, The New York Law likewise permits such investments. It seems desirable to permit banks of large capitalization and surplus to make such investments if their foreign business is of a nature to require it. Modern international banking conditions require that such power be granted.

Section 1011. Limitation as to Dealings by Bank or Bank and Trust Company in Own Shares.—A bank or bank and trust company shall not grant any loan or discount on the security of shares of its own capital, nor be the purchaser or holder of any such shares, unless such security or purchase shall be necessary to prevent loss upon a debt previously contracted in good faith. Shares so purchased or acquired shall be disposed of within six months from the time of their purchase or acquisition, but the Department may, upon application of a bank or a bank and trust company, grant to it in writing, the power to hold such shares for a longer period.

Comments:

Sections 2 of the Act of 1901, supra, which is applicable both to banks and bank and trust companies, reenacts the provisions of Section 23 of the Bank Act of 1876 in identical language. Either it was intended to supplant Section 23 of the Bank Act of 1876 or it was passed in ignorance of its existence. The provisions of this section are similar to those of these two acts. The acts referred to provided that the shares procured under this act could not be held for a period longer than six months "if the same can be sold for what such stock cost the corporation."

The flexibility of the provision of this act, that the Department may authorize a bank or a bank and trust company, for any justifiable cause, to hold such shares for a period longer than six months. This added flexibility seems desirable.

Section 1012. Loans on and Investments in Bonds and Mortgages and Judgments of Record.—A. A bank or a bank and trust company shall have the power to lend on the security of, or invest in bonds secured by, mortgages upon real property, but it shall lend upon, or invest in, only such bonds and mortgages as (1) are first liens on unencumbered improved real property, including improved farm land situated within the Commonwealth, and (2) not exceed fifty per centum of the actual value of such real property, and (3) becomes due within five years after the making of such loan or investment.[1] Any building which is upon, and is included in the valuation of, such real property shall be insured to the benefit of such bank or bank and trust company, by the borrower or mortgagor for the term of the bond, in a company which is authorized to do business in Pennsylvania and is approved by the board of directors of the bank or bank and trust company making the investment. It shall be lawful for a bank or bank and trust company to renew such policy at the expense of the borrower or mortgagor from year to year or for a longer or a shorter period, not, however, exceeding the term of the obligation, in case he shall fail to do so. All necessary charges and expenses paid by such bank or bank and trust company for such renewals shall be paid by such borrower or mortgagor. In case such borrower or mortgagor shall refuse, upon demand, to pay such charges an dexpenses, they shall be added to the amount secured by the mortgage and shall, together with interest from the date of the payment of such charges and expenses constitute a lien upon the property so mortgaged. All expenses of searches, examinations, certificates of title, or appraisal of actual value, and all expenses of drawing and recording of papers shall be paid by such mortgagor or borrower.[2] The actual value of the real property shall be determined by two reputable persons, especially familiar with real property values in the vicinity of the particular property to be appraised, selected from or approved by the board of directors. They shall inspect the property, and shall, under oath or affirmation, state in writing that the actual value of the real property inspected, to the best of their judgment, is as stated. Such report shall be filed and preserved among the records of the bank or bank and trust company.[3]

B. A bank or bank and trust company shall have the power to lend on the security of, or invest in, judgments of record which are first liens on unencumbered real property situated within the Commonwealth, to the amount of fifty per centum of the actual value of such property, under the same circumstances and subject to the same conditions as are established by this section in the case of loans on the security of, or investments in, bonds secured by mortgages upon real property.[4]

C. The aggregate amount of all loans and investments made by virtue of this section shall not at any time exceed twenty-five per centum of the unimpaired capital and twenty-five per centum of its unimpaired surplus, or fifty per centum of the total time deposits of such bank or bank and trust company at the option of the bank or bank and trust company.[5]

Comments:

1. The Act of 1901, supra, authorizes a bank to invest in first mortgages to an amount not exceeding its time deposits plus twenty-five per centum of its capital, surplus, and undivided profits, and to lend on such security to an amount not exceeding its time deposits, plus twenty-five per centum of its capital, surplus, and undivided profits. It would appear then that a bank would not be exceeding the legal limit in having an aggregate of investments in and loans upon mortgages of two hundred per centum of its time deposits plus fifty per centum of its capital, surplus, and undivided profits. In a formal opinion, under date of December 3, 1919, Deputy Attorney General Myers advised Commissioner of Banking Fisher that the Act of 1901, supra, does not authorize banks to lend their funds on the security of second mortgages or any other lien on encumbered real property, and the fact that banks are nowhere prohibited from making such loans does not permit them to do so by implication.

Bank and trust companies are not now subject to any limitation or restriction with regard to investments in or loans upon bonds and mortgages on real estate. This act establishes definite limitations on loans and investments upon bonds secured by mortgage upon real estate. The provisions are substantially similar to those of the national act, supra. The limitation requiring that the lien be on unencumbered real estate in uniform in most jurisdictions. The requirements that the lien be upon improved real estate is likewise general although a larger number of states omit this limitation. The limitation as to the value of the real estate varies considerably in different jurisdictions. The national act makes such requirement. The Ohio and California acts permits the mortgage to be to sixty per centum of the value of the real property while New York establishes a sixty-six and two-thirds per cent limit. Wisconsin, like the national act, establishes a limit of fifty per centum. Recent experience seems to indicate that it is wisest to follow the provisions of the national acts and the acts of those states which forbid investments in, or loans upon, the security of bonds secured by real property, where such bond is to an amount exceeding fifty per centum of the actual value of the real property.

2. The provisions for insurance, interest, and liens therefor upon a failure to renew the same, are modelled upon the Act of May 20, 1889, P. L. 246, Section 20, 7 PS Sec. 605, which applies to savings banks. The meaning of these provisions and the reasons for their inclusion in this draft seem clear.

3. The provisions of the different states vary as to appraisers. Some require that they be members of the board of directors. It seems desirable to place the option in the directors themselves to determine whether an appraiser should be one of their own number, or an outsider, just so he is qualified for the task. The provision for a statement under oath or affirmation is added as a safeguard against false appraisements.

4. There seems to be no reason for not permitting investments by a bank or a bank and trust company in judgments of record, or loans upon such security, if they constitute liens upon real property under the same circumstances and subject to all the conditions imposed by this proposed section in the case of bonds and mortgages.

5. The Act of 1901, supra, as pointed out in footnote 1, permits the money loaned by banks upon the security of real property, to exceed the limit established by this act. The provisions of this proposed section are the same as those of the national act. The alternative is included to provide for the case of a bank which for any reason has a small proportion of time deposits. It seems in most cases that of the two alternatives, the larger amount will virturally always be the one based upon time deposits.

Section 1013. Power to Create Mortgage Pools for Public Participations; Limitations.—A. A bank or a bank and trust company shall have the power to establish a pool or fund of any bonds secured by mortgages, or of any securities, which it holds in its own name and which it has lawfully acquired, an dto sell to any particular corporations or persons or to the general public, fractional undivided interests therein.[1]

Every holder of such fractional, undivided interest shall be given a certificate of participation, which shall state on its face that it is issued without guarantee of the payment of either principal or interest, that it will be paid only when funds become available out of the bonds secured by the mortgages, or out of the securities, comprising the pool or fund. It shall also state any other important conditions governing such participation.[2] A bank or a bank and trust company shall not in any case guarantee the payment of the principal or interest upon the bonds and mortgages securing them, or upon the securities, in any pool or fund created by it, or pay any moneys to the holders of any interest therein, except out of funds which have become available therefrom.[3]

B. Such bank or bank and trust company shall designate clearly upon its records the bonds and the mortgages securing them, or the securities, comprising such pool or fund, the names of the holders of certificates of participation therein, and the extent of the interest of such holders. A holder shall not be deemed to have individual ownership of any bond and the mortgage securing it, or of any security, in such pool or fund, but he shall be deemed to have an undivided interest in the entire pool or fund.[4]

C. The bank or bank and trust company shall have the right at any time to repurchase at market value, but in no case less than face value, any bonds and mortgage or another security of a value at least equal to that of the bond and mortgage, or of the security for which it was substituted.[5]

D. A bank or a bank and trust company shall likewise have the power to sell to any particular corporations or persons or to the general public fractional undivided interests in any single bond secured by a mortgage, or in any security, which it holds in its own name and which it has lawfully acquired. It shall create and sell such interests and shall issue participation certificates therefor in the same manner, under the same conditions, and subject to the same limitations, as are authorized or imposed by this section in the case of a pool of more than one bond secured by more than one mortgage, or of more than one security.[6]

E. This section shall not be construed to affect a pool or fund of bonds secured by mortgages or of securities, or undivided interests in a particular bond secured by a mortgage, or a particular security, created by a bank or a bank and trust company prior to the effective date of this act.[7]

Comments:

1. Although the only power under present law for the creation of a mortgage pool by either a bank or a bank and trust company is existent for bank and trust companies in the Corporation Act of 1874, supra, as amended, both banks and trust companies engage extensively today in the business of creating so-called mortgage pools for the participation by the general public. This draft specifically authorizes both banks and bank and trust companies to create such pools. The requirement that such pool be comprised of mortgages which it holds in its own name is introduced for obvious reasons, while the provision that such mortgages shall have been lawfully acquired is introduced in order to clarify the fact that a bank can only place in a mortgage pool the same type of mortgages as it is authorized by this act to acquire or hold.

2. The Corporation Act of 1874 as amended, supra, permits bank and trust companies to create such pools and sell participating interests therein without the issuance of any certificate. This seems clearly undesirable. In accordance with the requirement of Section 901 of this draft with reference to the giving of pass books or receipts for deposits, this proposed section requires that every holder of an interest in a participation pool be given a participation certificate which shall state the important conditions of the participation.

3. As to the requirement that the bank or bank and trust company shall not guarantee the payment of principal or interest upon such participations, this is probably clear from Section 1021 of this draft but is repeated here to preclude any other interpretation. The provision that moneys shall be paid to participate only out of the actual assets in the pool seems reasonable and necessary. The holders of certificates of participation in a mortgage pool should not be paid out of the general asests of the institution. To permit this would merely be permitting an evasion of the rule that a bank or a bank and trust company cannot guarantee the payment of bonds secured by mortgages. In addition there is a very real distinction between a depositor in a bank or a bank and trust company and the holder of a mortgage participation certificate therein. The holder of a mortgage participation certification certificate is really merely a purchaser of an undivided interest in a particular mortgage or a group of mortgages and he should therefore look to the payment of the certificate out of the funds available from the liquidation of the mortgage or mortgages from which his certificate has been issued.

4. This proposed paragraph contains substantially the same provisions as the Corporation Act of 1874 as amended, supra.

5. The provisions of this proposed paragraph likewise are based substantially on the Corporation Act of 1874 as amended, supra.

6. It is also a common practice, where a bank or a bank and trust company is the holder of a very large single bond secured by a mortgage to create and sell participating interests therein. This proposed subsection is introduced in order to cover such situations.

7. This subsection is introduced since, even if it were constitutionally possible it is clearly undesirable, to attempt to affect in any manner a pool or fund of mortgages created prior to the effective date of this act.

NOTE: In recent years the experience of banks and bank and trust companies with mortgage pools has in many cases been disastrous. A number of institutions have, during the last several years, been forced to go into possession of the Secretary as receiver, or to be taken over by another bank in order to prevent such a contingency solely or chiefly because of demands made upon them by holders of participations in mortgage pools, rather than because of demands of their regular depositors.

This act attempts to limit mortgage pools in a manner which will at least protect depositors of a bank or a bank and trust company from the chief evils which have resulted from them in recent years.

However, in the light of the experience of recent years, a mortgage pool seems to be a poor banking practice and, in general, likewise a poor investment for the purchaser of a participating interest therein. The question is therefore raised whether it is not desirable to eliminate entirely the power of a bank or a bank and trust company to create mortgage pools or participations. It is understood that a bank or a bank and trust company of this Commonwealth, upon applying for membership in the Federal reserve system, is required to waive its power to create a mortgage pool except with the written approval of the Federal Reserve Board, an approval which is virtually never granted.

Section 1014. Restriction on Ownership or Holding of Real Property by a Bank or Bank and Trust Company.—A. Except as otherwise provided in this act, a bank or a bank and trust company shall not purchase, own, or hold any real property, except as follows:[1]

(1) Such real property as it occupies pursuant to the provisions of this act, for its accommodation in the transaction of its business or such real property which it partly so occupies and partly leases, pursuant to the provisions of this act.[2]

(2) Such as it shall purchase at sales under judgments, decrees, or mortgages held by it or as it shall otherwise acquire in good faith and satisfaction of debts previously contracted to it, or in order to protect an interest it may otherwise have lawfully acquired in such property.[3]

B. A bank or a bank and trust company shall not own or hold any real property, other than such real property as it occupies for its accommodation in the transaction of its business or such real property as it partly so occupies and partly leases to others, pursuant to the provisions of this act for a period longer than five years after the acquisition of such real property, but the Department may upon application of a bank or a bank and trust company, grant to it in writing, the power to hold such real property for a longer period.[4]

C. A bank or a bank and trust company shall not permit title to any real property of which it is in fact the owner to be carried in the name of any other corporation or person.[5]

Comments:

1. The Bank Act of 1876, supra, provides substantially the same as does Subsection A of this proposed section. Likewise the laws of most other states have a similar provision.
2. See Section 1015 of this draft.
3. This proposed clause is a catch-all in order to enable a bank or a bank and trust company to purchase in a sheriff's sale such property as may be necessary to protect an equity it may already have in the property, or to accept property in settlement of debts.
4. The Bank Act of 1876, supra, provided that a bank shall dispose of its real property within five years after acquiring it. It is interesting to note that the Act of 1915, supra, after reciting that real estate had during that year, depreciated to an unprecedented extent and that many corporations would under the rule of the Bank Act of 1876, be compelled to stand heavy losses on property which it had been forced to take over on mortgages, etc., provides that an additional five years shall be granted to all banking companies for the holding of real property acquired by them.

The porvision of this proposed section enacts the same five-year period by provision for extension of time by the Department, in order to prevent the necessity at any future time for an act like the Act of 1915, supra. This is the procedure followed also by most of the states, including New York, New Jersey, Mississippi, Kansas, Ohio, Texas, Wisconsin, Illinois, and the Federal government.

5. This proposed provision is intended to curb the increasing practice on the part of institutions to hold the property in straw names.

Section 1015. Limitation on Bank Buildings Owned or Leased, and Furniture and Fixtures Therein.—A. The cost of the real property, including the building or buildings thereon, which a bank or a bank and trust company occupies for the transaction of its business, or partly so occupies and partly leases to others, together with the cost of furniture and fixtures therein which are owned by such institution, shall not at any time exceed in the aggregate twenty-five per centum of its unimpaired capital plus twenty-five per centum of its unimpaired surplus, except with the written approval of the Department.[1] Before the purchase of such property is made or the erection of a building or buildings is commenced, the estimate of the costs thereof shall be submitted to the Department for its approval.

B. A bank or a bank and trust company shall not expend for the alteration, repair, or improvement of premises occupied but not owned by it, an amount which together with the cost of any real property, building or buildings, and furniture and fixtures which it owns, exceeds twenty-five per centum of its unimpaired capital plus twenty-five per centum of its unimpaired surplus, except with the written approval of the Department. The cost of such alterations, repairs, or improvements shall be amortized during the term of such lease or occupancy, and before such alterations, repairs, or improvements are made, an estimate of the cost thereof shall be submitted to the Department for its approval.[2]

C. The foregoing provisions of this section shall not affect any real property and building or buildings occupied, or the furniture and fixtures owned and used by a bank or a bank and trust company, upon the effective date of this act for the transaction of its business but such bank or bank and trust company shall not, except with the approval of the Department, add to such real property, building or buildings, furniture, and fixtures, and shall not alter, repair, or improve such premises, if the cost of such additions, alterations repairs, or improvements shall, togther with any other real property and building or buildings occupied, or furniture and fixtures owned and used by the incorporated institution aggregate twenty-five per centum of its unimpaired capital plus twenty-five per centum of its unimpaired surplus.[3]

D. Except as otherwise provided in this act,[4] a bank or a bank and trust company may lease to any other corporation or person for offices or for any other legitimate purposes, premises which it owns or occupies for the transaction of its business.[5]

Comments:

1. At the present time the law of Pennsylvania is one of the very few in this country which makes no limitation on the amount which may be expended by a bank or a bank and trust company for the real property it occupies in the transaction of its business or partly occupies and partly leases to others for office space or apartments, and the furniture and fixtures in the buildings on such real property. The laws of most other states have imposed limitations varying from twenty-five per centum to sixty per centum of capital and surplus. Several of the states in establishing a maximum for such expenditures vest the Secretary of Banking with the discretion of permitting a particular bank or bank and trust company to exceed this limit. The limitation imposed by this proposed section is the same as that existent in the laws of New Jersey and Massachusetts. It seems a reasonable limitation, but the discretion of the Secretary to allow a larger expenditure in special cases is permitted in order to avoid harshness in such cases.
2. It is probably rarely that a bank or a bank and trust company would expend as high as twenty-five per centum of its capital and surplus upon the improvement of the premises which it has leased from the owner. However, this restriction is included in order to cover all possible situations. It seems obvious that a bank or a bank and trust company should not be permitted to expend on property not owned by it an amount greater than that which it may expend on its own property and building.
3. It is clear, of course, that this act cannot affect real property or furniture and fixtures which a bank or bank and trust company held prior to the effective date of this act however disappropriate to its capital and surplus. However, this draft can and should apply the limitation to any additions thereto.
4. See Section 203 of this draft.
5. This provision is merely a summary of that contained in the Act of 1901, supra.

Section 1016. Power to Accept Drafts and Bills of Exchange; Limitations.—A. A bank or a bank and trust company shall have the power to accept for payment drafts or bills of exchange having not more than six months' sight to run, which grows out of transactions involving the importation or exportation of goods; or which grow out of transactions involving the domestic shipment of goods, in which case the shipping documents conveying or securing title shall be attached at the time of acceptance; or which are secured at the time of acceptance by a warehouse receipt or other such document conveying or securing title to readily marketable staples.

B.A bank or a bank and trust company shall not accept drafts or bills of exchange for any one corporation or person, to an amount totalling at any one time more than ten per centum of the unimpaired capital plus ten per centum of the unimpaired surplus of such bank or bank and trust company, unless the bank or bank and trust company is secured for such amount above such ten per centum of unimpaired capital plus ten per centum of unimpaired surplus, either by attached documents or by some other actual security growing out of the same transaction as the acceptance.

C. A bank or a bank and trust company shall not accept drafts or bills of exchange to an amount totalling at any one time more than fifty per centum of its unimpaired capital plus fifty per centum of its unimpaired surplus, but the Department may at any time, by general rule, applicable to all banks or bank and trust companies and under such limitations as it shall impose, authorize all banks and all bank and trust companies to accept drafts or bills of exchange to an amount totalling at one time one hundred per centum of their unimpaired capital plus one hundred per centum of their unimpaired surplus. However, a bank or a bank and trust company shall not under any circumstances accept drafts or bills of exchange growing out of domestic transactions, totalling at one time more than fifty per centum of its unimpaired capital plus fifty per centum of its unimpaired surplus.

Comments:

The law of Pennsylvania at present contains virtually no limitations upon the acceptance of drafts and bills of exchange. The subject is one of such importance that this draft should certainly provide for it in detail. Therefore, this proposed section, based almost entirely on the provisions of the Federal Reserve Act, supra, has been included in this draft. It is elastic and has worked well in the case of banks operating under the Federal Reserve Act.

Section 1017. Protection against Loss on Previous Loan or Investment.[1]—The restrictions imposed by this act shall not be construed to prevent a bank or a bank and trust company, in order to protect itself from loss upon a loan or investment previously made lawfully and in good faith, from acquiring ownership of, or otherwise taking and holding, any kind of property or security whether real or personal. Except as otherwise provided by this act, any property so acquired, unless of the character and nature by this act authorized to be purchased or held by such bank, shall be sold by it within five years, but the Department may, upon application of a bank or bank and trust company, grant to it in writing the power to hold such property for a longer period.

Comments:

1. This proposed section is new.
A bank or bank and trust company should be permitted to take almost any property where necessary to protect a prior loan or investment made in good faith. This section gives it such power. The five-year period seems long enough to dispose of most any type of property which a bank or a bank and trust company would thus acquire. However, additional flexibility is provided by the power of the Department, in special cases, to grant authority to a bank or a bank and trust company to hold such property for a period in exces of the five years.

Section 1018. Property Acquired Prior to Effective Date of Act.—This act shall not be construed to render unlawful the continued ownership or holding by a bank or a bank and trust company of any loans, investments, or other real or personal propetry lawfully acquired prior to the effective date of this act.[1] However, such loans and investments, or such other or personal property shall be computed in determining the power under this act of a bank or a bank and trust company to grant any additional loans or make any additional investments of the same or different kinds.[2]

Comments:

1. However undesirable an investment may be, it does not seem judicious at this time, even if it were constitutionally possible, to require banks or bank and trust companies to dispose of it. Many states, upon enacting new banking laws, have required that the banks and bank and trust companies dispose of property and investments prohibited by the act within a specified period after the act, usually one or two years, or at a time designated by the Secretary of Banking. This draft does not follow this policy.

2. The first sentence of this proposed section should not enable a bank or a bank and trust company to continue to make such investments or loans. Thus, for example, if a bank or a bank and trust company has already invested in the securities of a single corporation to the extent of fifty per centum of the capital and surplus of such bank or bank and trust company, it whould not have to dispose of the twenty-five per centum of the property which is in excess of the twenty-five per centum of its capital and surplus permitted by this act. However, it could not continue to invest in the securities of such corporation to raise its holdings therein to a percentage above that established by this act.

Section 1019. Power of Bank to Become Member of Federal Reserve Bank.—A bank or a bank and trust company may purchase and hold, for the purpose of becoming a member of a Federal Reserve Bank, so much of the capital of such Federal Reserve Bank as will qualify it for membership therein. It may acquire and exercise all powers, not in conflict with the laws of this Commonwealth, which are conferred upon any such member bank by the Federal Reserve Act, its amendments and supplements.[1] Such bank or bank and trust company may be examined by Federal authorities in accordance with the provisions of the Federal Reserve Act, but unless the Department shall, in its discretion, accept the examinations or reports made under the Federal Reserve Act in lieu of those required by the laws of this Commonwealth, it shall be examined by, and make reports to, the Department in the manner provided by law for all banks or bank and trust companies. Except as otherwise specifically provided in this act,[2] such bank or bank and trust company, and its officers, directors, employes, and shareholders shall continue to be subject to all the liabilities and duties imposed upon them by this act or by any other law of this Commonwealth.

Comments:

2. See Section 910 of this draft.

Section 1020. Power to Engage in Safe Deposit Business.—A. A bank or a bank and trust company may receive for safe-keeping, jewelry, plate, coin, and other similar personal property, or bonds, mortgages, shares of stock, securities, and other valuable papers. It may also rent out receptacles or safe deposit boxes for the deposit of papers or of such personal property.

B. The bank or bank and trust company shall receive such papers or other personal property, and rent out such receptacles or safe deposit boxes upon the terms or conditions prescribed by it in accordance with its articles or by-laws, but such terms and conditions shall not be binding upon the corporations or persons availing themselves of such service unless they receive notice thereof.

Comments:

There seems to be no specific authority for banks to accept valuable papers or other property for safe-keeping or to rent receptacles or safe deposit boxes. This draft specifically grants such power to all banks and bank and trust companies. The provisions concerning notice coresponds to those which relate to notice to depositors. It seems obvious that a bank cannot impose conditions without giving notice thereof to its customers.

Section 1021. Prohibition upon Guaranteeing Mortgages.—A bank or a bank and trust company shall not, in any manner whatsoever, guarantee the payment of the principal or the interest of bonds or other obligations secured by mortgages upon real property.

This section shall not, however, be construed to affect contracts and policies guaranteeing the payment of the principal or the interest of bonds or other obligations secured by mortgages upon real property, when such contracts and policies have been lawfully executed by a bank or a bank and trust company and are valid and outstanding upon the effective date of this act.

Banks

Comments:

The Act of 1907, supra, permits all bank and trust companies incorporated under the Corporation Act of 1874 to guarantee the payment of principal and interest of bonds secured by mortages upon real property, and the Act of 1929, supra, grants the same authority to banks, but restricts the amount of such guarantees to the combined capital and surplus of the bank.

This draft prohibits all future guarantees of this kind. It is understood that the Federal Reserve Board requires all Pennsylvania banks or bank and trust companies which come into the Federal reserve system to agree to refrain from any exercise of their powers to guarantee mortgages unless they receive the specific written approval of the Federal Reserve Board, an approval which it is understod is virtually never granted. The laws of most other states likewise do not grant to banks or bank and trust companies the authority to make such guarantees.

Guarantees of the payment of principal or interest upon bonds secured by mortgages are contingent liabilities. This is not essentially bank business, nor is it sound banking practice. Large numbers of contingent liabilities, besides the possibility of rendering a bank or a bank and trust company unsafe, precludes any definite information as to the actual condition of the institution.

Section 1022. Limitation upon Power to Act as Surety.—A. A bank or a bank and trust company shall not act as surety for the faithful performance of any trust, office, duty, action, or engagement, or upon any writ of error or appeal, or upon any other type of bond in any manner whatsoever, but a bank or a bank and trust company shall still have the power, in the manner and under the circumstances provided by law to give its onw bond upon any writ of error or appeal, or in any proceeding instituted in any court of this Commonwealth, if such bank or bank and trust company is one of the parties to such proceeding or such writ of error or appeal, and a bank and trust company shall still have the power, whenever necessary, to give its own bond for the faithful performance by its trust department of its duties as trustee, guardian, executor, administrator, or other fiduciary.

B. This section shall not be construed to affect in any manner a bond given as surety, or an obligation to act as surety legally entered into, by a bank or a bank and trust company prior to the effective date of this act.

Comments:

The objections to banks or bank and trust companies acting as sureties is substantially the same as that contained in the comments to Section 1021 of this draft prohibiting the guarantee of the payment of principal or interest on mortgages by banks or bank and trust companies. Acting as a surety is not part of the business of a bank. It, too, is based upon contingent liability and is therefore neither safe nor desirable from the viewpoint of banking practice. It is a business more closely akin to insurance and should be restricted to companies in that field or in a surety and guarantee business.

However, the provision as to acting as surety for one's self is introduced to accord with the provision of Section 1107 of this draft that the capital of a bank or a bank and trust company may be accepted in lieu of the bond required by the law for fiduciaries and in order to preclude the necessity of a bank giving bond for a writ of error or appeal in a case where it is the party taking the appeal provided of course the existing law permits the bank to "go its own surety."

ARTICLE XI

POWER OF BANKS TO BECOME BANK AND TRUST COMPANIES; ADDITIONAL POWERS AND LIMITATIONS UPON POWERS OF BANK AND TRUST COMPANIES

Section 1101. Power of Bank to Become Bank and Trust Company; Acquisition of Fiduciary Powers.—A bank which has an unimpaired capital and an unimpaired surplus at least equal to the capital and surplus required by this act for the incorporation of a bank and trust company,[1] may, by amending its articles of incorporation in the manner provided by this act, acquire the additional power of, and thereby become, a bank and trust company. Such bank, upon becoming a bank and trust company, shall include in or add to its corporate name the words "and trust company,"[2] in accordance with the provisions of this act, but the amendment to the articles of incorporation of a bank, by virtue of which such bank is to become a bank and trust company, shall be approved by two-thirds of all the shareholders of such bank.[3]

Act of July 17, 1919, P. L. 1032, 7 PS Secs. 251-262, inclusive.

Comments:

1. See Article IV of this draft.
2. See Section 201 of this draft. This requirement is also made by Section 6 of the Act of 1919, supra.
3. Customarily the affirmative vote of only a majority of shareholders is required for the amendment of the articles of a bank. However, the acquisition of fiduciary powers is a matter of such importance that it seems that the assent of two-thirds of all the shareholders should be required.

Section 1102. Powers of Bank and Trust Companies.—In addition to the general corporate powers granted by this act, and in addition to any powers specifically granted to a bank and trust company elsewhere in this act, a bank and trust company shall have the following powers, subject to the limitations and restrictions imposed by this act.[1]

(1) To act as fiduciary and pursuant thereto, to receive and dispose of real or personal property;

(2) To act as agent or attorney in fact;

(3) To act as transfer or fiscal agent, and registrar of shares, bonds, or other obligations;

(4) Pool mortgages or securities for the investment of funds held by it as fiduciary;

(5) In the case of certain existent bank and trust companies, to insure owners, mortgagees, and others interested in real property from loss by reason of defective titles, liens, and encumbrances.

Comments:

1. The general corporate powers referred to are those in Section 314 of this draft. The other powers of a bank and trust company which are particularly referred to elsewhere in this act are, of course, the powers which it holds in common with a bank, discussed in Article X.

This proposed section is merely a listing of the powers which are discussed in detail in this article.

Section 1103. Power to Act as Fiduciary.—A bank and trust company may act as trustee, guardian, receiver, assignee, committee, executor, administrator, or in any other fiduciary capacity not inconsistent with the laws of this Commonwealth or of the United States. It may, in pursuance of such fiduciary relationship, receive any real or personal property, including securities of every kind, government or otherwise, belonging to, or otherwise a part of, the estate of which such bank and trust company is fiduciary. It may, pursuant to any instrument producing such fiduciary relationship, or any agreement controlling such relationship, or any rule of law governing such relationship, hold or invest, sell, or otherwise dispose of such real or personal property. It may, pursuant to and in accordance with the same authority, recover any property which the estate owns or of which it has the right to possession, or in any other way protect the interests of such estate.

Any agreement of such bank and trust company as fiduciary shall be in the manner provided by law for the agreement of such fiduciaries and any acts performed by the bank and trust company as such fiduciary shall be in accordance with any provisions of law which govern such relationships. Except as specifically otherwise provided in this act or by the instrument creating the fiduciary relationship, or by any other agreement by the partners, such bank and trust company shall have the same powers and shall be subject to the same duties as are granted to or imposed upon, any such fiduciaries by the laws of this Commonwealth.

Comments:

This proposed section is based upon the powers granted by the amendment of 1889 to the Corporation Act of 1874, supra, and the Act of 1895, supra, which was probably amended by the Act of 1903, supra, although the Act of 1903 purports to amend the "fourth clause of section 29" of the Act of 1895, which, however, contains only two sections. Actually the Act of 1903 amends that part of the Act of 1895, which quotes paragraph four of clause one of Section 29 of the Corporation Act of 1874, as amended.

This section also attempts, in general language, to continue the existent interpretation that bank and trust companies are subject in the fulfillment of their fiduciary functions to the Fiduciaries Act, or any other law controlling similar relationships.

Section 1104. Power to Act as Agent or Attorney in Fact.—A bank and trust company may act as agent or attorney in fact in the purchase and sale of real estate, in the collection of rents and the management thereof, and in the making of investments in shares, bonds, or other securities, and the custody thereof, the collection and disbursement of the principal thereof and the income therefrom, and the sale, transfer, or other disposal thereof.

Comments:

This proposed section includes the provisions of Section 29 of the Corporation Act of 1874, as amended, supra. However Section 29 of the Corporation Act of 1874, as amended, supra, mentions only the purchase and sale of real estate. This proposed section includes a number of the other more common activities today engaged in by bank and trust companies as agents or attorneys in fact.

Section 1105. Power to Act as Registrar of Shares and Bonds; Fiscal Agent.—A bank and trust company may act as the fiscal agent or transfer agent of the United States, of any state of the United States, of any county, city, borough, township, school district, or other political subdivision of any state, or of any corporation. In such capacity, it may receive and disburse money, manage any sinking fund, and transfer register, and countersign share certificates, bonds, or other evidences of indebtedness, in accordance with the terms of the instrument creating the relationship, or of any other agreement, express or implied, between the parties.

Comments:

This proposed section is based substantially upon the acts cited in the references.

Section 1106. Capital of Bank and Trust Company in Lieu of Bond.—A bank and trust company, acting as a fiduciary, shall not be required to execute the bond or put up the security required by law of fiduciaries, but its capital shall be considered as the security required by law for the faithful performance of its duties. The capital of such bank and trust company shall be absolutely liable in case of any default whatsoever.

Comments:

This proposed section is based on Section 29 of the Corporation Act of 1874, as amended, supra.

Section 1107. Any Officer Authorized to Take Oath.—In any case in which the laws of this Commonwealth require that a fiduciary shall take an oath or affirmation, or execute an affidavit, any officer of a bank and trust company which is acting in such fiduciary capacity, shall be authorized to take such oath or affirmation or execute such affidavit on behalf of such bank and trust company.

Comments:

Section 1108. Segregation and Designation of Trust Funds; Deposit of Uninvested Funds.—A bank and trust company shall keep all funds, property, or investments held by it in a fiduciary capacity separate and apart from the assets of such bank and trust company. All investments made by a bank and trust company as fiduciary shall be so designated that the estate to which such investments belong shall be aparent at all times, but such bank and trust company may clear receipts and payments of such funds in the regular course of business in the same manner as other funds held by it. Funds held by a bank and trust company as fiduciary awaiting investment or distribution, may be used by such bank and trust company in the conduct of its business, or may be deposited in any other institution, in any national banking association, or with any corporation or person in any other state, which is authorized to receive deposits and is subject to the full supervision of the banking authorities of such other state, if there are pledged or hypothecated by such bank and trust company, by such other institution, by such national banking association, or by such corporation or person, as the case may be, with the trust department of the bank and trust company acting as fiduciary, interest-bearing bonds or other obligations of the United States or of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, or such other securities as may be approved by the Department. The par value of the bonds, other obligations, or securities so pledged or hypothecated to secure such funds, or the market value if such market value is less than the par value, shall at all times be equal to an amount not less than the funds so used or deposited. If the bank and trust company, other institution, national banking association, corporation, or person, as the case may be, in which such funds have been deposited and which has put up such collateral should fail or be taken in possession by the banking authorities of the state in which it is situated, the estate from which the funds were taken, shall have a lien for the amount of such funds on the bonds, other obligations, or other securities so pledged or hypothecated, in addition to their claim against the estate of such bank and trust company, other institution, national banking association, corporation, or person.

Comments:

This proposed section is based primarily upon Section 29 of the Corporation Act of 1874, supra. However, there are two important changes. In the first place the deposit of trust funds is required to be secured by a pledge or hypothecation of assets, whether such deposit is made in the commercial department of a bank and trust company which is fiduciary, or in any other bank or bank and trust company. Section 29 of the Act of 1874 made such requirement only in the case of funds deposited with the commercial department of the bank and trust company which is fiduciary of the estate from which such funds came.

In the second place the amount of securities required for such pledge or hypothecation is based, in Section 29 of the Corporation Act of 1874, supra, upon the par value of the bonds or other securities which are given. In this draft the market value is to be taken as a basis, rather than the par value in all cases in which the market value is less than the par value.

Section 1109. Mortgage or Securities Pools for Investment of Fiduciary Funds.—A. A bank and trust company may establish in its trust department a pool or fund of bonds secured by mortgages, or of other securities, purchased solely with funds of estates held by it as fiduciary. All the bonds secured by mortgages, and all the securities, which comprise such pool or fund, shall be legal investments for funds held by fiduciaries and, except for such securities as are permitted by this act to be sold by the commercial department of a bank and trust company to its trust department on behalf of an estate held by it as fiduciary, shall never have been owned by, or carried as an asset in the commercial department of, the bank or bank and trust company creating the pool or fund, or of any institution or national banking association affiliated with it. The bank and trust company shall apportion fractional undivided interests in such pool or fund to estates of which it is fiduciary in the proportions in which their funds were used to purchase the bonds secured by mortgages, or the securities, which comprise such pool or fund. Interests in such pool or fund shall not be sold to any corporation or person, but shall be held solely by the bank and trust company, as fiduciary, and the equitable interest owned solely by the estates of which such bank and trust company is fiduciary.

A certificate of participation shall be issued for every state on behalf of which the bank and trust company as fiduciary owns a fractional undivided interest in such pool or fund. Such certificate shall state on its face that it is issued without guarantee of the payment of either principal or interest, that it will be paid only when funds become available out of the bonds secured by mortgages, or out of the securities, comprising the pool or fund. It shall also state any other important conditions covering such situation. A bank and trust company shall not in any case guarantee the payment of the principal or interest on the bonds secured by mortgages, or upon any other securities in any pool or fund created by its trust department, nor shall it pay any moneys to the holders of any certificate of participation therein, except out of funds which have become available therefrom.

B. Such bank and trust company shall designate clearly upon its records the bonds secured by mortgages and securities, comprising such pool or fund, the names of the estates to which certificates of participation have been assigned, and the extent of the interest of such estates. Any estate to which such a certificate of participation has been issued shall not be deemed to have equitable ownership of any bond or other obligation secured by mortgage, or of any security, in such pool or fund, but shall be deemed to have an undivided interest in the entire pool or fund.

C. The bank and trust company shall have the right at any time to substitute for any bond or other obligation secured by mortgage, or for any securities, in such pool or fund, other bonds or obligations secured by mortgages or securities, which meet all the requirements of this section and which have a value at least equal to the bond and mortgage or other security for which they were substituted.

D. A bank and trust company shall likewise have the power to create undivided interests in any single bond secured by a mortgage, or in an single security, to be appropriated among estates of which it is fiduciary, in the proportion to which their funds were used to purchase such asset. The bank and trust company shall create and assign such interest and shall issue participation certificates therefor in the same manner, under the same conditions, and subject to the same limitations as are authorized or imposed by this section in the case of a pool of more than one bond secured by mortgages, or of more than one security.

E. This section shall not be construed to affect a pool or fund of bonds secured by mortgages, or of securities, created by a bank and trust company prior to the effective date of this act.

Comments:

This proposed section follows in part Section 29 of the Corporation Act of 1874, as amended, supra, and in part Section 913 of this draft, which deals with the creation of a pool or funds in the commercial department. The two biggest differences between this proposed section and Section 29 of the Corporation Act of 1874, as amended, supra, are first, that the payment of principal and interst can no longer be guaranteed by the bank and trust company, for a discussion of which see the footnotes to Section 1021 of this draft and second, that the participations can be sold only to estates of which the bank and trust company is fiduciary. This is in accord with the provision of Section 1108 of this draft that trust funds should be kept entirely segregated and separate from commercial assets. The provision that the mortgages or securities comprising the fund cannot be acquired from the commercial department of the bank and trust company is consistent with Section 1111 of this draft.

In general, pools and funds seem to be undesirable from a banking viewpoint. However, in small estates, there is a strong argument for the existence of such pools or funds, that is, there are no other investments available for small estates. This was one of the strong reasons advanced for the amendment of 1929 to the Fiduciaries Act. However, if this is the case, it would seem reasonable to limit the amount of the funds of any one estate which can be invested in a pool or fund to a reasonable amount, perhaps two thousand dollars. This is advanced as a possibility, but it has not been included in this draft since doing so would necessitate an amendment to the Fiduciaries Act.

In addition, it will be noted that the mortgages in such pool may, in accordance with the provisions of the Fiduciaries Act, secure bonds or mortgages to an amount of two-thirds of the value of the real property on which such mortgage is given. The reason this has been continued despite the provision in this act that a bank or the commercial department of a bank and trust company may invest or lend on the security of mortgages of not more than fifty per centum of the value of the property, is again that the provision of the Fiduciaries Act seems to be a bar to any change in this draft unless the Fiduciaries Act is amended.

Section 1110. Prohibition upon Lending Fiduciary Funds to Officers, Directors, or Employes.—A bank and trust company shall not lend, either directly or indirectly, to any director, officer, or employe of such bank and trust company, or to any director, officer, or employe of any institution or national banking association with which such bank and trust company is affiliated, any funds which it holds as fiduciary.

For the purpose of this section, a loan shall be considered to be granted to a director, officer, or employe, when such loan is made for the benefit of such director, officer, or employe, or to or for the benefit of a corporation of which such director, officer, or employe owns fifty per centum or more of the capital, or to or for the benefit of a partnership or other unincorporated association of which such director, officer, or employe is a partner or a member. A loan shall be deemed to be granted for the benefit of a person, partnership, or other unincorporated association, or corporation to the extent that the proceeds of such loan are credited to or transferred to such person, partnership, other unincorporated association, or corporation. Every director, officer, or employe granting such loan on behalf of the bank and trust company, and every director, officer, or employe wilfully accepting such loan with knowledge that it was granted in violation of the provisions of this section, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction thereof, be subject to imprisonment for a period not exceeding one year, or a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or both; he shall also be subject to a further fine of a sum equal to the amount of loan so granted, or received and shall forever thereafter be disqualified from acting as a director, officer, or employe of any institution in this Commonwealth.

Comments:

The principle of this proposed section is contained in the Federal Reserve Act, supra, but this proposed section differs from the Federal Reserve Act in that it is more detailed and also in that it includes within its operation, officers, directors, or employes of affiliated institutions or national banks. In addition the Federal Reserve Act imposes a maximum fine of five thousand dollars or a maximum imprisonment of five years.

In the past, in many cases, large mortgage loans have been granted to officers and directors of institutions out of trust funds. It seems clear that such a practice is underisable and should be prohibited.

Section 1111. Prohibition upon Investment of Fiduciary Funds in Assets of Commercial Department.—A bank and trust company shall not invest any funds held by it as fiduciary in any real or personal property which was ever owned by such bank and trust company in its own right or was ever owner or carried as an asset by any institution or national banking association with which such bank and trust company is affiliated,[1] but this prohibition shall not apply in the case of bonds or other interest-bearing obligation sof the United States, of this Commonwealth, or of any county, city, borough, township, schol district, or poor district of this Commonwealth.[2]

Comments:

1. This provision is new.

Claims for surcharges in the case institutions of which possession has been taken by the Secretary as receiver have described numerous cases in which bank and trust companies have transferred to accounts of estates held by them in a fiduciary capacity, frozen assets of their commercial department. It is a universal doctrine of law that a fiduciary cannot deal with himself in an independent capacity. Every doctrine of fairness and logic seems to dictate that the commercial department of a bank and trust company should not be permitted to sell to its trust department any of its assets.

2. It does not seem necessary to prohibit such transfer in the case of such government obligations as are authorized investments under the Fiduciaries Act.

Section 1112. Power to Insure Titles; Prohibition.—A. Every bank and trust company which, upon the effective date of this act, lawfully possesses, and which has, within one year prior to such date, exercised the power to insure owners of real property, mortgagees, and others interested in real property from loss by reason of defective titles, liens, and encumbrances shall continue to possess such power, but not other bank and trust company shall hereafter have or exercise such power.

B. Any bank and trust company which, after the effective date of this act, has the power to insure owners of real property, mortgagees, and others interested in real property from loss by reason of defective titles, liens, and encumbrances, but which does not exercise such power for any consecutive period of one year shall be forever barred from the exercise of such power.

Comments:

Section 2 of the Corporation Act of 1874, as amended, 15 PS Sec. 3, empowers corporations of the second class, that is, including bank and trust companies incorporated under this act, to insure owners of real estate. This is a charter power, and therefore, any bank and trust company possessing it upon the effective date of this act, and exercising it within one year prior thereto, is authorized to continue such business. However, any bank and trust company which, despite the fact that it has had such power, has not exercised it for a period of one year prior to the effective date of this act, or which for any continuous period of one year after the effective date of this act does not exercise such power, shall be forever barred from doing so. Such non-user seems adequate justification for eliminating the existence of such power.

The laws of New York contain a similar prohibition, but provide that any bank and trust company not exercising such power upon the effective date of their act, however short the period it has not done so, shall be barred from insuring titles.

It is understood that the Federal Reserve Board requests all Pennsylvania bank and trust companies, which possess the power to insure titles and which come into the Federal reserve system, to agree to refrain from any exercise of the power to insure titles, unless they receive the specific written approval of the Federal Reserve Board, an approval which it is understood is virtually never granted.

The laws of most other states likewise do not grant to bank and trust companies the authority to insure titles.

The insuring of titles creates contingent liabilities. This is not essentially bank business nor is it sound banking practice. Large numbers of contingent liabilities, besides the possibility of renderng the bank and trust company unsafe, preclude any definite information as to the actual condition of a bank and trust company.

This draft makes no provisions for the title insurance business since the regulation thereof, by the proposed Insurance Department Code placed it in that Department, and since the provision for the granting of such insurance, the maintenance of reserves, etc., are fully covered in the proposed Insurance Code.

ARTICLE XII

EXPENSE FUND, SURPLUS, POWERS, AND LIMITATIONS UPON POWERS OF SAVINGS BANKS

Section 1201. Expense Fund; Repayment of Fund.—A. The expense fund required by this act to be established by the incorporators of a savings bank before such savings bank shall be authorized to commence business[1] shall be to the amount of ten thousand dollars, or such larger amount as the Department shall require. It shall be used solely to pay any organization and operating expenses which the income of such savings bank is not sufficient to meet.[2]

B. As soon as the income shall become sufficient to meet current expenses, reimbursement shall be made to the original expense fund out of earnings. When the expense fund has been reimbursed in full for any charges made against it pursuant to the provisions of this section, and when, in addition, the surplus of the savings bank is equal to at least the amount of the expense fund which was required by this act to be created, the contributions to such expense fund shall be returned to the persons who contributed it, but the amounts originally contributed to the expense fund shall not constitute a liabiliy of the savings bank until such time as the expense fund has been reimbursed in full and the unimpaired surplus of the savings bank equals the amount of such expense fund.[3]

Comments:

1. See Section 310 of this draft.
2. The requirement for the creation of an expense fund in the case of a savings bank is new to the law of Pennsylvania. However, it seems clearly necessary. A savings bank is created without capital and without surplus and, consequently, there should be some provision for some fund to cover the expenses which exist during the first days of the enterprise. The law of New York requires an expense fund of five thousand dollars to be created to cover the organization and operating expenses of every savings bank and a guaranty fund of five thousand dollars to cover the depreciation in assets which might occur during the early days of the operation of a savings bank, with the privilege in the Superintendent of Banking to require the expense and guaranty funds to be created and maintained at such higher amounts as shall appear to him necessary. This draft, for simplicity, provides merely for one fund to an equal amount, with the same privilege in the Department to increase the amount required. Such discretion in the Department is required, since in the case of savings banks starting on large scales, the sum of ten thousand dollars may be totally inadequate.
3. When the expense fund has been completely reimbursed, and when the savings bank has accumulated a surplus equal to the amount of such expense fund, then it seems clear that the expense fund is no longer required and should be repaid to the original contributors.

Section 1202. Powers of Savings Banks.—In addition to the general corporate powers granted by this act, and in addition to any powers specifically granted to a savings bank elsewhere in this act, a savings bank shall have the following powers, subject to the limitations and restrictions imposed by this act:[1]

(1) To receive money on deposit and pay interest thereon;

(2) To receive money for transmission to a foreign country or otherwise, and to forward such money through any bank, bank and trust company, or private bank, organized under the laws of this Commonwealth, or national banking association having its place of business in this Commonwealth;[2]

(3) To borrow money to repay the demands of depositors, and to pledge its assets therefor;

(4) To make investments;

(5) To lend money upon the security of real or personal property, and to charge or to receive in advance interest therefor;

(6) To purchase, hold, or convey real property;

(7) To improve or to lease real property for its accommodation;

(8) To rent out receptables or safe deposit boxes for the deposit of papers or other personal property.

Comments:

1. The general corporate powers referred to are those in Section 314 of this draft.
This proposed section is merely a listing of the powers, most of which are self-evident and are discussed very much more in detail elsewhere in this article.
2. This provision is based upon Section 238, clause (10) of the Banking Law of New York.

Section 1203. Power to Receive Conditions and Deposits; Notice of Withdrawal; Power to Limit Amount.—A. A savings bank shall have the power to receive money on deposit. It shall repay such deposits upon due demand in such manner, upon such notice, not less than thirty days, and under such other regulations as shall be prescribed in its articles or by-laws, but if no mention is made in its articles or by-laws of notice or of any special conditions, or if the notice of such articles or by-laws required by this act to be given to the depositors is not given, such deposits shall be repaid upon demand after thirty days' notice.[2]

B. A savings bank may, in its articles or by-laws, limit the aggregate amount which any one corporation or person may deposit with it. It may by action of its board of trustees, refuse any deposit, or return all or part of any deposit, when it deems such action to be to the best interests of such savings bank.[3]

Comments:

1. See Section 901 of this draft.
2. This proposed subsection is analogous to Section 1002 of this draft dealing with power of a bank or a bank and trust cmopany to receive deposits except that, in this proposed subsection, due to the nature of a savings bank, it is provided that the deposits shall, in the absence of notice or by-laws to the contrary, be regarded as a thirty day deposit, while in a bank or a bank and trust company, it is provided that they shall be regarded as demand deposits.
3. This proposed subsection is a combination of the provisions of Section 15 of the Act of 1889, supra, and of Section 1 of the Act of 1927, supra.

Section 1204. Interest on Deposits.—A. A savings bank shall have the power to credit and pay on all deposits such interest as is provided in its articles or by-laws, not however exceeding five per centum per year upon any deposit. Such interest shall be paid to the respective depositors or credited to their accounts at least annually, except that in the case of certificates of deposit, interest shall be paid at least annually or shall be set aside at least annually in a special fund, which shall not be available for any purpose other than to pay, upon due demand and notice, the interest due upon such certificates of deposit.

B. The trustees of a savings bank may classify, its depositors according to the character, amount, and duration of their dealings with the savings bank and may regulate the interest or other amounts paid depositors, within the limits of this section, in such manner that each depositor shall receive the same ratable proportion as all others of the same class. The trustees shall not declare or allow interest on any deposit for a longer period than it has been deposited with the savings bank except that deposit made not later than the tenth business day of the month commencing any annual, semi-annual, or quarterly interest period, or not later than the fifty business day of any month, or deposits withdrawn upon one of the last three business days of the month ending any annual, semi-annual, or quarterly interest period, may, if the articles or by-laws so provide, have interest declared upon them for the whole of the period or month in which they were so deposited or withdrawn. It shall also be lawful for the articles or by-laws to provide that deposit accounts closed between interest periods may be credited with interest, computed from the last interest period to the date when closed.

Comments:

The provisions in this proposed section which are new to Pennsylvania law correspond to similar provisions in Section 1003 of this draft, and are explained in the comments thereto. The remaining provisions in this subsection are based primarily upon Section 22 of the Act of 1889, supra.

Section 1205. Requisite Surplus; Dividends to Depositors; Special Charter Corporations. — A. Every savings bank, whether incorporated prior to the effective date of this act or incorporated hereunder, shall create a surplus equal to at least five per centum of its total deposits before declaring or paying any dividends. Such surplus shall be created out of net earnings. If such surplus has been established, at least fifty per centum of the net earnings of the savings bank shall be credited to surplus at the close of each dividend period, or at least annually if no dividend is declared or paid, until such surplus equals at least ten per centum of the total deposits of the savings bank.[1]

B. Except as otherwise specifically provided in its articles or by-laws, any savings bank which has an unimpaired surplus equal to at least five per centum of its total deposits may, by its board of trustees, from time to time, but not more frequently than once in every three months, declare and pay from undivided profits to its depositors, in addition to interest dividends to an amount not exceeding fifty per centum of its net earnings in any dividend period or in any year, but when such unimpaired surplus has been created in an amount equal to at least ten per centum of its total deposits, the board of trustees shall declare and pay from undivided profits, at least once in each year, a dividend to an amount equal to at least fifty per centum of its net earnings for that year. When the unimpaired surplus shall amount to twenty per centum of its total deposits, it shall be the duty of the board of trustees at least once in each year, to declare and pay an extra dividend to its depositors from undivided profits in excess of such surplus, in such manner that depositors shall receive, as nearly as may be, all the profits of the savings bank.[2]

C. The trustees of a savings bank may classify its depositors according to the character, amount, and duration of their dealings with the savings bank, and may regulate the dividends paid to them, pursuant to the provisions of this act, according to such classification.[3]

D. Whenever any special act of the General Assembly, under which a savings bank has been created, shall prescribe that dividends shall be paid to any corporations or persons other than the depositors, or only to certain depositors, such dividend shall be paid only to such corporations or persons, but only under the same conditions and subject to the same limitations as those imposed by this section.[4]

Act of April 17, 1872, P. L. 62, Section 1, 7 PS Sec. 585; Act of May 20, 1889, P. L. 246, Sections 22, 7 PS Secs. 586 and 587.

Comments:

1. The only provision in existing law as to the surplus of a savings bank is that contained in Section 1 of the Act of 1872, supra, and in Section 22 of the Act of 1889, supra, which provides that the savings bank may accumulate a surplus equal to fifteen per centum of its deposits. Section 1 of the Act of 1872 provides that when such surplus of fifteen per centum has been reached, the savings bank shall, at least once in each year, distribute the amount in excess thereof to the depositor of such savings bank, but Section 22 of the Act of 1889 prescribes that such excess surplus shall have to be distributed only once in every three years. This proposed section introduces a new doctrine into the laws of Pennsylvania in requiring a minimum surplus in the case of savings banks. However, the five per centum minimum prescribed by this act will not be a hardship in the case of any existing savings bank, since every savings bank in the Commonwealth at the present time has a surplus in excess of such five per centum minimum. Dividends may be paid by a savings which does not have the ten per centum surplus required by this act, but not to an amount exceeding fifty per centum of the net earnings of such savings bank. The laws of many other states require a minimum surplus in the case of savings banks, for example, New Hampshire, Ohio, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Indiana, and New York.

2. This proposed subsection provides that dividends are not to be paid until at least a five per centum surplus is accumulated, that dividends only to the extent of fifty per centum of net earnings are to be paid until a ten per centum surplus is accumulated, that dividends to at least fifty per centum of net earnings shall be paid when the surplus is in excess of ten per centum, and that all undivided profits shall be paid out in dividends at least once in each year when the surplus of a savings bank exceeds twenty per centum of its deposits.

As stated in footnote 1, supra, the Acts of 1872, supra, and of 1889, supra, prescribe that a saivngs bank shall not accumulate more than a firteen per centum surplus. This proposed section permits the accumulation of a twenty per centum surplus. This is more in accord with the requirements of a number of other states, for example, New York and Indiana which permit an accumulation of surplus to twenty-five per centum of deposits.

This draft equalizes the effect of the addition, however, by providing that when the surplus of a savings bank equals between ten and twenty per centum of its deposits, such savings bank shall pay at least fifty per centum of its net earnings to its depositors.

3. This provision is in accord with that contained in Section 1204-B of this draft, and is substantially similar to the provision of the Act of 1889 on this subject.

4. At least one special act creating a savings bank prescribes the particular depositors who shall be entitled to share in dividends. It does not seem desirable that this act should, or that it constitutionally can, provide that classes or corporations or persons, other than those specified in such special act, should be entitled to dividends. However, there is no reason why such savings bank should not conform to the requirements of this proposed section as to the creation and maintenance of surplus and as to the payment of dividends out of surplus in excess of twenty per centum, or to the extent of fifty per centum of undivided profits, where the surplus equals between ten per centum and twenty per centum of deposits.

Section 1206. Determination of Undivided Profits; Definitions of Gross and Net Earnings.—A. Such portion of the net earnings of a savings bank as is not required by this act to be credited to surplus may be credited by it to its profit and loss account, or if its expenses and losses for such dividend period exceed its gross earnings, such loss shall be charged to its profit and loss account. The credit balance of such account shall constitute the undivided profits at the close of such dividend period and shall be available for dividends.

B. To determine the amount of gross earnings of a savings bank for any dividend period, the following items shall be included:

(1) Earnings actually received during such period.

(2) Profits actually received during such period from the sale of its securities, its other personal propery, and its real property.

(3) Sums recovered on items previously charged off.

C. To determine the amount of net earnings of a savings bank for any dividend period, the following items shall be deducted from the gross earnings, as herein defined:

(1) Expenses paid or incurred, both ordinary and extraordinary, in the transaction of its business, in the collection of debts owing to it, and in the management of its affairs.

(2) Interest paid, or accrued and unpaid, upon deposits and debts owing by it.

(3) Losess sustained by it. In the computation of such losses, assets which have been disallowed by the Department or by the board of trustees, shall be included. Debts due such savings bank, upon which principal or interest is due and unpaid for six months shall likewise be included in the computation of losses unless such debt is in the process of collection.

(4) All amounts to be credited to the expense fund in reimbursement for charges previously made to it.

(5) Unrealized appreciation in the valuation or revaluation of its assets.

(6) Deferred assets in proportion to their use, and prepaid expenses in proportion to the use of the services represented thereby.

The balance thus obtained shall constitute the net earnings of such savings bank for such period.

Comments:

This proposed section is necessitated by the new requirements of this article concerning surplus and dividends. This proposed section, except for clause (4) of Subsection B, which is necessitated by the provisions of this draft concerning reimbursements to the expense fund of a savings bank, is the same as Section 702 of this draft. The reasons for each of the provisions are explained in the footnote to that section.

Section 1207. Statement to Trustees by Cashier or Treasurer Prior to Declaration of Dividends.—Prior to the declaration of a dividend by a savings bank, the cashier or treasurer thereof shall furnish to the board of trustees a detailed written statement, under oath or affirmation, of the condition of the savings bank as of the late date of the period for which the dividend is to be declared. Such statement shall set forth in detail all the items required by this act to be considered by the board of trustees in determining whether to declare a dividend, and if so, to what amount.

Comments:

This proposed section corresponds to Section 703 of this draft.

Section 1208. Reports to Department After Declaration of Dividend.—. Every savings bank shall, within ten days after the declaration of any dividend, make a written report to the Department of the amount of the dividend declared and the amount of its gross and net earnings, determined in the manner provided by this act. The report shall be made in the form prescribed by the Department and shall be attested by oath or affirmation of the president or the cashier or treasurer of the savings bank.

B. Any savings bank which fails to make the report required by this section, shall pay to the Department a penalty of one hundred dollars for each day that it delays making such report, but the Department may, at its discretion, relieve any savings bank from the payment of such penalty, in whole or in part, if good cause be shown to it for the failure of such savings bank to make such report. If a savings bank fails to pay a penalty from which it has not been relieved by the Department, the Department may, through the Department of Justice, maintain an action at law to recover it.

Comments:

This section corresponds to Section 705 of this draft.

Section 1209. Liability for Unlawful Dividends and Distributions.—A. The trustees of a savings bank shall not declare or pay dividends, or interest, or authorize or ratify the withdrawal or distribution of any part of its assets, to depositors, or any other corporation or person, except as authorized by this act. If any dividend or interest shall be paid, or if any withdrawal or distribution of the assets shall be made, except as provided in this act, the trustees under whose administration the same were made, except those who shall have caused their dissent therefrom to be entered on the minutes of the meeting at which such action was authorized, or who being absent at the time shall have promptly filed their written objection thereto with the secretary of the savings bank upon learning of such action, shall be jointly and severally liable to the savings bank in an amount equal to the amount of the unlawful dividend or interest or the unlawful withdrawal or distribution of assets. Any trustee against whom a claim shall be asserted under or pursuant to this section and who shall be held liable thereon, shall be entitled to a contribution from the other trustees who are likewise liable thereon, pro rata, according to the number of trustees. Any two or more trustees may be sued in the same action.

B. Any depositor or other corporation or person who shall accept or receive any dividend or interest, or distribution of the assets of a savings bank not authorized by this act to be made shall be individually liable to the savings bank in an amount equal to the amount so accepted or received. Any two or more of such depositors or other corporations or persons may be sued in the same action.

Comments:

This section corresponds to Section 706 of this draft.

Section 1210. Borrowing Money and Pledging Assets Therefor.—A savings bank may borrow money and may pledge or hypothecate any of its assets as security therefor, solely for the purpose of repaying deposits. Such borrowings shall not be made, except after the specific approval of a majority of all the members of the board of trustees.

Comments:

This section is new. It permits the borrowing of money and the pledging of assets only for the purpose of meeting depositors' demands, and requires specific authorization by the board of trustees. It follows the provisions in the laws of several other states, including New York, Massachusetts, Washington, and Minnesota.

Section 1211. Authorized Investments.—Except as otherwise specifically provided in this act, a savings bank shall not make any investments, except as follows:

(1) Bonds or other interest-bearing obligations[1] of the United States, or those for the payment of the principal and interest on which the faith and credit of the United States is pledged, including the bonds or other interest-bearing obligations of the District of Columbia.

(2) Farm loan bonds issued by Federal land banks operating under the provisions of the Federal Farm Loan Act, approved the seventeenth day of July, one thousand nine hundred sixteen, its amendments and supplements.[2]

(3) Bonds or other interest-bearing obligations of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, or of any State of the United States, or those for the payment of the principal and interest on which the faith and credit of this Commonwealth or of such state is pledged, provided that it has not at any time within the ten years immediately preceding the date of the purchase of such bonds or other obligations by the savings bank, defaulted in the payment of any part of any principal or interest due by it.

(4) Bonds or other-interest bearing obligations of any county, city, borough, township, school district, or other political subdivision of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, or of any city, borough, township, school district, or other political subdivision of any State of the United States, which has not within the ten years immediately preceding the date of the purchase of such bonds or other obligations by the savings bank, defaulted in the payment of any part of any principal or interest due by it; or those for the payment of the principal and interest on which the faith and credit of such political subdivision is pledged.[3]

(5) Obligations issued, assumed, or guaranteed as to principal and interest by, or equipment bonds of, any railroad corporation, whether incorporated under the laws of this Commonwealth, of any other State, or of the Dominion of Canada, provided that such railroad corporation has not at any time within the five years immediately preceding the date of the investment in such obligations or bonds by the savings banks, failed punctually to pay the matured principal and interest on all of its indebtedness, and, in addition thereto, regularly to have earned or to have paid in dividends to its shareholders, during each of such five years, an amount at least equal to four per centum upon all its outstanding capital stock.[4]

(6) The bonds of any corporation, whether incorporated under the laws of the United States, of any other State, or of the District of Columbia, which transacts the business of supplying electrical energy, artificial gas, or natural gas purchased from another corporation and supplied in substitution for, or in mixture with, artificial gas,[5] for light, heat, power, and other purposes, or which transacts any two or all of such businesses; but at least seventy-five per centum of the gross operating revenues of such corporation shall be derived from such business, and not more than fifteen per centum of the gross operating revenues shall be derived from any one kind of business other than supplying electricity and gas, and such corporation shall be subject to regulation by a public service commission, a public utility commission or any other similar regulatory body duly established by the laws of the United States, or of any State in which such corporation operates, subject to the following conditions:

(a) Such corporation shall have all the franchises necessary to operate in territory in which at least seventy-five per centum of its gross income is earned, which franchises shall either be indeterminate permits of or agreements with, or subject to the jurisdiction of, a public service commission or other duly constituted regulatory body, or shall extend at least five years beyond the maturity of such bonds; and such corporation shall file with the Department[6] and make public, in each year, a statement and a report giving the income account covering the previous fiscal year, and a balance sheet showing in reasonable detail the assets and liabilities at the end of the year.

(b) The outstanding full-paid capital stock of such corporation shall at the time of such investment[7] be equal to at least two-thirds of the total debt secured by mortgage liens on any part or all of its property, but in the case of a corporation having non-par value shares, the amount of capital which such shares represent shall be the capital as shown by the books of the corporation.

(c) Such corporation shall have been in existence for a period of not less than eight fiscal years, and at no time, within such period of eight fiscal years immediately preceding the date of such investment, shall such corporation have failed to pay promptly and regularly the matured principal and interest of all its indebtedness, direct, assumed or guaranteed, but the period of life of the corporation, together with the period of life of any predecessor corporation or corporations from which a major portion of its property was acquired by consolidation, merger, or purchase, shall be considered together in determining such required period.

(d) For a period of five fiscal years immediately preceding such investment, the net earnings of such corporation shall have averaged per year not less than twice the average annual interest charges on its total funded debt applicable to that period, and for the last fiscal year preceding such investment, such net earnings shall have been not less than twice the interest charges for a full year on its total funded debt outstanding at the time of such investment, and, for such period, the gross operating revenues of any such corporation shall have averaged per year not less than one million dollars, and such corporation shall have, for each such year, either earned an amount available for dividends, or paid an amount in dividends, equal to four per centum upon a sum equivalent to two-thirds of its funded debt.[8]

(e) In determining the qualifications of any bond under this clause, where a corporation shall have acquired its property, or any substantial part thereof, within the five years immediately preceding the date of such investment, by consolidation or by merger, or by the purchase of all or a substantial portion of the property of any other corporation or corporations, the gross operating revenues, net earnings, and interest charges of the several predecessor or constituent corporations shall be consolidated and adjusted, so as to ascertain whether the requirements of the paragraph immediately preceding this one, as to net and gross earnings and as to dividends have been complied with.

(f) The gross operating revenues and expenses of a corporation, for the purpose of this clause, shall be, respectively the total amount earned from the operation of and the total expense of maintaining and operating all property owned and operated by or leased and operated by such corporation, as determined by the system of accounts prescribed by the public service commission or public utility commission or other similar regulatory body having jurisdiction in the matter. The gross operating revenues and expenses, as defined above, of subsidiary companies may be included, provided that all the mortgage bonds, and a controlling interest in shares of such subsidiary companies are pledged as part of the security for the mortgage debt of the principal company.

The net earnings of any corporation, for the purpose of this clause, shall be the balance obtained by deducting from its gross operating revenues its operating and maintenance expenses, taxes, other than Federal and State income taxes, rentals, and provision for renewals and retirements of the physical assets of the corporation, and by adding to such balance its income from securities and miscellaneous sources, but not, however, exceeding fifteen per centum of such balance.

(g) Such bonds must be part of an issue of not less than one million dollars and must be mortgage bonds secured by a first or refunding mortgage secured by property owned and operated by the corporation issuing or assuming them, but such bonds shall be refunded by a junior mortgage providing for their retirement, the bonds under such junior mortgage shall comply with the requirements of this section, and such underlying mortgage shall be either a closed mortgage or shall remain open solely for the issue of additional bonds which are to be pledged under such junior mortgage. The aggregate principal amount of bonds secured by such first or refunding mortgage, plus the principal amount of all the underlying outstanding bonds, shall not exceed sixty per centum of the value of the physical property owned, as shown by the books of the corporation, and subject to the lien of such mortgage or mortgages securing the total mortgage debt. However, if such mortgage is a refunding mortgage, it must provide for the retirement on or before the date of their maturity of all bonds secured by prior liens on the property.

(h) The term funded debt shall be construed to mean all interest-bearing debts maturing more than one year from date of issue.[9]

(i) Not more than ten per centum of the deposits in, and other funds available for investment by, savings banks shall be loaned on and invested in bonds of such electric and gas corporations, and not more than two per centum of such deposits and other funds shall be invested in the bonds of any one such corporation. No savings bank having less than fifty per centum of its deposits or other funds available for investment, invested in bonds and mortgages upon real estate shall have the power to invest in the obligations of electric and gas corporations, covered by this clause until such time as such savings bank shall have fifty per centum of its deposits and other funds available for investment, so invested.

(7) The bonds of any corporation, whether incorporated under the laws of the United States, of any other State, or of the District of Columbia, which engages and is authorized to engage in the business of furnishing telephone service in the United States, provided that such corporation is subject to regulation by the interstate commerce commission, a public service commission, a public utility commission, or any other similar Federal or State regulatory body, duly established by the laws of the United States or by the laws of any State in which such corporation operates, subject to the following conditions:

(a) Such corporation shall have been in existence for a period of not less than eight fiscal years, and at no time, within such period of eight fiscal years immediately preceding the date of such investment, shall such corporation have failed to pay promptly and regularly the matured principal and interest of all its indebtedness, direct, assumed, or guaranteed, but the period of life of the corporation, together with the period of life of any predecessor corporation or corporations from which a major portion of its property was acquired by consolidation, merger or purchase, shall be considered together in determining the required period; and such corporation shall file with the Department, and make public, in each year a statement and a report giving the income account covering the previous fiscal year and a balance sheet showing in reasonable detail the assets and liabilities at the end of the year.

(b) The outstanding full-paid capital stock of such corporation shall at the time of such investment be equal to at least two-thirds of the total debt secured by mortgage liens on any part or all of its property.

(c) For a period of five fiscal years immediately preceding such investment, the net earnings of such corporation shall have averaged per year not less than twice the average annual interest charges on its total funded debt applicable to that period, and for the last fiscal year preceding such investment, such net earnings shall have been not less than twice the interest charges for a full year on its total funded debt outstanding at the time of such investment, and, for such period, the gross operating revenues of any such corporation shall have averaged per year not less than five million dollars, and such corporation shall have, for each such year, either earned an amount available for dividends, or paid an amount in dividends, equal to four per centum upon all of its outstanding capital stock.

(d) Such bonds must be part of an issue of not less than five million dollars and must be secured by a first or refunding mortgage, and the aggregate principal amount of bonds secured thereby, plus the principal amount of all underlying outstanding bonds, shall not exceed sixty per centum of the value of the property, real and personal, owned absolutely and subject to the lien of such mortgage. However, if such mortgage is a refunding mortgage, it must provide for the retirement of all bonds secured by prior liens on the property. Not more than thirty-three and one-third per centum of the property, constituting the specific security for such bonds, may consist of shares or unsecured obligations of affiliated or other telephone companies, or both.

(e) In determining the qualifications of any bond under this clause, where a corporation shall have acquired its property or any substantial part thereof within five years immediately preceding the date of such investment by consolidation, by merger, or by the purchase of all or a substantial portion of the property of any other corporation or corporations, the gross operating revenues, net earnings, and interest charges of the several predecessor or constituent corporations shall be consolidated and adjusted, so as to ascertain whether the requirements of this clause, as to earnings and dividends have been complied with.

(f) The gross operating revenues and expenses of a corporation, for the purpose of this clause, shall be, respectively, the total amount earned from the operation of and the total expense of maintaining and operating all property owned an doperated by or leased and operated by such corporation, as determined by the system of accounts prescribed by the Interstate Commerce Commission, or the public service commission, or the public utility commission, or any other similar Federal or State regulatory body having jurisdiction in the matter.

(g) The net earnings of any corporation, for the purpose of this clause, shall be the balance obtained by deducting from its gross operating revenues its operating and maintenance expenses, provision for depreciation of the physical assets of the corporation, taxes, other than Federal and State income taxes, rentals and miscellaneous charges, and by adding to such balance its income from securities and miscellaneous sources, but not, however, to exceed fifteen per centum of such balance.

(h) The term funded debt shall be construed to mean all interest-bearing debts maturing more than one year from date of issue.

(i) Not more than ten per centum of the deposits in, and other funds available for investment by, savings banks shall be loaned on and invested in bonds of such telephone corporations, and not more than two per cenutm of such deposits and other funds shall be invested in the bonds of any one telephone corporation. No savings bank having less than fifty per centum of its deposits or other funds available for investment, invested in bonds and mortgages upon real estate shall have the power to invest in the obligations of telephone corporations, covered by this clause until such time as such savings bank shall have fifty per centum of its deposits and other funds available for investment, so invested.[10]

(8) Bonds secured by mortgages which are first liens upon unencumbered improved real property ,including improved farm land, situated within the Commonwealth, to the extent of not more than fifty per centum of the actual value of such real property and for a term not exceeding five years. Any building which is upon, and is included in the valuation of, such real property shall be insured to the benefit of the savings bank, by the mortgagor for the term of the bond in a company which is authorized to do business in Pennsylvania and is approved by the board of trustees of the savings bank making the investment. It shall be lawful for a savings bank to renew such policy at the expense of such mortgagor from year to year or for a longer or shorter period, not, however, exceeding the term of the bond, in case the mortgagor shall fail to do so. All necessary charges and expenses paid by such savings bank for such renewals shall be paid by such mortgagor. In the event that the mortgagor shall refuse, upon demand, to pay such charges and expenses, they shall be added to the amount secured by the mortgage and shall, together with interest from the date of payment of such charges and expenses by such savings bank, constitute a lien upon the property so mortgaged. All expenses of searches, examinations, certificates of title, or appraisal of actual value, and all expenses of drawing and recording of papers shall be paid by such mortgagor. The actual value of the real property shall be determined by two reputable persons, especially familiar with real property values in the vicinity of the particular property to be appraised, selected from or approved by the board of trustees. They shall inspect the property, and shall, under oath or affirmation, state in writing that the actual value of the real property inspected, to the best of their judgment, is as stated. Such report shall be filed and preserved among the records of the savings bank.[11]

Comments:

1. Section 17 of the Act of 1889, supra, provides for investment in the "stocks or bonds of interest bearing notes" of the United States, the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, etc. This draft provides for investment in the "bonds or other interest-bearing obligations.' There seems to be no reason for continuing the provision concerning stocks. If such types of investment are still available in other states, they will be covered by the general wording of this proposed section, which is wide enough to cover any type of obligation issued by such political units, which is desirable for investment by savings banks.

2. The Act of 1917, as amended, supra, provides also for investment in Joint-stock Land Banks bonds. In view of the recent experience with such bonds, it is deemed advisable to follow the laws of New York and Massachusetts in not including them as legal investments.

3. It will be noted throughout this proposed section that to the provisions of existing law for investment in the obligations of certain political units has been added investments in obligations for which the faith and credit of such political units are pledged. This is done merely for the purpose of clarity and seems to add no new type of investment.

In speaking of the political subdivisions of this Commonwealth in the obligations of which savings banks may invest, the words "or other political subdivision" have been added. A similar addition has been made in the case of the political subdivision of other states.

4. This provision corresponds to clause (a) of the Act of 1931, supra.

5. In general the provisions of clause (6) correspond to clause (b) of the Act of 1931, supra. As few changes as possible have been made in the terminology, since it is not deemed desirable to disturb the setup established by the Act of 1931. However, certain changes seemed desirable, and in one or two cases necessary due to what probably was an oversight in the enactment of the 1931 act. In such cases changes have been made and are noted in these comments.

The words "or natural gas purchased from another corporation and supplied in substitution for, or in mixture with, artificial gas" have been supplied. These words are included in Section 239, clause 12 of the Banking Law of New York, enacted in 1928 and amended in 1932, and are added here, since it is understood that there are such corporations transacting business in this manner. There is no reason for not including them in the provisions of this proposed section.

6. The Act of 1931, supra, provides for the filing with the appropriate regulatory body of the report specified. It seems that such report should be filed with the Department, in order that it may determine whether particular corporations, in the obligations of which savings banks in this Commonwealth are investing, meet all the requirements of this proposed section. The laws of New York, supra, make a similar requirement.

7. The words "at the time of such investment" have been added in this proposed section. They were probably omitted through an oversight in the Act of 1931, supra, since they occur in clause (c) of that act (clause (7) of this proposed section) and likewise are present in the Banking Law of New York, supra.

8. It is to be noted that the measure of dividends in this proposed clause is different from that contained in clause (7) of this proposed section. This is taken from the Act of 1931, supra, and seems justified in view of the different financial setup and financial practices of electricity and gas companies, as compared with telephone companies.

9. The provisions as to funded debt has been added, as it was probably omitted from the Act of 1931, supra, in error. It corresponds exactly with clause (c) in the Act of 1931, supra, (clause (7) of this proposed section) and with the law of New York, supra, which also includes the provisions as to funded debt with regard to both types of companies.

10. The entire clause (7) is substantially similar to clause (c) of the Act of 1931, supra, except for such changes as were introduced to make this clause consistent with clause (6) of this proposed section, which changes have been discussed in the comments to that clause.

11. Section 17 of the Act of 1889, supra, provides "for investment in bonds and mortgages on unincumbered, improved real estate, situated in this State." There is no limitation as to the value of the real property in which such investment is to be made, so that an investment could legally be made to an amount many times the value of the real property given as security for it. This, of course, seems indefensible.

This proposed section has been drafted to correspond with Section 1012 of this draft, and the comments to that section explain the reasons for all the substantive changes introduced.

Section 1212. Limitation upon Loans and Discounts; Maximum Interest.—A. A savings bank shall not grant any loan, except for a period not exceeding ninety days and except on the collateral of such securities as are by this act authorized as investments for savings banks. The amount of such loan shall not exceed ninety per centum of the cash market value of such collateral. If any of the securities so held as collateral depreciate in value before the repayment of such loan, the savings bank shall forthwith require the immediate repayment of such loan or of part thereof, or the immediate furnishing of additional security, so that the amount of the loan shall at no time exceed ninety per centum of the cash market value of the securities held as collateral for it.[1]

B. A savings bank shall not discount any note, bill of exchange, draft, or other commercial paper, except in the case of any note payable within ninety days and secured in accordance with the provisions of this section, provided that the maker of such note is the borrower and the payee is the savings bank.[2]

Comments:

This draft, following the Banking Law of New York, supra, enacts these provisions concerning the granting of loans. It seems clear that where a savings bank can invest in a particular security, it should be permitted to make limited short-term loans on the security of such property. Therefore, this draft provides that a savings bank may grant any loan for a period not exceeding ninety days upon the collateral of such securities as are authorized savings bank investments, provided that the amount of such loans shall not exceed ninety per centum of the cash market value of the collateral.

2. Under existent law, savings banks do not discount commercial paper, since this is clearly a function of a commercial and not of a savings bank. The proviso of this proposed subsection merely permits a savings bank to collect interest in advance upon granting loans to borrowers. It is sufficiently limited in its scope to prevent the commercial type of discounting paper.

Section 1213. Deposit of Excess Funds.—A. A savings bank may deposit temporarily in any depository, selected pursuant to the provisions of this act, the excess of current daily receipts over investments, loans, or other lawful expenditures, until such time as such moneys can be judiciously invested in the investments authorized for savings banks by this act.

B. Whenever it shall appear to the Department that such savings bank is violating the spirit and intent of this section by keeping permanently uninvested all or an undue proceed in the manner authorized by law to compel such savings bank to cease such practice.

Comments:

This proposed section corresponds to Section 18 of the Act of 1889, supra.

Section 1214. Restriction on Ownership or Holding of Real Property by a Savings Bank.—A. Except as otherwise provided in this act, a savings bank shall not purchase, own, or hold any real property, except as follows:[1]

(1) Such real property as it occupies pursuant to the provisions of this act, for its accommodation in the transaction of its business or such real property which it partly so occupies and partly leases, pursuant to the provisions of this act.[2]

(2) Such as it shall purchase at sales under judgments, decrees, or mortgages held by it or as it shall otherwise acquire in good faith and satisfaction of debts previously contracted to it, or in order to protect an interest it may otherwise have lawfully acquired in such property.[3]

B. A savings bank shall not own or hold any real property, other than such real property as it occupies for its accommodation in the transaction of its busines or such real property as it partly so occupies and partly leases to others, pursuant to the provisions of this act for a longer period longer than five years after the acquisition of such real property, but the Department may upon application of a savings bank, grant to it in writing, the power to hold such real property for a longer period.[4]

C. A savings bank shall not permit title to any real property of which it is in fact the owner to be carried in the name of any other corporation or person.[5]

Act of May 6, 1915, P. L. 271, Section 1, 7 PS Sec. 232.

Comments:

1. This proposed section corresponds to Section 1014 of this draft.

The Act of 1889, supra, provides substantially as does Subsection A of this proposed section. Likewise the laws of most other states have a similar provision.

2. See Section 1215 of this draft.

3. This proposed clause is a catch-all in order to enable a savings bank to purchase in a sheriff's sale such property as may be necessary to protect an equity it may already have in the property, or to accept property in settlement of debts.

4. The Bank Act of 1876, supra, provided that a bank shall dispose of its real property within five years after acquiring it. It is interesting to note that the Act of 1915, supra, after reciting that real property had during the year, depreciated to an unprecedented extent and that many corporations would under existing law, be compelled to stand heavy losses on property which it had been forced to take over on mortgages, etc., provides that an additional five years shall be granted to all banking companies for the holding of real property acquired by them.

The provision of this proposed section enacts the five-year period of the Bank Act of 1876 by provision for extension of time by the Department, in order to prevent the necessity at any future time for an act like the Act of 1915, supra. This is the procedure followed also by most of the states, including New York, New Jersey, Mississippi, Kansas, Ohio, Texas, Wisconsin, Illinois, and the Federal government.

5. This proposed provision is intended to curb the increasing practice on the part of institutions to hold the propery in straw names.

Section 1215. Limitation on Bank Buildings Owned or Leased, and Furniture and Fixtures Therein.—A. The cost of the real property, including the building or buildings thereon, which a savings bank occupies for the transaction of its business, or party so occupies and partly leases to others, together with the cost of furniture and fixtures therein which belong to the savings bank, shall not at any time exceed in the aggregate twenty-five per centum of its unimpaired surplus, except with the written approval of the Department.[1] Before the purchase of such property is made or the erection of a building or buildings is commenced, the estimate of the costs thereof shall be submitted to the Department for its approval.

B. A savings bank shall not expend for the alteration, repair, or improvement of premises occupied but not owned by it, an amount which together with the cost of any real property, building or buildings, and furniture and fixtures which it owns, exceeds twenty-five per centum of its unimpaired surplus, except with the written approval of the Department. The cost of such alterations, repairs, or improvements shall be amortized during the term of such lease or occupancy, and before such alterations, repairs, or improvements are made, an estimate of the cost thereof shall be submitted to the Department for its approval.[2]

C. The foregoing provisions of this section shall not affect any real property and building or buildings, occupied, or the furniture and fixtures owned and used by a savings bank, upon the effective date of this act for the transaction of its business but such savings bank shall not, except with the approval of the Department, add to such real property, building or buildings, furniture, and fixtures, and shall not alter, repair, or improve such premises, if the cost of such additions, alterations, repairs, or improvements shall, together with any other real property and building or buildings occupied, or furniture and fixtures owned and used, by the savings bank, aggregate more than twenty-five per centum of its unimpaired surplus.[3]

D. In the case of a savings bank to be incorporated under this Act, the costs of the real property, building or buildings, furniture, and fixtures, to be owned, and the costs of additions, alterations, repairs, or improvements of premises to be leased, by such savings bank, to be occupied or used by it in the transaction of its business, shall be such as shall be approved by the Department.[4]

E. Except as otherwise provided in this act,[5] a savings bank may lease to any other corporation or person for offices or for any other legitimate purposes, premises which it owns or occupies for the transaction of its business.[6]

Act of May 21, 1901, P. L. 288, Section 1, 7 PS Sec. 233.

Comments:

1. At the present time the law of Pennsylvania is one of the very few in this country which makes no limitation on the amount which may be expended by a savings bank for the real property it occupies in the transaction of its business or partly occupies and partly leases to others for office space or apartments, and the furniture and fixtures in the buildings on such real property. The laws of most other states have imposed limitations which vary greatly both in amount and in the standard taken for computation. Several of the states in establishing a minimum for such expenditures, vest the Secretary of Banking with the discretion of permitting a particular bank or bank and trust company to exceed this limit. The limitation imposed by this proposed section is the same as that existent in the laws of New York. It seems a reasonable limitation, but the discretion of the Secretary to allow a larger expenditure in special cases is permitted in order to avoid harshness in such cases.

2. It is probably rarely, except perhaps for the early days of its existence, that a savings bank would expend as high as twenty-five per centum of its unimpaired surplus upon the premises which it has leased from the owner. However, this restriction is included in order to cover all possible situations. It seems obvious that a savings bank should not be permitted to expend on property not owned by it an amount greater than that which it may expend on its own property and building.

3. It is clear, of course, that this act cannot affect real property or furniture and fixtures which a savings bank held prior to the effective date of this act however disproportionate to its capital and surplus. However, this draft can and should apply the limitation to any additions thereto.

4. This proposed subsection is necessitated by the fact that, in the case of a savings bank to be incorporated, there will of course be no surplus.

5. See Section 203 of this draft.

6. This provision is merely a summary of that contained in the Act of 1901, supra.

Section 1216. Protection against Loss on Previous Loan or Investment.—The restrictions imposed by this act shall not be construed to prevent a savings bank, in order to protect itself from loss upon a loan or investment previously made, lawfully and in good faith, from acquiring ownership of, or otherwise taking and holding, any kind of property or security, whether real or personal. Except as otherwise provided by this act, any property so acquired, unless of the character and nature by this act authorized to be purchased or held by such savings bank, shall be sold by it within five years, but the Department may, upon application of a savings bank, grant to it, in writing, the power to hold such property for a longer period.

Comments:

This proposed section is new and corresponds to Section 1017 of this draft. A savings bank should be permitted to take almost any property, where necessary to protect a prior loan or investment made in good faith. This proposed section gives is such power. The five-year period seems long enough to dispose of almost any type of property which a savings bank would thus acquire. However, additional flexibility is provided by the power of the Department, in special cases, to grant authority to a savings bank to hold such propery for a period in excess of five years.

Section 1217. Property Acquired Before Effective Date of Act.—This act shal lnot be construed to render unlawful the continued ownership or holding by a savings bank of any loans, investments, or other real or personal property lawfully acquired prior to the effective date of this act.[1] However, such loans and investments, or such other real or personal property, shall be computed in determining the power under this act of a savings bank to grant any additional loans or make any additional investments of the same or different kinds.[2]

Comments:

This proposed section is new and corresponds to Section 1018 of this draft.

1. However undesirable an investment may be, it does not seem judicious at this time, even if it were constitutionally possible, to require savings banks to dispose of it. Many states, upon enacting banking laws restricting in a new manner legal investments, have required that the savings banks dispose of property and investments prohibited by the act within a specified period after the effective date of the act, usually one or two years, or at a time designated by the Department. This draft does not follow this policy.

2. The first sentence of this proposed section should not enable a savings bank to continue to make such investments or loans. If it is already over the limitation prescribed by this draft for a particular type of loan, it should grant no additional loans until it is within the limitation.

ARTICLE XIII

LICENSING OF PRIVATE BANKS; POWERS AND LIMITATIONS UPON POWERS OF PRIVATE BANKS; VOLUNTARY DISSOLUTIONS

Section 1301. Existent Private Banks Continued; Future Private Banks Prohibited; Death of Private Banker; Change in Partnerships.—A. Any individual, partnership, or unincorporated association lawfully engaged, upon the effective date of this act, in conducting the business of a private bank may continue to do so at the place of business which it occupies upon such date, under the circumstances prescribed and subject to the conditions imposed by this act, but, except as otherwise specifically provided in this section, no new private bank shall be established after the effective date of this act.[1]

B. An individual private banker may, in the manner provided by law and with the prior written approval of the Department,[2] form a partnership or other unincorporated association for conducting the private bank, with one or more other individuals, regardless of whether such individuals are, prior to the date of the formation of such association, authorized to engage in the business of private banking,[3] but such partnership or other unincorporated association shall procure a new certificate of authorization from the Department in the manner provided by this act.[4]

C. In case of the death of a private banker, who individually and not in partnership or association with another private banker or other private bankers, conducts a private bank, his executor or administrator shall forthwith proceed to liquidate the business of the private bank, following the the order of distribution established by this act,[5] unless the Department shall take possession of the business and property of the private bank and the Secretary of Banking shall take over possession, as receiver, and liquidate such private bank, pursuant to the provisions of law.[6] If the executor or administrator shall not begin or continue such liquidation with promptness and in a reasonable manner, the Secretary of Banking may, in the manner provided by law, take over possession from the executor or administrator and liquidate the business and property.[7]

D. A partnership, or any other unincorporated association which owns and operates a private bank, may, in the manner provided by law and with the prior written approval of the Department, admit a new partner or member into such business, but such changed partnership or other unincorporated association shall procure a new certificate of authorization from the Department in the manner provided by this act.

Neither the death nor withdrawal of a partner or a member of a partnership or other unincorporated association which owns and operates a private bank, nor the admission of a new partner or member shall change the status of an existing private bank as a partnership or other unincorporated association or work a dissolution thereof, if two or more of the remaining members elect to continue the same and assume all its obligations, nor shall the private bank be forced to dissolve if a single remaining partner or member elects to continue, but in either event, the changed partnership or other unincorporated association, or the remaining private banker, shall procure a new certificate of authorization from the Department, in the manner provided by this act.[8]

Comments:

1. The Act of June 19, 1911, supra, covers private banking in Pennsylvania. Under this act and its amendments private banks fall into three classes:

(1) Private banks licensed under Section 1 of the Act of 1911—there are at the present time nineteen such private banks of which six are in the process of liquidation.

(2) Private banks exempted under Exemption 4 of Section 8 of the Act of 1911—there is at the present time one such private bank, the United Savings and Beneficial Association conducted by the United Gas Improvement Association, solely for its employes.

(3) Private banks exempt under Exemption 6 Section 8 of the Act of 1911, i. e., which had conducted the business of private banking for a continuous period of seven years prior to the approval of the Act of 1911—as nearly as the Chief of the Private Bank Bureau of the Department can estimate, there are now approximately fifty private banks being operated in Pennsylvania under Exemption 6. Of these ten are listed in Polk's Bankers' Encyclopedia, issued September, 1932, as doing solely a brokerage business. Of the approximately forty remaining private banks in this group, nineteen are listed in Polk's as doing a banking business. It is probable that the remaining twenty-one private banks are banks owned by individuals doing a small business among the foreign element in small communities.

Private banking is rapidly becoming a thing of the past in this country. In December of 1932 the Advisory Committee appointed in Massachusetts to study the banking laws of that Commonwealth said of private banking:

"The Commission was also instructed to consider the laws relating to private banks, so-called. In this matter the task assigned was found to be very simple. Thanks to the wisdom and foresight of the Legislature in adopting section 8 of chapter 182 of the Acts of 1929, every financial house then still operating in this Commonwealth as a private bank under the authority to receive money for safe keeping prescribed by chapter 169 of the General Laws was ordered to discontinue such operation on or before July 1, 1932.

"Accordingly, on that date, the business of private banking as formerly known in Massachusetts became extinct, save only for a limited continuing right to receive money for transmission to foreign countries." This is the condition in a great majority of the states in this country.

On May 25, 1932, Thomas B. Paton, Jr., Assistant General Counsel, American Bankers Association, issued a report on private banking in the United States, based on figures and expressions of opinion by the Commissioner or other officer in charge of the respective banking departments of every state in the country and the District of Columbia. This report states that private banking is now forbidden in thirty-four states; the addition of Massachusetts to that list since that date makes thirty-five states in this country in which no new private banks can commence business. In only nine of these were private banks established prior to prohibitory legislation permitted to continue. Of the thirteen states in which private banking is permitted, four do not have any private banks at all, two have two, two have four, and one has five. The heads of the banking departments of thirty-six states replied to the questionnaire of Mr. Paton that they believed that private banking should be prohibited or that all private banks should be required to incorporate, while only two expressed opinions in favor of private banking.

The heads of the banking departments of forty-six states and the acting Comptroller of Currency, F. G. Awalt, expressed the opinion that where private banking is permitted it should be under state supervision, most of the officials stating also that it should be subject to the same examinations and limitations as incorporated banks. The Commissioners of Louisiana and Maine made no comment, but both of these states prohibit all private banking.

There does not seem to be any possible argument to justify the continued licensing of private bankers. This draft takes no such drastic action as did the laws of so many states, the most recent being Massachusetts, which prohibited all private banking after a certain date, whether such private bankers were engaged in such business prior to such date or not. This draft merely provides that new private banks shall not be established and permits all existent institutions of this kind to continue in business.

2. Section 1 of the Act of 1911, supra, creates the Board to License Private Bankers, consisting of the State Treasurer, the Secretary of the Commonwealth, and the Secretary of Banking, and Section 1603 of The Administrative Code of 1929, supra, continues this Board. There seems to be no reason to vest the supervision of private bankers in a board any more than there is reason for doing this in the case of an incorporated bank. This act, therefore, places the powers and duties with reference to private bankers in the Department, just as it does in the case of incorporated banks or bank and trust companies.

3. An individual banker, if he can procure a reliable partner, who is approved by the Department, should be permitted to do so, particularly since this will frequently mean an addition in capital and may work considerably to the benefit of depositors and other creditors. However, this provision is especially necessary in view of subsection C of this proposed section which provides that upon the death of a private banker the private bank shall be liquidated and unauthorized to continue in business.

4. See Section 1203 of this draft.

5. This procedure in the case of the death of a private banker is that followed by the Board to License Private Bankers today. In every case of the death of an individual private banker, the private bank has been liquidated and its assets distributed. This proposed provision merely enacts into law the uniform procedure of the Board to License Private Bankers.

6. See Articles V to X inclusive, of the proposed Department of Banking Code.

7. It is probable that the Secretary of Banking would have this power even without this provision. It is included, however, to make its existence perfectly clear. Without such check the executor or administrator might delay liquidation in a manner which might seriously militate against the depositors and other creditors of the private bank.

8. The board to License Private Bankers has always considered that the powers contained in this proposed subsection are implied by the Act of 1911, supra. In any event, they are clearly reasonable and are therefore included in this draft.

Section 1302. Application to be Filed with Department; Contents.—On or before the thirtieth day of December, one thousand nine hundred thirty-three, every private bank which plans to continue in business shall file with the Department a written application for a certificate of authorization.[1] Such application shall be signed in duplicate originals and verified, in the case of a private bank owned and operated by an individual, by the oath or affirmation of such individual, and in the case of a private bank owned and operated by a partnership or any other unincorporated association, by the oath or affirmation of all the partners or members of the unincorporated association. The application shall be in such form as is prescribed by the Department and shall be filed upon blanks supplied by the Department. It shall set forth;[2]

(1) The full name, residence, post office address, and citizenship of such individual or of each member of such partnership or other unincorporated association, as well as the names and post office addresses of the officers, or agents in active charge of the business of the private bank;

(2) The statement that in the case of a private bank owned by an individual, such individual is a resident of Pennsylvania, and in the case of a private bank owned by a partnership or other unincorporated association, a majority of the partners or members are residents of Pennsylvania:

(3) The name of the private bank;

(4) The exact location of the place or places of business of the private bank;

(5) In the case of a partnership or other unincorporated association, the parnership or other agreement, under which the business of the bank is being conducted;

(6) A detailed statement of the resources, liabilities, and net worth of the private bank, as well as any other information bearing upon its financial condition, which the Department shall prescribe.

Comments:

1. The date has been postponed to December 30, 1933, in order both to give all private bankers sufficient notice and also to give the Department an opportunity to communicate in so far as possible with such private bankers to prepare forms, and in general, complete plans for the taking over of the supervision of the additional private banks which would under the proposed Department of Banking Code and under this draft, come under its jurisdiction.

2. The information required by the application provided for by this proposed section corresponds substantially with that specified in Section 1 of the Act of 1911, supra. The provision for the inclusion of the partnership or other agreement under which the business of the private bank is being conducted is new. The same information is required in the application provided for in the laws of Ohio. The Department should have this information, since it may make a serious difference in the stability of a private bank that a partner is to withdraw at a certain time or that the partnership is to be dissolved upon the death of a partner, etc.

Section 1303. Issuance or Rejection of Application by Department; Certificate of Authorization.—A. The Department shall immediately upon receipt of the application of a private bank, conduct such investigation as it may deem necessary to ascertain the financial condition and responsibility of the private bank. If it shall find that the provisions of this act have been complied with and that the financial condition and responsibility of the private bank is such as to warrant a continuance of the business, it shall retain and file one of the duplicate originals of the application, and shall issue a certificate of authorization, empowering such private bank to continue in business. The remaining duplicate original and the certificate of authorization shall be sent by the Department to the private bank, which shall then have the certificate of authorization recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds of the county in which the place of business of the private bank is situated. The certificate of authorization, upon being recorded by the recorder of deeds, shall be returned to the private bank, which shall at all times be conspicuously posted in the place of business of the private bank in view of its customers. Upon proper cause shown, or upon any important change in the ownership of such private bank, or in any other fact which is contained in the certificate of authorization, the Department shall issue a new one.[1]

B. If the Department shall reject the application, it shall forthwith return it to the private bank, stating in detail its reasons for doing so. The private bank may, within thirty days after the Department gives it notice of the rejection of its application, appeal from such rejection to the Governor, who shall hear such appeal promptly, and within thirty days, thereafter, decide the mater and certify his decision to the Department. The decision of the Governor shall be conclusive and not subject to review. The Department shall act in accordance therewith.[2]

C. A private bank lawfully in existence and operation upon the effective date of this act shall, if it files the application for a certificate of authorization within the time and in the manner prescribed by this act, be permitted to remain in existence even if such application has been rejected, until it has had full opportunity to appeal to the Governor, and, if it does so appeal, until the Governor renders a decision against such private bank.

D. If a private bank does not file an application for a certificate of authorization, in accordance with the provisions of this act, or if it does so and its application is rejected by the Department, and if upon appeal to the Governor, such rejection is affirmed, such private bank shall forthwith cease transacting any banking business and shall proceed at once to liquidate its assets, following the order of distribution established by this act.[3] If such private bank does not begin or continue such liquidation with promptness and in a reasonable manner, the Department shall take possession and the Secretary of Banking shall take over possession and liquidate as receiver, in the manner provided by law.[4]

Comments:

1. This proposed section providing for the issuance of a certificate of authority is similar to the license provided for in Section 1 of the Act of 1911, supra. In accordance with the comment made in footnote 2 to Section 1301 of this draft, the authority to refuse a license is vested by the Act of 1911 in the Board to License Private Bankers whereas in this draft it is placed in the Department, subject to review by the Governor. Section 1 of the Act of 1911 provides for advertisement before the granting of license. This draft omits such advertising since in every instance the application will be for a certificate of authorization to an existent private bank. This involves no substantive change in statutes necessitating advertisement.

2. The procedure upon the refusal of the Department to issue a certificate of authorization provided by this proposed section corresponds with that provided in the case of refusal to issue a certificate of incorporation in the case of an incorporated institution. See Section 306 of this draft.

3. See Section 1312 of this draft.

4. See Articles V to X of the proposed Department of Banking Code. It is probable that the Secretary of Banking would have this power without this provision. It is included however, to make its existence perfectly clear. Without such check the private banker might delay liquidation in a manner which might seriously militate against the depositors and other creditors of the private bank.

Section 1304. Bonds or Securities Furnished by Private Banks; Depreciations or Substitutions.—A. Except as otherwise specifically provided in this act,[1] every private bank shall furnish to the Department a bond to the Commonwealth, executed, in the case of a private bank owned by an individual by such individual owner, and in the case of a private bank owned by a partnership or other unincorporated association, by all the partners or members thereof, and by a surety or sureties authorized to give surety bonds in this Commonwealth and approved by the Department. Such bond shall be conditioned upon the faithful holding and repayment by the private bank, in accordance with the privisions of this act of all moneys deposited with it, or the payment of all claims by this act given a priority over, or placed on a parity with, deposits in the order of distribution in the event of liquidation of the business and property of such private bank, and, in the event of the bankruptcy of the private bank, or of a formal determination by the Secretary of Banking after taking possession of such private bank as receiver, to liquidate its business and property, upon the payment of the full amount of the bond to the assignee, receiver, or trustee in bankruptcy of the private bank, or the Secretary of Banking as receiver thereof, as the case may be, to be used to pay in full in the manner provided by law, all depositors and all claimants by this act given priority over, or placed on a parity with, depositors in the order of distribution in the event of liquidation.[3]

B. In lieu of the bond of a surety or seureties required by this section, the Department may accept a collateral bond of the private bank, secured by an actual deposit with the Department of money to the full amount of the bond, or of securities to such amount, which shall consist of interest-bearing obligations of the United States government, of this Commonwealth, or which shal consist of any other securities approved by the Department. Such collateral bond shall be conditioned upon the same terms and in the same manner as is provided by this section in the case of a bond given by a surety or sureties, and the securities deposited therewith shall constitute a trust fund for the depositors, and for all claimants by law given a priority over, or placed on a parity with, depositors in the order of distribution in the event of liquidation of the business and property of such private bank.[3]

Any moneys or securities deposited with the Department by a private bank in accordance with the provisions of this article, shall constitute a trust fund for the benefit of the depositors, and of the claimants by this act given a priority over, or placed on a parity with, depositors in the order of distribution upon liquidation. Other creditors shall not have any rights whatsoever against such moneys and securities. However, if the business and property of the private bank is being liquidated by the Secretary as receiver, or by the private banker or private bankers owning such private bank, such other creditors may be paid out of such moneys and securities after the claimants on whose behalf such moneys and securities constitute a trust fund have been paid in full.[4]

C. Whenever it shall appear to the Department that the bond or the securities of a private bank, given to the Department under the provisions of this section, have depricated in value so that their present value is below the amount required by this section to be filed with it by such private bank, the Department may, in the manner provided by law,[5] require such private bank to make good the deficiency.

D. All surety bonds, and all collateral bonds together with the moneys or securities given as collateral therefor, received by the Department from private banks, shall be transmitted by the Department to the State Treasurer for safe-keeping, subject to withdrawal in whole or in part, at any time, by the Department.[6]

E. The amount of the bond or of the securities required by this section shall be equal to seventy-five per centum of the total deposits of the private bank, plus seventy-five per centum of the total claims by law given priority over, or placed on a parity with, deposits in the order of distribution in the event of liquidation, but the amount of such bond or securities shall not in any case be less than ten thousand dollars nor more than fifty thousand dollars.[7] A private bank which maintains more than one place of business, in accordance with the privisions of this act, shall furnish an additional bond or additional security to an amount of ten thousand dollars for each such additional place of business which it operates.[8]

F. The Department may accept, in lieu of the bonds or securities required by this act, any bond or collateral bond secured by money or other securities, which a private bank has filed with the Department of Banking or with any other State department in accordance with the provisions, of an act approved the nineteenth day of June, one thousand nine hundred elevtn (Pamphlet Laws, one thousand sixty), entitled "An act to provide for licensing and regulating private banking in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania; and providing penalties for violation thereof," its amendments and supplements, provided that such bond or securities are to an amount equal to that required by this act, or will, in addition to any other bond or securities filed by the private bank, equal such amount.

G. The Department may likewise grant to any private bank the authority to substitute for any bond or any collateral deposited with it, another bond or other collateral, provided that such other bond or collateral meets all the requirements of this act.

H. The Department may grant a reduction of the bond or collateral of any private bank, deposited with it, if after an examination, it shall appear to the Department that as a result of withdrawals, or of partial or total liquidation, or otherwise, a decrease in the deposits of such private bank, or in the claims by law given priority over, or placed on a parity with, such deposits in the order of distribution in the event of liquidation, warrants such reduction, but a bond or collateral shall not be reduced to less than ten thousand dollars in any case until it shall appear to the Department, after careful examination, that all depositors, and all claimants, who by law are given priority over, or are placed on a parity with, depositors in the order of distribution upon liquidation have been paid in full, and that such private bank has ceased to engage in a bank business.[9]

Comments:

1. See Section 1307 of this draft.
2. This proposed section imposes the provision of Section 1 of the Act of 1911, supra, as to bonds or securities. However, the condition of the bond is changed somewhat to make clear the fact that claims having the status of deposits may be paid out of the bond. The other changes in this section are made for purposes of clarification or for purposes of uniformity with the provisions of this draft.
3. This proposed subsection likewise corresponds in part to the requirement of Section 1 of the Act of 1911. For a discussion of the changes in this proposed subsection see footnote 2, supra.
4. This proposed paragraph corresponds substantially to the provisions of Section 1 of the Act of 1911 but is more detailed.
5. See Sections 501-505 of the proposed Department of Banking Code.
6. This subsection corresponds to the procedure prescribed by Section 1 of the Act of 1911 except that it has been expanded somewhat.
7. Section 1 of the Act of 191, supra, fixes the minimum amount of the bond at ten thousand dollars and the maximum amount at fifty thousand dollars, but does not specify the manner in which the amounts of such bonds shall be determined. This proposed section enacts into law, the practice which his been followed under the Act of 1911 by the Board to Licnese Private Bankers. The minimum and the maximum are maintained at the same figures as those established by the Act of 1911.
8. This proposed provision also enacts into law the practice which has been followed by the Board to License Private Bankers, that is, requiring an additional bond of ten thousand dollars for every branch operated by by a private banker.
9. The remaining provisions of this section are clarifications upon or expansions of the Act of 1911.

Section 1305. Exemption from Publishing of Reports; Additional Bond or Securities.—A private bank may be exempted from the requirement of law that it publish in a newspaper or newspapers in the manner provided by law abstract summaries of two of its reports designated for that purpose by the Department, if it shall furnish to the Department, in addition to any other bond required by this act, a surety bond, or a collateral bond secured by money or securities. Such surety bond, or collateral bond secured by money or securities, shall meet all the requirements established by this act for the original bond to be furnished by private banks.

Comments:

Certain private banks conduct a business which is of no interest to the general public. For example there is one which accepts deposits only from the employes of a certain concern. It seeems desirable to permit such private banks to be exempted from the requirements of publishing reports. This proposed section accomplishes this result.

Section 1306. Interest upon Securities Deposited with Department.—The private bank shall be entitled, upon making request, to all moneys received by the State Treasurer as interest or dividends upon any securities deposited by such private bank with the Department, and by it transmited to the State Treasurer for safe-keeping, in accordance with the provisions of this article.

Comments:

This section corresponds substantially with Section 1 of the Act of 1911, supra.

Section 1307. Exemption from Filing of Bond or Securities.—A. A private bank which shall appear, upon careful examination by the Department, to have an unimpaired net worth of at least one hundred thousand dollars, shall, so long as such net worth of one hundred thousand dollars shall remain unimpaired, be exempted from the duty of furnishing to the Department the surety bond, or the collateral bond secured by money or securities, required by this article, but this shall not be construed to exempt such private bank from furnishing the surety bond, or the collateral bond secured by money or securities, to the amount of twenty-five thousand dollars, required by this article to be furnished by any private bank desiring to be exempted from the requirement of law that it publish during each year, in a newspaper or newspapers in the manner provided by law, abstract summaries of any two of its reports designated for this purpose by the Department.[1]

B. Whenever it shall appear to the Department that such net worth of such private banker has become impaired below one hundred thousand dollars, and has remained so impaired for a period of fourteen days, or such longer period as the Department shall allow, but not exceeding ninety days, it shall forthwith require such private bank to furnish the surety bond, or the collateral bond secured by moneys or securities, required by this article.

Comments:

The laws of Connecticut, New York and Ohio, establish minimum "capital" requirements. "Capital" really corresponds to "net worth," as defined herein. This proposed section is intended to permit private banks with an unimpaired "capital" of one hundred thousand dollars to be relieved from the necssity of furnishing a bond. This seems justified by the fact that a private bank with an unimpaired capital of one hundred thousand dollars seems to afford a sufficient margin of security to the depositors or other creditors to justify the elimination of the bond requirement.

Section 1308. Accumulation of Reserve against Deposits.—The certificate of authorization provided for in this article shall not be granted to any private bank until it shall have a reserve fund for deposits and other demand liabilities to an amount equal to fifty per centum of that required by this act for all institutions. Within sixty days after the date of the issuance of the certificate of authorization, such private bank shall have added at least twenty-five per centum to such reserve fund, and by the first day of June, one thousand nine hundred thirty-four, it shall have the full reserve fund required by this act. Thereafter the entire amount of such reserve fund shall be at all times maintained and kept on hand in the manner provided by this act for all institutions.

Comments:

It seems unjust to require that all private banks, in order to procure a certificate of authorization, have the full reserve required by this act, since those not under supervision prior to this act have never been required to maintain any reserve fund. This act therefore follows the general plan provided by Section 6 of the Act of May 8, 1907, P. L. 189, 7 PS Sec. 356 which in imposing upon all incorporated institutions the duty to establish and maintain reserves, likewise permitted the accumulation of such reserves.

Section 1309. Segregation of Assets; Title to be Carried in Name of Private Bank; Loans to Owners or Members of Private Bank.—A. All real or personal property and all evidence of title therto, which constitute the assets of a private bank shall be segregated and kept apart from the property and assets belonging to the owner or owners thereof in their individual capacities. All such real or personal property owned by a private bank, shall be carried in the name of such private bank. If such name is the same as that of the individual owner, or in the case of a partnership or other unincorporated association, any of the owners thereof, all property of the private bank shall be carried in such name, with the addition of the descriptive words "private bank". In such case all deeds, mortgages, assignments, contracts, and agreements, received, taken, or entered into by any such private bank, shall be received, taken, or entered into in the name of such private bank with the addition of the descriptive words "private bank".

B. A private banker shall not appropriate to his own use any part of the deposits or moneys received for transmission by private bank or in the case of a private bank which maintains a net worth of an established amount in lieu of furnishing a bond or securities to the Department, any moneys or assets which would reduce such net worth below the minimum required by this act. Loans which have, prior to the efiffective date of this act been granted by a private bank directly or indirectly to the owner or owners thereof, shall not be included as assets upon the books or other records, or in any statement of the financial condition, of such private bank.

For the purposes of this section, a loan to a partnership or other unincorporated association of which the owner, or owners, of a private bank is a member, or to a corporation of which such owner or owners individually or together, own twenty-five per centum of the capital, shall be construed to be a loan to such owner or owners.[2]

C. A private bank shall not lend to any person with whom the owner or any of the owners of such private bank are associated as co-partners or as co-members of any other unincorporated association, nor make any investment in any business conducted by a partnership or other unincorporated association of which the owner or any of the owners of such private bank are partners or members, nor grant any loan directly or indirectly to any corporation of which the owner, or all the owners combined, of such private bank, are the legal or equitable owners to the amount of twenty-five per centum or more of the capital of such corporation.[3]

Comments:

1. The reasons for this proposed section are obvious. It corresponds substantially with that in the laws of most of the other states which still permit private banking.

The laws of New York require that all deeds, mortgages, assignments, contracts and agreements be received, taken, or entered into in the name of the private banker, without the addition of the descriptive words "private banker" or "private bankers" regardless or whether the name of the private bank corresponds to that of the owner or owners thereof. The provisions of this proposed section are not so drastic as that.

2. The provisions of this proposed section likewise correspond in part to the provisions in the laws of several other states. However, the provision for loans made prior to the effective date of this act to a private banker is not in the laws of other states, because, for example, New York does not permit any such loans. It does not seem desirable to interfere with any arrangement between the partners who are co-owners of a private bank, which was made prior to the effective date of this act, but it dos seem wise to provide that such loans shall not be carried as assets on the books or other records of the private bank.

3. This proposed subsection corresponds to the provisions of the law of New York which covers private bankers. In the case of a private bank, there is no such restraining influence as a board of directors or shareholders. This limitation, therefore, seems necessary and wise.

Section 1310. Powers of Private Banks; Loans and Investments; Restrictions.—A. Except as otherwise specifically provided in this article, and except for the general corporate owners, which are given by this act to a bank, a private bank shall have all the powers which are by this act granted to a bank, subject to the same restrictions and limitations as are imposed upon a bank by this act, in so far as such restrictions and limitations are applicable. A private bank shall have the power to make the same types of loans, discounts, and investments as are permitted to banks by this act, subject to the same limitations, and it shall not have power to make any loans, discounts, and investments. Where any restriction or limitation is imposed upon the aggregate loans or investments which may be made by a bank, or upon the amount of such loans or investments which may be made to, or in the obligations of, a single corporation or person, or upon the cost of the real property and buildings occupied, and the furniture and fixtures used, for the transaction of business, or where any other restriction or limitation is made, based upon a percentage of the capital and surplus of a bank, such percentage shall be computed in the case of a private bank, upon its net worth.[1]

B. This section shall not be construed to render unlawful the continued ownership or holding by a private bank of any investments, loans, or other real or personal property lawfully acquired prior to the effective date of this act. However, such loans and investments, or such other real or personal property shall be computed in determining the power under this act of a private bank to grant any additional loans or make any additional investments of the same or different kinds.[2]

Comments:

1. Heretofore the laws of Pennsylvania have been silent on the question of the loans and investments permitted by private bankers. This seems wholly unjustified. The Commonwealth should have the same interest in protecting the depositors and other creditors of private banks, as it has in the case of incorporated institutions. If the uniformly accepted doctrine that certain investments are sound and that only by restricting banking institutions to such investments can sound banking be assured, the doctrine is equally applicable to private banks. The laws of Connecticut and Indiana, likewise apply substantially all of the limitations which apply in the case of incorporated banks to private bankers; the laws of New York apply many of them.

2. This subsection corresponds to Section 1018 of this draft which applies to banks and bank and trust companies. As in the case of incorporated institutions, the laws of some states in the case of private banks likewise require that all loans or investments prohibited by a subsequent act be disposed of within a specified period. For the same reasons that are stated in Section 1018 of this draft, this proposed section does not follow the policy of such states.

The provision for computing all loans and investments, or other real and personal property, whether required before or after the effective date of this act, in determining the power of a private bank to grant any additional loans or make any additional investments, corresponds to the provision in Section 1018 of this draft. It is included here for the reasons stated in the footnotes to that section.

Section 1311. Conversion of Private Bank into Incorporated Bank or Bank and Trust Company; Rights of Depositors and Other Creditors; Release of Bond or Securities.—A. A private bank lawfully doing business in this Commonwealth may, with the consent of the Department, be converted into a bank or a bank and trust company by complying with all the provisions of this act, including advertisement in a newspaper, which govern the incorporation of banks and of bank and trust companies. However, such assets of the private bank as shall be approved for that purpose by the Department, may be accepted in payment of the capital, or of any portion thereof, of the bank or bank and trust company to be formed. Assets which the Department shall thus approve for transfer shall be carried at their true value, such value to be determined by an appraisement made under the supervision of the Department by any person or persons selected by the Department.[1]

B. Upon the incorporation of a private bank, pursuant to the provisions of this section, its assets of every kind, including its real and personal property and its choses in action, shall be deemed to be transferred to and vested in such incorporated bank or bank and trust company without the execution of any deed, transfer, or assignment, and the bank or bank and trust company shall hold them in the same manner and to the same extent as did the private bank.

C. The rights of the depositors and other creditors of such private bank shall not be impaired in any manner by such incorporation nor shall any liabilities or obligations of any kind, due or become due, or any claim or demand existing against such private bank, be in any manner released or impaired thereby. The bank or the bank and trust company into which such private bank has been incorporated shall succeed to and be responsible to pay and discharge all obligations and liabilities in the same manner as though such bank or bank and trust company had itself incurred the obligation or liability. Law suits or other proceedings pending upon the date of such conversion before any court, in which such private bank is a party, shall not be deemed to have abated or to be discontinued by reason of such incorportation, but they may be prosecuted to final judgment in the same manner as if such private bank had not been so converted, and the bank or the bank and trust company may be substituted in place of the private bank by order of the court in which such proceedings may be pending. Such bank or bank and trust company shall likewise be subject to suit in any court having jurisdiction, upon any cause of action against such converted private bank, in the same manner as if such cause of action had originated against such bank or bank and trust company.[2]

D. The surety bond, or the collateral bond and the money or securities securing it, if any shall have been filed by such private bank in accordance with the provisions of this act, may be released by the Department upon receipt of a certified copy of a resolution of the board of directors of the bank or the bank and trust company, assuming on behalf of the bank or the bank and trust company, all liabilities of the private bank.[3]

Comments:

1. As stated in footnote 1 to Section 1201 the overwhelming majority of officials who responded to the American Bankers' Association's questionnaire on private banking favored conversion of private banks into incorporated banks or bank and trust companies. This proposed section makes provision for such conversion. This draft requires that the capital of a bank or a bank and trust company be paid in full before it can commence business. This provision is not changed by this proposed section, but it seems only fair to permit the worthwhile assets of a private bank to be considered payment or part payment of the capital thereof. This merely enacts into law the practice which has been followed by the Board to License Private Bankers.

The limitation as to the appraisement and the approval of the Department is a safeguard against the transfer of worthless or frozen assets to capital of the bank or bank and trust company.

2. The provisions as to rights of depositors and other creditors, the continuation of law suits, and similar matters in this section correspond substantially to those contained in the sections of this draft which govern conversion of a bank or bank and trust company into a national bank.

3. This proposed section enacts into law the practice established by the Board to License Private Bankers. It permits the release of a bond without the necessity of liquidating the deposit liability of the private bank.

Section 1312. Voluntary Dissolution; Distribution of Assets.—A. In the case of a private bank owned by an indivdual, such individual, or in the case of a private bank owned by a partnership or other unincorporated association, or as many of such partners or members as may under the partnership or other agreement, make such decision, may elect voluntarily to liquidate its business and property in the following manner.

Such private banker or bankers, as the case may be, shall notify the Department of their intention to dissolve and liquidate. If it shall appear to the Department that the bond or securiies, if any, of the private bank, which are deposited with the Department, together with the other assets of such private bank, will probably be insufficient to pay in full its depositors and other creditors, the Department may take possession of the busines and property of the private bank and the Secretary may take over possession and liquidate as receiver, in the manner provided by law.[1]

If the Department shall authorize the private banker or private bankers to liquidate the business and property of the private bank, such private banker or bankers shall publish a notice of such liquidation in one newspaper of general circulation and one legal newspaper once a week for three successive weeks.

B. The following shall be the order followed by a private banker or private bankers, in distributing the assets of a private bank, in pursuance of a voluntary plan of liquidation:

First, Any reasonable expenditure actually made by such private banker or bankers as a necessary incident to the liquidation of the business or property of the private bank; any fee or other debt owing to the Department of examinations, other services rendered, or penalties incurred prior to the taking possession by the Secretary as receiver; any depositor or other claim of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania; and any other claim which is given a preference by law.

Second, Any deposit and any interest due therefrom which has been or should have been, credited to such deposit, prior to the date of the authorization to liquidate by the Department, whether subject to withdrawal by check or by any other method not requiring notice, or to withdrawal only after notice or after the expiration of a fixed period, whether or not such notice has been given or such period has expired at the date of distribution; any holder of a certified check drawn on the private bank; any holder of a certificate of a deposit of the private bank which evidences an actual deposit of moneys in such private bank, and any interest which may be due thereon, whether such certificate of deposit is payable upon demand, or is payable only after notice or after the expiration of a fixed period, whether or not such notice has been given or such period has expired at the date of distribution; any holder of a check or draft of the private bank, which has been given in exchange for, or in payment of, a check or draft drawn on the private bank by a depositor therein, or which has otherwise been charged to the account of a depositor therein, provided that the amount of such check or draft does not exceed the balance to the credit of such depositor; any amount of money delivered to the private bank for transmission, which has not yet been delivered to the payee.

Third, Any claim of a creditor of the private bank not listed in any other category under this section.

Fourth, Any money or other assets of the private bank still remaining in the hands of the private banker or private bankers which belong to him or to them, as the case may be.

Every claim enumerated in this subsection shall have the same rank and priority as every other claim in the same numbered paragraph regardless of the order in which such claims are enumerated.[2]

C. After the assets have been completely liquidated, or the depositors and other creditors have been paid in full, the certificate of authorization shall be forever forfeited and such private bank shall not be authorized under any circumstances ever to commence business again in this Commonwealth. Notice of such completion of liquidation, or of such payment in full of the depositors and other creditors of a private bank, shall be filed in duplicate orignals by the private banker or private bankers, as the case may be, with the Department. The Department shall send one of the duplicate originals to the recorder of deeds in the county, in which the place of business of the private bank had been located who shall record such notice without fee thereof.

D. Besides any other criminal or civil penalty or liability which may be provided by law, any private banker or private bankers, as the case may be, who shall not comply with the provisions of this section, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and shall, upon conviction thereof, each be subject to a fine not exceeding five thousand dollars; the shall also be subject to a further fine of a sum equal to any amount of money to the extent of which they have directly or indirectly benefitted by such violation.

Comments:

1. See Articles VI to X, inclusive, in the proposed Department of Banking Code.
2. The order of distribution established by this act is very similar to that provided in Section 1 of the Act of 1911, supra, for the insolvency of a private bank. Several changes have, however, been introduced to make the order of distribution in this proposed section coincide with that followed by the Secretary of Banking in liquidating a private bank as receivers, see Section 1011 of the proposed Department of Banking Code.

ARTICLE XIV

Merger, Consolidation, Or Conversion; Incorporated Institutions; National Banking Associations

Section 1401. Merger or Consolidation; Incorporated Institutions; National Banking Associations.—A. Any two or more incorporated institutions, the places of business of which are located within the same city, borough, or township, other than savings banks, may, in the manner hereinafter provided in this act, be merged into one of such incorporated institutions, hereinafter designated as the surviving incorporated institution, or consolidated into a new incorporated institution to be formed under this act.

B. Any two or more savings banks, the places of business of which are located in the same city, borough, or township, may, in the manner hereinafter provided in this act, be merged into one of such savings banks, hereinafter designated as the surviving savings bank, or consolidated into a new savings bank to be formed under this act.

C. One or more banks or banks and trust companies, and one or more national banking associations incorporated under the laws of the United States, all of which are located in the same city, borough, or township, may, in the manner hereinafter provided in this act, be merged into one of such banks or bank and trust companies, or consolidated into a new bank or bank and trust company to be formed under this act. No such merger or consolidation shall become effective until the national banking association shall have complied with the laws of the United States relating to such merger or consolidation of national banking associations with banks or bank and trust companies and the comptroller shall have given his approval.

Comments:

Preliminary Note to Article XV: The Act of 1909, supra, applies to banks and bank and trust companies. The Act of 1923, supra, applies when the surviving incorporated institution is a bank or a bank and trust company and deals with the transfer of the trust estates and the appointment of substituted fiduciaries. The Act of April 26, 1906, supra, is concerned with the same problem. The Act of April 16, 1929, deals with a merger of a national banking association with a bank or bank and trust company, in which the surviving corporation is the bank or bank and trust company.

At the outset it is to be noted that the Act of 1909, supra, and the other Pennsylvania acts, have always seemed to use the words "consolidate" and "merge" synonymously. However, the two words have different technical meanings. In a merger, only one of the constituent corporations survives, whereas the others lose their identities, while in a consolidation all the constituent corporations lose their identies and a new corporation springs up in their place. This draft, like the proposed Business Corporation Law, makes a clear distinction between a merger and a consolidation. Preliminarily it may be pointed out also, that the merger or consolidation of a national banking association with a bank or a bank and trust company has been considered in the same sections as the merger and consolidation of state institutions. This is because it is felt that, except for the allowance to be made for difference in the Federal law governing the national banking association, prior to the completion of the plan of merger or conversion, the problem is very much the same in that the ultimate corporation will be a Pennsylvania corporation.

The present article, for the sake of uniformity, follows in so far as possible, Article IX of the proposed Business Corporation Law, which deals with merger and consolidation of business corporations. The provisions of that proposed act have been drafted after a careful study of recent codifications of corporation laws in the various states, and of the Uniform Act adopted by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws. It seems unnecessary in this draft to give the citations and discuss the reasons for these changes, since they are fully and adequately discussed therein. In addition, the present article follows the procedure adopted in Article V of the draft on the formation of incorporated institutions and Article VIII of this draft on the amendment of the articles of incorporated institutions. Here, as in those two articles, the Department of State is retained as the clearing house for merger or consolidation; the Department of Banking is established as the authority to approve the substantive elements of the merger or consolidation. In Article V of this draft, the footnotes discussed in detail the reasons for this procedure. These comments, too, are therefore not repeated in this article.

The existent merger or consolidation acts, supra, do not restrict the localities within which the two institutions must be situated before they can merge. New York restricts the mergers or consolidations to institutions both of which are situated in the same county. This draft restricts such merger or consolidation to those which are situated in the same city, borough, or township. It is rarely that there can be any possible justification for the merger or consolidation of a bank with another bank which is situated many miles distant. If both institutions are to remain going institutions, this would, of course, be contary to the "branch bank law." See Section 204 of this draft. If not, they cannot usually hope to carry with them the depositors. Merger or consolidation has always been restricted to institutions of substantially the same type. It seems that the rule that they be located in at least the same city, borough, or township is equally desirable.

Section 1402. Approval of Joint Plan of Merger or Consolidation.—A. In the case of a proposed merger or consolidation of two or more incorporated institutions, or of one or more banks or bank and trust companies and one or more national banking associations the board of directors or trustees, whichever the case may be, of each of the incorporated institutions and national banking associations shall, by resolution adopted by vote of at least a majority of all the members of each board of directors, or by a two-thirds vote of those present at a meeting of each board of trustees, approve a joint plan of merger or consolidation, as the case may be, setting forth the terms and conditions of the merger or consolidation and the mode of carrying the same into effect, and such other details and provisions as are deemed necessary. In the case of banks, and bank and trust companies, or national banking associations, it shall also set forth the manner and basis of converting the shares of each institution into shares of the surviving or new institution, as the case may be.

B. The board of directors of each bank, bank and trust company or national banking association, upon approving such plan of merger or plan of consolidation in accordance with the provisions of this act, shall, by resolution, direct that the plan be submitted to a vote of the shareholders of such banks, bank and trust company, or national banking association entitled to vote thereon, at an annual or special meeting of the shareholders.

The board of trustees of each savings bank, upon approving such plan of merger or plan of consolidation in accordance with the provisions of this act, shall, by resolution, direct that the plan be submitted to a vote of the board at a designated regular or special meeting at least fifteen days thereafter.

Written notice shall, not less than fifteen days before such meetings, be given respectively to each shareholder of record or to each trustee who was not present at the meeting at which the resolution providing for the meeting was adopted. The notice shall state the place, day, hour, and purpose of the meeting, and a copy or a summary of the plan of merger or plan of consolidation, as the case may be, shall be included in or enclosed with such notice. Such notice shall also be published once a week for two consecutive weeks before such meeting in at least one newspaper of general circulation.

C. In the case of banks, bank and trust companies, or national banking associations, the plan of merger or consolidation shall be ratified upon receiving the affirmative vote of the holders of at least a majority of the outstanding shares entitled to vote thereon of each of the merging or consolidating corporations, and in the case of savings banks, by the affirmative vote of two-thirds of all the trustees in each savings bank.

Section 1403. Articles of Merger or Consolidation.—Upon the approval, pursuant to the provisions of this act, of the plan of merger or the plan of consolidation by the shareholders of each of the banks, bank and trust companies, or national banking associations, or by the trustees of each of the savings banks desiring to merge or consolidate, triplicate originals of articles of merger or articles of consolidation, as the case may be, shall be executed under the seal of each corporation by two duly authorized officers of each corporation and shall set forth:

(1) The name of the surviving or new incoprorated institution.

(2) The exact location of the place or places of business of the surviving or new incorporated institution.

(3) The time and place of the meeting of the directors or trustees at which the plan of merger or consolidation was proposed, and the time and place of the meeting of the shareholders or of the trustees of each corporation at which the plan of merger or consolidation, as the case may be, was ratified, the kind and period of notice given to the shareholders, or to the trustees who had not attended the meeting at which the merger or consolidation plan was, by resolution proposed, and the total vote by which the plan was adopted.

(4) In the case of a merger any changes desired to be made in the articles of the surviving incorporated institution, or, in the case of a consolidation, all of the statements required by this act to be set forth in the original articles in the case of the formation of such an incorporated institution.

(5) The number, names, and addresses of the persons to be the first directors or trustees of the surviving or new incorporated institution.

(6) The plan of merger or consolidation.

Section 1404. Filing of Articles of Merger or Consolidation; Payment of Fees; Approval by Department of State.—A. The triplicate originals of the articles of merger or articles of consolidation, as the case may be, and the proof of publication of the advertisement, required by this act shall be delivered to the Department of State.

B. In addition to any bonus fees, taxes, and charges provided by law in the case of any corporation, an incorporated institution shall pay to the Department of State such reasonable fees, as shall be established by rule and regulation by the Department of Banking for the investigation made by the Department of Banking pursuant to the provisions of this act, to determine whether the articles of merger or articles of consolidation, as the case may be, should be approved. Such fee for the investigation by the Department of Banking shall be paid to the Department of State at the time of the filing with it of the articles of merger or articles of consolidation, and shall be paid by the Department of State, through the Department of Revenue, into the Banking Department Fund.

C. The Department of State shall examine such articles of merger or articles of consolidation and such other proof of publication to determine whether they contain all the information and are in the form required by this act, and also whether the name of the surviving or new incorporated institution, as the case may be, conforms with the requirements of law for the name of such an incorporated institution, or, if the name is not the same as either or any of the merging or consolidating instiutions, whether it is the same as one already adopted or reserved by another corporation or person, or is so similar thereto that it is likely to mislead the public.

After all the bonus fees, taxes, and other charges have been paid as required by law, if the articles of merger or articles of consolidation and the proof of publication contains the information and are in the form required by this act the Department of State shall endorse its approval upon each of the triplicate originals of the articles of merger or articles of consolidation and shall forthwith transmit them to the Department of Banking.

D. If the Department of State shall disapprove the articles of merger or the articles of consolidation pursuant to this act, it shall forthwith give notice thereof to the incorporated institution, stating in detail its reasons for doing so, and stating how such institution can remedy the nonconformance with the provisions of this act. Upon remedying the defect such incorporated institution may in the same manner file the same or amended articles whichever the particular case may require.

Section 1405. Approval of Articles of Merger or Consolidation by Department of Banking.—A. The Department of Banking shall immediately upon the receipt from the Department of State of the articles of merger or articles of consolidation, conduct such examination is it may deem necessary to ascertain from the best sources of information at its command:

(1.) Whether the name of the surviving or new incorporated institution is likely to mislead the public as to its character or purpose.

(2.) Whether the consolidation or merger is made for legitimate purposes.

(3.) Whether the interests of the depositors or other creditors, and in the case of a bank or a bank and trust company, the shareholders are adequately protected.

(4.) Whether the surviving or new incorporated institution meets all the requirements of this act, and violates none of its prohibitions, applicable to a bank, bank and trust company, or a savings bank, as the case may be, incorporated under this act.

(5.) Whether, where a national baking association is one of the parties of the merger or consolidation, it has complied with the requirements of the laws of the United States, and the merger or consolidation has been approved by the comptroller.

B. Within thirty days after the receipt of the articles of merger or articles of consolidation from the Department of State, the Department of Banking shall, upon the basis of the facts disclosed by the investigation provided for by this section, either approve or disapprove such articles. It shall immediately notify the Department of State in writing of its action. If it shall approve the articles of merger or articles of consolidation, it shall sign its approval upon the triplicate originals. It shall retain one of the triplicate originals and return the other two to the Department of State.

C. If the Department of Banking disapproves the articles of merger or the articles of consolidation, it shall return them to the Department of State stating in detail its reasons for doing so. The Department of State shall immediately give notice to the corporations desiring to merge or consolidate, of the action of the Department of Banking and of the reasons therefor as stated to it by the Department. Such corporations may, within thirty days after the Department of State sends them notice of the disapproval of their articles of merger or articles of consolidation; appeal from such disapproval to the Governor who shall hear such appeal promptly, and shall within thirty days thereafter, decide the matter and certify his decision to the Department of Banking. The decision of the Governor shall be conclusive and not subject to review. The Department of Banking shall act in accordance therewith.

Section 1406. Issuance of Certificate of Merger or Certificate of Consolidation.—Immediately upon receipt of the two signed triplicate originals of the articles of merger or the articles of consolidation of an incorporated institution from the Department of Banking, the Department of State shall file and record one of them and shall issue a certificate of merger or a certificate of consolidation. The remaining triplicate of the articles of merger or articles of consolidation and the certificate of merger or consolidation shall be sent by the Department of State to the surviving or new incorporated institution, as the case may be which shall then have the articles of merger or the articles of consolidation recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds in the county in which the principal place of business of the incorporated institution is situated. The triplicate original of the articles of merger or articles of consolidation, upon being recorded by the recorder of deeds, shall be returned to the incorporated institution.

Section 1407.—Effect of Merger or Consolidation.—Upon the merger or consolidation becoming effective, the several corporations parties to the plan of merger or consolidation shall be a single incorporated institution, which, in the case of a merger, shall be that incorporated institution designated in the plan of merger as the surviving incorporated institution, and, in the case of a consolidation, shall be the new incorporated institution provided for in the plan of consolidation. The separate existence of all corporations parties to the plan of merger or consolidation shall cease, except, in the case of a merger, that of the surviving incorporated institution, and their articles and certificates of incorporation shall be considered forfeited. Such corporation shall be continued bodies corporate for a period of three years after the time of such forfeiture, for the purpose of actions at law or in equity authorized by this section to be continued against them, or for the purpose of winding up their affairs, but they shall not continue the business for which they were incorporated in any manner whatsoever. The surviving or new institution, as the case may be, shall have all the rights, privileges, immunities, and franchises of each of the merging or consolidating corporations, except that the surviving or new incorporated institution shall not thereby acquire authority to engage in any business or exercise any right which cannot be acquired by, or which is forbidden to, a bank, a bank and trust company, or a savings bank, as the case may be, when originally incorporated under this act. The surviving or new incorporated institution shall be subject to all the restrictions, limitations, or duties imposed upon such incorporated institutions when originally incorporated under this act. All the property, real, personal, and mixed, of each of the corporations parties to the plan of merger or consolidation, and all debts or obligations due to any of them, including subscriptions to share and other choses in action belonging to either or any of them, shall be taken and deemed to be transferred to and vested in the surviving or new incorporated institution, as the case may be, without further act or deed. The surviving or new incorporated institution shall henceforth be responsible for all the liabilities and obligations of each of the corporations so merged or consolidated, in the same manner as if the surviving or new incorporated institution had itself incurred such liabilities or obligations; but the liabiliities of the merging or consolidatng corporations, or of their shareholders, directors, trustees, or officers, shall not be affected, nor shall the rights of the creditors thereof or of any persons dealing with such corporations, or any liens upon the property of such corporations, be impaired by such merger or consolidation, and any claim existing or action or proceeding pending by or against any of such corporations may be prosecuted to judgment as if such merger or consolidation had not taken place, or the surviving or new incorporated institution may be proceeded against or substituted in its place. In the case of a merger, the articles of incorporation of the surviving incorporated institution shall be deemed to be amended to the extent, if any, that changes in its articles are stated in the articles of merger; and in the case of a consolidation, the statements set forth in the articles of consolidation, and which are required or permitted to be set forth in the articles of incorporation of unincorporated institutions formed under this act, shall be deemed to be the articles of incorporation of the new incorporated institution. The aggregate amount of the net assets of merging or consolidating banks, banks and trust companies, or national banking associations, which was available for the payment of dividends immediately prior to such merger or consolidation, shall continue to be available for the payment of dividends by such surviving or new incorporated institution, except for any portion thereof which has been transferred to capital by the issuance of shares or otherwise, or to surplus or reserve.

The aggregate amount of the net assets of merging or consolidating savings banks, which was available for the payment of interest or dividends immediately prior to such merger or consolidation, shall continue to be available for the payment of interest or dividends by the surviving or new savings bank, except for any portion thereof which has been transferred to surplus, reserve, or the expense fund.

Section 1408. Rights of Dissenting Shareholders.—A. If any shareholder of a bank, bank and trust company or national banking association, which becomes a party to a plan of merger or consolidation shall file with such corporation, prior to or at the meeting of shareholders at which the plan of merger or consolidation is submitted to a vote, a written objection to such plan of merger or consolidation, and shall not vote in favor thereof, and such shareholders, within twenty days after the merger or consolidation was effected, shall make written demand on the surviving or new incorporated institution for the payment of the fair value of his shares as of the day prior to the date on which the vote was taken approving the merger or consolidation, without regard to any depreciation or appreciation thereof in consequence of the merger or consolidation, the surviving or new incorporated institution shall pay to such shareholder the fair value of his shares upon surrender of the share certificate or certificates representing his shares. The demand of the shareholder shall state the number of the shares owned by him. Any shareholder failing to make demand within the twenty-day period shall be conclusively presumed to have consented to the merger or consolidation, and shall be bound by the terms thereof. If within thirty days after the date on which such merger or consolidation was effected, the value of such shares shall be agreed upon by the dissenting shareholder and the surviving or new incorporated institution, payment thereof shall be made within ninety days after the date on which such merger or consolidation was effected, upon the surrender of the share certificate or certificates representing his shares. Upon payment of the agreed value, the dissenting shareholder shall cease to have any interest in such shares or in the incorporated institution.

B. If within such period of thirty days the shareholder and the surviving or new incorporated institution do not so agree, then the dissenting shareholder may, within sixty days after the expiration of the thirty-day period, apply by petition to the court of common pleas within the county in which the principal office of the surviving or new incorporated institution is situated for the appointment of the court of three disinterested persons to appraise the fair market value of his shares without regard to any depreciation or appreciation thereof in consequence of the merger or consolidation. The award of the appraisers, or of a majority of them, when confirmed by the court, shall be final and conclusive. The costs of such appraisal, including a reasonable fee to the appraisers, shall be fixed by the court and shall be borne by the surviving or new incorporated institution, unless in the opinion of the court the action of any shareholder in refusing the offer of the incorporated institution has been arbitrary, vexatious, or in bad faith, in which case the costs shall be assessed in the discretion of the court. The award shall be payable only upon and simultaneously with, the surrender to the surviving or new incorporated institution of the share certificates representing the shares of the dissenting shareholder. If the award shall not be paid by the surviving or new incorporated institution within thirty days after the award was made by the appraisers, the amount of the award shall be a judgment against the surviving or new incorporated institution, as the case may be, and may be collected as other judgments in such court are by law collectible. Upon the payment of the award or judgment, the dissenting shareholder shall cease to have any interest in such shares or in the surviving or new incorporated institution. Such shares may be held and disposed of by the surviving or new incorporated institution as it may see fit. Unless the dissenting shareholder shall file a petition within the time herein limited, such shareholder and all persons claiming under him shall be conclusively presumed to have approved and ratified the merger or consolidation and shall be bound by the terms thereof. The right of the dissenting shareholder to be paid the fair value of his shares, as herein provided, shall cease if and when the incorporated institution shall abandon the merger or consolidation.

Section 1409. Effect of Merger or Consolidation on Estates Held or to Be held in Fiduciary Capacity.—A. Whenever one or more of the bank and trust companies, or national banking associations, which have participated in a merger or a consolidation were authorized under the laws of this Commonwealth or of the United States, to act in a fiduciary capacity, all the funds, property, or investments held by such corporation or trustee, guardian, executor, administrator, or other fiduciary shall be taken and deemed to be transferred to and vested in the surviving or new incorporated institution without any further act or deed, or any order or decree of any court or other tribunal, whether or not the original fiduciary was appointed by parol, by deed, by order of court, or by the issuance of letters testamentary or letters of administration. The surviving or new incorporated institution shall become fiduciary to the same extent and with the same rights, powers, duties, and liabilities in its capacity as fiduciary as the corporation which was originally fiduciary and from which, by operation of the provsions of this section, the surviving or new incorporated institution has taken over the relationship of fiduciary.

However, as soon as its articles of merger or articles of consolidation, as the case may be, is filed with the recorder of deeds, the surviving or new incorporated institution shall forthwith give written notice, in so far as the giving of such notice is practicable, to all corporations or persons who appear upon the available books or other records as, or who are otherwise known to be, parties interested in any funds, property, or investments held by such incorporated institution in a fiduciary capacity under the provisions of this act. Such corporations or persons may, within thirty days after the giving of such notice apply for the appointment of a substituted fiduciary. Such application shall be made to the appropriate court, register of wills, or other tribunal, as the case may be, or if the instrument under which the fiduciary relation was established prescribes a different authority or method, then to such authority or by such method. If such application is made, notice thereof shall forthwith be given to the surviving or new incorporated institution. Except in cases where the instrument creating the fiduciary relationship designates a different method, the court, register of wills, or other tribunal to whom such application is made pursuant to the provisions of this section, shall have the power to appoint a substituted fiduciary and to order the surviving or new incorporated institution to file an amount of such estate and to transfer and pay over to the substituted fiduciary the funds, property, or investments of the estate.

If the parties to whom the notice required by this section has been given, do not within the thirty-day period make such application or pursue whatever method is prescribed by the instrument under which the fiduciary relationship was established, for the appointment of a substituted fiduciary, and give the surviving or new incorporated institution notice thereof, or if it is impracticable to give notice, as where there are unborn beneficiaries, the surviving or new incorporated institution shall continue to be fiduciary, subject to removal only at such time, under such circumstances, and by such authority as could have effected the removal of the original corporation as fiduciary, if the merger or consolidation had never come into existence.

B. Whenever a bank and trust company, or a national banking association authorized to act as a fiduciary in this Commonwealth, has heretofore been, or shall hereafter be, named or appointed trustee, guardian, executor, administrator, or other fiduciary, such nomination or appointment shall not be deemed to have lapsed by reason of the merger or consolidation of such bank and trust company or national banking association with one or more corporations, pursuant to the provisions of this act, but such surviving or new incorporated institution shall be entitled to act in the same fiduciary capacity under such nomination or appointment as the original bank and trust company, or national banking association could have acted if such merger or consolidation had not been effected.

Section 1410. Effective Date of Merger or Consolidation.—Upon the issuance of the certificate of merger or the certificate of consolidation by the Department of State, the merger or consolidation shall be effective. The certificate of merger or the certificate of consolidation shall be conclusive evidence of the performance of all conditions precedent to such consolidation or merger and the creation or existence of a new or surviving incorporated institution, except as against the Commonwealth.

Section 1411. Merger, Consolidation, or Conversion of Banks or Bank and Trust Companies into National Banks.—One or more banks or bank and trust companies and one or more national banking associations, operating under the laws of the United States, all of which banks, or bank and trust companies, or national banking associations, are located in the same city, borough, or township may, pursuant to the laws of the United States, be merged into one of such national banking associations, or consolidated into a new national banking association operating under the laws of the United States, and a bank or bank and trust company may, pursuant to the laws of the United States, be converted into a national banking association, provided that the banks or bank and trust companies participating in such a merger or consolidation and the bank or bank and trust company being converted into a national banking association shall comply with the following requirements established by this section.

(1) The plan of merger, or consolidation, or of conversion has been approved, in the manner and after the advertising and notice required by this act in the case of mergers or consolidations of incorporated institutions, by at least a majority of all the directors of any bank or bank and trust company participating in such plan, and by the holders of two-thirds of its outstanding shares entitled to vote thereon.

(2) Any shareholder of a bank or bank and trust company who objects to the plan of merger, or the plan of consolidation, or the plan of conversion shall, upon compliance with the provisions of this act which relate to the rights of dissenting shareholders in a merger or consolidation of incorporated institutions, have all the rights accorded by such provisions to such dissenting shareholders.

(3) In the case of any bank and trust company participating in such plan or merger, or plan of consolidation, or plan of conversion, all corporations or persons who appear upon the available books or other records as, or who are otherwise known to be, parties interested in any funds, property, or investments held by such bank and trust company as trustee, guardian, executor, administrator, or other fiduciary under the provisions of this act, shall be entitled to the same notice and shall thereupon have the same rights and duties as are provided by this act for corporations or persons in a similar position in the case of a merger or consolidation of incorporated institutions.

(4) All taxes or fees due this Commonwealth or any of the departments or officials of the State government of this Commonwealth, shall be paid in full. For the purposes of this clause, the taxes imposed by the laws of this Commonwealth on such bank or bank and trust company which have not yet become due, that is the amount properly apportionable to the part of the tax period which has already elapsed, shall be construed to become due upon the date of such merger, consolidation, or conversion.

(5) Triplicate originals of the articles of merger, or articles of consolidation, or article of conversion, corresponding to the articles of merger or articles of consolidation required by this act in the case of the merger or consolidation of incorporated institutions, shall be prepared by any bank or bank and trust company participating in the plan of merger, consolidation, or conversion, and filed, one with the Department of State, one with the Department of Banking, and one with the recorder of deeds of the county in which the bank or bank and trust company had its principal place of business. The bank or bank and trust company shall also file with the Department of State the certificate of approval of the merger, consolidation, or conversion, as the case may be, by the comptroller, certified by him and shall file with the Department of Banking a certified copy thereof.

Comments:

A careful study of the laws of other states covering the various changes whereby state banks national banking associations, by merger, by consolidation, or by conversion has been made. The only one of these three types of organic change which has been specifically covered in the law of Pennsylvania is the conversion of a bank into a national banking association by the Act of 1889, supra. There seems to be no reason why, if a bank can become converted into a national banking association, a bank and trust company also cannot do the same thing. This draft, therefore, gives the power to become converted into a national banking association to bank and trust companies also. Provision has been made in this proposed section for the assets of which the bank and trust company thus becoming converted was fiduciary and for the rights of the beneficiaries thereof.

It is clear, of course, that if a bank or a bank and trust company has been merged or consolidated with a national banking association, so that the new or surviving corporation is a national banking association, or has become converted into a national banking association, this Commonwealth no longer has control over its affairs. However, it certainly seems that the Commonwealth does have an interest in seeing that none of the former depositors or other creditors, or the shareholders, or in the case of a bank and trust company, the assets held in a fiduciary capacity, suffer any damage by reason of the merger, consolidation or conversion.

This proposed section therefore attempts within the limitations imposed by constitutional considerations, to protect the interests of corporations or persons who are depositors, creditors, shareholders, or cestuis que trustent, wards et cetera.

Section 1412. Authority for Conversion of National Bank into Bank or Bank and Trust Company.—Any national banking association, operating under the laws of the United States, may, when authorized by the laws of the United States and upon full compliance therewith, become converted in the manner provided by this act, into a bank a bank and trust company.

Comments:

The remaining sections of this article deal with the conversion of a national banking association into a bank or a bank and trust company. Here again, an attempt has been made to keep the procedure followed consistent with that followed elsewhere in this act for the formation of corporations and for all structural changes in the charters thereof. The laws of other states have been studied, and an attempt has been made to clarify not only the procedure, but the rights and duties growing out of such conversion.

Section 1413. Approval of Plan of Conversion of National Bank into Bank or Bank and Trust Company.—In the case of a proposed plan for the conversion of a national banking association into a bank or a bank and trust company, the board of directors shall by resolution approved by at least a majority of all the members of the board of directors, adopt such plan. It shall then be ratified by the affirmative vote of the holders of at least two-thirds of the outstanding shares entitled to vote thereon, in the manner and after the advertising required by this act in the case of any merger or consolidation.

Section 1414. Articles of Conversion of National Bank into Bank or Bank and Trust Company.—Upon the approval, pursuant to the provisions of this act and in accordance with the requirements of Federal law, of the plan of conversion, by the directors and the shareholders of the national banking association which proposes to become converted into a bank or a bank and trust company, triplicate originals of articles of conversion shall be executed, under the seal of such corporation by two of its duly authorized officers and shall set forth:

(1) The proposed name of the bank or bank and trust company.

(2) The exact location of the place or places of business of the bank or bank and trust company into which the national banking association plans to become converted.

(3) The time and place of the meeting of the directors at which the plan of conversion was proposed and the time and place of the meeting of the shareholders at which the plan was ratified, the kind and period of notice given to the shareholders, and the vote of the directors and the vote of the shareholders by which the plan was adopted.

(4) All of the statements required by this act to be set forth in original articles of incorporation in the case of the formation of a bank or a bank and trust company, as the case may be, in so far as such information is applicable to the case of a national banking association proposing to become converted into a bank or a bank and trust company respectively.

(5) The number, names, and addresses of the persons to be the first directors of the bank or bank and trust company.

(6) A statement of the approval of the comptroller to the plan of conversion.

(7) The plan of conversion.

Section 1415. Filing of Articles of Conversion of National Bank into Bank or Bank and Trust Company; Payment of Fees; Approval by Department of State.—A. The triplicate originals of the articles of conversion of the national banking association into a bank or a bank and trust company and the proof of publication of the advertisement required by this act shall be delivered to the Department of State.

B. In addition to any bonus fees, taxes, and charges provided by law in the case of any corporation, the national banking association shall pay to the Department such reasonable fees as shall be established by rule or regulation by the Department of Banking for the investigation made by the Department of Banking, pursuant to the provisions of this act, to determine whether the articles of conversion should be approved. Such fee for the investigation by the Department of Banking shall be paid to the Department of State at the time of the filing with it of the articles of conversion and shall be paid by the Department of State, through the Department of Revenue to the Banking Department Fund.

C. The Department of State shall examine such articles of conversion and such proof of publication to determine whether they contain all the information and are in the form required by this act, and also whether the name of the proposed bank or bank and trust company, as the case may be, conforms with the requirements of law for the name of such an incorporated institution, or, whether it is the same as one already adopted or reserved by another corporation or person or is so similar thereto that it is likely to mislead the public.

After all the bonus fees, taxes, and the other charges have been paid as required by law, if the articles of conversion and the proof of publication contain the information and are in the form required by this act the Department of State shall endorse its approval upon each of the triplicate originals of the articles of conversion and shall forthwith transmit them to the Department of Banking.

D. If the Department of State shall disapprove the articles of conversion pursuant to this act, it shall forthwith give notice thereof to the national banking association, stating in detail its reasons for doing so and stating how such national banking association can remedy the nonconformance with the provisions of this act. Upon remedying the defect, such national banking association may, in the same manner file the same or amended articles, whichever the particular case may require.

Section 1416. Approval by Department of Banking of Articles of Conversion of National Bank into Bank or Bank and Trust Company.—A. The Department of Banking shall immediately upon the receipt from the Department of State of the articles of conversion of a national banking association into a bank or a bank and trust company, conduct such examination as it may deem necessary to ascertain from the best sources of information at its command:

(1) Whether the name of the proposed bank or bank and trust company is likely to mislead the public as to its character or purpose.

(2) Whether the conversion is made for legitimate purposes.

(3) Whether the interests of the depositors, other creditors, and shareholders are adequately protected.

(4) Whether the proposed bank or bank and trust company meets all the requirements of this act and violates none of its prohibitions applicable to a bank or a bank and trust company, as the case may be, incorporated under this act.

(5) Whether the national banking association has complied with the requirements of the laws of the United States and has been approved by the comptroller.

B. Within thirty days after the receipt of the articles of conversion from the Department of State, the Department of Banking shall, upon the basis of the facts disclosed by the investigation provided for by this section, either approve or disapprove such articles. It shall immediately notify the Department of State in writing of its action. If it shall approve the articles of conversion, it shall sign its approval upon the triplicate originals. It shall then retain one and send the remaining two of them to the Department of State.

C. If the Department of Banking disapproves the articles of conversion, it shall return them to the Department of State stating in detail its reasons for doing so. The Department of State shall immediately give notice to the national banking association desiring to become converted into a bank or a bank and trust company, of the action of the Department of Banking and of the reasons therefor as stated to it by that Department. Such national banking association may, within thirty days after the Department of State sends it notice of the disapproval of its articles of conversion, appeal from such disapproval to the Governor who shall hear such appeal promptly, and shall, within thirty days thereafter, decide the matter and certify his decision to the Department of Banking. The decision of the Governor shall be conclusive and not subject to review. The Department of Banking shall act in accordance therewith.

Section 1417. Issuance of Certificate of Conversion of National Bank into Bank or Bank and Trust Company.—Immediately upon receipt of the two signed triplicate originals of the articles of conversion of a national banking association into a bank or bank and trust company from the Department of Banking, the Department of State shall file and record one of them and shall issue a certificate of conversion. The remaining triplicate of the articles of conversion shall be sent by the Department of State to the bank or bank and trust company, as the case may be, which shall then have them recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds in the county in which the principal place of business of such bank or bank and trust company is situated. The triplicate original of the articles of conversion, upon being recorded by the recorder of deeds shall be returned to the bank or bank and trust company.

Section 1418. Effect of Conversion of National Bank into Bank or Bank and Trust Company.—Upon the conversion becoming effective the bank or bank and trust company as the case may be, shall have all the rights, privileges, immunities, and franchises of the national banking association, except that it shall not thereby acquire authority to engage in any business or exercise any right which cannot be acquired by, or is forbidden to a bank or bank and trust company, as the case may be, when originally incorporated under this act. The bank or bank and trust company shall be subject to all the restrictions, limitations, or duties imposed upon such institutions when incorporated under this act. All the property, real, personal, and mixed, of the national banking association, and all debts or obligations due to it, including subscriptions to shares or other choses in action belonging to it, shall be taken and deemed to be transferred to and vested in the bank or bank and trust company, as the case may be, without further act or deed. The bank or bank and trust company shall thenceforth be responsible for all the liabilities and obligations of the national banking association, in the same manner as if the bank or bank and trust company had itself incurred such liabilities or obligations; but the liabilities of the national banking association, or of its shareholders, directors, or officers, shall not be affected, nor shall the rights of the creditors thereof or of any persons dealing with such national banking association, or any liens upon the property of such association, be impaired by such conversion, and any claim existing or action or proceeding pending by or against such national banking association may be prosecuted to judgment as if such conversion had not taken place, or the bank or bank and trust company into which it is converted may be proceeded against or substituted in its place.

The net assets of the national banking association which were available for the payment of dividends immediately prior to such conversion, shall, in so far as they would have been available for such payment under the laws of this Commonwealth, continue to be available for the payment of dividends by the bank or bank and trust company into which the national banking association is converted, except for any portion thereof which has been transferred to capital by the issuance of shares or otherwise, or to surplus or reserve.

Section 1419. Rights of Dissenting Shareholders of National Bank Converted into Bank or Bank and Trust Company.—The bank, or bank and trust company into which the national banking association has been converted shall be liable to any shareholder of the national banking association who has objected to the plan of conversion according to the method provided by the laws of the United States, or if no method is there provided, then according to the method provided by this act in the case of a merger or a consolidation, for any amount due him as a dissenting shareholder, under the laws of the United States, or if no provision is there made, under the provisions of this act which relate to the dissenting shareholder of a bank or a bank and trust company which merges or consolidates.

Section 1420. Effect of Conversion of National Bank into Bank and Trust Company upon Assets Held or to Be Held in Fiduciary Capacity.—A. If the national banking association has been converted into a bank and trust company, and if it was authorized under the laws of the United States to act in a fiduciary capacity, all the funds, property or investments held by such national banking association as trustee, guardian, executor, administrator, or other fiduciary shall be taken and deemed to be transferred to and vested in the bank and trust company into which it has been converted without any further act or deed, or any order or decree of any court or other tribunal, whether or not the national banking association was appointed fiduciary by parol, by deed, by order of court, or by the issuance of letters testamentary or letetrs of administration. The bank and trust company shall become fiduciary to the same extent, and with the same rights, powers, duties, and liaibilities in its capacity as fiduciary as the national banking association.

However, all corporations or persons who appear upon the available books or other records as, or who are otherwise known to be, parties interested in any funds, property, or investments held by such national banking association as trustee, guardian, executor, administrator, or other fiduciary, shall be entitled to the notice required by the laws of the United States and shall thereupon have the rights and duties provided by the laws of the United States, or if the laws of the United States make no provisions on these subjects, then such corporations or persons shall be entitled to the same notice and shall thereupon have the same rights and duties as are provided by this act for corporations or persons in a similar position in the case of a merger or consolidation.

B. Whenever a national banking association, authorized to act as a fiduciary in this Commonwealth, has heretofore been or shall hereafter be, named or appointed trustee, guardian, executor, administrator, or other fiduciary, such nomination or appointment shall not be deemed to have lapsed by reason of the conversion of such national banking association into a bank and trust company, pursuant to the provisions of the laws of the United States and of this act, but such bank and trust company shall be entitled to act in the same fiduciary capacity under such nomination or appointment as the national banking association could have acted if such conversion had not been effected.

Section 1421. Effective Date of Conversion of National Bank into Bank or Bank and Trust Company.—Upon the issuance of the certificate of conversion by the Department of State, pursuant to the provisions of this act, the conversion of the national bank into a bank or bank and trust company shall be effective. The certificate of conversion shall be conclusive evidence of the performance of all conditions precedent to such conversion and the creation or existence of a bank or bank and trust company, except as against the United States or this Commonwealth.

ARTICLE XV

Forfeiture of Charter or Certificate of Authorization; General Criminal Provisions

Section 1501. Books, Records, and Accounts of Institutions; Reports; Prohibitions; Penalties.—A. The total liabilities of each institution to depositors shall be set out in full upon the books or other records of the institution, and in all reports required by law. It shall be unlawful for any institution to reduce such liabilities for the purpose of concealing unadjusted losses, overdrafts, expense charges, or loans. All such losses, overdrafts, expense charges, or loans shall be set up in separate accounts on the books or other records of the institution until adjusted or charged off. They shall not be charged in any manner whatsoever against deposits or other credits for which the institution may be liable.[1]

B. Whenever an institution shall rediscount or borrow money, bonds, or other securities, the amount of such borrowings, or such rediscounts, together with any assets pledged or assigned therefor, shall be set out in full on the books or other records of the institution, and in all reports required by law.[2]

C. An institution shall not conceal any of its assets in any manner whatsoever upon its books or other records or in any report required by law, but an accurate and complete record shall be kept of the same. An institution shall not by any system of accounting or any device of bookkeeping, directly or indirectly, enter any of its assets upon its books in the name of any other corporation or person, or under any title or designation, that is not truly descriptive thereof.[3]

D. An institution shall not, except with the written approval of the Department, enter, or at any time carry, on its books, any real or personal property owned by it, at a valuation exceeding its actual cost to such institution.[4]

E. Any officer or employe of an institution, and in the case of an incorporated institution, any director or trustee, who knowingly violates any provision of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall, upon conviction thereof, be subject to imprisonment not exceeding one year, or a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or both.

Comments:

1. This proposed subsection is based upon Sections 1 and 2 of the Act of 1907, supra.
2. This proposed subsection is based upon Section 3 of the Act of 1907, supra.
3. This provision is likewise based upon Section 3 of the Act of 1907, supra.
4. This proposed subsection is new. It merely enacts into law a rule which is enforced by the Department today in its supervision of institutions. Its wisdom is apparent. The laws of a number of other states, including New York, California, and New Jersey, contain a similar prohibition.

Section 1502. Repledging of Collateral.—A. An institution shall not repledge any property held by it in pledge or as collateral, which belongs to any other corporation or person, unless such property is accompanied by the obligation of the original borrower from the institution and unless the obligation for which such property is repledged is not for an amount exceeding the amount of the original obligation due at the time of such repledging.

B. Any officer or employe of an institution, and in the case of an incorporated institution, any director or trustee, who knowingly violates the provisions of this section, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall, upon conviction thereof, be subject to imprisonment for a period not exceeding one year, or a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or both.

Comments:

This proposed section is new.

The Act of June 12, 1931, P. L. 563, amending Section 36 of the Bank Act of 1923, contains a prohibition upon the repledging of collateral, except under the provisions provided by this proposed section and imposes a penalty upon any violation of such prohibition. This provision was probably intended to apply to the case of any institution. However, it is in the section dealing solely with the liquidation of institutions of which the Secretary of Banking has taken possession as receiver. This proposed section enacts the provisions of that act, but makes the penalty consistent with other penalties imposed by this act.

Section 1503. Relationship of Institution With Employes of Department.—A. An institution shall not grant or give any sum of money or other property, whether as a gift, credit, loan, or otherwise, either directly or indirectly, to the Secretary of Banking, or to any deputy, examiner, clerk, or other employe of the Department. However, any institution may grant a loan to the Secretary of Banking, or any deputy, examiner, clerk, or other employe of the Department, if such loan is secured by a mortgage upon his own home, which meets all the terms and conditions provided by this act for loans secured by mortgages and which in addition meets any additional conditions imposed and followed by such institution in making such loan.

This section shall not be construed to prohibit the Secretary of Banking, or any deputy, examiner, clerk, or other employe of the Department from becoming a depositor in any institution.

B. Any officer or employe of an institution, and in the case of an incorporated institution, any director or trustee, who knowingly violates the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall, upon conviction thereof, be subject to imprisonment for a period not exceeding one year, or a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or both; he shall also be subject to a further fine of a sum equal to the amount of the gift, credit, loan, or other sum of money, or the value of any other property given in violation of this section.

Comments:

This proposed section is the converse of Section 301 in the proposed Department of Banking Code. That section prohibits the accepting of any loan, gratuity, or credit by an employe of the Department from an institution, and this proposed section prohibits the granting of any such loan, gratuity, or credit by such institution to an employe.

It seems desirable to permit the granting of mortgage loans provided that they are granted upon the same terms and conditions as provided by law and as otherwise imposed by the institution. The New York law, which is one of the very few as strict in its provisions as this draft, makes this exception also.

The penalties imposed in this proposed section correspond to those imposed in Section 301 of the proposed Department of Banking Code. They are not so stringent as those imposed by the national act which permits a maximum fine of five thousand dollars rather than one thousand dollars. Certainly our law should contain a prohibition upon such practices and a penalty for violations of such prohibition. The seriousness of the consequences which may result from the granting of loans or gratuities by an institution to employes of the Department is so great that to render such acts criminal offences seems not only justified but clearly necessary.

Section 1504. Forfeiture of Articles of Incorporation or Certificate of Authorization.—A. The articles of incorporation in the case of an incorporated institution and the certificate of authorization in the case of a private bank, shall be automatically forfeited by operation of law, when

(1) In the case of bank or a bank and trust company, the capital, surplus, and expense fund required by law, and in the case of a savings bank, the expense fund required by law, have not been paid in within two years after the issuance of its certificate of incorporation.

(2) In the case of an incorporated institution, it has not in any manner exercised at least one of the powers conferred upon it by its articles of incorporation, and in the case of a private bank, by its certificate of authorization, within two years after the issuance thereof.

(3) In the case of an incorporated institution, it has formerly exercised any of the powers conferred upon it by its articles of incorporation, or in the case of private bank, by its certificate of authorization, but for a period of two years it has not exercised at least one of such powers.

(4) The Secretary, after having taken possession of the business and property of an institution, as receiver, has completely liquidated its assets.

(5) In the case of a bank or a bank and trust company, the Secretary, after having taken possession of the business and property of the bank or bank and trust company, as receiver, has paid the depositors and other creditors in full, and has surrendered the assets remaining to liquidating trustees for the benefit of the shareholders.

(6) The Secretary after having taken possession of the business and property of an institution, as receiver, has surrendered possession to the institution itself because he was without funds to liquidate the business and property.

(7) The Secretary, after having taken possession of the business and property of an institution, as receiver, has surrendered to the institution itself, or to any ther corporation or person, the assets of the institution in order to permit the carrying out of a special plan of liquidation.

B. Whenever it shall appear to the Department that any of the conditions which under the provisions of this section shall effect the forfeiture of the artilcles of an incorporated institution, or the certificate of authorization of a private bank, it shall issue a certificate of forfeiture of the articles of incorporation or of the certificate of authorization, in quadruplicate originals One such quadruplicate original shall be filed with the Department, one sent to the last known address of the institution, one to the Department of State, and one to the recorder of deeds of the county in which the place of business of the institution is or was located, to be recorded without charge by such recorder of deeds.

C. If the articles of incorporation of an incorporated institution have been forfeited in the manner provided by this section, the corporate powers may, whenever necessary to effect the liquidation and winding up of the business and property of such institution, continue for a period of three years, but they shall not be considered in existence for any other purposes whatsoever.

Comments:

There seems to be no reason for not permitting an automatic forfeiture of charter without court action whenever any of the circumstances outlined in this proposed section are existent. Of course, an institution would have the right to appeal to the courts from any order of the Department causing the forfeiture of its articles of incorporation or certificate of authorization whenever it felt that such forfeiture was effected contrary to the provisions of this act.

Section 1505. Prohibition upon Unauthorized Banking Business.—A. The only corporation or persons, who shall be authorized to receive moneys in this Commonwealth for deposit or for transmisison, or to establish in this Commonwealth a place of business for the purpose of receiving moneys for deposit or for transmission shall be banks, bank and trust companies, savings banks, and private banks.

B. Any individual, who either on his own behalf or as representative of any corporation or association, shall receive in this Commonwealth moneys for deposit or for transmission, or shall establish a place of busines for such purpose within this Commonwealth, when such indivdual or such corporation or association is not authorized under the laws of this Commonwealth to receive such moneys or to establish such place of business shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction thereof, be subject to imprisonment for a period not exceeding one year, or a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or both; he shall also be subject to a further fine equal to the amount of any moneys received by him for deposit or for transmission. The corporation which such individual represents or the members of the association which he represents, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, shall be subject to a fine of five thousand dollars; such corporation or such members of an association shall be subject to a further fine equal to the amount of any moneys received by such corporation or such association, or by its agent, for deposit or for transmission.

C. The provisions of this section shall not apply to a national banking association, or to a Federal Reserve Bank, or to the representatives of either, or to hotels which receive money from guests for temporary safe-keeping, express, steamship or telegraph companies which receive money for transmission, and brokers, licensed under the laws of this Commonwealth, holding membership in a lawfully constituted brokerage exchange, who do and have authority to do only such banking as is incidental to their brokerage business.

Comments:

This provision corresponds to the provisions in the laws of many other states, prohibiting receiving moneys for deposit or for transmission by any corporation or person not authorized under the laws of this Commonwealth to engage in such business. The exemptions in the case of national banking associations, and the Federal Reserve Bank are, of course, necessitated by constitutional considerations and in the other cases by the provisions of Section 201 of the proposed Department of Banking Code.

Section 1506. Prohibition upon Corporations Acting as Fiduciary; Penalty.—A. The only corporations organized under the laws of this Commonwealth which shall have authority to act in this Commonwealth as trustees, guardians, executors, administrators, or in any similar fiduciary capacity, shall be bank and trust companies.

B. A corporation organized under the laws of any state of the United States other than Pennsylvania, shall not have authority to act in this Commonwealth as trustees, guardian, executor, administrator, or in any other similar fiduciary capacity, unless it shall be appointed such fiduciary by any last will and testament or codicil thereto, or other testamentary writing, or by any court or register of wills of this Commonwealth, and unless the laws of such other state confer like powers upon corporations organized under the laws of this Commonwealth, but such corporations organized under the laws of another state shall be required to give such bond or other security as shall be deemed adequate by the court or register of wills in the Commonwealth having jurisdiction over the estate of which the corporation is acting as trustee, guardian, executor, administrator, or similar fiduciary.

C. The provisions of this section shall not be construed to permit a corporation organized under the laws of any state other than this Commonwealth, to establish in this Commonwealth, a place of business for the conducting of the business of acting as fiduciary.

D. The provisions of this section shall not apply to any non-profit corporation, nor shall they be construed to prevent any court or testator from appointing any corporation as trustee to execute a trust for its own use within the purposes of such corporation.

E. Any national banking association having authority under the laws of the United States to act as trustee, guardian, executor, administrator, or similar fiduciary, shall, upon the adoption by its board of directors of a resolution agreeing to place its trust department under the supervision of the Department of Banking and upon the transmission of a certified copy of such resolution to the Department of Banking, be authorized to act as such fiduciary in this Commonwealth.

F. Any corporation, whether organized under the laws of this Commonwealth or of any other state, which violates the provisions of this section, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be subject to a fine not exceeding five thousand dollars.

Act of May 20, 1921, P. L. 991, amended by Act of May 24, 1923, P. L. 356, 20 PS Secs. 345-347.

Comments:

The Act of 1921, supra, contains prohibitions upon the power of other individuals or courts to appoint corporations other than bank and trust companies as fiduciaries. It is questionable whether the scope of this act could constitutionally include such prohibitions. Therefore, this proposed section merely states what corporations shall be authorized to act as fiduciaries within this Commonwealth.

The provision regarding the supplying by a foreign corporation acting as fiduciary, of a bond, seems justified. Such foreign corporation is in virtually all cases not under the supervision of the Department of Banking, and it seems therefore, that the beneficiary should be given at least the protection of having a bond supplied.

Section 1507. Perjury.—Anyone who shall wilfully and corruptly make a false statement under oath or affirmation provided for in this act, or anyone who shall, by any means, procure or suborn any other person to do so, shall be guilty of the crime of perjury, and upon conviction thereof, shall be subject to the same punishment as is or may be provided by law for perjury.

Comments:

This provision is new.

The existent laws on banking contain many provisions in which statements are required to be made under oath or affirmation. In some of these sections, the provision that "any wilful false swearing" shall be pertjury is included; in others it is omitted. Such procedure seems inadvisable. Therefore, in this draft, all mention of perjury is omitted, except in the above proposed general section.

It is probably not absolutely necessary to include any provision as to perjury. The Act of March 31, 1860, P. L. 382, Section 14, the section in the General Criminal Code dealing with perjury, provides that "if any person in taking any.....oath or affirmation required, or that hereafter may be required by any act of assembly of this Commonwealth, shall be guilty of wilfully and corruptly making a false oath or affirmation", he shall be guilty of perjury. This seems clearly to cover the case of false swearing by an individual in the situations in which statements under oath or affirmation are required by this act, for example in reports of the condition of an institution or in replies to the questions of an employe of the Department who is examining an institution.

However, there is some slight doubt as to the applicability of the portion quoted above from the Act of 1860, to oaths taken before administrative officers. Considering the importance of insuring good faith in the taking of the oath or affirmation required by this act, it seems advisable specifically to provide for the crime of perjury in this section of the proposed act.

Section 1508. Statute of Limitations for Violation of Act.—Any prosecution for the commission of any criminal offense under the provisions of this act may be commenced at any time within six[2] years after the date upon which the alleged offense shall have been committed. However, if the person against whom such prosecution is brought shall not have been an inhabitant of this Commonwealth, or a usual resident therein, for six years, then such indictment may be commenced and prosecuted at any time within six years after he shall have become on inhabitant of, or usual resident within, this Commonwealth.

Comments:

1. The language of the Act of March 31, 1860, P. L. 427, Section 77, has been followed as far as possible in drafting this section . The law on criminal statutes of limitation is well settled on many points. It seems desirable, therefore, to follow the language in existence for the past sixty-five years or more, in so far as any substantive provisions or technical terms are involved.

2. The period of six years has been selected. Offences committed under the banking laws are usally most difficult to discover. The longest period which can in fairness be imposed ought to be enacted into the law. Six years seems to meet this requirement.

PROPOSED INSURANCE DEPARTMENT CODE

To the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

By the 1931 General Appropriation Act the Legislature directed this department to prepare for submission at this session a revision of the insurance laws.

The insurance laws were revised and codified in 1921. Since then many separate amendments have been passed which should be embodied in a general recodification. In addition, changed conditions dictate some substantial revisions in the law at the present time.

We have divided the present revision into two parts, each in a separate bill. The draft herewith submitted is known as the Insurance Department Code. At a later date we shall submit draft of an Insurance Code.

The draft now submitted was prepared by Assistant Deputy Attorney General George W. Keitel, in consultation with Deputy Attorney General Harold D. Saylor and the Attorney General, and with the co-operation of Insurance Commissioner Charles F. Armstrong and the men of his department.

Respectfully submitted,

Wm. A. Schnader,
Attorney General

AN ACT

Relating to the powers and duties of the Insurance Department and the Insurance Commissioner in exercising supervision over, and taking possession of and conducting, rehabilitating, conserving, or liquidating, the business and property of insurance companies, associations, exchanges and societies transacting an insurance business, including companies doing a title insurance or mortgage guarantee business, the authorization, licensing, qualification, regulation and examination of such companies, associations, exchanges and societies, the supervision, regulation and examination of fire insurance bureaus, self-insuring employers under The Workmen's Compensation Act, the State Employes' Retirement Fund, the State Workmen's Insurance Fund, the School Employes' Retirement Fund, and corporations having certain business transactions with supervised companies, the licensing and regulation of insurance agents, brokers, excess insurance brokers, adjusters and adjuster solicitors; regulating the advertising of insurance companies not authorized to do business in this Commonwealth; providing for the service of legal process upon foreign and alien insurance companies, associations, exchanges or societies; providing for the collection of fees and expenses of the Department; providing penalties; and repealing certain acts and parts of acts.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly, met, and its is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, as follows:

Comments:

It seems more logical to introduce the entire act by the enacting clause than to include this clause as a part of the section on the short title.

ARTICLE I

GENERAL PROVISIONS

Section 1. Short Title.—This act shall be known and may be cited as "The Insurance Department Code."

Reference:

Pennsylvania Insurance Department Act of 1921, Section 102, 40 PS Sec. 22.

Comments:

It does not seem necessary to include the date of the act in the short title, because by citing the date the short title becomes too long for practical purposes. The word "Code" supplants the word "Act" in The Insurance Department Act of 1921; this should distinguish it sufficiently from The Insurance Department Act of 1921.

Section 2. Definitions.—A. The following words, unless the context clearly indicates otherwise, shall have the meanings ascribed to them in this section:

"Adjuster"—a person, partnership, or corporation advertising and soliciting business, or holding himself or itself out to the public as an adjuster of claims for loss or damage arising out of policies or contracts of insurance, surety, or indemnity, upon property, persons, or insurable business interests within this Commonwealth, and receiving any compensation or return for the giving of advice or assistance to the insured.[1] in the adjustment of such claims.[2]

"Adjuster Solicitor"—a person, partnership, or corporation, who or which, solicits, directly or indirectly, in any manner, or aids in obtaining, for an adjuster, contracts for the adjustment of losses.

"Agent"—a person, partnership, or corporation, authorized in writing by an answer to solicit insurance risks and collect premiums, or to issue or countersign policies in its behalf.

"Alien"—describing an insurer organized under the laws of any county other than the United States or of its territories.[3]

"Association"—an individual, partnership, or association of individuals authorized to engage in the business of insurance on the Lloyds plan.

"Beneficial Society"[4]—a corporation or society, other than a fraternal society or a society operating on the mutual assessment plan, organized for conferring benefits upon its members from funds collected by it:

(1) Which has any regular officer, agent, membership solicitor, or employe who receives a salary or compensation of any nature whatsoever for work done, or who receives more than a nominal commission fo reach new member that he secures, or

(2) Which issues to its members any policy, agreement, voucher, contract of insurance, or certificate providing for sick, accident, or death benefits, or provides by its constitution or by-laws for such sick, accident, or death benefits, in return for periodic dues, premiums, assessments or payments, or otherwise transacts any class of insurance.

"Broker"—a person, partnership, or corporation, who or which, for compensation,[5] acts or aids in any manner in negotiating a policy of insurance, or reinsurance, in behalf of another person, association or group of persons, or corporation,[6] and is not an officer, salaried home office employe, or duly licensed insurance agent of the insurer by which the policy is effected.

"Commissioner"—the Insurance Commissioner of this Commonwealth.

"Company"—every incorporated insurance company, including title insurance companies and mortgage guarantee companies, whether incorporated under the laws of this Commonwealth, or of any other state or territory of the United States, the District of Columbia, or of a foreign country, excepting companies operating on a mutual assessment plan.

"Department"—the Insurance Department of this Commonwealth.

"Domestic"—describing an insurer organized under the laws of this Commonwealth.

"Exchange"—an individual, partnership, or corporation authorized to exchange with other individuals, partnerships, or corporations, inter-insurance or reciprocal insurance contracts.

"Fire Rating Bureau"—an individual, association, or bureau engaged in making fire insurance rates, or estimates for such rates, in this Commonwealth.

"Foreign"—describing an insurer organized under the laws of any state of the United States, other than this Commonwealth, or of any territory or insular possession of the United States, or of the District of Columbia.

"Fraternal Society"—a corporation, society, order, or voluntary association, organized and carried on solely for the mutual benefit of its members and their beneficiaries, and not for profit, having a lodge system with ritualistic form of work and a representative form of government, and provisions for the payment of benefits.[7]

"Insurer"—a company, association, exchange, fraternal society, or beneficial society, as defined by this section.[8]

"State"— any state of the United States, other than this Commonwealth, or any territory or insular possession of the United States, or the District of Columbia.

B. Article or section headings shall not be construed to affect in any manner the scope or meaning of any article or section of this act.

C. The singular shall be construed to include the plural. The masculine shall be construed to include the feminine and the neuter to include both the masculine and the feminine.

Comments:

1. In the California Political Code, Chapter 633, Section 633e (repealed in 1931 along with the remainder of the act adjusters), There is inserted at this place "to the insurer or the assured." This addition would seem to extend the function of an adjuster beyond its normal scope.
2. This is taken from the Pennsylvania Act of April 25, 1921, P. L. 276, Section 1, as amended by the Act of June 22, 1931, P. L. 605, 40 PS Sec. 301. For the sake of brevity, the word "public" has been dropped from this and the following definition.
3. The terms "foreign" and "alien" are taken from the American Bar Association Draft and from the Insurance Laws of Oregon, above referred to.
4. See Pennsylvania Acts of April 26, 1929, P. L. 805, Section 1, 40 PS Sec. 881; April 20, 1927, P. L. 317, Section 1, 40 PS Sec. 887; and May 20, 1921, P. L. 916, Section 29, 40 PS Sec. 1044.
5. In the definition of agent, the 1929 amendment to The Insurance Department Act of 1921 inserted at this place "for or without compensation."
6. Compare Compiled Statutes of Idaho, Chapter 143, Section 1. Act approved March 1, 1921.
7. This definition is taken from the Pennsylvania Act of May 20, 1924, P. L. 916, Section 1, 40 PS Sec. 1011.
8. The term "insurer" is used to indicate all types of insurance companies and associations under the supervision of the Department. The insurance laws of many other states use the word "company" in this sense. Although neither term is absolutely satisfactory, the word "insurer" would seem to be preferable, because it is more descriptive of the groups involved. See Insurance Laws of New York, L. 1932, Chapter 191, Section 400, for example of the use of the word "insurer" in this broad sense.

Section 3. Constitutional Construction.—It is hereby declared to be the legislative intent that if this act cannot take effect in its entirety, because of the decision of any court holding unconstitutional any part hereof, the remaining provisions of the act shall be given full force and effect, as completely as if the part held unconstitutional had not been included herein.

Section 4. Construction of References.—A. Any reference in this act to any act, by title or otherwise, shall be construed to apply to and include any codification wherein the provisions of the act referred to are substantially reenacted.

B. Any reference in this act to the provisions of law on any subject shall apply to statutes and decisions becoming effective after the effective date of this act, as well as those then in existence.

Section 5. Saving Clause.—A. The provisions of this act, in so far as they are the same as those of existing acts, shall be construed as a continuation of such acts, and not as new enactments. The repeal by this act of any existing act, or of any part thereof, shall not be construed to revive any act or part of any act heretofore repealed or superseded.

B. The provisions of this act shall not affect any act done, liability incurred, or right accrued, nor affect any suit or prosecution pending or to be instituted to enforce any right or penalty or to punish any offense under the authority of any act repealed or superseded by this act.

C. Any person holding office under any act repealed by this act shall continue to hold such office until the expiration of his term, subject to the conditions attached to such office prior to the passage of this act.

D. All resolutions, regulations, and rules made pursuant to any act repealed by this act shall continue with the same force as if such act had not been repealed.

Pennsylvania Insurance Department Act of 1921, Section 105, 40 PS Sec. 25.

Section 6. Compliance with Act Required.—It shall be unlawful for any insurer, or any other person, partnership, or corporation, to negotiate or solicit, or to effect within this Commonwealth, any contract of insurance, or to receive and transmit any offer or offers of insurance, or to receive or deliver a policy or policies of insurance, or in any manner to aid in the transaction of the business of insurance, without fully complying with the provisions of this act.

Pennsylvania Insurance Department Act of 1921, Section 106, 40 PS Sec. 26.

Comments:

This section substantially restates the section above referred to in the existing law. It is included in order to make any violation of this act unlawful which is not the subject elsewhere in the act of a seperate penal provision.

ARTICLE II

THE INSURANCE DEPARTMENT

Section 201. General Powers.—The Insurance Department shall administer and execute all the laws of this Commonwealth relating to insurance and insurers, and perform such other duties as may be required by law[1].

References:

Pennsylvania Insurance Department Act of 1921, Section 201, 40 PS Sec. 41.
The Administrative Code of 1929, Section 1502. See also Section 1501.

Comments:

The provisions relating to the establishment of the Insurance Department are omitted because they are contained in The Administrative Code.

Section 202. Scope of the Supervision of the Department.—The Department shall have supervision over:

(1) All insurers which are authorized to engage, or which are engaged, in transacting the insurance business within this Commonwealth; but if a company has the additional power to receive money for deposit or safe-keeping, or to act as fiduciary, or to engage in any other business under the supervision of the Department of Banking, the Department shall not have supervision over any part of such company's business that is under the supervision of the Department of Banking.

(2) All corporations which hold the capital stock of an insurance company for the purpose of controlling the management thereof, as voting trustee or otherwise, or which are engaged in, or profess to be engaged in, organizing, promoting, or soliciting stock or capital contributions, or aiding in any manner in the formation of an insurance company[1].

(3) All agents, brokers, adjusters, and adjuster solicitors which are authorized to engage, or which do engage, in the insurance business in this Commonwealth.

(4) All persons, partnerships, joint stock companies, and corporations, including municipal corporations, who or which, as employers, are exempted by the Department of Labor and Industry of this Commonwealth, pursuant to law, from the duty of carrying insurance covering the payment of workmen's compensation[2].

(5) The operation of the State Employes' Retirement Fund, created by the Act of June 27, 1923, P. L. 858, as amended[3].

(6) The operation of the State Workmen's Insurance Fund, established by the Act of June 2, 1915, P. L. 762, its amendments and supplements[4].

(7) The operation of the School Employes' Retirement Fund, established by the Act of July 18, 1917, P. L. 1043, its amendments and supplements[5].

Insurance Laws of North Carolina, Article 2, Section 6274.

Comments:

This general enumeration seems advisable for the sake of completeness.

1. This subdivision includes holding and promotion companies under the general supervision of the Department.
The Department now has the right only to examine these companies. It should have supervision over them, because of the harm to the public which may result from their mismanagement.

2. At the present time these private insurers are under the supervision of the Department of Labor and Industry. Section 305 of The Workmen's Compensation Act of 1915 provides as follows:

"* * * An employer desiring to be exempt from insuring the whole or any part of his liability for compensation shall make application to the Bureau, showing his financial ability to pay such compensation, whereupon the Bureau, if satisfied of the applicant's financial ability, shall by written order make such exemption. The Bureau may, from time to time, require further statements of the financial ability of such employer, and, if at any time such employer appear no longer able to pay compensation, shall revoke its order granting exemption; in which case the employer shall immediately subscribe to the State Fund, or insure his liability in a mutual association or company, as aforesaid."

While it is not necessary that private insurers under this act should be required to carry premium reserves, they should be required to have loss reserves. The Insurance Department is in a better position to determine the financial ability of these employers to meet the claims for compensation in the course of business, and to supervise the computation and the existence of loss reserves, than the Department of Labor and Industry.

3. Section 16 of the act referred to in this subdivision specifically places this fund under the supervision of the Insurance Department.

4. The State Workmen's Insurance Fund is engaged in the business of compensation insurance in competition with other casualty companies. Accordingly, it should be subject to the same requirements, restrictions, and qualifications as its competitors. The Act of June 13, 1923, P. L. 698, provides that the Auditor General shall each year make a complete examination and audit of this fund. It is proper that the Auditor General should have the same power over this fund, as a State instrumentality that he has over all State departments and boards. However, the Insurance Department should also have the power to determine, from an actuarial standpoint, whether this insurance business conducted by the Commonwealth is in a sound condition as regards reserve and future liability.

5. Section 17 of the act referred to in this subdivision specifically places this fund under the supervision of the Insurance Department.

Section 203. Insurance Commissioner.—The Insurance Commissioner shall supervise and direct the deputies, agents, and employes of the Department in the performance of their duties, and shall exercise the powers and perform the duties voted in and imposed upon him by the laws of this Commonwealth[1].

Comments:

The Administrative Code makes the Insurance Commissioner the head of the Insurance Department, provides for his appointment by the Governor, subject to the approval of the Senate, and provides for his term of office and compensation. In view of these provisions, reference to the appointment of the Insurance Commissioner is omitted.

1. Since the Insurance Commissioner is not mentioned in the Pennsylvania Constitution, no reference has been made to duties imposed by the Constitution.

Section 204. Restrictions on Officers, Agents, and Employes.—No officer, agent or employe of the Department shall be interested in any insurer or insurance business as director, officer, stockholder, promoter, manager, agent, attorney or employe, or be otherwise pecuniarily interested in any insurer or insurance business, except as a policy holder.

A violation by an officer, agent or employe of the Department of the prohibitions of this section shall constitute sufficient ground for his removal from office.[1]

Comments:

1. The provision regarding violations is new. As the law now stands, there are no means provided for enforcing this section.

Section 205. Commissioner Attorney for Service of Process.—A. The Commissioner shall, as attorney, accept and receive service of process upon any foreign or alien insurer licensed to transact business in this Commonwealth, in any action at law or equity against such insurer.[1]

B. All writs and legal papers shall be served, in duplicate, upon the Commissioner or his deputy, at the office of the Department in Harrisburg, by any person or officer authorized by law to make such service. The Commissioner shall collect, at the time of service of process, as a condition of valid and effective service, the sum of Two Dollars ($2.00) from the party who or which procures the service[2], and this sum shall be taxed as part of the record costs in the case.[3]

C. Service in accordance with the provisions of this section shall be deemed valid service upon the insurer, and a copy containing a certificate of acceptance and receipt by the Commissioner shall be deemed sufficient evidence of valid service.

D. When legal process is served upon the Commissioner, in accordance with the provisions of this section, he shall immediately forward, by mail, one of the copies of the process served upon him:

(1) In the case of a foreign insurer, to its secretary or attorney in fact; and

(2) In the case of an alien insurer, to its resident manager in the United States.

When attachments are served upon the Commissioner, he shall, in like manner, give immediate notice by telegraph.

E. All writs must be served in accordance with the provisions of this section before the return day of the writ.[4]

Comments:

Throughout The Insurance Department Code, the word "Department" is used where formerly the word "Commissioner" was used, because of the provision in The Administrative Code which imposes the duties of the Commissioner upon the Department. However, in this section it seems advisable to use the word "Commissioner," because we have a personal relationship created by a power of attorney, and it is difficult to conceive of the Department as the attorney for the insurer.

1. In Section 301 (c) of The Insurance Company Law, above referred to, all foreign companies are required to appoint the Commissioner their attorney. In this draft, the Commissioner is specifically given power to accept service.

2. This draft eliminates the word "plaintiff," because of the possibility that the party who or which procures the service may not be the plaintiff, but may have some other title, such as the "complainant," or "libelant," etc.

3. It is well established, as a matter of law, that the record costs in a case may be recovered by the successful party. For this reason reference to the right of the successful party to recover them as taxable costs was omitted.

4. In the case of Coyle v. Interstate Business Men's Insurance Accident Association [of Des Moines, Iowa], 283 Pa. 372, 129 Atl. 227 (1925), it was held that acceptance of service of a writ of summons by the Insurance Commissioner, after the return day of the summons, was valid service. As the law then existed, the decision was undoubtedly correct. Nevertheless, it does not seem desirable, as a matter of procedure, that writs should be valid when served after their return day.

Section 206. Orders by Department; Illegal or Unsafe Practices.[1]—Whenever it shall appear to the Department that any insurer or corporation[2] under its supervision is violating any provision of this act, or of any other law regarding the business of such insurer, or that such insurer is continuing business in an unsafe or unsound manner, the Department shall issue a written order, under the seal of the Department, directing such insurer to discontinue, within a specified period,[3] such violation of law or unsafe or unsound practice.

Comments:

1. This section is new to the insurance laws of Pennsylvania, but exists in a modified form in the laws of this Commonwealth relating to the Department of Banking. It is a power which the Department should possess. This section is enacted generally to cover situations not embraced in the other sections of this draft concerning Departmental orders. See, for example, "Notice of Impairment of Funds," in Article VIII and "Examination by Insurance Department" in Article XI, relating to securities on deposit.

2. The word "corporation" enables the Department to make such an order on promotion or holding companies.

3. The requirement that the insurer cease the illegal or unsound practice within a specified period has been added in this draft so that the institution may know the exact period of time permitted it to meet the requirements of the order. However, it was not deemed advisable to stipulate in the proposed act a maximum period, as is done in the case of impairment of capital or securities, since the time to be permitted to fulfill an order to cease an illegal or unsound practice will depend largely on the nature of the practice. This should be left to the discretion of the Department.

Section 207. Approval of Policies and Contracts; Appeal From Refusal to Approve.—A. The Department shall receive for approval all forms of insurance policies which any insurer files with the Department, and shall approve such forms if, in its opinion, they comply with the laws of this Commonwealth.[1]

B. The Department shall approve forms of contracts for adjustment which are filed by a duly licensed adjuster pursuant to the requirements of this act,[2] if, in its opinion, such forms comply with the laws of this Commonwealth.

C. If the Department does not approve any form filed with it, it shall promptly notify the insurer or adjuster, in writing, of its refusal to approve such form, and specify the reasons for such refusal.

D. Any insurer or adjuster may appeal to the Court of Common Pleas of Dauphin County from any refusal by the Department to approve any form of policy or contract filed with it.

Comments:

1. This provision exists in The Insurance Company Law, cited above, but it would seem necessary to include it in this draft as a function of the Department.
2. See Section 1104 of this draft.

Section 208. Retaliatory Provisions.—A. If, by the laws of any other state or foreign country, any taxes, fines, deposits, penalties, licenses, fees, conditions, precedent to doing business,[1] or other obligations, restrictions, or prohibitions in the aggregate,[2] additional to or in excess of those imposed by the laws of this Commonwealth upon foreign and alien insurers, brokers and adjusters, and their agents, are actually imposed on domestic insurers, brokers and adjusters of this Commonwealth, and their agents, doing business in such state or foreign country, like obligations, restrictions, and prohibitions shall be imposed upon all insurers, brokers, and adjusters, and their agents, of such state or foreign country doing business in this Commonwealth, so long as such foreign laws remain in force.

B. All alien insurers for the purposes of this section, shall also be considered insurers of that state wherein their deposit of securities as required by law for the benefit of their policyholders is made.

C. Whenever it shall appear to the Department that permission to transact business within any state or foreign country has been refused to any domestic insurer, after a certificate of authority to do business has been issued to it by the Department, and after such insurer has complied with any reasonable laws of such state or foreign country requiring deposits of money or securities with the government of such state or foreign country, the Department shall forthwith cancel the authority of each insurer organized under the laws of such state or foreign country and licensed to do business in this Commonwealth, and may refuse a certificate of authority to each such insurer thereafter applying to it for authority to do business in this Commonwealth, until the certificate of the Department shall have been duly recognized by the government of such state or foreign country.[3]

Insurance Laws of Oregon, Section 46-110 (2).

Comments:

1. This phrase would include the requirement of a certificate of authority to do business in this Commonwealth.
2. It seems preferable to provide that the taxes, fines, penalties, licenses and fees of a foreign state shall be regarded in the aggregate for the purposes of this section. This is specifically provided in the Insurance Laws of Oregon, Section 46-110 (1). In several states where this provision is not included, the insurance departments have ruled that the retaliatory law shall be applied "in the aggregate." See, for example, ruling No. R30 by the Insurance Department of the State of Iowa.
3. This provision was taken from the Insurance Laws of Connecticut, Chapter 218, Section 4122. It occurs also in the Insurance Laws of New Jersey, Chapter 134, L. 1902, Section 66, as amended by Chapter 66, L. 1904, and in the Insurance Laws of Iowa, Chapter 395, Section 8612-cl. Such a provision would seem to be necessary to guarantee for our Pennsylvania insurance companies the proper recognition in other states.

Section 209. Appeal From Court Orders.—Whenever, pursuant to the provisions of this act, any judgment, decree, or other order is entered for or against the Departmnet, or any relief requested by or against the Department is refused by any court, the Department, or any other party to the proceeding, shall have a right of appeal to the Supreme Court in the manner provided by law for appeals to that court.

Comments:

This section attempts to remove all doubt concerning the right of the Department to appeal.

The Administrative Code, in Section 512, imposes on all departments the duty to refer all itigation to the Department of Justice.

ARTICLE III

EXAMINATIONS AND CERTIFICATES OF AUTHORITY

Section 301. Examination of Domestic Insurers and Fire Rating Bureaus.—The Department, at least once every three years, and more frequently, if it deems such action necessary or advisable to safeguard the interests of the policyholders, members, creditors, or the public, shall examine thoroughly all fire rating bureaus and insurers, but the Department may waive the examination of a fire rating bureau if a report of an examination made by an insurance department of some other state, within three years preceding, is filed with the Department, and the Department may waive the examination of a domestic fraternal society or beneficial society if it deems such examination not necessary or advisable to safeguard the interests of its members or the public.

Section 302. Examination or Foreign and Alien Insurers.—The Department, if it deems it necessary or advisable to protect the interests of the policyholders and the public, may examine any foreign or alien insurer which has been admitted to do business within this Commonwealth. The Department may, within its discretion, accept, in lieu of such examination, the examaination by the insurance department of the state or foregin country wherein the foreign or alien insurer was organized or incorporated, or an examination by any group of insurance commissioners of the several states, if sponsored or endorsed by the National Convention of Insurance Commissioners.[1]

Comments:

1. There has been an ever-increasing number of these so-called "convention examinations" in recent years, whereby a large company is examined by a committee composed of the commissioners of several states. The Department should be permitted to adopt such an examination if it chooses to do so.

Section 303. Scope of Examination.—The Department, when making an examination, shall inspect the books and papers, examine and value the property and assets, and ascertain the liabilities of the insurer, and its ability to fulfill its obligations; determine the accuracy and veracity of its annual statements, and investigate the amount of reserves and securities on deposit, the investment of its funds, the equity of its management and its dealings with its agents, brokers, policyholders, and the public, its compliance with the laws of this Commonwealth and with the terms of its charter and its certificate of authority to do business, and all other matters pertaining to is affairs.

Section 304. Examination to Determine Violation of Law.—Whenever the Department shall have information that any insurer has violated any provisions of the laws of this Commonwealth, or of its chater, license, or certificate of authority to do business, the Department may examine the insurer and its officers, agents, and managers concerning the alleged violation. The refusal of any insurer to submit to such an examination will be presumptive evidence that it is guilty of the violation alleged.

Section 305. Examination for Certificate of Authority.—Before issuing a certificate of authority to transact business to any foreign or alien insurer applying for permission to do business in this Commonwealth, or to any domestic insurer which has completed its organization or incorporation, the Department shall first determine, by examination and such evidence as it deems necessary, that the insurer is qualified for a certificate under the laws of this Commonwalth.

Section 306. Examination of Holding Companies and Promoting Corporations.—The Department may examine the books, papers, property and business of any domestic or foreign corporation doing business or having an office in this Commonwealth, which corporation holds, as voting trustee or otherwise, the capital stock of an insurance company for the purpose of controlling the management thereof, or which corporation is engaged in, or professes to be engaged, in organizing, promoting, or soliciting stock or capital contributions, or aiding in any manner in the formation of an insurance company.

Substantially the same provision exists in the Insurance Laws of Connecticut, Chapter 217, Section 4102, and in the Insurance Laws of Virginia, Title 38, Chapter 167, Section 4178.

Comments:

All the statutes above referred to give this power for examination of corporations only. This policy is continued in this draft.

Section 307. Examination of Workmen's Compensation Employers, State Employes' Retirement Fund, State Workmen's Insurance Fund, and School Employes' Retirement Fund.—A. The Department may examine the book, papers, business and accounts of any employer who is exempted by the Department of Labor and Industry of this Commonwealth, pursuant to law, from the duty of carrying insurance covering the payment of workmen's compensation.

B. The Department shall examine the State Employes' Retirement Fund, created by the Act of June 27, 1923, P. L. 858, as amended, whenever it deems such examination advisable or necessary, and whenever it is requested to do so by the Department of the Auditor General.

D. The Department shall examine the School Employes' Retirement Fund, established by the Act of July 18, 1917, P. L. 1043, its amendments and supplements, whenever it deems such examination advisable or necessary, and whenever it is requested to do so by the Department of the Auditor General.

Comments:

Compare this Section with Section 202 of this draft, which places these private compensation insurers and these three funds under the supervision of the Department.

Section 308. Powers Incidental to Examinations.—A. Examinations shall be made by the Commissioner or his deputy, or by any other officer or employe of the Department who is designated in writing, under the seal of the Department, as an examiner.

B. For the purpose of making an examination, the Department and its examiners shall have free access to, and every insurer, corporation, and employer under its supervision, their officers and agents, shall produce, all the books, accounts, records, and papers of the insurer, corporation and employer, at the office wherein they are kept. For the purpose of obtaining additional information, the Department shall have the power to issue subpoenas, and to administer oaths or affirmations to directors, trustees, officers, agents, employes, or members of the insurer, corporation, or employer, or to any other person.

Any witness who refuses to obey a subpoena issued under this section, or who refuses to be sworn or affirmed, or to testify, or who is guilty of any contempt after summons to appear, may be punished as for contempt of court, and, for this purpose, an application may be made to any court of common pleas within whose territorial jurisdiction the offense was committed, for which purpose such court is hereby given jurisdiction.

C. The Department shall make and file a true and complete report of every examination, verified by the affidavit of the officer or employe who makes the examination. A copy of the report of its examination shall be mailed to each insurer, corporation or employer who or which is thus examined, and the insurer, corporation or employer shall have the privilege of filing within ten days from the date of receiving a copy of the report, a petition with the Department for a hearing before the Commissioner. The Department shall not file any such report, nor open it to public inspection, nor make it, or any matters relating thereto, public, before either the ten days for petitioning for a hearing have elapsed, or the hearing has been concluded by the Commissioner. The Department may, after filing any report, if it deems it in the interest of the policyholders and the public, publish the result of its examination without expense to the insurer, corporation or employer examined.[1]

D. The insurer, corporation, or employer, who or which has been examined, shall be charged with, and shall pay, all the expenses of its examination. The expenses shall include the compensation of the examiners and other officers or employes of the Department assisting in the examination, and the actual and necessary traveling, hotel, and other expenses.[2] The Department shall prescribe, by general rules or regulations, the time and the manner for payment of these costs, or instalments thereof, by the insurer, corporation, or employer.

Comments:

1. The hearing is new to the Pennsylvania Insurance Department law. It is suggested in the American Bar Association Draft, Section 8, and in the above-cited sections from the laws of Michigan, Oregon, Connecticut, and Idaho and the Pennsylvania Act of May 20, 1921, P. L. 916.
2. Hotel and traveling expenses are included in the Insurance Laws of Iowa, Chapter 397, Section 8631.

Section 309. Orders by Department; Records of Insurer, Examinations.—A. Whenever it shall appear to the Department that any insurer, corporation, or employer under its supervision is not keeping its books and accounts in such manner as to enable the Department, with reasonable facility, to ascertain the true condition of the insurer, corporation or employer, the Department shall issue a written order, under the seal of the Department, requiring such insurer, corporation or employer to open and keep such books as the Department may, in its discretion, reasonably determine are essential for the purpose of keeping accurate and convenient records of the transactions and accounts of such insurer, corporation or employer.

B. Whenever any insurer, corporation or employer under the supervision of the Department shall refuse to submit its records and affairs to a legally conducted examination or investigation by the Department, the Department shall issue a written order, under its seal, requiring such insurer, corporation, or employer to permit the Commissioner, or other duly authorized examiner, to make such examination or investigation.

C. Every written order of the Department shall contain a notice that after a specified period following the mailing of the order, the insurer for non-compliance therewith, is liable to have its certificate of authority revoked or suspended.

Comments:

When an insurer fails to obey an order of the Department, the Department may bring liquidation proceedings against it. This serves as the power to enforce the above section. See Section 802 of this draft.

Section 310. Certificates of Authority to do Business.—A. The Department shall issue certificates of authority to transact business in this Commonwealth, under the seal of the Department, to all insurers which have complied with the requirements of the laws of this Commonwealth. Every certificate of authority issued to a foreign or alien insurer shall be evidence of the compliance by the insurer with the requirements of the laws of this Commonwealth. Every certificate of authority issued to a domestic insurer shall be evidence of its proper organization or incorporation, and its proper conduct of business under the laws of this Commonwealth.

B. The Department may renew the certificate of authority of any mutual assessment life or accident association, which is now lawfully doing business in this Commonwealth.[1]

C. All certificates of authority to do business, and renewals thereof, shall be valid for only one year from the date of issue. The certificate of authority of each foreign fraternal society shall expire annually on the first day of April. The Department shall renew the certificates of those insurers which have continued to comply with the requirements of the laws of this Commonwealth.

D. The Department, after a hearing before the Commissioner, when requested by the insurer concerned, shall have the authority to revoke or suspend the certificate of any insurer which refuses to submit to an examination by the Department,[1] or violates any other provision of the laws of this Commonwealth or of any other state.

E. Any insurer applying for authority to transact business in this Commonwealth, upon the refusal of the Department to grant a certificate of authority to such insurer, shall have the right to apply to the Court of Common Pleas of Dauphin County for a writ of mandamus to require the Department to issue a certificate of authority, upon a showing that such insurer is duly qualified to transact business and is willing to comply with all lawful regulations of the Department.[2]

Comments:

1. This paragraph restates the existing provision in the law. While at the present time there are no provisions in the law for the doing of business by, or the licensing of, these assessment associations, there are in existence some such associations which are operating under charters granted prior to The Insurance Department Act of 1921. For this reason allowance must be made for the renewal of their certificates.
2. This is taken from the Insurance Laws of Iowa, Chapter 397, Section 8641. See also Pennsylvania Insurance Department Act of 1921, Section 501, 40 PS Sec. 201.

Section 311. Penalty for Acting Without Certificate of Authority.—Any corporation, partnership, association, society, or exchange doing an insurance business within this Commonwealth without a certificate of authority, as required by this act, shall forfeit and pay to the Commonwealth the sum of Five Hundred Dollars ($500.00) for each month or fraction thereof in which such illegal business was transacted.

Information from Fire Rating Bureaus.—The Department may address inquiries to any fire rating bureau concerning its organization, maintenance, or operation, or any other matter connected with its transactions, and may require the filing of schedules, rates, forms, rules, regulations, and such other information as the Department deems necessary. Every fire rating bureau or an officer thereof, shall promptly reply to such inquiries in writing. Surveys and completed schedules on specific risks may be required only if a policyholder or applicant for insurance registers a specific complaint with the Department.

ARTICLE IV

RECORDS AND REPORTS

Section 401. Records of Department.—The Department shall preserve its records in permanent form. These records shall include:

(1) A full report of all proceedings before the Commissioner, and all the rulings of the Commissioner;
(2) The rules and regulations adopted by the Department;
(3) Reports of all examinations conducted by the Department, and a concise statement of the condition of each insurer examined;
(4) The name and location of every insurer to which a certificate of authority to do business has been issued;
(5) The names and addresses of all duly authorized agents and their respective insurers, all brokers, all adjusters, and all adjuster solicitors to whom the Department has issued licenses;
(6) Annual statements and other statements, and reports filed by each insurer;
(7) A record of the day and hour of every service of process upon the Commissioner;
(8) A complete account of all fines and penalties collected;
(9) All forms of policies issued or in use by any company, association or exchange, and all forms of adjusters' contracts;
(10) Copies of all charters of domestic insurers, certified by the Secretary of the Commonwealth;
(11) All other papers and documents in the nature of public records.

Section 402. Biennial Report.—The biennial report of the Department to the Governor shall contain:

(1) A statement of the expenses of the Department, and of the fees, fines and penalties received by the Department either directly or through the Department of Revenue, as agent;
(2) A summary of the condition of all insurers doing business in this Commonwealth;
(3) A list of the insurers of which the Department has taken possession, the reasons for taking possession of them, the approximate amount of their assets and liabilities, and such other facts as shall be pertinent;
(4) Such other information as will exhibit the activities and affairs of the Department, and such other facts as may be requested by the Governor.

Section 403. Certified Copies of Departmental Records; Evidence.—A. The Department shall, when required, for evidence in any judicial proceedings, issue copies of any book, paper, document or record on file with the Department, duly certified under the seal of the Department. All certificates or certified copies shall contain, wherever necessary, a statement that the original book, paper, document or record on file with the Department is in force and effect as of the date of the certification.

B. All certificates or certified copies shall be evidence in any court of law or equity, or for any other purpose, equally and with the same effect as the originals, and shall be prima facie evidence of the facts therein stated.

C. The Department may issue to any person, upon request, and upon payment therefor in advance, certified copies of any charter, statement, report, or record filed in the office of the Department, whenever in the opinion of the Commissioner the public interest will not be prejudiced thereby.

Section 404. Annual Statement Forms to be Furnished by Department.—The Department shall anually, in the month of December, furnish to each insurer authorized to do business in this Commonwealth and required to make an annual statement to the Department, two or more blanks in the form adapted for such statement and conforming as nearly as possible to the form of statement from time to time adopted by the National Convention of Insurance Commissioners.

Comments:

This provision is new to Pennsylvania law. The National Convention of Insurance Commissioners is a well established and permanent organization, and is doing a fine piece of work. It is, therefore, fitting to recognize the existence of this group in our Insurance Department Code.

The work of the National Convention in preparing and recommending such a blank tends toward uniformity of reports, and means less trouble for those companies which do business in several states in the preparation of their annual statement.

Section 46-105 (3) of the Insurance Laws of Oregon provides as follows:

"Every insurance company, doing business in this state, shall file with the commissioner, on or before March first of each year, a financial statement for the year ending December thirty-first immediately preceding on [a] form furnished by the commissioner, which shall conform as nearly as may be to the form of statement from time to time adopted by the National Convention of Insurance Commissioners, and containing such detailed exhibit of the condition and transactions of the company as the commissioner, in such form and otherwise, shall reasonably prescribe. * * *"

ARTICLE V

TAXES, FEES, FINES AND PENALTIES

Section 501. Collection of Taxes.—All taxes imposed by this act and other laws of this Commonwealth upon insurers, agents, brokers, adjusters and adjuster solicitors, shall be collected by the Department of Revenue in accordance with the provisions of The Fiscal Code.

Section 502. Collection of Fines and Penalties.—All fines and penalties imposed by this act upon insurers, corporations and employers under the supervision of the Department, agents, brokers, adjusters, and adjuster solicitors, shall be collected by the Department. For this purpose, the Department shall have all the powers vested by law in the Department of Revenue for the settlement of accounts. All settlements by the Department, like settlements by the Department of Revenue, shall be subject to the approval of the Department of the Auditor General, and to the right of any party aggrieved to file a petition for resettlement, a petition for review, and an appeal.

Section 503. Fees.—The Department shall charge and collect fees as follows:

(1) For valuation of life policies, one cent for each thousand dollars of insurance valued, with a minimum total charge of Ten Dollars ($10.00)[1];

(2) For filing copy of charter, Twenty-five Dollars ($25.00);

(3) For filing the annual or any other statement, Twenty Dollars ($20.00);

(4) For a certificate of authority to a foreign fraternal society, or a renewal thereof, Twenty Dollars ($20.00);

(5) For a certificate of authority to an insurer, or certified copy of any certificate of authority, or duplicate thereof, Two Dollars ($2.00);

(6) For license as excess insurance broker, One Hundred Dollars ($100.00);

(7) For license as insurance broker, Ten Dollars ($10.00), for an individual, and Twenty-five Dollars ($25.00) for each license in the name of a partnership or corporation, including individual licenses for any duly qualified individuals, without extra charge for officers or solicitors, not exceeding three;

(8) For agent's license for each domestic insurer, Fifty Cents ($0.50);

(9) For agent's license for each foreign and alien insurer, Two Dollars ($2.00);

(10) For adjuster's license, One Hundred Dollars ($100.00);

(11) For adjuster's solicitor's license, Fifty Dollars ($50.00);

(12) For each copy of any paper filed in the Department, Twenty Cents ($0.20) per folio, and One Dollar ($1.00) for certifying the same;

(13) For any other certificate required, Two Dollars ($2.00);

(14) For service of process upon the Commissioner as attorney for a foreign or alien insurer, Two Dollars ($2.00);

(15) For making examinations, the expense of the examination.

Comments:

1. It is suggested that such a minimum charge be made, so that the actuarial work of the Department involved in valuing life policies may be to a greater measure self sustaining.

Section 504. Fees payable by the Department.—Any prothonotary or recorder of deeds, and any State department, board, commission, or officer, other than the Insurance Department or its employes, shall be entitled to receive for services performed as required by this act, such fees as it lawfully charges for such or similar services.

Comments:

Numerous acts establish the charges to be made by prothonotaries, recorders of deeds, the Secretary of the Commonwealth, or similar officials, for the filing or recording of documents with them. This draft does not reenact these fees specifically, but merely declares the existing fee acts to be applicable.

RESERVE LIABILITY

Section 601. Computation of Reserve Liability.—The Department shall each year compute the reserve liability, as of the thirty-first day of December of the preceding year, of every insurer authorized to do, or doing, business in this Commonwealth, and of every self-insured employer under the supervision of the Department[1], in accordance with the terms of the policy or contract and the rules prescribed by the laws of this Commonwealth.

The Department shall, after determining the amount of reserve liability, require that the insurer or employer shall maintain reserves therefor in safe legal securities, above and beyond assets necessary to pay all other debts and claims against such insurer or employer.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Insurance Department Act of 1921, Section 301, 40 PS Sec. 71.

Comments:

It is doubtful whether the provisions concerning reserve liability belong in the Insurance Department Code or in the code referring to insurance companies. The Department has the duty to compute the reserves and to see that they are in existence. On the other hand it is the duty of the insurance companies to provide and maintain such reserves.

In this draft the provisions of this article on reserve liability have been restricted to those sections or portions of sections specifically referring to the duty of the Insurance Department and the Insurance Commissioner. The tables prescribing the method of computation have been transferred to the code relating to insurance companies.

1. This refers to Section 202 (4) of this draft. As it is there pointed out, these employers will be required to maintain loss reserves by the insurance code which is being drafted. This article will contain several references to such employers.

Section 602. Notice of Impairment of Funds.—A. Whenever any life insurer authorized to do, or doing, business in this Commonwealth does not have on hand the reserve liability required by law, the Department shall notify such life insurer and its agents not to issue any new policies until its funds become equal to its liabilities.[1]

The Department may, at the proper time, issue a certificate of authority to resume business. When a domestic life insurer has been notified to cease doing new business, the Department may, if its examination of the insured reveals the absence of fraud, gross incompetence, or recklessness in its management, permit the officers of the insurer to continue in charge of the business for one year. The Department may renew such permission if it appears that the insurer will likely replenish its impaired reserve[2].

B. After the Department has charged as a liability the reinsurance and loss reserves defined by the laws of this Commonwealth for an insurer other than a life insurer, and for a self-insured employer under the supervision of the Department, and has added thereto all other debts and claims against the insurer or employer, the Department shall, if it finds the capital or reserve of the insurer or employer impaired twenty per centum (20%), give notice to the insurer or employer, to make good such impairment of the capital or reserve within sixty days.[3]

Comments:

1. Paragraph A refers solely to life insurance companies.
2. This provision occurs in The Insurance Company Law, above referred to. Inasmuch as it refers specifically to the powers of the Department, it would seem to be properly included here.
3. Paragraph B refers to companies other than life insurance companies. This is not a separate section because the title of this section, i. e., "Notice of Impairment of Funds," covers both life and non-life companies. If this order is not complied with, the insurer can be thrown into receivership under Article VIII of this draft.

Section 603. Computation of Reserve by Other States.—A. The Department may accept the valuations made by the proper officer of the state under whose authority a foreign insurer was organized, when such valuations are made on a basis that will give values at least equal to the valuation calculated pursuant to the provisions of the laws of this Commonwealth, and when the state under which the insurer was organized accepts the valuations made by the Department for insurers organized under the laws of this Commonwealth.

B. Each foreign insurer shall furnish to the Department, on or before the first day of March in each year, a certificate from the proper officer of such state, setting forth the reserve liability, and, in the case of a life insurer, the value of all the policies of such insurer in force as of the previous thirty-first day of December. Any foreign insurer failing to furnish such certificate shall be required to submit to an investigation or an examination for the purpose of computing the reserve liability of such insurer, and shall be liable for all charges and expenses resulting from the failure to furnish such certificate.

Comments:

Compare this section with Section 208 of this draft relating to retaliatory provisions.
This section substantially reenacts Section 304 of The Insurance Department Act, which section relates only to life insurances reserves. It is here expanded to include computations of all reserves.

Section 604. Valuation of Securities.—The Department shall have full discretion in determining the method of calculating, in accordance with the provisions of the laws of this Commonwealth relating to amortization,[1] the values of bonds and other evidences of debt held by insurers, and the values found by the Department in accordance with such method shall be final and binding.

Comments:

1. This refers to the proposed code dealing with insurance companies, wherein the alternative rule of valuation of bonds, etc., previously included in Section 305 of The Insurance Department Act of 1921, will be set forth.

Section 605. Additional Liability or Compensation Loss Reserves.—Whenever, in the judgment of the Department the liability or compensation loss reserves of any insurer or self-insured employer under its supervision are inadequate, it may, in its discretion, require such insurer or employer to maintain additional reserves based upon estimated individual claims or otherwise; or, whenever a satisfactory mathematical or acturial table for valuing compensation loss reserves is promulgated and approved by the Department, it may require any such insurer or employer under its supervision to maintain, upon such tabular basis, greater or less reserves than those hereinbefore provided for.

Comments:

This section merely restates the existing law, adding thereto the provisions about employers exempted by The Workmen's Compensation Act.

ARTICLE VII

DEPOSITS OF SECURITIES

Section 701. Deposit of Securities With the Department.—A. Any domestic insurer desiring to transact business in other states, the laws whereof require that such insurer shall first deposit securities of a designated value with the Department, in trust and for the benefit of all of its policyholders, or any alien insurer desiring to make the deposit required of alien insurers in order to transact business in the United States, is hereby authorized to deposit with the Department securities for such an amount as the laws of other states designate or as the laws of this Commonwealth require for alien insurers. If the Department is satisfied that the value of such securities equals or exceeds the required amount, it shall be the duty of the Department to receive such securities, or those given in exchange therefor, as hereinafter provided, for the purposes specified in this section. Upon the written request of such domestic or alien insurer, the Department shall certify, under its official seal, to the proper officer or Department of such other state or states or of the United States Government, wherein such insurer may desire to transact business, that the insurer has deposited with it securities, giving a description thereof, and that it is satisfied that the value of such securities equals or exceeds the amount designated by the laws of such other state or states, or required by the United States Government.

B. Any deposit of securities required of a foreign insurer by the retaliatory provisions of this act shall be subject to the provisions of this artcle.

Comments:

It has been suggested that an additional deposit be required of insurers in order to protect litigants. This suggestion does not seem to be advisable because the retaliatory provisions of other states would require every Pennsylvania company to put up such a deposit in every state in which such company is doing business. Furthermore, it would be difficult to arrive at the proper amount to be deposited.

Section 702. Treasury Department to be Custodian of Securities.—The Department shall, upon receipt of any deposit made under this article, immediately transmit the securities to the Treasury Department, which shall receive and hold them, in the name of the Commonwealth, in trust for the purposes for which such deposit is made. The Treasury Department shall at all times be responsible for their custody and safe-keeping. The insurer making the deposit shall be entitled, from time to time, to demand and receive from the Treasury Department, on the written order of the Insurance Department, the securities so deposited or any portion thereof, upon depositing with the Treasury Department, in lieu thereof, other securities of at least equal value. Such insurer shall also be entitled to demand, receive, sue for, and recover from the payee or obligee the interest or income from deposited securities, as such interest or income becomes due and payable.

Comments:

This section, as is formerly existed in the Pennsylvania law, appointed the State Treasurer as custodian of the securities. This draft has changed the custody to the Treasury Department in order to correspond more closely to Section 303 of The Fiscal Code.

Section 703. Examination by Insurance Department.—An examination shall be made annually by the Department of the securities deposited by each insurer and held by the Treasury Department in trust for such insurer. If it shall appear at any time that their value is less than the amount required for the purposes for which such deposit was made, the Department shall notify such insurer by registered mail thereof, and, unless the deficiency shall be made up within thirty days, shall countermand all the certificates it may have issued to any states or to the United States government on behalf of such insurer under the provisions of this article. If it shall appear at any time that the value of such securities, when estimated at not more than the par value thereof, is more than five per centum (5%) in excess of the amount required for the purposes for which such deposit was made, the Department shall, upon request of the depositing insurer, procure from the Treasury Department and deliver to the insurer a part of such securities of a value not greater than the amount by which the total value of such securities, estimated as above, exceeds the amount required increased by five per centum (5%).

Insurance Laws of Connecticut, Chapter 218, Section 4116.

Comments:

This provision is new. It seems necessary to give this power to the Insurance Department because of the likelihood that the securities on deposit may change in value.

Section 704. Return of Securities by Treasury Department.—Upon request of any domestic insurer making a deposit, the Department may authorize the Treasury Department to return to such insurer the securities or any portion thereof held by it on deposit, if the Department shall be satisfied that such securities are subject to no liability, and the deposit thereof is no longer required by any provision of law. The Treasury Department may, in like manner, return to the trustees, or other duly authorized representatives of an alien insurer, any deposit made by such inseurer, if it shall appear that such insurer has ceased to do business in this Commonwealth, and is under no obligations to policyholders or other persons in this Commonwealth, or elsewhere in the United States, for whose benefit the deposit was made. A deposit shall not be wholly withdrawn or diminished as long as any liability to policyholders remains unsatisfied, except in case of the liquidation or dissolution by or under the authority of any court of competent jurisdiction of the insurer which made the deposit, in which case the Treasury Department shall, upon the written order of such court, assign and transfer to the receiver duly appointed, all securities or funds in its possession belonging to the insurer.

Section 705. Suits in Equity to Enforce, Administer, or Terminate Trusts Created by Deposits.—An insurer which has made a deposit as provided in this article, or its turstees or resident manager in the United States, may, at any time, bring in any court having jurisdiction, a suit in equity against the Commonwealth and other parties properly joined therein, to enforce, administer, or terminate the trust created by such deposit. The process in such suit shall be served upon the State Treasurer, who shall answer on behalf of the Commonwealth, and perform such orders and decrees as the court may make thereon.

ARTICLE VIII

SUSPENSION, REHABILITATION, LIQUIDATION, CONSERVATION, AND DISSOLUTION OF DELINQUENT INSURERS.

Section 801. Scope of This Article.—The provisions of this article shall apply to all insurers which are doing, or attempting to do, or representing that they are doing, the business of insurance in this Commonwealth, or which are in process of organization, intending to do such business therein. If an insurer was incorporated or organized, or is operating without authority of law, the Department shall have authority to proceed against it, pursuant to the provisions of this article, in the same manner as if a certificate of authority had been granted to such insurer by the Department.

Pennsylvania Insurance Department Act of 1921, Sections 502 and 501, 40 PS Secs. 202 and 201.

Section 802. Suspension of Business.—A. The Department may suspend the entire business of any domestic insurer, and the business within this Commonwealth of any foreign or alien insurer, by revoking or suspendnig its certificate of authority to transact business within this Commonwealth during such time as the insurer shall fail to comply with any written order of the Department directed to such insurer.[1] The Department shall have authority to conduct such examinations and hearings and obtain such information by other available means as it may deem necessary to establish the non-compliance by the insurer with the provisions of the order.

B. The Department shall reinstate any suspended insurer upon being satisfied that the insurer has complied with the order of the Department. If such insurer's certificate of authority was revoked, a new certificate of authority to transact business shall be issued. If the certificate was suspended it shall be reinstated by the letter of the Department.

C. Any suspension of the business of an insurer by the Department shall be subject to review only by the Court of Common Pleas of Dauphin County, and mandamus to compel the Department to reinstate the insurer shall be the exclusive procedure for obtaining such review.

Comments:

1. Examples of orders by the Department are contained in Section 206 of this draft, concerning illegal or unsafe practices, Section 399 of this draft, referring to records and examinations, and Section 602 of the draft, relating to impairment of funds.

Section 803. Grounds for Rehabilitation or Liquidation of Domestic Insurer.—The Department may file a petition, as hereinafter in this article provided, for a rule[1] directing a domestic insurer to show cause why it should not be rehabilitated or liquidated, whenever it shall appear that such insurer

(1) Is insolvent; or

(2) Has refused to submit its books, papers, accounts, or affairs to the reasonable inspection or examination of the Department; or

(3) Has neglected or refused to observe an order of the Department to make good within the time prescribed by law any impairment of its capital, if it be a stock company, or of its reserve, if it be a mutual company; or

(4) Has, by contract of reinsurance or otherwise, transferred, or attempted to transfer, substantially its entire property or business, or has entered into any transaction, the effect of which is to merge substantially its entire property or business with the property or business of any other corporation, association, society, order, partnership, or individual, without having first obtained the written approval of the Department; or

(5) Is found, after an examination, to be in such condition that its further transaction of business will be hazardous to its policyholders or members, or to its creditors, or to the public; or

(6) Has wilfully violated its charter or any law of the Commonwealth; or

(7) Has an officer who has refused to be examined under oath, concerning its affairs; or

(8) In the case of a mutual company or a fraternal society, is found to be in such condition, after examination, that it could not meet the requirements for incorporation and authorization specified by law; or

(9) In the case of a mutual company, has standing against it a judgment of any court of record in this Commonwealth, by virtue of which execution has been issued and returned nulla bona by the sheriff of the county in which such company is located; or

(10) Has ceased to transact the business of insurance for a period of one year; or

(11) Has commenced voluntary liquidation or dissolution, or attempts to commence or prosecute any action or proceeding to liquidate its business or affairs, or to dissolve its corporate charter, or to procure the appointment of a receiver, custodian, or sequestrator under any law except this article; or

(12) Has been the subject of an application to any court for the appointment of a receiver, custodian, or sequestrator, whether or not a receiver, custodian, or sequestrator has been appointed; or

(13) Has consented to rehabilitation or liquidation through a majority of its directors, stockholders or members.

Comments:

The term "rehabilitation" is taken from the New York Insurance Law. The Pennsylvania Insurance Department Act of 1921, Section 505, provides that the Insurance Commissioner may take possession of the business of the insurer and eventually turn it back to the insurer. This proceeding is called rehabilitation to distinguish it from liquidation and dissolution.

1. The Pennsylvania and New York insurance laws refer to this proceeding as an "order to show cause." In Pennsylvania, the more common term for such a proceeding is "rule to show cause." This change is, therefore, made to conform more nearly to the Pennsylvania practice.

Section 804. Grounds for Conservation of Assets of Foreign or Alien Insurer.—The Department may file a petition, as hereinafter in this article provided, for a rule directing a foreign or alien insurer to show cause why its assets within this Commonwealth should not be conserved, upon any one or more of the grounds specified in this article for rehabilitation or liquidation of a domestic insurer.

Insurance Laws of Illinois, L. 1925, P. 446, as amended by L. 1929, P. 527, Section 7.

Comments:

This provision is new. No machinery exists at the present time in the Pennsylvania law whereby the Department may take over the assets of a foreign insurer. It has frequently been recommended that the Department should have as much power with reference to foreign insurers as it now has with reference to domestic insurers. However, it has seemed advisable to create in the Department only the power to conserve the assets of a foreign insurer because, generally, the insurance department of the domiciliary state takes possession of such an insurer, and should have unhampered power to liquidate the insurer.

Compare this section with Section 811 of this draft.

Section 805. Grounds for Dissolution of Domestic Insurer.—The Department may file a petition, as hereinafter in this article provided, for a rule directing a domestic insurer to show cause why it should not be dissolved:

(1) In conjunction with a petition for a rule to show cause why the business of such insurer should not be liquidated, or at any time after an order of liquidation has been granted; or

(2) Upon the failure of the insurer to organize and obtain a certificate authorizing it to transact business within one year from the date of its incorporation.

Section 806. Commencement of Proceedings.—The Department, through the Department of Justice, shall commence any proceeding under the provisions of this article by petition to the Court of Common Pleas of Dauphin County, or of the county in which the principal office of the insurer involved is located, for a rule directing the insurer to show cause why the Department should not take possession of its property for the purpose averred in the petition, and for such other relief as the nature of the case and the interests of its members, policyholders, creditors, stockholders, or the public may require. The court shall fix the return day for the rule.

Section 807. Service of Rule.—The rule to show cause, and a copy of the petition therefor, shall be served upon the insurer named in such rule in the manner prescribed by law for personal service of a writ of summons. If it is satisfactorily proved by affidavit that the officers, or the duly designated attorney-in-fact for acceptance of service, of the insurer named in the rule have departed from this Commonwealth, or keep themselves concealed therein; or that the persons residing in this Commonwealth upon whom service is required to be made, have resigned from their offices within forty days prior to the filing of the petition for the rule to show cause, or that service cannot be made immediately by the exercise of reasonable diligence, the rule to show cause may provide for the service thereof in such mannr as the court or judge allowing the rule shall direct.

Section 808. Return of Rule, Hearing, Order of Court; Waiver of Hearing.—A. The court, on or promptly after the return of the rule, shall hold a hearing on the petition and rule, and thereafter shall either:

(1) Deny the rule, or

(2) Grant, together with such other relief as the nature of the case and the interests of the policy holders, creditors, stockholders, members, and the public may require, an order for rehabilitation, liquidation, conservation, or dissolution, in accordance with the prayer of the petition. At the time of making such order, the court shall appoint the Commissioner receiver of the delinquent insurer, for the purpose of administering and executing the provisions of such order.

B. The court may act without a hearing, as required by this section, if the defendant insurer, or its officers or directors in charge of its business and property, waive a hearing and consent to the entering of a decree.

An order to rehabilitate a domestic insurer shall direct the Commissioner as receiver to take possession of the property and assets of such insurer and to conduct the business thereof, and to take such steps as the court shall direct, in order to remove the causes and conditions which have made such proceeding necessary.

B. If at any time the Department shall deem that further efforts to rehabilitate such insurer would be futile, it may apply to the court for an order of liquidation.

C. The Department, or any interested person at any time may petition the court for an order terminating the rehabilitation proceeding and permitting the insurer to resume possession of its property and the conduct of its business; but no such order shall be granted except when, after a full hearing, the court shall determine that the purposes of the proceeding have been fully accomplished.

Order For Liquidation.—An order to liquidate the busines sof a domestic insurer shall direct the Commissioner as receiver to take possession of the property and assets of such insurer, to liquidate its business and to deal with its property and business as receiver, in accordance with the rights, powers and duties imposed upon him by this act, and to give notice to all creditors to present their claims against such insurer.

Section 811. Order For Conservation.—A. An order to conserve the assets of a foreign or alien insurer shall direct the Commissioner as receiver to take possession of the property and assets of such insurer and to conserve them subject to the further direction of the court.

B. The Department, or any interested person, at any time may petition for an order terminating the conservation proceeding and permitting the insurer to resume possession of its property and the conduct of its business; but no such order shall be granted except when, after a full hearing, the court shall determine that the purposes of the proceeding have been fully accomplished.

Section 812. Order For Dissolution.—An order for the dissolution of a domestic insurer shall decree the end of the legal existence of the insurer, and provide that the dissolution shall take effect upon the entry of such order in the office of the prothonotary of Dauphin County, or of the county wherein such insurer had its principal office for the transaction of business.

Section 813. Liquidation of Domestic Mutual Companies.—A. Before granting an order for the liquidation of a domestic mutual company, in accordance with the provisions of this article, the court may, at the heraing on the rule, direct the officers of the company to assess and collect from the policyholders or members thereof, within a specified time, a sum sufficient to satisfy all judgments and executions and all other claims against the company, or the court may make any other order or orders which appear just and necessary. In case it shall finally appear to the court that the officers of such mutual company cannot collect from its members sufficient funds to satisfy the claims against it, the company shall be adjudged insolvent, and the court shall order its liquidation and appoint the Commissioner as receiver to take charge of its property and assets.

B. The Commissioner as receiver shall have the same authority to make assessments upon policyholders or members of such company as the officers thereof are authorized by law or its charter to make, and he shall make and collect assessments to such extent as may be necessary to discharge all obligations existing at any time during such liquidation proceedings.

Section 814. Injunctions.—A. Upon an application by the Department for a rule to show cause, under the provisions of this article, or at any time thereafter, the court before which such order is returnable may issue an injunction restraining the insurer named in the rule, its officers, directors, stockholders, members, trustees, agents, servants, employes, policyholders, attorneys, managers, and all other persons, from the transaction of its business or the waste or disposition of its property, until the further order of the court.

B. Such court may, at any time during a proceeding under the provisions of this article, issue each other injunctions or orders as may be deemed necessary to prevent interference with the Department, the Commissioner, or the proceeding, or a waste of assets of the insurer, or the prosecution of any actions, or the obtaining of preferences, judgments, attachments, or other liens, or the making of any levy against the insurer or against its assets or any part thereof.

Section 815. Status of Commissioner as Receiver.—The Commissioner shall, when he has become receiver of an insurer pursuant to an order for rehabilitation, liquidation, or dissolution, have all the rights, powers, and duties of a general receiver appointed by any court of equity in this Commonwealth. The Commissioner shall, when he has become receiver of a foreign or alien insurer, pursuant to an order for conservation, have all the rights, powers and duties heretofore exercised by, and imposed upon, ancillary receivers of foreign corporations in this Commonwealth.

The Commissioner and his successors shall be vested, in his official capacity as receiver by operation of law, with title to all of the property, contracts and rights of action of the insurer in his possession. The rights and liabilities of any such insurer and of its creditors, policyholders, stockholders, members, and all other persons interested in its estate, shall be fixed as of the date when the order directing the rehabilitation, conservation, liquidation, or dissolution of such insurer is entered in the office of the prothonotary of the county wherein the proceeding was instituted. This section shall not be construed to limit the right of claimants holding contingent claims on such a date to share in an insolvent estate, as is provided in this article.[1]

Comments:

1. This refers to Section 826 of this draft.

Section 816. Commissioner to be Sole Receiver.—A. No court of this Commonwealth shall appoint any corporation or person except the Commissioner as receiver of any domestic, foreign or alien insurer.

B. It shall be unlawful for any insurer to transfer its property or assets to any assignee or trustee for the benefit of creditors. Whenever any court, at the instance of a policyholder, shareholder, or other person entitled by law to institute such proceedings, shall determine that a receiver should be appointed, for any reason whatsoever, it shall appoint the Commissioner as such receiver.

C. Whenever the Commissioner is appointed receiver of an insurer by any court of this Commonwealth, he shall immediately supersede, by operation of law, any other receiver previously appointed by any court of this Commonwealth, or any assignee or trustee previously appointed by such insurer in violation of the provisions of this section.

D. No court shall impose upon the Commissioner as receiver any duties or restrictions which are in conflict with the provisions of this act.

Comments:

This draft is intended to remedy the difficulty which the Insurance Department recently experienced in several cases, wherein the Courts of Philadelphia County had appointed receivers, other than the Commissioner of foreign insurers, and the Court of Dauphin County subsequently appointed the Commissioner as receiver of the same insurers. The law as it now exists is obviously unsatisfactory.

Section 817. Title Insurance and Mortgage Guarantee Companies Partially under Supervision of Department of Banking.—A. The Commissioner may be appointed, in accordance with the provisions of this article, as receiver of the title insurance or mortgage guarantee business of any company which also has the power to transact any class of business under the supervision of the Department of Banking. The Commissioner shall promptly notify the Department of Banking of his appointment as receiver of any such company.

B. Upon receipt of notice from the Secretary of Banking that, as receiver, he has taken possession of any such company, the Department may procure the appointment of the Commissioner as receiver of the title insurance or mortgage guarantee business of such company, in accordance with the provisions of this article.

Comments:

The right of the Department to bring proceedings, under this article, against a title insurance and a mortgage guarantee company, clearly exists aside from this section. However, this section is included to set up the machinery whereby the Insurance Department and the Department of Banking may cooperate in the liquidation, etc., of those companies which come under the supervision of both departments.

Section 818. Actions and Suits by and Against Commissioner.—A. For the purpose of exercising any of the powers and performing any of the duties respectively conferred or imposed upon him as receiver by this act, the Commissioner may, in his name as receiver of the insurer in his possession, without leave of court, prosecute or defend any action at law or in equity in any court of this Commonwealth, or of any other state, wherein such insurer is a party, whether or not such action was pending on behalf of the insurer at the time he took possession.

B. The Commissioner may in his name as receiver, without leave of court, institute and maintain against any officer, director, trustee, manager, or other employe of such insurer, any action at law or in equity which such insurer or any stockholder, member, or creditor thereof, could have maintained. He may, in like manner, bring suit to recover and enforce assessments against the members or stockholders of any insurer in his possession.

C. The Commissioner may institute and prosecute such actions at law or in equity for debts or assessments due the delinquent insurer, without being first required to pay any costs which may have accrued in actions instituted by such insurer to collect the same debts and assessments before the appointment of the Commissioner as receiver of such insurer.[1]

D. All legal proceedings authorized by this section shall be prosecuted or defended by counsel designated by the Department of Justice for the purpose, but paid out of the funds in the Commissioner's possession as receiver.

E. After the Commissioner has taken possession as receiver, no corporation or person shall acquire any lien or judgment, or issue any execution or attachment, against any of the assets of the insurer in the possession of the Commissioner. No person shall institute any foreclosure proceedings against any property in which the Commissioner has any title or interest, without first obtaining permission from the court which appointed the Commissioner receiver. All suits and claims against an insurer in the possession of the Commissioner as receiver, which were not instituted prior to the date of the order of the court appointing the Commissioner as receiver, must be presented in such court under the same caption, and in the same proceeding, as the rule to show cause pursuant to which the Commissioner was appointed as receiver.

Comments:

The purpose of this section is to remove the common law obstacles which prevent a receiver from bringing suits without the consent of the receivership court.

1. This paragraph codifies the ruling contained in the opinion of Thomas J. Baldridge, Attorney General to Colonel Matthew H. Taggart, Insurance Commissioner, dated November 10, 1927, as recorded in Official Opinions of the Attorney General, 1927-1928, at page 269.

Section 819. Appointment of Deputy Receivers, Counsel, and Other Assistants.—The Commissioner may appoint one or more official agents, to be known as deputy receivers, to assist him in the management, rehabilitation, conservation, liquidation, or dissolution of an insurer. The Commissioner may delegate to such deputy receiver or receivers any duty imposed upon, or right or power granted to, him as receiver.

The Commissioner may also employ such clerks and assistants as he deems necessary, and as counsel such deputy attorneys general or other attorneys as may be assigned by the Department of Justice to him for the handling of any legal business pertaining to the affairs or property of such insurer. He may employ such physicians as he deems necessary for the best interests of any insurer in his possession, to provide medical service and assistance for any policyholder or for an injured employe of any insured[1]. He may also retain to assist him any officer or other employe of the insurer of which he has been appointed receiver[2].

Comments:

The title "deputy receiver" seems preferable, since the Commissioner is the "receiver." This title more adequately describes the duties than the title "special deputy commissioner," or "statutory liquidator." There is nothing to prevent the Commissioner from giving his deputy receiver the title of special deputy, so far as the Insurance Department is concerned.

1. Some compensation policies entitle the injured person to medical attention. In other cases, it is the policy of the insurance company to provide medical attention, in order to reduce the amount of compensation payable, or to avert partial or total disability.

It is clear that a staff of able physicians may be able to minimize claims against the funds of an insurer, as well as a staff of attorneys is able to do. Furthermore, the right to employ physicians probably exists under the present law by inference, and, therefore, should be included in this draft.

2 This last provision is found in the draft of the Department of Banking Code, and in the general practice in the liquidation of banks.

Section 820. Payment of Salaries and Expenses.—The compensation of deputy receivers, clerks, physicians, and assistants, and all expenses of taking possession of, and managing, the assets of any insurer, pursuant to an order for its rehabilitation, conservation, liquidation, or dissolution, shall be fixed by the Commissioner, subject to the final approval by the court, and shall, on certificate of the Commissioner, be paid out of the funds or asests of such insurer. The compensation of counsel shall be fixed and paid in like manner except that the Commissioner shall, before fixing the compensation, obtain the written approval of the Attorney General.

Section 821. Record Notice of Title in Receiver.—The Commissioner shall, as soon as possible, file in the office of the recorder of deeds in every county wherein is situated real estate owned by the insurer a copy of the order of the court directing him as receiver to take possession of the property of the insurer, certified by the prothonotary who entered the original order. The filing of such copy of the order of the court shall impart the same notice that title has passed to the Commissioner as receiver, as a deed, bill of sale, or other evidence of title duly recorded by such insurer would impart.

Comments:

This provision is desirable in order that the Commissioner's title to real estate may not be clouded when he attempts to sell such real estate under Section 830, infra. In this manner, an uninterrupted chain of record title exists.

Section 822.—Rules and Regulations.—For the purposes set forth in this article, the Commissioner as receiver shall have the power, subject to the approval of the court, to make and prescribe such rules and regulations as to him shall seem proper.

Section 823. Examination of Witnesses and Punishment for Contempt.—A. In order to enable the Commissioner to exercise any right or power, or perform any duty, granted to or imposed upon him as receiver by this act, he shall have the power to issue subpoenas requiring the attendance of, or the production of pertinent books and papers by, any officer, director, agent, employe, or member, respectively, of the insurer in the possession of the Commissioner, or any other individual who the Commissioner believes has information of importance regarding the affairs of the insurer. He shall also have the power to question such witnesses under oath or affirmation, and to examine such books and papers.

B. The Commissioner may delegate to his deputy receiver or other duly authorized agent, the power granted to him as receiver by this section.

C. Any witness who refuses to obey a subpoena issued under this section, or who refuses to be sworn or affirmed, or to testify, or who is guilty of any contempt after summons to appear, may be punished for contempt by the court which appointed the Commissioner as receiver.

Section 824. Rights of Witnesses.—Every witness called by the Commissioner or his duly authorized agent, in connection with the affairs of the insurer in his possession, shall be entitled to the fees and mileage customarily paid to witnesses in the courts of law of the county wherein the proceedings for rehabilitation, conservation, liquidation, or dissolution are begun.

If any person shall ask to be excused from testifying or producing any book or paper or other document before the Commissioner or his duly authorized agent for the reason that the testimony or evidence, documentary or otherwise, required of him may tend to incriminate or degrade him, or may subject him to a penalty or forfeiture, and if such person shall, notwithstanding, be directed by the Commissioner or his duly authorized agent to testify or to produce such book, paper or document, he must, none the less, comply with such direction; but in such event he shall not thereafter be prosecuted or subjected to any penalty or forfeiture for, or on account of, any transaction, matter, or thing concerning which he may testify or produce evidence, documentary or otherwise, pursuant to the direction of the Commissioner, and no testimony so given or produced shall be admissable against him in any criminal action, suit or proceeding, investigation, inquisition or inquiry. No person so testifying shall be exempt from prosecution or punishment for any perjury or other false statement committed or made by him in his testimony given, as herein provided for.

Comments:

This section is intended to facilitate the Commissioner's work in obtaining information. Witness fees are specifically provided for in order to eliminate any doubt as to their propriety. Moreover, its is more important for the Commissioner to obtain data for the benefit of the policyholders and the public than it is to forego such information in the hope that the witness may be criminally prosecuted later.

Section 825. Time to File Claims Against Insurer.—When an order for the liquidation of a domestic insurer has been granted by the court, the Commisisoner shall notify all persons having claims against such insurer to present them to him at a place specified in such notice, within four months from the date of the entry of such order. The last day for the filing of proofs of claim shall be specified in the notice.

Any proof of claim filed subsequent to the date specified shall not share in the distribution of the assets until all allowed claims, proof of which have been filed before said date, have been paid in full, with interest.

Reference:

General Insurance Act of New Jersey, Chapter 134, L. 1902, as amended by Chapter 244, L. 1931, Section 56a.

Comments:

This section is fundamentally necessary. The New Jersey Act, above cited, allows only a three months' period.

Section 826. Proof and Allowance of Claims.—A. A proof of claim shall consist of a statement under oath, in writing signed by the claimant, setting forth the claim, the consideration therefor, what collateral, if any, is held therefor, what payments, if any, have been made thereon, and that the sum claimed is justly owing by the insurer to the claimant. Whenever a claim is founded upon an instrument in writing, such instrument, unless lost or destroyed, shall be filed with the proof of claim. If such instrument is lost or destroyed, a statement of such fact and of the attending circumstances shall be filed under oath with the claim.

B. Upon the liquidation of any domestic insurer which has issued policies insuring the lives of persons, the Commissioner shall, within thirty days after the last day set for the filing of claims, make a list of the persons who have not filed proofs of claim with him, to whom it appears to his entire satisfaction, from the books of the company, there are owing amounts on such policies, and he shall set opposite the name of each person such amount so owing to such person. Each person whose name shall appear upon said list shall be deemed to have duly filed, prior to the last day set for the filing of claims, a proof of claim for the amount set opposite his name on said list.

C. A contingent claim may be considered, if properly presented, and may be allowed to share in the distribution of the assets of an insurer in the possession of the Commissioner as receiver, where:

(1) Such claim becomes absolute against the insurer, on or before the last day fixed for the filing of proofs of claim against the assets of such insurer; or

(2) There is a surplus and the liquidation is thereafter conducted upon the basis that such insurer is solvent.

D. Any person who has a cause of action against an insured or an insurer, which is the subject of indemnity under a liability policy issued by such insurer, shall have the right to file a claim in the liquidation proceeding of such insurer, regardless of the fact that such claim may be contingent, and such claim may be allowed, if:

(1) It may be reasonably inferred from the proof presented upon such claim that such person would be able to obtain a judgment upon such cause of action against such insurer; and

(2) Such person shall furnish suitable proof that no further valid claims against such insurer arising out of his cause of action, other than those already presented, can be made, unless, for good cause shown, the court in which the proceeding is pending shall otherwise direct; and

(3) The total liability of such insurer to all claimants arising out of the same act of its insured shall be no greater than its total liability would be were it not in liquidation.

Provided, however, that no judgment taken by default, or by collusion, against such an insured shall be considered as evidence in the liquidation proceeding, either of the liability of such insured to such person upon such cause of action, or of the amount of damages to which such person is therein entitled.

E. No claim of any secured claimant shall be allowed for a sum greater than the difference between the value of the security, as of the date of the appointment of the Commissioner as receiver, and the amount for which the claim is allowed, unless the claimant shall surrender his security to the Commissioner, in which event the claim shall be allowed in the full amount for which it is valued.

Insurance Laws of New York, L. 1932, Chapter 191, Section 423.

Comments:

This section is new to Pennsylvania law, and is substantially a restatement of the New York law, above referred to.
No right to file a contingent claim exists at the present time, and the two paragraphs on contingent claims were inserted to provide this much needed right.

Section 827. Priority of Claims for Wages.—All wages actually owing to clerical employes of an insurer, against whom a proceeding under this article is commenced, for services rendered within three months prior to the commencement of such proceeding, not exceeding Three Hundred Dollars ($300.00) to each employe, shall be paid prior to the payment of every other debt or claim, and, subject to the direction of the court, shall be paid as soon as possible after the proceeding has been commenced; however, at all times sufficient funds shall be reserved for the expenses of administration.

Reference:

Insurance Laws of New York, L. 1932, Chapter 191, Section 419.

Section 828. Set-offs.—A. No set-off shall be allowed in favor of any assignee of a claim against the insurer in the possession of the Commissioner as receiver, if:

(1) The obligation of the insurer to the assignor was purchased by the assignee for the purpose of being used as a set-off; or

(2) Notice of the assignment was not given to the insurer; but if the assignee can establish by affirmative proof that the assignment was in fact made more than four months prior to the granting of the rule to show cause, set-off may be allowed in favor of the assignee.

B. No set-off shall be allowed in favor of any person whose obligation is to pay an assessment levied against members of a mutual insurer, or to pay a balance upon a subscription to the capital stock of a stock company.

Reference:

Insurance Laws of New York, L. 1932, Chapter 191, Section 420.

Comments:

While the decision law of this Commonwealth is fairly well settled in the matter of set-offs in the case of general receiverships, other than those of insurance companies, it seems necessary to include this section in this article.

This is particularly true of the last paragraph, which forbids set-off of assessments, etc., because these provisions are peculiar to insurance receiverships.

Section 829. Voidable Transfers.—A. Any transfer of, or lien upon, the property of an insurer, made or created within four months prior to the granting of a rule to show cause under this article, with the intent of giving to any creditor, or of enabling him to obtain, a greater percentage of his debt than any other creditor of the same class, shall be voidable if such creditor when he accepted it had reasonable cause to believe that such a preference would occur[1].

B. Every director, officer, employe, stockholder, member, and any other person acting on behalf of such insurer, who shall be concerned in any such prohibited act or deed, and every person receiving thereby any property of such insurer or the benefit thereof, shall be personally liable therefor, and shall be bound to account to the Commissioner as receiver[2].

C. The Commissioner as receiver may avoid any transfer of, or lien upon, the property of an insurer which any creditor, stockholder, or member of such insurer might have avoided, and may recover the property so transferred, or its value from the person to whom it was transferred, unless he was a bona fide holder for value prior to the date of the entry of the order appointing the Commissioner as receiver. Such property may be recovered, or its value collected, from whoever may have received it, except a bona fide holder for value.

Comments:

This section is new to Pennsylvania law. Its provisions exist in modified forms in the United States bankruptcy laws and the various state insolvency acts.

1. This refers to liens prior to the appointment of the Commissioner as receiver. Compare this section with Section 818 of this draft, which prohibits the acquisition of liens after the Commissioner's appointment.

2. See Section 818 of this draft, which provides for actions at law or in equity against directors, officers, etc.

Section 830. Sale or Disposition of Assets.—The Commissioner may, without leave of court[1], but subject to the approval of the court at the audit of the Commissioner's account:

(1) Sell, lease, or otherwise dispose of the real and personal property, or any part thereof, of any insurer in his possession;

(2) Sell listed or unlisted securities of such insurer for a sum equal at least to the market value of such securities on any exchange at the time of the sale by the Commissioner[2];

(3) Sell or compound all doubtful or uncollectible debts or claims owing to such insurer, including claims based upon an assessment levied against a member of a mutual insurer.

General Insurance Act of New Jersey, Chapter 134, L. 1902, as amended by Chapter 244, L. 1931, Section 56a.

Comments:

1. The Commissioner has experienced delay in the sale of real estate, because of the necessity of obtaining the consent of the court in advance by means of a petition reciting all the circumstances surrounding the property and its values. This draft proposes to render the procedure most flexible, so as to permit the Commissioner to sell assets at the most opportune time.

2. This paragraph may not be deemed necessary in view of the paragraph immediately preceding it. Nevertheless, it was made into a separate paragraph because of the provision as to market value.

Section 831. Power of Commissioner to Borrow from Governmental Agencies.—The Commissioner may, without leave of court, apply for and accept loans of money from any board, commission, corporation, agency, or instrumentality created by the United States government, except national banks, or by this Commonwealth, for the purpose of expediting the liquidation of the assets of the insurer of which he is receiver, and the distribution of the proceeds thereof to the creditors, policyholders, members, or stockholders. The Commissioner may pledge as security for such loans all or any part of the securities or assets of any such insurer in his possession as receiver.

Reference:

Insurance Laws of New Jersey, L. 1932, Chapter 86, Section 1.

Comments:

The Act of July 20, 1932, P. L. 7, Acts and Vetoes, Special Session of 1932, permits the Secretary of Banking to borrow money from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Inasmuch as this corporation is a temporary body, mention of it by name seems inappropriate in this act. The Commissioner certainly should have the power to borrow money whenever it is necessary, and to pledge therefor the assets of the insurer.

Section 832. Depositories.—The moneys collected by the Commissioner as receiver shall from time to time be deposited by him in such State or national banks, trust companies, or savings banks as have been designated by the Board of Finance and Revenue as State depositories[1].

Section 833. Report of the Commissioner as Receiver; Procedure Thereon.—A. When the Commissioner has, in pursuance of the provisions of this act, liquidated any insurer, he shall, as soon as the assets thereof have been converted into money, file a complete account in the court of common pleas of the county in which the proceedings were instituted, showing:

(1) All deposits and assets of such insurer;

(2) All the moneys paid to the Commissioner on account of the deposits and assets of such insurer;

(3) All exceptions filed to any claims or accounts;

(4) All payments made or contracted for by the Commissioner;

(5) The scheme of distribution to creditors, policyholders, members or stockholders.

B. Such account shall be proceeded with and passed upon as other accounts are passed upon by the court. If exceptions to the account have been filed with the Commissioner, they shall have the same force and effect as if filed in the court. Upon confirmation of the account, if no exceptions be filed thereto, or upon final disposition by the court of exceptions thereto, the Commissioner shall make distribution, as shown by the account or as decreed by the court. Upon the complete distribution of all the assets of such insurer, the Commissioner shall report such fact to the court.

C. Dividends remaining unclaimed or unpaid in the hands of the Commissioner for six months after the final order of distribution shall be escheated and paid to the Department of Revenue, in accordance with the provisions of the Fiscal Code relating to escheats.

Comments:

This section merely restates, with some amplification, the existing Pennsylvania law.

Section 834. Quo Warranto.—When any domestic company under the supervision of the Department, within two years after the date of its incorporation:

(1) Has not paid in the capital required by law, or

(2) Has not in any manner exercised at least one of the powers conferred upon it by its articles of incorporation or by law, or

(3) Has not obtained a certificate authorizing it to transact business in this Commonwealth, the Department shall give written notice thereof to the Department of Justice. The Department of Justice shall thereupon proceed by quo warranto against such company, in the manner provided by law, to oust it from its corporate powers and privileges.

Comments:

There is no provision at the present time in the laws of this Commonwealth for the termination of the powers of an insurance company by means of quo warranto proceedings. This remedy should be available to the Attorney General against all classes of corporations. Therefore, it is specifically enacted in this act, so that its absence cannot be construed to be a denial of this remedy.

AGENTS

Section 901. Scope of This Article.—A. A person, partnership, or corporation, not a duly licensed insurance broker, who, for or without compensation:

(1) Solicits insurance on behalf of any insurer, or

(2) Transmits for a person, partnership, or corporation, other than himself or itself, an application for a policy of insurance to or from such insurer, or

(3) Offers or assumes to act in the negotiation of such insurance, or in any manner aids in transacting the insurance business of any such insurer, by negotiating for or placing risks, delivering policies, or collecting premiums, for such insurer, shall be an agent within the intent of this article, and shall thereby become liable to all the duties, requirements, liabilities, and penalties to which an agent of such insurer is subject.

B. The word "agent" shall not include officers or salaried employes of any insurer authorized to transact business in this Commonwealth, if they do not slicit, negotiate, or place risks, nor shall it include nonresident salaried employes of foreign exchanges which maintain no offices in the Commonwealth, and if such employes do not receive commissions.

C. Nothing in this article shall be held to extend to or include any clerical help that may be necessary in performing any of the functions of agents, or to require such clerical help to be licensed in the same manner as their employers. No such clerical help shall solicit insurance as an agent, within the meaning of this act, unless duly licensed as an agent by the Department.[1]

Insurance Laws of Illinois, L. 1931, P. 624, Section 15; P. 619, Section 15.

Comments:

1. This provision is new to Pennsylvania law. It is an attempt to set up some definite dividing line between those employes of an agent who need licenses and those who do not. At the present time the law is indefinite on this subject. There are border line cases which no statute can cover, but which will depend upon a reasonable interpretation of the above section.

This section substantially reenacts part of Section 601 of the Insurance Department Act, relating to the definition of "agents." It seemed more logical to separate these provisions from the real definition of "agent," which appears in Section 2 of this draft, because here the scope of the penal provisions is merely being elaborated, extended and limited.

Section 902. Certificate of Authority.—A. All insurers authorized by law to transact business within this Commonwealth shall certify to the Department the names and addresses of all agents appointed or authorized by them to solicit insurance in this Commonwealth, and the classes of business which such agents are authorized to solicit.[1] The authority of each such agent shall continue until it is canceled by the insurer by written notice filed with the Department, or until the certificate of authority of the insurer, or the license of the agent, shall be revoked by the Department.[2]

B. The Department shall record the names and addresses of agents so certified in such manner that the names of duly authorized agents and their respective insurers may be conveniently inspected.[3]

C. A person authorized by an insurer to solicit insurance or applications therefore shall, in any controversy between the insured or his beneficiary and the insurer, be held to be the agent of the insurer, anything in the application or policy to the contrary notwithstanding.

Comments:

1. This clause, including the classes of business which such agents are authorized to solicit is borrowed from the Insurance Laws of Oregon, Section 46-112 (3).
2. Note that this paragraph refers to the agent's authority from his principal, and not his license from the Department.
3 Compare this section with Section 401 (5) of this draft, wherein it is provided that the records of the Department shall include "the names and addresses of all duly authorized agents and their respective insurers."

Section 903. Agent's License.—A. The Department may issue an agent's license to any person at least twenty-one years of age, and to any partnership or corporation, after the agent has been certified by an insurer, has filed an approved application and voucher with the Department, as required by this act, and has successfully passed an examination by the Department.

B. A license as agent shall not be granted to any corporation unless by the provisions of its charter it is authorized to engage in the business of insurance or real estate, and in no other business, and unless individual licenses are also obtained for each active officer of such corporation. A license shall not be granted to a partnership or firm unless individual licenses are also obtained for each active member of such partnership or firm.

C. The license shall state that the insurer represented by the agent has complied with the requirements of law and has been authorized by the Department to transact the specified class or classes[1] of insurance business in this Commonwealth, and that the agent has been duly authorized by the insurer named in the license.

D. It shall not be necessary for an agent of a domestic mutual fire insurance company to obtain a license under the provisions of this act.

Comments:

1. The insurance laws of Massachusetts provide as follows: "Such license may limit the authority of the licensee to one or more of the classes of business which the company is authorized to transact, in which case the notice of appointment shall specify, in a manner satisfactory to the commissioner, the class or classes of business to be transacted by the appointee." General Laws of Massachusetts, Chapter 175, Section 163.

Section 904. Expiration of License.—Every agent's license shall expire annually at midnight of March thirty-first, unless previously terminated because the insurer revokes the authority of the agent to represent it, or because the Department, for cause, revokes the license of the agent or the certificate of authority of the insurer.

Section 905. Penalty For Acting as Agent Without License.—Any person, partnership, or corporation, who or which, without first obtaining a license under the provisions of this article, shall transact business within this Commonwealth as the agent of an insurer, other than a domestic mutual fire company, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding Five Hundred Dollars ($500.00).

References:

Comments:

Compare this section with the Pennsylvania Insurance Department Act of 1921, Section 623, which refers to brokers, wherein the fine is $1,000.00, and a penalty is imposed upon any company transacting business with an unlicensed broker.

Section 906. Personal Liability of Agents.—An Agent shall be personally liable on all contracts of insurance or surety unlawfully made by or through him, directly or indirectly, for or in behalf of any insurer not authorized to do business in this Commonwealth,[1] or for or in behalf of any suprious, fictitious, nonexisting, dissolved, inactive, liquidating or liquidated insurer.[2] Any person soliciting risks, forwarding premiums, or countersigning or delivering policies, shall be deemed to be an agent of the insurer, within the meaning of this section.

References:

Pennsylvania Insurance Department Act of 1921, Section 605, 40 PS Sec. 235.

Comments:

1. The penal provisions for this type of solicitation are found in Section 907 of this draft.

2. The penal provisions for this type of solicitation are found in Section 908 of this draft. Personal liability of agents who act for fictitious or dead companies is new to Pennsylvania law, and would probably exist aside from statutory law. However, the common law would not be clear where the insurer-principal is bankrupt, and for this reason this draft extends personal liability to cover the entire scope of Section 908 of this draft.

Section 907. Penalty for Advertising as Agent of an Unauthorized Insurer.—Any person, partnership, or corporation within this Commonwealth, who or which, by poster, newspaper, circular, letter, radio broadcast, or in any other manner, represents or advertises himself or itself as the agent of, or who advertises or publishes advertising for, any foreign or alien insurer which has not complied with the laws of this Commonwealth, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be sentenced to pay a fine of not more than One Thousand Dollars ($1,000.00).

Section 908. Penalties for Soliciting for Fictitious, Inactive or Nonexistent Companies.—Any individual, partnership, or corporation, or the officers, managers, agents, owners, or representatives, thereof, offering within this Commonwealth, in person or by advertisement, poster, newspaper, letter, circular, radio broadcast or in any other manner, to sell, procure, or obtain policies, certificates, agreements, binders, or applications for insurance, surety, or indemnity, for or on behalf of any spurious, fictitious, nonexisting, dissolved, inactive, liquidating or bankrupt insurer, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to not more than one year's or less than six months' imprisonment, and, in addition thereto, shall pay a fine of not more than Five Hundred Dollars ($500.00) nor less than One Hundred Dollars ($100.00).

BROKERS

Section 1001. Broker's License.—A. The Department may issue a broker's license to any person at least twenty-one years of age, and to any partnership or corporation, after the broker has filed an approved application and voucher with the Department, and successfully passed an examination by the Department.

B. A license as broker shall not be granted to any corporation unless, by the provisions of its charter, it is authorized to engage in the business of insurance or real estate, and in no other business, and unless individual licenses are also obtained for each active officer of such corporation. A license shall not be granted to a partnership or firm unless individual licenses are also obtained for each active member of such partnership or firm.

C. The license shall authorize the holder thereof to act as insurance broker to negotiate contracts of insurance or reinsurance, other than life insurance, with any insurer, or the agents thereof, authorized by law to transact business in this Commonwealth.

Section 1002. Expiration of License.—Every broker's license shall expire annually one year from the date of issue, unless previously revoked by the Department.

Section 1003. Penalties for Acting as Broker Without a License and for Transacting Business with an Unlicensed Broker.—A. Any person, partnership, or corporation, who or which, without first obtaining a broker's license, shall, within this Commonwealth, transact business as a broker, or solicit insurance and transmit applications for policies of insurance on behalf of another broker, or negotiate for or place risks, or offer or assume to act in the negotiation of insurance, or deliver policies or collect premiums for policies effective in this Commonwealth, or aid in any manner in transacting the insurance business, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding One Thousand Dollars ($1,000.00).

B. This section shall not apply to agents licensed by the Department, when they act on behalf of the insurer which they are licensed to represent.

C. Any insurer, or its agent, accepting applications or orders for insurance, or securing any insurance business through anyone acting without a broker's license issued by the Department, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding One Thousand Dollars ($1,000.00).

Section 1004. Excess Insurance Brokers.—The Department may issue a license, revokable at any time, permitting the person, partnership, or corporation named therein to act as broker to procure for his clients policies of fire or marine insurance from insurers not authorized to do business in this Commonwealth. Before any fire or marine insurance, excepting, however, marine insurance on vessels and vessel property engaged in interstate or foreign commerce, shall be procured under such license, the broker and the party desiring the insurance shall execute and file with the Department an affidavit setting forth that the party desiring insurance is, after diligent effort, unable to procure the amount required to protect the property owned or controlled by or entrusted to him, from fire or marine insurers, other than mutual companies, duly authorized to transact business in this Commonwealth. Every broker licensed under this section shall keep a separate record of all policies of unauthorized insurers procured by him. Such record shall be open at all times to inspection or examination by the Department, without notice, at the expense of such broker, and shall show as to each transaction:

(1) The exact amount of the insurance placed,
(2) The name of the insured,
(3) The location of the insured property,
(4) The gross premium mentioned in the policy,
(5) The name of the insurer issuing the policy, and
(6) The number, date and term of the policy.

Each such policy shall have written or printed on the outside thereof the name of the licensed broker who obtained it and introduced it into the Commonwealth, and after his name shall appear the words "licensed excess insurance broker."

Pennsylvania Insurance Department Act of 1921, Section 624, 40 PS Sec. 254.

Comments:

In the Insurance Laws of Oregon, Sections 46-201 to 46-208, such excess insurance brokers are called "Surplus Line Agents." The laws of many other states refer to them as agents. It would seem preferable to call them "brokers," to distinguish them from agents who act for unauthorized companies.
This draft merely restates the existing Pennsylvania law.

Section 1005. Bond of Excess Insurance Brokers; Payment of Taxes.—A. Each person, partnership, and corporation receiving a license as excess insurance broker shall, before transacting any business thereunder, execute and deliver to the Department a bond in the penal sum of One Thousand Dollars ($1,000.00), with such security as the Department may approve, conditioned that such excess insurance broker will faithfully comply with all requirements of this act, and will pay to the Department of Revenue, in January of each year, a tax of three per cent (3%) upon the gross premiums paid or payable, during or for the preceding year, upon all policies in unauthorized companies procured by such broker, excepting, however, policies of marine insurance on vessels and vessel property engaged in interstate or foreign commerce, and excepting net premiums returned on policies canceled.

B. In default of payment of the tax, as herein provided, before the thirtieth day of January of each year, the Department of Revenue shall demand a statement, under oath, from the broker, and, failing to obtain the same, the Department of Revenue shall certify such default to the Insurance Department. Thereupon the Insurance Department shall proceed against the broker in the same manner as if he had acted without a license.

Section 1006. Clerical Help.—Nothing in this article shall be held to extend to or include any clerical help that may be necessary in performing any of the functions of brokers, or to require such clerical help to be licensed in the same manner as their employers. No such clerical help shall solicit insurance as a broker, within the meaning of this act, unless duly licensed as a broker by the Department.

ADJUSTERS AND ADJUSTER SOLICITORS

Section 1101. Scope of Provisions of this Article Relating to Adjusters.—The term "adjuster," within the meaning of this article, does not include an agent or employe of an insurer through whom a policy of insurance was written, in adjusting loss or damage under such policy, nor does it include a broker or agent acting as adjuster, if the services of the adjuster or broker in the adjustment are without compensation. Lawyers who are duly admitted members of the bar, and who settle the claims of clients, shall not be deemed to be adjusters.

Comments:

Compare this section with Section 901 of this draft, which is a similar section on agents.

Section 1102. Adjuster's License and Adjuster Solicitor's License.—A. The Department may issue an adjuster's license or an adjuster solicitor's license to any person at least twenty-one years of age, and to any partnership or corporation, if the applicant for a license has filed an approved application and voucher with the Department, and has successfully passed an examination by the Department.

B. A license as adjuster or adjuster solicitor shall not be granted to any corporation unless by the provisions of its charter it is authorized to engage in the business of insurance or real estate, and in no other business, and unless individual licenses are also secured for each active officer of such corporation. A license shall not be granted to a partnership or firm unless individual licenses are secured for each active member of such partnership or firm .

C. A license shall not be issued to any person, partnership, or corporation, engaged or interested in, or receiving any profit from, nor shall the holder of such license engage or be interested in, or receive any profit from, any salvage or similar business.

Comments:

This section corresponds with the previous sections of this draft on licenses of agents and brokers (Sections 903 and 1001).

Section 1103. Expiration of License.—Every adjuster's license and every adjuster solicitor's license shall expire one year from the date of issue unless previously revoked by the Department.

Section 1104. Contracts with Insureds.—A licensed adjuster shall not, directly or indirectly, act within this Commonwealth as an adjuster without having first entered into a contract, in writing, in a form approved by the Department, and executed in duplicate by the adjuster and the insured, or his duly authorized representative. One copy of such contract shall be kept on file by the adjuster, open at all times to inspection, without notice, by the Department.

An adjuster solicitor shall not use any form of contract other than that approved for the adjuster for whom he is soliciting, nor shall he make any contracts or agreements for himself or for the adjuster, other than such as are specified in the approved form of contract.

Section 1105. Records.—A. Every licensed adjuster shall keep a full record of his transactions, open at all times, without notice, to the inspection of the Department, showing as to each transaction:

(1) The name of the insured;

(2) The date, location and amount of the loss;

(3) The name of the insurer, and the amount, expiration, date and number of each policy of insurance carried upon the property involved;

(4) An itemized statement of all recoveries by the insured from all sources;

(5) The name or names and addresses of any person or persons soliciting the adjustment, and the date or dates when solicited;

(6) The total compensation received for adjustment, and the amount of commission, salary or compensation paid to each employe and solicitor; and

(7) Such other information as the Department may require.

B. Every adjuster solicitor shall keep a full record of his transactions as such, open at all times, without notice, to the inspector of the Department, showing as to each transaction:

(1) The name of the insured;

(2) The date and location of the loss;

(3) The name, or names, and addresses of any person or persons soliciting the adjustment for or with him, and the date or dates of the solicitation; and

(4) Such other information as the Department may require.

Section 1106. Penalty for Acting Without a License.—Any person, partnership, or corporation, directly or indirectly, acting within this Commonwealth as adjuster, or as adjuster solicitor, without first procuring from the Department a license as adjuster, or adjuster solicitor, respectively, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to pay a fine of not less than Five Hundred Dollars ($500.00) nor more than One Thousand Dollars ($1,000.00)

Section 1107. Bonds; Suits Thereunder.—A. Every person, partnership, association, or corporation, receiving an adjuster's license, shall, before transacting any business thereunder, execute and deliver to the Commissioner a bond in the penal sum of Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000.00), with sureties approved by the Commissioner.

B. Every person, partnership, association, or corporation, receiving an adjuster solicitor's license, shall, before transacting any business thereunder, execute and deliver to the Commissioner a bond in the penal sum of One Thousand Dollars ($1,000.00), with sureties approved by the Commissioner.

C. The bond of the adjuster or adjuster solicitor shall be conditioned that said adjuster or adjuster solicitor shall faithfully comply with all the requirements of this act, and shall not embezzle or fraudulently convert to his own use, or, with intent to use or embezzle, take, secrete, or otherwise dispose of, or fraudulently withhold, appropriate, lend, invest, or otherwise use or apply, any money or substitute for money, or any salvage, goods, or property received by him as adjuster or adjuster solicitor, or employe of an adjuster, contrary to the instructions or without the consent of the insured or his legal representative.

D. Any person, firm, or corporation, who or which, has entered into a contract with an adjuster, as provided in this article, and shall suffer loss by reason of the failure of the adjuster to comply therewith and faithfully perform his duties, shall have the right to intervene and be made a party to any action instituted by the Commonwealth on the bond of the adjuster, and to have his rights and claims adjudicated in such action and judgment rendered thereon, subject, however, to the priority of the claim and judgment of the Commonwealth. If the amount of the liability of the surety on such bond is insufficient to pay the full amount of all claims and demands, then, after paying the full amount due the Commonwealth, the remainder shall be distributed pro rata among the interveners.

E. If the Commonwealth does not bring suit, the Department shall furnish a certified copy of the bond to any person upon application and the filing of an affidavit that he has suffered loss by reason of the failure of the adjuster to comply with this act or faithfully to perform his duties. Such person shall have a right of action upon such bond, and shall be and is hereby authorized to bring suit, in the name of the Commonwealth, for his use and benefit, against the adjuster and his sureties, and to prosecute the same to final judgment and execution. Suit by any insured upon the bond of the adjuster shall be commenced within one year after the performance and final settlement of such contract, or after demand for performance and final settlement has been refused or ignored, and not later. When suit has been thus instituted by an insured, no other action shall be brought by any other claimant, but any other claimant may intervene in the action first brought and be made a party thereto if he applies for leave to intervene within the time herein allowed for bringing suit. If two or more actions be brought on the same day, the action in which the largest claim is demanded shall be regarded as the first action and the other actions shall be discontinued, subject to the right of the plaintiffs therein to intervene in the first action. Any creditor, who has brought an action within one year, as aforesaid, after a suit has been instituted previously or on the same day by another creditor, may intervene in the suit first brought within the year, notwithstanding the fact that the intervenion in such case be after the expiration of the year.

F. If the recovery on the bond should be inadequate to pay the amounts found due to all creditors, judgment shall be given to each creditor for his pro rata share of the amount of the recovery. The surety on the bond may pay into court, for distribution among claimants and creditors, the full amount of the surety's liability, to wit, the penalty named in the bond, less any amount which the surety may have had to pay to the Commonwealth by reason of the execution of the bond, and, upon so doing, the surety shall be relieved from further liability.

G. In every suit instituted under the provisions of this section, such personal notice as the court may direct shall be given to all known creditors, informing them of the pendency of the suit and of their right to intervene, and, in addition, notice shall be given by publication in the legal journal, and, if there be no legal journal, then in a newspaper of general circulation published in the county or municipality where the contract was performed, or to be performed, once a week for three successive weeks; except that when suit is begun within three weeks of the end of the year allowed for bringing it, notice by publication shall be only for the period intervening between the time suit was begun and the end of the year.

ARTICLE XII

THE GRANTING AND REVOCATION OF LICENSES

Section 1201. Application for License; Verification.—A. Before any agent's, broker's, adjuster's, or adjuster solicitor's license shall be issued by the Department, there must be filed with it a written application, which shall be in the form prescribed by the Department and must set forth:

(1) The name and address of the applicant, and, if it be a partnership, the name and address of each member thereof, and if it be a corporation, the name and address of each of its officers and directors;

(2) Whether any license as agent, broker, adjuster or adjuster solicitor has been issued or refused theretofore by the Department to the applicant; and, if the applicant be an individual, whether any such license has been issued theretofore to any partnership of which he was or is a member, or to any corporation of which he was or is an officer or director; and, if the applicant be a partnership, whether any such license has been issued theretofore to any member thereof; and, if the applicant be a corporation, whether any such license has been issued theretofore to any officer or director of such corporation;

(3) The business in which the applicant has been engaged for the year next preceding the date of application, and, if employed by another, the name and address of such employer;

(4) Such information as the Department may require of applicants to enable it to determine their trustworthiness and competency to transact the insurance business as agents, brokers, adjusters or adjuster solicitors, in such manner as to safeguard the interests of the insurer and the public.

B. An application for a license must be signed and verified by the applicant, and, if made by a partnership or corporation, by each member, officer, or director thereof to be authorized by such license to act as an agent broker, adjuster, or adjuster solicitor.

C. The requirements of this section shall not apply to an application for the renewal of a license, unless the Department shall deem them necessary or advisable to safeguard the insurer or the public.[1]

Insurance Laws of Illinois, L. 1931, P. 619, Sections 4 and 7; P. 624, Sections 4 and 7.

Comments:

The wording of this section is very similar to that of the Pennsylvania law relating to adjusters, as found in the Act of April 25, 1921, P. L. 276, Section 4, as last amended by the Act of June 22, 1931, P. L. 605, cited above. The same general arrangement is used in the law of Illinois cited above, which relates to agents and brokers. This draft is more thorough and complete than the present Pennsylvania law relating to agents and brokers.

1. This paragraph broadens the discretion of the Department by allowing it to require a licensee to prove again his integrity and competency.

Section 1202. Voucher For Applicant.—A. Every applicant for an agent's, broker's, adjuster's, or adjuster solicitor's license, shall be vouched for by two reputable citizens of this Commonwealth, preferably agents, brokers adjusters, or adjuster solicitors, or executives of insurers.

B. Every person vouching for an applicant shall certify that the applicant is personally known to him, has had experience or instruction in insurance, or in some special line thereof, is of good business reputation and worthy of a license, and proposes to engage actively in the business of insurance.

References:

Pennsylvania Insurance Department Act of 1921, Sections 603 and 622, 40 PS Secs. 233 and 252.

Comments:

Sections 603 and 622 of The Insurance Department Act provide for such vouchers in the case of agents and brokers. This draft extends these requirements for vouchers to adjusters and adjuster solicitors. Compare this section with Sections 1102, relating to adjusters, 1001, relating to brokers, and 903, relating to agents, of this draft, wherein the prerequisites for a license include filing an approved application and voucher with the Department.

Section 1203. Examination.—A. The Department shall require each applicant for a license to submit to a personal examination, either oral or written, to show that such applicant is reasonably well acquainted with the laws of this Commonwealth relating to insurance. The Department shall determine the time, place, method, and subject matter of such examination.[1]

B. The requirements of this section shall not apply to an applicant for the renewal of a license, unless the Department shall deem them necessary or advisable to safeguard the interests of the insurer or the public.

C. Any licensed agent who for a continuous period of five years have held a license to transact, as agent, any class or kind of insurance business for any insurer authorized to transact business within this Commonwealth, shall be entitled, upon proper application, to receive a license to transact, as agent, the same class or kind of insurance business for any other insurer so authorized to transact business, without the necessity of submitting to an examination.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Insurance Department Act of 1921, Sections 603 and 622, 40 PS Secs. 233 and 252.

Comments:

1. This enables the Department to adjust the scope of the examination to suit the nature of the application, whether it be for a license of agent, broker, adjuster or adjuster solicitor.

Section 1204. Revocation of License and Imposition of Penalty by the Department; Notice; Appeal.—A. The Department shall, in accordance with the provisions of this section, proceed against the holder of any license theretofore issued by it if, after due investigation and a hearing before the Commissioner or his deputy, it is determined by the Department that such licensee:

(1) Has violated any provision of this act or of any other law of this Commonwealth relating to insurance; or

(2) Has intentionally made a material misstatement in the application for such license; or

(3) Has been guilty of fraud or dishonest practices; or

(4) Has demonstrated his incompetency or untrustworthiness to transact the insurance business in the capacity for which licensed.[1]

B. Before such hearing, the Department shall give written notice to the licensee, stating specifically the nature of the charge against him and fixing the time and place, at least ten days thereafter, when a hearing on the matter will be held. After such hearing, or upon failure of the licensee to appear at such hearing, the Department shall, in its discretion, pursue any one or more of the following courses of action, and notify the licensee thereof:

(1) Suspend or revoke the license; or

(2) Refuse, for a period not to exceed one year thereafter, to issue a new license to the licensee; or

(3) Impose a penalty of not more than One Thousand Dollars ($1,000.00) for each and every act, in violation of any provision of this act, by the licensee.[2]

C. Any holder of a license may appeal to the Court of Common Pleas of Dauphin County from the action of the Department within thirty days from the date of receipt of notice thereof.

Comments:

1. These four violations substantially reenact the present law pertaining to adjusters, as it is found in the Act of June 22, 1931, P. L. 605, cited above. They clearly give the Department the duty to revoke the license of, or impose a penalty on, an agent who violates the sections of this article concerning rebates, misrepresentations, etc.

2. These three courses of procedure are taken directly from the amendment of June 22, 1931, P. L. 616, to Section 639 of the Pennsylvania Insurance Department Act.

ARTICLE XIII

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS AND PENALTIES

Section 1301. Penalty for Acting for Unauthorized Insurers.—A. Any agent, broker, or any other person within this Commonwealth, paying or receiving or forwarding any premiums, or procuring, receiving, or forwarding applications for insurance, or membership in any insurer, or issuing or delivering policies for, or in any manner securing, helping, or aiding in the placing of, any insurance or effecting any contracts of insurance for any person other than himself, directly or indirectly, with any foreign or alien insurer which has not been authorized by the Department to do business in this Commonwealth, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to pay a fine of not less than Three Hundred Dollars ($300.00) nor more than One Thousand Dollars ($1,000.00), and, upon conviction of the second offense, shall be sentenced to pay a like fine, or undergo imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both, in the discretion of the court.

B. This section shall not apply to any person, partnership, or corporation duly licensed by the Department as an excess insurance broker, who or which is legally exercising the privileges conferred by such license.

Comments:

In Section 631 of The Insurance Department Act of 1921, a penalty is imposed for acting as agent or broker in behalf of insurers which have failed to appoint the Insurance Commissioner as attorney for service of process. This section is omitted from this draft because, in order to obtain a certificate of authority from the Department, it is necessary to appoint the Commissioner as attorney for service of process.

Section 1302. Larceny by Agents and Brokers.—A. An agent or broker who acts in negotiating or renewing or continuing a contract of insurance by an insurer lawfully doing business in this Commonwealth, and who receives any money or substitute for money as a premium for such a contract from the insured, whether he shall be entitled to an interest in such premium, or otherwise, shall be deemed to hold such premium in trust for the insurer making the contract.

B. If an agent or broker embezzles, or with intent to use or embezzle, takes, secrets, or fraudulently withholds or uses, such premium, or a part thereof, without the consent of the insurer making the contract, he shall be guilty of larceny and punished accordingly.

C. If an agent or broker fails to pay the premium over to the insurer after written demand made upon him therefor, less his commission and any deduction to which, by the written consent of the insurer, he may be entitled, such failure shall be prima facie evidence that he has embezzled such premium.

American Bar Association Draft, Section 24, Page 52.

Comments:

This draft augments the present law by making the agent or broker a trustee, and by making failure to pay premiums in his possession prima facie evidence of embezzlement.

Section 1303. Penalties for Paying or Receiving Compensation for Insuring Lives of Employes.—A. The word "employe," within the meaning of this section, includes any attorney, partner, clerk, servant, employe, or any other person howsoever employed by or with any insured or any beneficiary named in any policy of life insurance.

The word "employer," within the meaning of this section, includes any client, partner, officer, master, employer, or any other person associating with or hiring any employe, as defined in this section.

B. It shall be unlawful for any agent or broker, or any other person, to pay or cause to be paid any commission or compensation to any employe, and it shall be unlawful for any employe to receive, directly or indirectly, any such commission or other benefit, because of life insurance being placed, sold, or solicited on the life or for the benefit of an employer, or on the life or for the benefit of a fellow employe, whether or not such employe receiving the compensation is duly licensed as agent or broker by the Department.

C. Every employe hired within ninety days before or after the placing, selling, or soliciting life insurance on the life or for the benefit of his employer, shall be subject to the provisions of this section.

D. Every person, partnership, or corporation participating in the payment or receipt of any compensation or benefit in violation of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall not be liable to a fine of not less than Fifty Dollars ($50.00) nor more than Five Hundred Dollars ($500.00), in the discretion of the court, imprisonment of not less than thirty days, nor more than six months in the discretion of the court, or both.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Insurance Department Act of 1921, Section 634, 40 PS Sec. 274.

Comments:

It was deemed advisable to define the words "employe" and "employer" in this draft for purposes of clarity. The section as it formerly stood was hopelessly involved.

Section 1304. Rebates.—A. No agent or broker, in person or by any other party, shall offer, promise, allow, give, set-off, or pay, directly or indirectly, any rebate of, or part of, the premium payable on the policy or on any policy or agent's commission thereon, or earnings, profit, dividends, or other benefit founded, arising, accruing, or to accrue thereon or therefrom, or any special advantage in date of policy or age of issue, or any paid employment or contract for services of any kind, or any other valuable consideration or inducement, to or for insurance on any risk, in this Commonwealth, now or hereafter to be written, which is not specified in the policy or contract of insurance. No agent or broker, in person or by any other party, shall offer, promise, give, option, sell or purchase any stock, bonds, securities, or property, or any dividends or profits accruing or to accrue thereon, or any other thing of value whatsoever, as an inducement to enter into a contract of insurance or an agreement in connection therewith. Nothing in this section shall be construed to prevent the taking of a bona fide obligation, with legal interest, in payment of the premium.

B. No insured person or party or applicant for insurance shall, directly or indirectly, receive or accept, or agree to receive or accept, any rebate of premium, or any part thereof, or all or any part of any agent's or broker's commission thereon, or any favor or advantage, or share in any benefit to accrue under any policy of insurance, or any valuable consideration or inducement, other than such as are specified in the policy

Comments:

This puts under the one heading the two sections on "rebates" in the present law.

Section 1305. Misrepresentation of Terms of Policy and Future Dividends.—A. No agent or broker shall issue, circulate, or use, or cause or permit to be issued, circulated or used, any written or oral statement or circular misrepresenting the terms of any insurance policy or annuity contract[1] issued or to be issued by any insurer, or make an estimate, with intent to deceive, of the future dividends payable under such policy or contract.

B. The making of any such misrepresentation shall constitute a misdemeanor, and any agent or broker, upon conviction thereof, shall be liable to a fine of not less than Fifty Dollars ($50.00) nor more than Five Hundred Dollars ($500.00).

Comments:

1. This section has been expanded to include annuity contracts, because of the recent growth of the annuity business with life insurance companies, and the accompanying growth of the misrepresentation evil.

Section 1306. Misrepresentations to Induce Policyholders to Drop Policies in Favor of Other Insurers.—A. No agent or broker, or any other person, partnership, or corporation, in behalf of any such agent or broker, shall make any misrepresentation or incomplete comparison of insurers or policies, oral, written, or otherwise, to any person insured by any insurer, for the purpose of inducing or tending to induce a policyholder in any insurer to lapse, forfeit, or surrender his insurance therein, and to take out a policy of insurance in another insurer, insuring against similar risks.

B. Any agent, or broker, or any other person, partnership, or corporation, violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to pay a fine of not more than Five Hundred Dollars ($500.00) for each and every violation, or, in the discretion of the court, to imprisonment in the county jail in the county in which the offense is committed, for a period of not more than six months, or both.

Section 1307. Frauds in Obtaining Licenses or Certificates; Powers of Department in Case of Violation; Hearing; Appeal.—A. Any person, partnership, or corporation, misrepresenting to the Department, his, their, or its qualifications, or making false statements in applications for any license or certificate, or any person:

(1) Impersonating or attempting or offering to impersonate another person in taking, or attempting or offering to take, any examination held in accordance with the rules and regulations of the Department; or

(2) Taking, or attempting or offering to take, such examination in the name of any other person; or

(3) Procuring any other person falsely to take, or attempt or offer to take, any such examination for an applicant; or

(4) Having in his possession examination papers to be used in any such examination, when not contained in their sealed wrappers, or copies of such papers at any time prior to the date set for such examination, unless duly authorized by the Department or agents thereof; or

(5) Selling or offering to sell, prior to the examination, examination papers, or any question or questions prepared for use in any examination held in accordance with the rules of the Department; or

(6) Using in any such examination any question papers or questions, or securing or preparing the answers to any question or questions, prior to the time set for the examination; or

(7) Transmitting to the Department answers to questions used in any such examination which are prepared or written outside of the period of examination, or altering any such answer after suc hperiod is closed; or

(8) Securing or attempting to secure, fraudulently, any credential regularly issued by the Department, which is based upon such examinations; or

(9) Altering licenses or certificates in such manner as to misrepresent the authority granted under the license or certificate; shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to pay a penalty of not less than One Hundred Dollars ($100.00) nor more than Five Hundred Dollars ($500.00), or, in the discretion of the court, to undergo imprisonment for a period of not less than thirty days nor more than six months, or both.

B. Upon satisfactory evidence of the violation of this act by any person, partnership, or corporation licensed as an insurance agent, broker, adjuster, or adjuster solicitor, the Department may, in its discretion, pursue any one or more of the following courses:

(1) Suspend or revoke the license of such offending person, partnership, or corporation;

(2) Refuse, for a period not to exceed one year thereafter to issue a new license to such person, partnership, or corporation;

(3) Impose a penalty of not more than One Thousand Dollars ($1,000.00) for each act of violation of this act.

C. Before the Department shall take any action as above set forth, it shall give written notice to the person, partnership, or corporation accused of violating the law, stating specifically the nature of such alleged violation, and fixing a time and place, at least ten days thereafter, when a hearing on the matter shall be held. After such hearing, or upon failure of the accused to appear at such hearing, the Department shall impose such of the above penalties as it deems advisable. When the Department shall take action in any of the ways above recited, the person, partnership, or corporation aggrieved may appeal therefrom to the Court of Common Pleas of Dauphin County.

Comments:

This section was enacted as a separate act in 1931, but it would seem to belong properly in this draft.

Section 1308. Production of Evidence.—A person shall not be excused from testifying or from producing any books, papers, contracts, agreements, or documents, at any hearing held by the Commissioner, or at the trial or hearing, before any magistrate, justice of the peace, or judge, of any insurer, agent, broker, adjuster or adjuster solicitor, or other person charged with violating any of the provisions of this act, on the ground that such testimony or evidence may tend to incriminate him; but a person shall not be prosecuted for any act concerning which he shall be compelled to testify or produce evidence, except for perjury committed in testifying.

Pennsylvania Insurance Department Act of 1921, Section 640, 40 PS Sec. 280.

Comments:

Section 824 of this draft, relating to the rights of witnesses in liquidation, etc., proceedings, is similar to the above section. This section reenacts the existing law.

ARTICLE XIV

EFFECTIVE DATE AND REPEALER

Section 1401. Effective Date.—This act shall become effective on the first day of August, one thousand nine hundred thirty-three, and shall apply to all insurers, corporations, partnerships and persons described herein, whether in existence on such date or coming into existence at any time thereafter.

Comments:

Inasmuch as this act refers mainly to the work of the Insurance Department, it is proper that it should become effective as to all insurers, regardless of their date of organization.

Section 1402. Acts and Parts of Acts Specifically Repealed.—The following acts and parts of acts are hereby specifically repealed:

.....

.....

Comments:

A list of the acts partially or entirely repealed by this act is being prepared and will be included in the draft at a later date.

Section 1403. General Repeal of Acts.—All other acts or parts of acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

PROPOSED INSURANCE CODE

To the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

By the 1931 General Appropriation Act the Legislature directed this department to prepare for submission at this session a revision of the insurance laws.

The insurance laws were revised and codified in 1921. Since then many separate amendments have been passed which should be embodied in a general recodification. In addition, changed conditions dictate some substantial revisions in the law at the present time.

We have divided the present revision into two parts each in a separate bill. The draft herewith submitted is known as the Insurance Code. A proposed Insurance Department Code has already been submitted to you.

The draft now submitted was prepared by Assistant Deputy Attorney General George W. Keitel, in consultation with Deputy Attorney General Harold D. Saylor and the Attorney General, and with the cooperation of Insurance Commissioner Charles F. Armstrong, First Deputy Insurance Commissioner Charles H. Graff, and Second Deputy Insurance Commissioner A. G. Costello.

Respectfully submitted,

WM. A. SCHNADER,
Attorney General.

AN ACT

Relating to the business of insurance; providing for the organization, merger, and consolidation of insurance companies, title insurance and mortgage insurance companies, fraternal benefit societies, for the reincorporation of certain beneficial societies, for the conversion of stock life insurance companies to mutual life insurance companies, and for the conversion of certain mutual fire insurance companies into stock fire insurance companies; defining the rights, powers, duties, liabilities and immunities of such companies and societies; providing for the regulation, supervision, and protection of domestic, foreign and alien insurance companies, title insurance and mortgage insurance companies, fraternal benefit societies, beneficial societies, employers' mutual liability insurance associations, Lloyds associations reciprocal and inter-insurance exchanges, fire insurance rating bureaus, and compensation insurance rating bureaus, and the regulation and supervision of insurance carried by such companies, societies, associations and exchanges, including insurance carried by the State Workmen's Insurance Fund and boiler insurance conducted within cities of the first class, and the loss reserves of self-insured employers under The Workmen's Compensation Act; restricting the engaging in the insurance business by any other corporation or by individuals; conferring powers and imposing duties upon the courts, recorder of deeds, and certain State departments, commissions and officers; providing for the acceptance of the provisions of this act; imposing penalties; and repealing certain acts and parts of acts.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, as follows:

Comments:

It seems more logical to introduce the entire act by the enacting clause than to include this clause as a part of the section on the short title.

ARTICLE I

GENERAL PROVISIONS

Section 1. Short Title.—This act shall be known, and may be cited as the "Insurance Code."

Comments:

The title "Insurance Code" has been selected for this proposed act. The proposed act which deals with the powers and duties of the Insurance Department, and the powers and duties of the Insurance Commissioner in possession of an insurance company or society, as receiver, is termed "The Insurance Department Code."

Section 2. Definitions.—A. The following words, unless the context clearly indicates otherwise, shall have the meanings ascribed to them in this section:

"Alien"—describing an insurer or other corporation organized under the laws of any country other than the United States or its territories.[1]

"Association"—an individual, partnership, or association of individuals authorized to engage in the business of insurance on the Lloyds plan.

"Beneficial Society"—a corporation or society, other than a fraternal society, organized for conferring benefits upon its members from funds collected by it:

(1) Which has any regular officer, agent, membership solicitor, or employe who receives a salary or compensation of any nature whatsoever for work done, or who receives more than a nominal commission for each new member that he secures, or

(2) Which issues to its members any policy, agreement, voucher, contract of insurance, or certificate providing for sick, accident, or death benefits, or provides by its constitution or by-laws for such sick, accident, or death benefits, in return for periodic dues, premiums, assessments, or payments, or otherwise transacts any class of insurance.

"Commissioner"—The Insurance Commissioner of this Commonwealth.

"Company"—every incorporated stock or mutual insurance company, including title insurance companies and mortgage insurance companies, whether incorporated under the laws of this Commonwealth, or of any other state or territory of the United States, the District of Columbia, or of a foreign country, excepting companies operating on a mutual assessment plan.

"Compensation"—describing all insurance affected by virtue of statutes providing compensation to employes for personal injuries received, irrespective of any fault of the employer.

"Department"—the Insurance Department of this Commonwealth.

"Directors"—individuals acting in the capacity of directors of any domestic stock or mutual insurance company, whether designated as trustees, managers, or by any other term.

"Domestic"—describing an insurer or other corporation organized under the laws of this Commonwealth.

"Earned Premiums"—a term which includes gross premiums charged on all policies written by compensation and liability insurers, including all determined excess and additional premiums, less return premiums, other than premiums returned to policyholders as dividends, less reinsurance premiums and premiums on policies cancelled, and less unearned premiums on policies in force; however, any participating company which has charged as part of its premiums a loading solely for the purpose of dividends shall not be required to include such loading in its earned premiums, provided a statement of the amount of such loading has been filed with, and approved by the Department.

"Employers' Mutual Liability Association"—an incorporated association or company heretofore or hereafter formed by employers for the purpose of insuring themselves, and such other employers as may become subscribers to the association, against liability under the term of "The Workmen's Compensation Act of one thousand nine hundred and fifteen," or any amendments or supplements or revisions thereof; this term includes the term "employers' mutual liability association" as used in existing laws.

"Entire Mortgage Guarantee"—every policy of mortgage insurance, other than a mortgage participation certificate, which covers and refers to the entire indebtedness evidenced by a security.

"Exchange"—an individual, partnership, or corporation authorized to exchange with other individuals, partnerships, or corporations, inter-insurance or reciprocal insurance contracts.

"Fire Rating Bureau"—an individual, association, or bureau engaged in making fire insurance rates, or estimates for such rates in this Commonwealth.

"Foreign"—describing an insurer or other corporation organized under the laws of any state of the United States, other than this Commonwealth, or of any territory or insular possession of the United States, or of the District of Columbia.[2]

"Fraternal Society"—a corporation, society, order, or voluntary association, without capital stock, organized and carried on solely for the mutual benefit of its members and their beneficiaries, and not for profit, having a lodge system with ritualistic form of work and a representative form of government, and provisions for the payment of benefits.

"Health or Accident"—describing all insurance against loss from sickness, or loss or damage from bodily injury, or death of the insured by accident.

"Incorporator"—a signer of the original articles of incorporation.

"Industrial"—describing life or endowment insurance, the premiums for which are payable monthly or more frequently.

"Insurer"—a company, association, exchange, fraternal society or beneficial society, as defined by this section.[2]

"Mortgage Insurance Company"—a corporation which shall engage in the business of making and issuing policies of mortgage insurance in this Commonwealth.

"Mortgage Participation Certificate"—a policy of mortgage insurance which evidences the ownership by the insured of an undivided interest, or the right to participate to a specified extent in a security or in a group consisting of several securities, and which purports to guarantee the payment of such undivided or other partial share or interest therein, or the amount of such participation as to principal, interest, or other sum agreed to be paid under the terms of any security.

"Policy of Mortgage Insurance"—a contract which purports to guarantee or insure the payment of the principal, interest or other sum, or any of them, agreed to be paid under the terms of any security.

"Promoter"—any person, partnership or corporation, who or which, as principal or agent, directly or indirectly, for the purpose of promoting or organizing any company proposed to be or being organized within or without this Commonwealth, or of promoting the sale of stock of such company by it after organization, sells or agrees or attempts to sell, or secures subscriptions or applications for, any shares of stock in such company.

"Security"—as used in relation to mortgage insurance companies, one or more notes or bonds together with the mortgage by which it or they are secured, which shall evidence a debt secured by a first lien on a marketable title in fee to real estate, or to real estate with improvements thereon.

"Self-Insured Employer"—a person, partnership, joint stock company, or corporation, including municipal corporations, who or which, as an employer, is exempted by the Department of Labor and Industry of this Commonwealth, pursuant to law, from the duty of carrying insurance covering the payment of workmen's compensation.

"Share Certificate"—a written instrument signed by the proper corporate officers, as required by this act, and evidencing the fact that the person or corporation therein named is the registered owner of the shares therein described. This also includes the term "Certificate of Stock," as used in existing law.

"Shareholder"—a registered owner of shares in an insurance company.

"Shares"—the units into which the shareholders' rights to participate in the control of an insurance company, in its surplus or profits, or in the distribution of its assets, are divided.

"State"—any state of the United States, other than this Commonwealth, or any territory or insular possession of the United States, or the District of Columbia.

"Surety"—describing insurance which guarantees the fidelity of persons holding places of public or private trust, which guarantees the performance of contracts other than insurance policies, which guarantees or executes bonds and undertakings, and which indemnifies the insured against loss; describing also the companies which transact surety insurance.

B. Article or section headings shall not be construed to affect in any manner the scope or meaning of any article or section of this act.

C. The singular shall be construed to include the plural. The masculine shall be construed to include the feminine and the neuter to include both the masculine and the feminine.

Comments:

1. The terms "foreign" and "alien" are borrowed from the American Bar Association Draft and from the Insurance Laws of Oregon, above referred to.
2. The term "insurer" is used to indicate all types of insurance companies, associations, etc., under the supervision of the Department. The insurance laws of several of the states use the word "company" in this capacity. Although neither term is completely satisfactory, the word "insurer" would seem to be preferable, because it is more descriptive of the groups included.

Section 3. Applicability and Acceptance of Act.—A. Except as in this act otherwise provided, the provisions of this act, in so far as they are applicable, shall apply:

(1) To domestic insurance companies, as follows:

(a) All domestic companies incorporated under the provisions of this act;

(b) All insurance companies incorporated under general or special laws since the thirteenth day of October, one thousand eight hundred fifty-seven;

(c) All domestic companies heretofore incorporated which have accepted the provisions of the Constitution and the general insurance laws enacted since the thirteenth day of October, one thousand eight hundred fifty-seven;

(d) All domestic companies incorporated under any general or special law prior to the thirteenth day of October, one thousand eight hundred fifty-seven, which by the terms of their charters or the acts under which they were incorporated hold charters subject to alteration or revocation;

(e) All other domestic companies incorporated by general or special law prior to the thirteenth day of October, one thousand eight hundred fifty-seven, which accept the provisions of this act, as hereinafter provided.[1]

(2) To all foreign and alien companies doing business in this Commonwealth.

(3) To all domestic, foreign and alien associations and exchanges doing an insurance business in this Commonwealth.

(4) To all domestic, foreign and alien fraternal benefit societies doing business in this Commonwealth.

(5) To all beneficial societies doing business in this Commonwealth.

(6) To all self-insuring employers under The Workmen's Compensation Act of one thousand nine hundred fifteen.

(7) To all domestic, foreign and alien rating bureaus doing business in this Commonwealth.

B. Any company to which this act applies, and which has the required capital and reserve, may transact any one or more of the classes of insurance authorized by this act, in the same manner and to the same extent as insurance companies incorporated under the provisions of this act.

C. This act except as hereinafter otherwise specifically provided, shall not be construed as attempting to deprive any existing company of any corporate power, right, privilege or franchise which such company now enjoys, including the right to engage in any business other than insurance.

D. If the application of the provisions of this act to any company organized under a special act of the General Assembly shall be declared unconstitutional, an acceptance or exercise by such company of any benefit, right, or power conferred or granted by this act, including a change of its name or of its place of business, an extension of its term of existence, an increase or decrease of its capital, any other amendment to its articles, or a merger or consolidation with another company, shall constitute an acceptance by such company of all the provisions of this act which, by their terms, are made applicable to it.

E. Any company heretofore organized under any general or special law of this Commonwealth to transact any of the classes of insurance authorized in this act, and to which this act does not apply, shall be entitled to exist under, and shall be governed by, the provisions of this act, upon filing with the Department a resolution of the board of directors or trustees, approved by the shareholders or members at a meeting specially called for that purpose, accepting the provisions of the Constitution and of this act, and agreeing to be governed thereby as fully as though organized thereunder. The charters of all companies accepting the provisions of this act shall, after such acceptance, be repealed and of no effect, in so far as the same may be inconsistent with the provisions of this act.[2]

F. This act does not relate to or affect societies or unincorporated associations which do not issue certificates or other contracts, or do not make regular assessments for the payment of sick, accident or death benefits, or do not employ paid agents or members to solicit new members.[3]

Reference:

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Sections 103, 104, and 105, 40 PS Secs. 363, 364, and 365.

Comments:

1. Some of the provisions of this act cannot equitably be applied to companies created before the thirteenth day of October, one thousand eight hundred fifty-seven. Specific exception of them is made. Consequently, the application of this proposed section is only "Except as in this act otherwise provided."

2. The provisions contained in the existing law concerning the acceptance of this act by a domestic mutual fire company have been omitted from this draft because they are substantially the same as the provisions contained in the draft, which provisions relate to all insurance companies.

3. The general purpose of this draft and of the proposed Insurance Department Code is to include therein all matters within the field of insurance. Wherever insurance is written, in whatever form, for whatever purpose and by whatever organization, incorporated or otherwise, the Department should have full jurisdiction. At the present time there are certain societies which sell insurance to the general public without legal right and without maintaining reserves sufficient to ensure the fulfillment of the obligations entered into. They should be controlled. There is no intention to regulate social organizations which only incidentally pay benefits to members out of funds raised by assessment when the need arises.

Section 4. Saving Clauses.—A. This act shall not impair or affect any act done, offense committed, or right accruing, accrued or acquired, or liability, penalty, judgment, or punishment incurred prior to the time this act takes effect, but the same may be enjoyed, asserted, enforced, prosecuted, or inflicted as fully and to the same extent as if this act had not been passed.

B. The provisions of all acts or parts of acts which are repealed by this act, or are reenacted in this act, shall be considered as remaining continuously in force, so that all rights enjoyed and liabilities incurred under such provisions before the effective date of this act shall be enjoyed or may be enforced as if this act had not been passed.

C. The provisions of this act, as far as they are the same as those of existing laws, shall be construed as a continuation of such laws and not as new enactments. The repeal of any acts by this act shall not affect the corporate existence of any corporation heretofore created. Any person holding office under any act repealed by this act shall continue to hold such office until the expiration of the term thereof, subject to the conditions attached to such office prior to the passage of this act.

D. All resolutions, regulations, and rules made pursuant to any act repealed by this act shall, unless inconsistent with any provisions of this act, continue with the same force as if such act had not been repealed.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 108, 40 PS Sec. 368.

Comments:

These provisions are formal ones. They are necessary to cover the many phases of transition between existing laws and this draft.

Section 5. Constitutional Construction.—The provisions of this act are severable, and if any of its provisions shall be held unconstitutional, the decision of the court shall not affect or impair any of the remaining provisions of this act. It is hereby declared to be the legislative intent that this act would have been adopted had such unconstitutional provisions not been included herein.

Reference:

The Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 109, 40 PS Sec. 369.

Section 6. Construction of References.—A. Whenever in this act reference is made to any act by title, such reference shall be construed to apply to and include any codification wherein the provisions of the act referred to are substantially reenacted.[1]

B. Any reference in this act to the provisions of law on any subject, shall apply to statutes and decisions becoming effective after the effective date of this act, as well as those then in existence.[2]

Comments:

1. This is merely a formal provision. However, it seems useful to take care, in general, of the codifications of any laws which are referred to in this draft.

2. This is also merely a formal provision. Frequently, in this act, the words "as provided by law" are used. They refer to statutes and decisions enacted or handed down after, as well as before, the effective date of this act.

This would seem to be a normal interpretation even without this subsection, and perhaps, therefore, Subsection B is unnecessary. However, it precludes any different interpretation.

Section 7. Jurisdiction of Courts.—This act shall not be deemed to curtail in any manner whatsoever the equity jurisdiction of the courts of this Commonwealth.

Comments:

This section corresponds to Section 6E of the proposed Business Corporation Law.

Section 8. Notices to Corporations, Unincorporated Associations, and Persons.—Unless expressly provided otherwise, all written notices required by this act to be given to any company shall be:

(1) Served in the manner now or hereafter established by law for the service of writs of summons, except that such service need not be made by the sheriff; or

(2) Mailed or sent by telegram, charges prepaid,[1] (a) in the case of an individual, to his last known residence or place of business; (b) in the case of an unincorporated association, or a domestic corporation to its principal office; and (c) in the case of a foreign or alien corporation to its registered office in Pennsylvania, or, if it has no registered office in Pennsylvania, to its home office in the state of incorporation or in any other state.

If a notice is sent by mail, or by telegraph, such notice shall be deemed to have been given to the corporation, unincorporated association, or person addressed, when it is deposited in the United States mail, or with a telegraph office for transmission to such corporation or person.[2]

Reference:

Pennsylvania Act of June 15, 1923, P. L. 809, Section 3 (b), as amended by the Act of May 5, 1927, P. L. 762, Section 2, 7 PS Sec. 3.

Comments:

1. The provision for the giving of notice by telegram is new. However, it seems clearly desirable.
2. This paragraph is new. There is considerable confusion under existing law as to the time intended, for example, by a provision that the last day for the performance of a particular act is a designated number of days after the "giving" or "serving" of notice. This proposed paragraph is intended to eliminate this confusion.

Section 9. Advertisement or Notice in Newsapers.—A. Unless expressly provided otherwise, any advertisement or notice in a newspaper of general circulation, required by this act, shall be published in a newspaper of general circulation in the county, as defined by the Newspaper Advertising Act, approved the sixteenth day of May, one thousand nine hundred twenty-nine (Pamphlet Laws, one thousand seven hundred eighty-four), its supplements and amendments, in which the principal place of business of the company is, or, in the case of a proposed company, will be, located, and which is published in the city, borough, or township in which such place of business is or will be located.

If there is no newspaper of general circulation published in the city, borough, or township, then the advertisement or notice shall be inserted in a newspaper of general circulation in the county, published at the county seat. If no newspaper of general circulation in the county is published at the county seat, then such advertisement or notice shall be inserted in the newspaper of general circulation published nearest to the city, borough, or township in which the principal place of business of such company is located and within the county. If there is no newspaper of general circulation published within the county, then the advertisement or notice shall be inserted in the newspaper of general circulation published nearest to such city, borough, or township in an adjoining county.

B. Unless expressly provided otherwise, any advertisement or notice in a legal newspaper, required by this act, shall be published in the legal newspaper published within the county, as defined by the Newspaper Advertising Act, in which the principal place of business of the company is, or, in the case of a proposed company, will be, located.

C. Unless expressly provided otherwise, if this act requires advertisement or notice to be made both in a newspaper of general circulation and in a legal newspaper, and if there is no legal newspaper published within the county in which the principal place of business of the company is, or, in the case of a proposed company, will be, located, the advertisement shall be made in two newspapers of general circulation in the county, except that if two newspapers of general circulation are not published in the county, then such advertisement or notice shall be made in only one newspaper of general circulation, published in the county, or if none is published there, then in one newspaper published in an adjoining county, as provided by this section in any case in which a newspaper of general circulation is not published in the county.

D. Any proof of publication required by this act shall be in accordance with the requirements set forth in the definition of proof of publication contained in the Newspaper Advertising Act.

Comments:

This is a general section, included in the preliminary provisions of this draft, in order to preclude the necessity of repeating them in each section in which advertising is required. It is based upon the Banking Act of June 15, 1923, P. L. 809, Section 3 (a), as amended by the Act of June 22, 1931, P. L. 876, Section 1, 7 PS Sec. 3, but is, of course, changed to meet the requirements of this proposed act. The statement of what constitutes a legal newspaper, and the definition and requirements of the proof of advertisement are omitted, since they are set forth in detail in the Newspaper Advertising Act, to which reference is made. To include any of its provisions in this draft would seem to necessitate the inclusion of all.

The number of advertisements to be inserted is omitted in this proposed section. It will vary in each case, and will, therefore, be stated in the particular sections which provide for the advertisement.

Section 10. Waiver of Notice.—Any notice required by this act, or by the articles or by-laws of any company governed by the provisions of this act, to be given to any corporation or person, may be waived by such company or person, either before or after the day prescribed for the giving of such notice. Such waiver shall be in writing and signed by such corporation or person.

Comments:

This section corresponds substantially to Section 8 of the proposed Business Corporation Law, which is based upon the business corporation laws of Illinois (Section 144), Indiana (Section 8), and New Jersey (Section 16).

It seems clear that where notice is required for the protection of certain corporations or persons, waiver of such notice by such corporations or persons should be permitted.

It is a general principle that where notice is required for the benefit of shareholders of a corporation, they may waive such notice. See Fletcher Cyclopedia Corporations (Permanent Edition) Volume 5, Section 2011, and the cases there cited.

Article XVI, Section 7, of the Constitution of Pennsylvania, provides, inter alia: "The stock and indebtedness of corporations shall not be increased except in pursuance of general law, nor without the consent of the persons holding the larger amount in value of the stock, first obtained at a meeting to be held after sixty days notice given in pursuance of law.' 'In 1883, the Department of Justice advised that the sixty days' notice might be waived by consent of all the shareholders. See In re Bellefonte and Buffalo Run Railroad Company, 2 Chester 128 (1883).

The same has been held true of the provisions of the constitution and statutes of Missouri, requiring sixty days' notice of a meeting called for the purpose of voting on the issuance of bonds or the increase of capital. State v. Cook, 178 Mo. 189, 77 S. W. 559; Reisterer v. Horton Land and Lumber Company, 160 Mo. 141, 61 S. W. 238.

Accordingly, this draft permits the waiver of notice.

Section 11. Effect of Filing or Recording Papers Required to be Filed.—The filing or recording of the articles or amendments thereto, or of any other papers or documents, pursuant to the provisions of this act, is required for the purpose of affording all persons the opportunity of acquiring knowledge of the contents thereof, but no person dealing with the corporation shall be charged with constructive notice of the contents of any such articles or papers by reason of such filing or recording.

Reference:

Uniform Act, Section 10.

Comments:

This section supplements Sections 310 and 312 as an attempt to improve the state of law with regard to ultra vires transactions. These sections, dealing with the doctrine of constructive notice and the doctrine of limited capacity, would remove two of the causes of greatest confusion in ultra vires cases,—the chief obstacles to uniform decisions. These obstacles spring from an interpretation of legislative intention, and can be removed only by legislation. This proposed section corresponds to Section 9 of the proposed Business Corporation Law.

Section 12. Powers of Department of State and Insurance Department.—The Department of State and Insurance Department shall have the power and authority reasonably necessary to enable them to administer this act efficiently and to perform the duties imposed upon them by this act. All reports required by this act to be filed with the Department of State and Insurance Department shall be made on forms which shall be prescribed or furnished by those departments. Forms for all other documents to be filed with the departments shall be furnished by the departments on requests therefor, but the use thereof, unless otherwise specifically prescribed in this act, shall not be mandatory.

Section 13. Certificates and Certified Copies of Certain Documents to be Received in Evidence.—All certificates issued by the Department of State in accordance with the provisions of this act, and all copies of documents filed with the Department of State in accordance with the provisions of this act, when certified by the Secretary of the Commonwealth, shall be taken and received by all courts, public offices and official bodies as prima facie evidence of the facts therein stated. A certificate by the Department of State, under the seal of the Commonwealth, as to the existence or nonexistence of the facts relating to companies which would not appear from a certified copy of any of the foregoing documents or certificates, shall be taken and received by all courts, public offices and official bodies as prima facie evidence of the existence or nonexistence of the facts therein stated.

Comments:

This proposed section corresponds to Section 11 of the proposed Business Corporation Law. Instead of providing in the different sections of this draft, relating to the filing of certificates or documents with the Department of State, that certified copies of them may be received in evidence, this act combines these provisions into one section.

This is, so far as the Insurance Department is concerned, covered by Section 403 of the proposed Insurance Department Code.

Section 14. Fees.—Except as otherwise specifically provided, any prothonotary or recorder of deeds, and any State department, board, commission, or officer, shall be entitled to receive for services performed, as required by this act, such fees as it lawfully charges for such or similar services.

Comments:

Numerous acts establish the charges to be made by prothonotaries, recorders of deeds, the Secretary of the Commonwealth, or similar officials, for the filing or recording of documents with them. This draft does not reenact these fees specifically, but merely declares the existing fee acts to be applicable.

ARTICLE II

FORMATION OF INSURANCE COMPANIES

Section 201. Classes of Companies and Qualifications of Incorporators.—Any ten or more natural persons of full age and of either sex, married or single, who are citizens of this Commonwealth, may form an incorporated insurance company, under the provisions of this act, of any one of the following classes:

(1) Stock life insurance companies;
(2) Mutual life insurance companies;
(3) Stock fire, stock marine, and stock fire and marine insurance companies;
(4) Stock casualty insurance companies;
(5) Mutual insurance companies other than mutual life insurance companies;
(6) Title insurance companies; and
(7) Mortgage insurance companies.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Sections 201 and 203, 40 PS Secs. 381 and 383.

Comments:

The classes of insurance companies are stated here; the powers of the different classes are set forth in various sections of Article III.

Section 202. The Corporate Name.—A. The name of the company may be in any language, but shall be expressed in English letters or characters and shall contain the word "corporation," "company," or "incorporated," or shall end with an abbreviation of one of these words, except that the word "company" or the abbreviation "Co." may be used only if that word or abbreviation is not immediately preceded by the word "and" or any symbol or substitute therefor. In the case of a mutual company, the word "mutual" shall appear in the name or title thereof. The corporate name shall not imply that the corporation is an administrative agency of the Commonwealth or is subject to the supervision of any department other than the Insurance Department and shall not contain the word "bank," "banking," "bankers," "savings," "trust," "deposit," "building and loan," "cooperative," "State," "Commonwealth," "Pennsylvania," "government," "official," "Federal," "National or "United States."

B. The name of the company shall not be a name which, in the opinion of the department, is likely to confuse or mislead the public, and it shall not be the same as or deceptively similar to:

(1) The name of any other domestic company, or any foreign or alien company, authorized to transact business in this Commonwealth, or the name of any other insurer whatsoever authorized to transact business in this Commonwealth, unless such other domestic, foreign or alien insurer is about to change its name or to cease to do business, or is being wound up, or such foreign or alien insurer is about to withdraw from doing business in this Commonwealth, and the written consent of such other domestic, foreign or alien insurer to the adoption of its name or a deceptively similar name has been given and is filed with the Department of State and with the Insurance Department.

(2) The name of any administrative department, board or commission, or other agency of the Commonwealth.

(3) A name, the exclusive right to which is at the time reserved by any other corporation whatsoever in the manner provided in this act or any other Act of Assembly.

C. The provisions of this section shall not apply to any company which is in existence upon the effective date of this act, but if such company shall desire to change its name in any manner whatsoever, pursuant to the provisions of this act, the new name shall comply in every detail with the requirements of this section.

D. This section shall not be construed to abrogate or limit the law as to unfair competition or unfair practices, nor derogate from the common law, the principles of equity, or the statutes of this Commonwealth with respect to the right to acquire and protect trade names.

E. The assumption of a name in violation of this section shall not vitiate or otherwise affect the corporate existence, but the Court of Common Pleas of Dauphin County may, upon the application of the Attorney General, acting on his own motion or at the instance of any administrative department of the Commonwealth, and the court of common pleas of any county may, upon the application of any insurer adversely affected, enjoin the corporation from using or continuing to use a name assumed in violation of this section.

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 204, 40 PS Sec. 384.

Comments:

Section 202 of the proposed Business Corporation Law designates various names which may not be used by corporations created under that law. Included therein are names appropriate to banking institutions and insurance companies. This draft contains words appropriate to banking institutions and names associated with government, which, it is believed, should not be appropriated by insurance companies.

This provision is new to Pennsylvania law, but is considered necessary in order that there may be no misrepresentation by incorporators or misunderstanding on the part of the public of what the corporation represents.

Section 203. Reservation of Corporate Name.—A. The exclusive right to the use of a corporate name may be reserved by:[1]

(1) Any person intending to organize a company under this act, or
(2) Any domestic company intending to change its name, or
(3) Any lien or foreign company intending to make application for a certificate of authority to transact business in this Commonwealth, or
(4) Any alien or foreign company authorized to transact business in this Commonwealth and intending to change its name.

B. Such reservation shall be made by filing in duplicate with the Department of State, an application to reserve a specified name, executed by the applicant. The Department of State shall then send the copy of such application to the Insurance Department. If the Insurance Department advises that such name is available, it shall forthwith give its written assent to the Department of State. If the Department of State likewise advises that such name is available, it shall reserve the name for the exclusive use of such applicant for a period of sixty days. The right to the exclusive use of a specified name so reserved may be transferred to any company or person, who, except for such prior reservation, would be entitled under the provisions of this act to reserve such name. Such transfer may be made by filing in duplicate with the Department of State a notice of such transfer, which notice shall be executed by the applicant for whom such name was reserved and shall specify the name and address of the transferee.[2]

Comments:

1. This section is new to Pennsylvania law. In both the proposed Business Corporation Law and the proposed Banking Code equivalent sections are included for the purpose of reserving a corporate name.

2. The principle is followed that the Department of State is to remain the clearing house for all incorporations, and it should serve in this capacity in the case of all registered names. This proposed section, therefore, provides that the reservation of the name shall be granted by, and shall go through, the Department of State, but requires the assent of the Insurance Department.

Section 204. Articles of Incorporation.—Articles[1] shall be signed in triplicate[2] originals by each of the incorporators, and acknowledged by at least six of them before any officer within this Commonwealth authorized to take acknowledgments,[3] and shall set forth, in the English language:

(1) The name of the company.[4]
(2) The location and post office address of its initial registered office[5] in this Commonwealth, and the name of its initial registered agent at such address.

(3) A precise and accurate statement of the purpose or purposes for which the company is organized and that it is organized under this act.

(4) The term for which it is to exist.[6]

(5) In the case of a stock company, the amount of its capital and the aggregate number of shares which the company shall have authority to issue and the par value thereof.[7]

(6) The amount of paid-in capital with which the company will begin business.

(7) The plan or principle upon which the business is to be transacted.

(8) The name, occupation and post office address of each of the incorporators, and a statement of the number of shares subscribed by each.

(9) The names of the first officers and directors, their post office addresses, and their terms of office.

(10) Any provisions which the incorporators may choose to insert granting to shareholders the preemptive rights to subscribe to any or all issues of shares or securities of the company.[8]

(11) A statement of all expenses connected with the organization of the company and the sale of its shares, including a declaration that no fees or commissions have been paid in violation of this act.

(12) Any provisions, not inconsistent with law, which the incorporators may choose to insert for the regulation of the internal affairs of the company and the business of the company.[9]

Comments:

The form and substance of this section are quite similar to Section 204 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 303 of the proposed Banking Code.

1. The various incorporation acts in Pennsylvania use the terms "certificate," "certificate of incorporation," "charter," and "charter of incorporation" indiscriminately. This draft, like the proposed Business Corporation Law, adopts the title "articles of incorporation" for the statement executed by the incorporators. The articles of incorporation become the charter of the company upon being approved by the Insurance Department of State. The certificate of incorporation hereinafter required by this draft to be issued by the Department of State, with the consent of the Insurance Department, constitutes official evidence that the articles of incorporation have been approved by those two departments and that the company has come into existence. Therefore, when the charter is amended, it is the articles of incorporation which are amended. The certificate of incorporation issued by the Department of State is incapable of amendment. The Uniform Act and the laws of most other states use similar terms. However, in any event this draft should for purposes of uniformity correspond in terminology to the proposed Business Corporation Law. This it does.

2. Various incorporation acts require the filing of a single copy of the articles. The proposed Business Corporation Law requires the incorporators to prepare and file duplicate originals of the articles of incorporation. This draft requires triplicate originals. The reason for the addition of one original in this draft, as compared with the proposed Business Corporation Law, is that it is felt that although the Department of State is still retained as the clearing house for all incorporation procedure, the Insurance Department should, in order competently to examine companies, have a copy in its files of the articles.

Under the procedure prescribed by this draft, one set of the articles will be retained by the Department of State for its records, one set will be retained by the Insurance Department to open its files for the particular company, and the third set will be returned to the incorporators, who will thus have in their possession a triplicate original of their charter. It is believed that the practice of filing executed documents in triplicate is decidedly in the interest of accuracy and is preferable to the present method of copying the contents of the articles in a book kept by the Department of State, particularly as the articles under this draft will be more voluminous than the articles under former incorporation statutes, due to the additional information required by this draft to be set forth in them. As stated, the third triplicate original seems necessary for the files of the Insurance Department.

3. Formerly a certificate of incorporation of a corporation formed under the Corporation Act of 1874 was required to be acknowledged before the recorder of deeds of the proper county. However, under the Act of April 7, 1925, P. L. 183, 15 PS Sec. 24, such certificates or any amendments thereof may also be acknowledged and sworn to before a notary public or a justice of the peace of the Commonwealth. This proposed section contemplates recorders of deeds, justices of the peace, and notaries public by authorizing the articles to be acknowledged before any officer within the Commonwealth authorized to take acknowledgments.

4. See Section 202 of this draft for provisions regulating the choice of name, and Section 203 for provisions permitting the reservation of a chosen name.

5. See Section 317 of this draft for provisions concerning the place of business of an incorporated institution.

6. The permissible duration of corporate existence is covered by Section 302 of this draft.

7. See Article III, VI, and VII for provisions governing capital, par value of shares, surplus, etc.

8. This provision is necessary if companies wish to include in their charter the provisions of Section 707 of this draft, which provides that shareholders shall have a preemptive right to subscribe to new shares of stock.

9. In general this section requires information to be set forth in the articles which is deemed necesary to the commencement of corporate activity. Administrative provisions should be covered by the by-laws, which may be changed without an amendment to the articles.

Section 205. Advertisement of Articles.—The incorporators of a company shall advertise their intention to apply for a certificate of incorporation one time in a newspaper of general circulation and one time in a legal newspaper, both of which shall be published in the English language. Advertisements shall appear at least three days prior to the day application for the articles is made to the Department of State, and shall set forth briefly:

(1) The name of the proposed company.

(2) A statement that the application is made under the provisions of this act.

(3) The general character and class or classes of insurance to be transacted by the proposed company.

(4) The time when application will be made to the Department of State.

(5) The names, occupations and addresses of the incorporators.

Corporation Act of 1874, Section 3 (b), amended by the Act of March 26, 1931, P. L. 10, 15 PS Sec. 21.

Comments:

This section is quite similar to Section 304 of the proposed Banking Code and Section 205 of the porposed Business Corporation Law.

The Corporation Act of 1874 provides that the advertisement "shall set forth briefly, the character and object of the proposed corporation to be formed, and the intention to make application therefor."

Section 206. Filing of Articles.—A. On the day specified by the incorporators in the advertisement of their intention to apply for a charter of a company, they shall deliver, or cause to be delivered to the Department of State, a proof of publication of such advertisement and the triplicate originals of the articles, required by this act.[1]

B. The Department of State shall examine the proof of publication and the articles, to determine whether they contain all the information and are in the form required by this act, and whether the name of the proposed company is the same as one already adopted or reserved by another corporation or person, or is so similar thereto that it is likely to mislead the public.[2]

C. After all the bonus, fees and charges have been paid as required by law, if the proof of publication and the articles contain the information and are in the form required by this act, and if the name of the proposed company does not violate any provision of this act, the Department of State shall indorse its approval upon each of the triplicate originals of the articles, shall forthwith transmit them to the Insurance Department, and shall so notify the incorporators.[3]

B. If the Department of State shall disapprove the articles, pursuant to the provisions of this act, it shall forthwith give notice thereof to the incorporators, stating in detail its reasons for doing so, and indicating how the incorporators can remedy their nonconformance with the provisions of this act. Upon remedying the defect, the proposed incorporators may file the same or amended araicles.[4]

Corporation Act of 1874, Section 3, as amended, 15 PS Sec. 21; Act of May 15, 1874, P. L. 186, 15 PS Sec. 27.

Comments:

1. This draft follows the general policy of The Administration Code of making the Department of State the clearing house for all corporations. Therefore all papers relating thereto should pass through the Department of State.

2. In accordance with general policy, the duties of the Department of State with respect to companies are merely formal ones.

3. This proposed subsection, like Subsection B, imposes upon the Department of State formal duties with respect to incorporation. All fees and charges, except charges for investigation by the Insurance Department, are to be paid through the Department of State, since it has the machinery for determining and collecting such charges. In accordance with the general policy adopted in the incorporation procedure under this draft, the Department of State, if it approves all the formal incorporation requirements, then transmits the articles to the Insurance Department.

4. Since the only grounds upon which the Department of State is authorized to disapprove the articles in the case of a company are formal ones, provision is made for the incorporators to file corrected articles or to file the same articles if the defect is outside of such articles.

Section 207. Filing of Certificate of Progress with Department.—Upon receiving notice from the Department of State that the articles have been approved, the incorporators shall proceed with the incorporation and file a certificate of progress with the Insurance Department in the following manner:

A. Whenever one-half of the capital of any stock company mentioned in the articles of incorporation has been subscribed, and twenty per centum on each share paid into the hands of the treasurer of the company, the president, treasurer, and a majority of the directors, shall, under their respective oaths or affirmations, make a certificate to the department, stating:

(1) The number and par value of the shares of stock in said company;

(2) The names and residences of the subscribers;

(3) The number of shares subscribed by each;

(4) The amount paid in on each share;

(5) The amount of money in the hands of the treasurer on account of such payments; and

(6) Where such money is deposited.

B. Whenever applications for insurance, in the case of a mutual company, have been received in sufficient number and amount, the president, treasurer, and the majority of the directors of such company, shall, under their respective oaths or affirmations, make a certificate to the department, stating:

(1) The names and residences of the persons applying for insurance in such company;

(2) The amount agreed to be taken and the amount paid in by each;

(3) The amount of money in the hands of the treasurer; and

(4) Where such money is deposited.

C. In the case of mutual life companies, in addition to the certificate required of all mutual companies by this section, as soon as the guarantee capital has been subscribed, and fifty per centum thereof has been paid in lawful money to the treasurer and the subscribers' obligations given for the remaining fifty per centum thereof, the president, treasurer, and a majority of the directors, shall, under their respective oaths or affirmations, make a certificate to the department, stating:

(1) The number and par value of the shares of guaranty stock in said company;

(2) The names and residences of the subscribers;

(3) The number of shares subscribed by each;

(4) The amount paid in on each share;

(5) The form of obligations taken for the unpaid moiety;

(6) The amount of money in the hands of the treasurer; and

(7) Where such money is deposited.

Comments:

This section is substantially the same as Section 210 of The Insurance Company Law of 1921, although the term "certificate of progress," is new. It provides for the giving of information to the Department during a stage of the proceedings which it is necessary that it should have, in order for it to make an investigation as to the necessity of the proposed company and the advisability of its incorporation.

Section 208. Approval of Articles by Insurance Department.[1] A. The Department shall conduct such investigation as it may deem necessary to ascertain from the best sources of information at its command:

(1) Whether the name of the proposed company is likely to mislead the public as to its character or purpose.

(2) Whether the convenience and advantage of the public will be served by the proposed company.

(3) Whether the responsibility, character, and general fitness for the business, of the incorporators and directors named in the articles, are such as to command the confidence of the public and to warrant the belief that the business of the proposed company will be honestly and efficiently conducted in accordance with the intent and purpose of this act.

(4) Whether any fee, commission, or compensation has been paid to any promoter, corporation or person for the promotion of organization of such company, or whether any part of the money collected or to be collected from subscribers or shareholders has been or is to be applied to the payment of promoters' fees for obtaining subscriptions or selling shares or for services in starting or opening such company, and whether such fee, commission, or compensation is provided for by contract with the proposed company or by contract with the subscribers to the shares.

B. Within sixty days after the receipt of the certificate of progress, the Insurance Department shall, upon the basis of the facts disclosed by the investigation provided for by this section, either approve or disapprove the articles. It shall immediately notify the Department of State in writing of its action. If it shall approve the articles, it shall retain one of the triplicate originals and shall sign its approval upon the remaining two of the triplicate originals.

C. If the Insurance Department disapproves the articles, it shall return them to the Department of State, stating in detail its reasons for doing so. The Department of State shall immediately give notice to the incorporators of the action of the Insurance Department and of the reasons therefor as stated to it by that Department. The incorporators may, within thirty days after the Department of State sends them notice of the disapproval of their articles, appeal from such disapproval to the Governor, who shall hear such appeal promptly and, within thirty days thereafter, decide the matter and certify his decision to the Insurance Department.[2] The decision of the Governor shall be conclusive and not subject to any review. The Insurance Department shall act in accordance therewith.

Comments:

1. This section provides the course of procedure whereby the Insurance Department can procure information to enable it to determine whether or not it should approve the application of the incorporators.

2. While the Department is best qualified upon the basis of the standard established by this proposed section to determine whether or not the articles should be approved, it seems desirable to provide for an appeal to the Governor.

Section 209. Issuance of Certificate of Incorporation.—Immediately upon receipt of two of the triplicate originals of the articles of a proposed company from the Insurance Department, the Department of State shall file and record one of the triplicate originals and shall issue a certificate of incorporation. The remaining triplicate original of the articles and the certificate of incorporation shall be returned by the Department of State to the incorporators or their representative, who shall then have them recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds of the county in which the principal place of business of the proposed company is or will be situated. The triplicate original of the articles, upon being recorded by the recorder of deeds, shall be returned to the incorporators, or their representative, and shall constitute the charter of the company.

Comments:

This proposed section makes a radical change in the method of procuring charters. Under the Corporation Act of 1874, supra, all charters are required to be approved by the Governor. If he approves them, he is required to issue letters patent.

This draft follows the change instituted in Section 206 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and eliminates the requirements that the Governor approve the articles or issue letters patent. Pennsylvania appears to be the only state which requires articles for the incorporation of a business corporation to be presented to and approved by the Governor. In practice, the articles are also approved and signed by the Secretary of the Commonwealth or the Insurance Commissioner as the case may be. The Pennsylvania practice not only places an undue burden upon the Governor, but, because of the number of signatures and approvals required, results in delay.

The Uniform Act and the incorporation laws of the other states uniformly require the articles for the incorporation of a business corporation to be presented to and approved by the administrative official in charge of the department corresponding to our Department of State, or of the head of the Insurance Department, and authorizes that officer to issue a certificate of incorporation. The procedure instituted by this proposed section will make the law of Pennsylvania uniform with the laws of the other states.

The certificate of incorporation provided for by this draft stands in lieu of the letters patent which are now issued by the Governor, and constitutes official evidence that the articles have been filed by the Department of State, and that the company has come into existence.

Section 210. Effect of Issuance of Certificate of Incorporation.—Upon the issuance of the certificate of incorporation by the Department of State, the corporate existence shall begin,[1] and those persons who subscribed for shares prior to the issuance of the certificate of incorporation, or their assignees, shall be shareholders in the company.[2] The certificate of incorporation shall be conclusive evidence of the fact that the company has been incorporated, but proceedings may be instituted by the Commonwealth to dissolve, wind up and terminate a company which should not have been formed under this act, or which has been formed without a substantial compliance with the conditions prescribed by this act as precedent to incorporation.[3]

Corporation Act of 1874, Section 3 (d), 15 PS Sec. 21.

Comments:

1. The Corporation Act of 1874, supra, makes the recording of articles, "in the office for the recording of deeds, in and for the county where the chief operations are to be carried on," a condition precedent to corporate existence. Upon the recording of the articles, corporate existence begins, Guckert v. Hacke et al., 159 Pa. 303 (1893); Tonge v. Item Publishing Company, Appellant, 244 Pa. 417 (1914); Deniston's Estate, 70 Pitts. L. J. 59 (1921). This draft follows Section 207 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and changes the Pennsylvania law in this respect, in that corporate existence begins upon the issuance of the certificate of incorporation by the Department of State. The commissioners on uniform laws strongly recommend that corporate existence begin on the issuance of the certificate of incorporation, and the laws of most states contain such a provision. The company cannot do business until it has received a certificate of authority from the Department. The obtaining of this certificate is not a condition precedent to corporate existence, but a condition precedent to the right to do business.

2. This provision is taken from Section 5 (II) of the Uniform Act. As pointed out in a note to the Uniform Act, it seems desirable to emphasize the distinction between incorporators and shareholders. Furthermore, under present law the subscribers are regarded as making offers to become shareholders, but they cannot become shareholders until their offers are accepted by the corporation after it has come into existence. 1 Machen, Modern Law of Corporations, Section 249. Under this draft, not only do the incorporators become incorporated, but also the persons who have subscribed for shares before incorporation without signing the articles. They become shareholders upon incorporation and without further act on the part of the corporation. As is stated in Chase v. Lord, 77 N. Y. 1 (1879), "Corporators exist before stockholders, and do not exist with them. When stockholders come in, corporators cease to be."

3. The object of this section, taken from Section 207 of the proposed Business Corporation Law, is to solve the de facto problem. According to a note contained under this section in the Uniform Act, it is believed that the section, as worded, does not alter the present case law as to the right of the state. According to present law, the state may intervene: (a) when the corporation is one that should not have been incorporated under the act; and (b) when there has been a failure substantially to comply with such conditions precedent to incorporation as are considered mandatory. If, however, the conditions not complied with are found to be directory rather than mandatory, the default on the part of the incorporators is held to be unassailable even by the state. If, also, there has been substantial compliance with mandatory provisions, the state is not permitted to object that there has not been literal compliance. The proposed section treats all conditions prescribed by this act as precedent to incorporation as mandatory provisions, but declares substantial compliance to be sufficient. The line of distinction between mandatory and directory provisions is not defined with exactness, but it is believed that in most cases the distinction between mandatory and directory provisions is in a large part one between conditions precedent to incorporation and conditions precedent to the right to do business.

The present section goes further than the case law in defining collateral attack upon the legality of incorporation. To deny collateral attack, the cases hold that (a) there must have been a real attempt to incorporate, and (b) the corporation must have been one that was formable under the statute. The present section would make the certificate of incorporation conclusive in all cases.

Section 211. Fees for Investigation by Insurance Department.—In addition to any bonus fee and charge provided by law in the case of any business corporation, the incorporators of a company organized under this act shall pay to the Department such reasonable fees as it shall establish by rule and regulation for the investigation made by it pursuant to the provisions of this act, to determine whether the articles should be approved. Such fee for the investigation by the Department shall be paid to it at the time of the filing of the articles with the Department of State. Payment of such fee shall be a condiion precedent to the issuance of a certificate of authority to do business.

Comments:

This provision seems necessary in view of the additional duties imposed upon the Insurance Department to conduct an examination in the case of every company proposed to be formed. It seems desirable, too, to provide for payment upon the filing of the articles since, if the articles are not approved, it will frequently be very difficult to recover the expenses of the investigation from the incorporators.

Section 212. Notice of Qualification to Commence Business; Certificate of Authority.—A. The president or secretary of any stock company incorporated under this act shall notify the Department, in writing, that the company is qualified to commence business, after the authorized capital and required surplus[1] of such company have been paid in and properly invested.

B. The president or secretary of any mutual life company incorporated under this act shall notify the Department, in writing, that the company is qualified to commence business, after the necessary amount of insurance has been applied for, and the guarantee capital has been paid in and properly invested.

C. The president or secretary of any mutual company, other than a mutual life company incorporated under this act, shall notify the Department that the company is qualified to commence business, after the necessary amount of, or applications for, insurance have been received, and the required amount of cash premiums has been received and properly invested.

D. If, after receiving notice that a company is qualified to commence business, the Department finds as a result of its examination that such company has registered in the office of the Department of Revenue and has otherwise complied with the provisions of this Act and other laws of this Commonwealth, the Department shall issue to such company a certificate of authority to do business.[2] As soon as the company receives such certificate of authority, it may issue policies and otherwise transact the business of insurance for which it was incorporated.

E. A company formed under this act shall not incur any indebtedness or begin the transaction of any business except such as shall be incident to its organization, or to the obtaining of subscription to, or payment for, its shares until it has obtained from the Department its certificate of authority.[3]

F. If a company shall transact any business in violation of this section, the officers who participated therein and the directors, except those directors who dissented therefrom and caused their dissent to be filed at the time in the Insurance Department, or who, being absent, so filed their dissent upon learning of the action, shall be severally liable for the debts and liabilities of the company arising therefrom.

Comments:

1. The present law requires that the authorized capital of a stock company be paid in before the president or secretary notifies the Department that the company is ready to commence business. This section requires, in addition, that the surplus of stock companies be paid in, in order to conform with the sections of this draft relating to financial requirements.

2. The proposed Insurance Department Code provides, in Section 305, for an examination of insurers upon applying for a certificate of authority; in Section 310 it sets forth the legal effect of a certificate of authority; and in Section 311 it provides for the penalty for doing business without a certificate of authority.

3. As pointed out in footnote 1 to Section 210 of this draft, corporate existence begins under this draft upon the issuance of the certificate of incorporation by the Department of State. Under this draft, the securing of a certificate of authority is made a condition precedent to the beginning of business by the company.

Section 211 of The Insurance Company Law of 1921 provides for the submission of the articles of agreement by the Commissioner to the Attorney General for examination. In the event of his approval, they are certified by the Governor, who, if he approves them, causes letters patent to issue thereon. The procedure provided by this draft is different, as appears from the preceding sections. It is completed by the issuance of a certificate of authority by the Department, as provided in this section. It is deemed better for the Department to have available for its examination complete information concerning the financial structure of the proposed company and its by-laws prior to the issuance of such certificate, rather than thereafter.

Section 213. Organization Meetings.—A. After the issuance of the certificate of incoporation of an insurance company, the first meeting of the shareholders or members shall be held within this Commonwealth at the call of the incorporators, or a majority of them, for the purpose of adopting by-laws, if the articles of incorporation provide for the adoption thereof by the shareholders or members, and for such other purposes as shall be stated in the notice of the meeting. The incorporators so calling the meeting shall give at least ten days' notice thereof, by mail, to each shareholder or member, which notice shall state the time, place, and purpose or purposes of the meeting.

B. After the issuance of the certificate of incorporation, an organization meeting of the board of directors named in the articles shall be held within this Commonwealth at the call of a majority of the directors, for the purpose of adopting by-laws, if the articles authorize the directors to adopt by-laws, for the purpose of electing officers, and for the transaction of such other business as may come before the meeting. The directors calling the meeting shall give at least five days' notice, by mail, of the time and place of the meeting to each director named in the articles.

Comments:

This proposed section is based primarily upon Section 210 of the proposed Business Corporation Law. There is no statutory provision in Pennsylvania regulating organization meetings of the shareholders or directors. This proposed section of the draft sets forth the usual practice in Pennsylvania.

The provision of the proposed Business Corporation Law permitting the meeting of the directors to be held outside the Commonwealth does not seem desirable in the case of an insurance company.

Section 214. Power of Legislature to Alter or Revoke Charters.—The General Assembly may alter, revoke, or annul the charter of any corporation formed under this act, as provided by Article XVI, Section 10 of the Constitution.

Article XVI, Section 10 of the Pennsylvania Constitution provides: "The General Assembly shall have the power to alter, revoke or annul any charter of incorporation now existing and revokable at the adoption of this Constitution, or any that may hereafter be created, whenever in their opinion it may be injurious to the citizens of this Commonwealth, in such manner, however, that no injustice shall be done to the corporators."

ARTICLE III

CORPORATE POWERS, BY-LAWS, FINANCIAL REQUIREMENTS AND INVESTMENTS

Section 301. Corporate Capacity and Authority.—A company formed under this act shall have the capacity to act possessed by natural persons, but shall have authority to perform only such acts as are necessary or proper to accomplish its purposes orf purposes, and which are not repugnant to law.

Uniform Act—Section 11; Ohio—Section 8; Idaho—Section 10; Louisiana—Section 12.

Comments:

This section is supplementary to Section 9 of this draft. Section 9 abolishes the doctrine of constructive notice of the contents of the charter of a corporation.

This section abolishes another prop of the ultra vires structure, namely, the doctrine that a corporation has a limited capacity measured by its statutory powers. This section, in effect, restores the common law rule that a corporation has the capacity of natural persons; that is, the capacity to do an unauthorized or even an illegal act.

A note to Section 11 of the Uniform Act points out:

"The fundamental conflict in the authorities may be represented by the statement of Justice Gray in Central Transportation Co. v. Pullman Car Co., 139 U. S. 24, 59, that 'The objection to the contract is, not merely that the corporation ought not to have made it, but that it could not make it. The contract cannot be ratified by either party, because it could not have been authorized by either. No performance on either side can give the unlawful contract any validity, or be the foundation of any right of action upon it,' as opposed to the statement of Comstock, J., in Bissell v. R. R., 22 N. Y. 258, 264, that 'To say that a corporation has no right to do unauthorized acts, is only to put forth a very plain truism; but to say that such bodies have no power or capacity to err, is to impute to them an excellence which does not belong to any created existence with which we are acquainted. The distinction between power and right is no more to be lost sight of in respect to artificial than in respect to natural persons. * * * When we speak of the powers of a corporation, the term only expresses the privileges and franchises which are bestowed in the charter; and when we say it cannot exercise other powers, the just meaning of the language is, that as the attempt to do so is without authority of law, the performance of unauthorized acts is a usurpation which may be a wrong to the state, or, perhaps, to the shareholders. But the usurpation is possible. In the same sense natural persons are under restraint of law, but they may transgress the law, and when they do they are responsible for their acts.' The first view may be said to prevail in the federal courts and a minority of the state courts, while the second view probably obtains in the courts of all but eight of the states.

"The first view is based upon the conception of limited corporate capacity; the conception that a corporation cannot do what it has not been given authority to do. * * * This doctrine of limited capacity, like the doctrine of constructive notice, is the result of a judicial interpretation of legislative intention. * * * At common law, a corporation had the capacity of natural persons, i. e., the capacity to do an unauthorized or even an illegal act. * * *

"Sections 10 and 11 of this draft, by abolishing the doctrine of constructive notice and the doctrine of limited capacity, would remove two of the sources of greatest confusion in the ultra vires cases, the chief obstacles to uniformity in decisions. As suggested, these obstacles, springing from an interpretation of legislative intention, can be removed only by legislation. Further legislation than this in connection with the ultra vires problem seems to be unnecessary. * * * *"

Section 302. General Powers.—Subject to the limitations and restrictions contained in this act or in its articles, every company shall have authority:

(1) To continue as a company for the time limited in its articles or, if a time limit is not specified therein, then perpetually, subject to the power of the General Assembly, under the Constitution of this Commonwealth;

(2) To sue and be sued, complain and defend in its corporate name;

(3) To have a corporate seal which may be altered at pleasure, and to use the same by causing it or a facsimile of it to be impressed or affixed, or in any manner reproduced;

(4) To make, alter, amend, and repeal by-laws not inconsistent with its articles or with law for the administration and regulation of the affairs of the company;

(5) To elect or appoint and remove officers and agents of the company, and to define their duties and fix their compensation;

(6) To have and exercise all of the powers and means necessary to effect the purpose or purposes for which the company is formed.

The powers herein enumerated shall not be construed as limiting or enlarging any grant of authority otherwise made by this act, or as limiting the purpose or purposes for which a company may be organized, as set forth in its articles. It shall not be necessary to set forth any of such enumerated powers in the articles of the company. Except as otherwise provided in this act or in the by-laws of a company, the powers herein enumerated shall be exercised by the board of directors of the company.

Comments:

The Corporation Act of 1874, supra, provides that a corporation shall have power: "To have succession by its corporate name for the period limited by its charter, and when no period is limited thereby, or by this act, perpetually, subject to the power of the general assembly, under the constitution of this commonwealth."

This draft permits perpetual succession, but of course authorizes an incorporated institution to provide for a shorter term of existence in its articles.

The remaining powers are supplementary and are adaptions, in so far as applicable, of Section 302 of the proposed Business Corporation Law.

Section 303. Specific Powers and Financial Requirements of Stock and Mutual Life Companies.—A. Stock and mutual life companies shall have the power to insure the lives of persons, and to make contracts of insurance appertaining thereto; to grant and dispose of annuities; and to insure against personal injury, disablement, or death, resulting from traveling or general accidents, and against disablement resulting from sickness, and to make contracts of insurance appertaining thereto.

B. Stock companies organized under this act, to insure lives and to grant and dispose of annuities, shall have a capital of not less than two hundred thousand dollars. Stock companies organized for all of the powers mentioned in this section shall have a capital of at least three hundred thousand dollars. Every stock life company shall, in addition to the minimum capital required by this section, have a surplus paid in at least equal to fifty per centum of the subscribed capital.

C. Companies organized under this act to insure lives on the mutual plan shall have applications for insurance to the amount of one million dollars by not less than four hundred persons, and before commencing business must have a guarantee capital of not less than two hundred thousand dollars.

Comments:

The powers and financial requirements of stock and mutual life insurance companies are identical with those prescribed by the present law. The substance of Sections 202 (a), and 206 (a) and (d) is similar to this draft. The phraseology is somewhat changed. Section 201 of this draft designates the classes of companies which may be incorporated to do an insurance business. It was thought advisable to specify the powers of each class of companies in separate sections, rather than to designate the purposes thereof as in existing law.

Section 304. Specific Powers and Financial Requirements of Stock Fire, Stock Marine, and Stock Fire and Marine Companies.—A. Stock fire companies shall have the powers enumerated in paragraphs (1) and (2) of this subsection; stock marine companies shall have the powers enumerated in paragraphs (2) and (3) of this subsection; and stock fire and marine companies shall have the powers enumerated in paragraphs (1), (2) and (3) of this subsection, namely:

(1) To make insurances on dwelling houses, stores, and all kinds of buildings, household furniture and other property, against loss or damage, including loss or use or occupancy, by fire, smoke, smudge, lightning, and explosion, whether fire ensue or not, except explosion of boilers, pipes, flywheels, engines, and machinery, and by tornadoes, cyclones, windstorms, earthquakes, hail, frost, sleet, snow, or flood, against loss or damage by water to any goods or premises, arising from the breakage or leakage of sprinklers, pumps, or other apparatus erected for extinguishing fires, and of water pipes; against accidental injury to such sprinklers, pumps, or other apparatus; against loss or damage caused by the caving in of the surface of the earth above coal mines; against perils to property arising from the ownership or maintenance or from the use of aircraft, automobiles, or other motor vehicles; and against loss or damage caused by bombardment, invasion, insurrection, riot, civil war, or commotion, and military or usurped power; and to effect reinsurance of any risk provided for in this paragraph.

(2) To make insurances upon vessels, boats, cargoes, goods, merchandise, freight and other property, against loss or damage by all or any of the risks of lake, river, canal, and inland navigation and transportation; upon automobiles, airplanes, seaplanes, dirigibles, or other aircraft, whether stationary, in transit, or in operation, against loss or damage by fire, explosion, transportation, collision, or by burglary, larceny, or theft, not including, in any case, insurances against loss by reason of bodily injury to the person; and to effect reinsurance of any risk provided for in this paragraph.

(3) To make insurances upon vessels, freight, goods, wares, merchandise, specie, bullion, jewels, profit, commissions, bank notes, bill of exchange, and other evidence of debt, bottomry and respondentia interests, and every insurance appertaining to or connected with marine risks and risks of transportation and navigation; and to effect reinsurance of any risk provided for in this paragraph.

B. In order for companies to exercise the powers enumerated in either paragraphs (1) or (2) of Subsection A of this section, they shall have a paid-up capital of not less than one hundred thousand dollars; in order to exercise the powers enumerated in paragraphs (1) and (2), or in paragraph (3) of Subsection A of this section, they shall have a paid-up capital of not less than two hundred thousand dollars; and in order to exercise the powers enumerated in paragraphs (1), (2) and (3) of Subsection A of this section, they shall have a paid-up capital of not less than four hundred thousand dollars. Every such company shall, in addition to the minimum capital required by this section, have a surplus paid in at least equal to fifty per centum of the subscribed capital.

Comments:

Refer to the comments under Section 303.

Section 305. Specific Powers and Financial Requirements of Stock Casualty Companies.—A. Stock casualty companies shall have the power to make insurance or contracts as follows:

(1) To guarantee the fidelity of persons holding places of public or private trust, the performance of contracts, other than insurance policies, the performance of insurance contracts where surety bonds are accepted from insurance companies by states or municipalities in lieu of actual deposits; to execute or guarantee bonds and undertakings required or permitted in all actions or proceedings or by law allowed; to indemnify banks, bankers, brokers, financial or moneyed associations, or financial or moneyed corporations, against the loss of any bills of exchange, notes, drafts, acceptances of drafts, bonds, securities, evidences of debt, deeds, mortgages, documents, currency, and money, except against loss caused by marine risks or risks of transportation or navigation, provided that such contracts of indemnity may indemnify against loss of bills of exchange, notes, drafts, acceptances of drafts, bonds, securities, evidences of debts, deeds, mortgages, documents, currency, and money transported in armored motor vehicles accompanied by one or more armed guards; and to guarantee any Federal Land Bank against loss by reason of defective title or encumbrances on real property on which any such Federal Land Bank may make a loan secured by a mortgage.

(2) To insure against injury, disablement, or death resulting from traveling or general accident, and against disablement resulting from sickness, and every insurance appertaining thereto, including a funeral benefit to an amount not exceeding one hundred dollars.

(3) To insure glass against breakage.

(4) To insure anyone against loss or damage resulting from accident to, or injury, fatal or non-fatal, suffered by, an employe or other person for which the person insured is liable; or against loss or damage to property caused by animals, or by any vehicle drawn by animal power, for which loss or damage the person insured is liable; also, against loss or damage resulting from negligence in rendering professional and expert service, for which the insured is liable, except loss or damage caused by risks or hazards of the kind mentioned in Paragraphs (5), (8), (9) and (11) of this subsection.

(5) To insure against loss or damage to any property of the insured, and against legal liability for loss or damage on account of the bodily injury or death of any person or any damage to property of another, caused by the breakage, explosion or rupture of, or any accidental injury to, steam boilers and pipes and containers connected therewith, any lighting, heating or cooking apparatus or their connections, flywheels, power wheels, and engines, or other apparatus for applying or transmitting motive or electrical power, tanks or other receptables under pressure, or their connections, or machinery of any kind, and against loss of use and occupancy caused thereby; and against loss or damage caused by the interruption by any cause of electric current or of water or gas supply furnished by a public utility company or municipality; and to issue certificates of inspection upon such boilers, pipes, flywheels, engines and machinery.[1]

(6 To insure against loss by burglary, robbery, larceny, theft, forgery, vandalism or malicious mischief, the wrongful conversion, disposal, or concealment of automobiles held under a conditional sale contract or subject to a chattel mortgage, or any one or more of such hazards. Any corporation authorized to transact business as hereinbefore mentioned in this subsection, if possessed of a capital of at least two hundred thousand dollars, may, by taking the proceedings required by law, amend its charter so as to include therein the insurance of jewelers and other persons engaged in the business or trade of manufacturing, buying, selling or dealing in, cutting or setting of precious stones, jewels, jewelry, gold, silver and other precious metals, whether as principals, agents, brokers, factors, or otherwise, against any and all risks of loss, damage, injury, deterioration, loss of use or liability arising from or in connection with such business or trade. Such insurance shall be known and designated as "jewelers' block insurance" and made under a policy upon the face and outside cover of which shall be printed, in bold face type, the words "jewelers' block policy."[2]

(7) To carry on the business of credit insurance or guaranty, either by agreeing to purchase uncollectible debts or otherwise; and to insure against loss or damage from the failure of persons indebted to the insured to meet their liabilities.

(8) To insure any goods or premises against loss or damage by water, caused by the breakage or leakage of sprinklers, pumps, or other apparatus, erected for extinguishing fires, or of other conduits or containers, or by casual water entering through leaks or openings in buildings, and of water pipes; and against accidental injury, from causes other than fire or lightning, to such sprinklers, pumps, water pipes, or other apparatus; and against damage from use or occupancy of premises by reason of such causes or any of them.

(9) To insure against loss or damage to elevators or other property, except loss or damage by fire, caused by the maintenance, operation, or use of elevators and machinery; loss or legal liability for damage to property resulting from such operation, maintenance, or use of elevators.

(10) To insure horses, cattle, and other live stock.

(11) To insure against loss or damage to automobiles and airplanes, seaplanes, dirigibles, or other aircraft (except loss or damage by fire or while being transported in any conveyance by land or water), and against loss or damage to property caused thereby, including loss by legal liability for damage to property resulting from the maintenance and use of automobiles and airplanes, seaplanes,, dirigibles or other aircraft.

(12) To effect reinsurance of any risk provided for in this section against which the company has power to insure.

B. (1) In order for stock casualty companies to exercise any of the powers enumerated in Subsection A of this section, except credit insurance and fidelity and surety insurance, they shall have a capital of not less than one hundred thousand dollars; stock casualty companies organized for the purpose of credit insurance shall have a paid-up capital of not less than two hundred thousand dollars; stock casualty companies organized to guarantee the fidelity of persons and contracts of suretyship shall have a capital of at least two hundred fifty thousand dollars.

(2) Stock casualty companies organized under this act may exercise two or more classes of powers enumerated in Subsection A of this section, by providing at least fifty thousand dollars additional capital for each additional class of insurance; however, if credit insurance is added to any other line or lines, the additional capital shall be one hundred thousand dollars, and if fidelity or surety insurance is added to any other line or lines, the additional capital shall be two hundred thousand dollars.

(3) Any such stock casualty company with a paid-up capital of three hundred thousand dollars may transact all of the classes in insurance mentioned in Subsection A of this section, except credit, live stock, and fidelity and surety insurance; and a company with a paid-up capital of seven hundred fifty thousand dollars may transact all of the classes of insurance mentioned in this section.

C. Every stock casualty company shall, in addition to the minimum capital required by this section, have a surplus paid in at least equal to fifty per centum of the subscribed capital.

Comments:

1. This provision is taken from Chapter 175, Section 47, Clause Fifth, of the Massachusetts General Laws of 1921, as amended by Chapter 106, Section 1, of the Laws of 1928, and is considered by insurance companies, which transact this business, to define adequately and properly their powers and meet the needs of the insuring public.

2. This provision includes several coverages provided for in the New York Insurance Law, Section 70 (5). This more adequately meets the needs of the insuring public, and permits insurance companies incorporated in this Commonwealth to compete with Lloyds associations.

Section 306. Specific Powers and Financial Requirements of Mutual Companies other than Mutual Life Companies.—A. Mutual companies other than mutual life companies shall have the power to make contracts of insurance, or to reinsure and accept reinsurance, for any and all classes of insurance, other than life, title, and mortgage insurance, which classes of insurance are not prohibited by statute or at common law from being the subject of insurance, and which may be transacted by a stock company writing the same classes of insurance.

B. Mutual companies, other than mutual life companies organized under this act, shall comply with the following conditions:

(1) Each such company shall hold bona fide applications for insurance upon which it shall issue simultaneously, or it shall have in force, at least twenty policies to at least twenty members, for the same kind of insurance, upon not less than two hundred separate risks, each within the maximum single risk described herein.

(2) The "maximum single risk" shall not exceed twenty per centum of the admitted assets, or three times the average risk, or one per centum of the insurance in force, whichever is the greater.[1]

(3) It shall have collected a cash premium upon each application, which premium shall be held in cash or securities in which insurance companies are authorized to invest and shall be equal to not less than five times the maximum single risk assumed, nor less than twenty-five thousand dollars[2] and in case of compensation insurance, to not less than fifty thousand dollars.

(4) For the purpose of transacting employers' liability and workmen's compensation insurance, the application shall cover not less than five thousand employes, each such employe being considered a separate risk for determining the maximum single risk.

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Sections 202 (d) and 206 (e), 40 PS Secs. 382 and 386.

Comments:

1. There is eliminated from subparagraph (2) which appears as subsection (c) (2) of Section 206 of the present act the final clause: "any reinsurance taking effect simultaneously with the policy being deducted in determining maximum single risk." This is omitted for the reason that reinsurance may be cancelled after the proposed company is incorporated, with the result that it may do business with insufficient assets to guarantee safety to its policyholders.

2. The present law requires a minimum of only ten thousand dollars for mutual fire insurance companies. This draft places mutual fire companies on an equal footing with mutual casualty companies. It is believed that the public should have the benefit of this additional requirement.

Section 307. Specific Powers and Financial Requirements of Title Insurance Companies.—A. Title insurance companies shall have the power to make insurances of every kind pertaining to or connected with titles to real estate, and to make, execute and perfect such and so many contracts, agreements, policies and other instruments as may be required therefor, such insurances to be made for the benefit of owners of real estate, mortgages, and others interested in real estate, from loss by reason of defective titles, liens and encumbrances.[1]

B. In addition to the general power of companies to receive and hold real estate,[2] title insurance companies shall have the power to take, receive and hold any and all such pieces of real property as may have been, or may hereafter be, the subject of any insurance made by such companies under the powers hereinabove recited, whether given by law or by charter, and the same to grant, lease, bargain, sell, convey and dispose of in any manner as they see proper.

C. Title insurance companies shall have a capital of not less than one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars, and, in addition, a surplus paid in at least equal to fifty per centum of the subscribed capital.

Comments:

1. Heretofore title insurance companies have operated under the supervieion of the Department of Banking. This is the first time that reference to them is made in an act relating to insurance companies generally. The modern trust company is an outgrowth of the title insurance company originally intended by the General Corporation Act of 1874, as amended, for the purpose of "insurance of owners of real estate, mortgagees and others interested in real estate from loss by reason of defective titles, liens and encumbrances." Such companies are, of course, under the supervision of the Department of Banking, having since 1874 by various Acts of Assembly been given additional powers, including the right to receive deposits, act as fiduicary, etc. Certain of these companies have formally surrendered all powers except that of doing a title insurance business.

In Formal Opinion No. 39, on February 8, 1932, Deputy Attorney General Harold D. Saylor advised the Secretary of Banking that title insurace companies not receiving money on deposit or for safekeeping, and not engaging in any trust activities, are not subject to the supervision of the Department of Banking. Clearly they should be supervised by a department of the Commonwealth, and the Insurance Department is best equipped for that purpose. The very name of companies of this character indicates that they should be subject to the same supervision as other insurance companies.

2. This refers to Section 313 of this draft.

Section 308. Specific Powers and Financial Requirements of Mortgage Insurance Companies.—A. Mortgage insurance companies shall have the power to insure and guarantee the payment of the principal, interest and other sums agreed to be paid under the terms of any notes or bonds secured by a mortgage upon real estate or other sums secured under the terms of any such mortgage, and to make and execute such contracts and policies as may be required therefor.

B. Mortgage insurance companies shall have a capital of not less than two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, and, in addition, a surplus paid in at least equal to fifty per centum of the subscribed capital.

Act of April 29, 1874, P. L. 73.
Act of June 1, 1907, P. L. 382, Section 1.

Comments:

The reasons given in the comments to Section 307 of this draft for the inclusion of title insurance companies in the insurance law apply to mortgage guarantee companies that properly belong under the supervision of the Insurance Department. Many companies which do a banking and trust business exercise their power to guarantee mortgages. As such, they come under the supervision of the Department of Banking. Where, however, they do nothing but a mortgage guarantee business and do not receive deposits or act in a fiduciary capacity, they are not under the supervision of the Department of Banking. (See formal opinion of Deputy Attorney General Saylor, dated June 25, 1930, Opinions of the Attorney General, 1929-1930, page 55).

The name "mortgage insurance company" has been adopted in preference to that of "mortgage guarantee company" for the reason that these companies will be engaged in the insurance business. For further provisions concerning them, see the article of this draft entitled "Mortgage Insurance Companies."

Section 309. Additional Powers and Limitations.—A. Domestic companies, other than life, title insurance and mortgage insurance companies, and, if their charters permit, foreign companies, may transact any form of insurance not included in this act, if such insurance is not contrary to law, and is allied or in harmony with the classes of insurance herein provided. Such additional insurance shall be transacted only on express license by the Department, and upon such terms and conditions as are from time to time prescribed by it.[1]

B. Nothing in this act shall be interpreted to authorize a company to do any act in violation of the common law or the statutes of this Commonwealth or the United States, with respect to monopolies and illegal restraint of trade.

C. No company which may be incorporated under this act shall hereafter be incorporated except under the provisions of this act.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 202 (e), 40 PS Sec. 382.

Comments:

1. This subsection is similar to subsection (e) of Section 202 of the present law.

Section 310. Investment of Capital and Reserve.[1]—A. A sum equal to the capital and reserve of any domestic company shall be invested only as follows:

(1) In such real estate as it is authorized by this act to hold.

(2) In bonds of the United States, Canada, or any state, and in farm loan bonds issued by Federal Land Banks.

(3) In legally authorized bonds, notes, warrants, or obligations of any city, town, county, borough, township, municipality, school district, poor district, or water, sewer drainage, road, or other government district or division, located in this Commonwealth or in any state.

(4) In ground rents and in loans upon unencumbered real estate in any state, which loans shall not exceed sixty[2] per centum of the fair market value of the real estate at the time of making the loans.

(5) In first encumbrances upon standard steam railroads, street or interurban railways, or upon their rolling stock equipment, or of water, gas, or other public utility companies, in bonds issued to retire a prior debt, or bonds prior thereto, or in other bonds or notes of the above named corporations, upon which no default in interest exists at the time of purchase.

B. The Department may permit any company to invest sufficient of its capital and reserves in the securities of a foreign country in order to enable it to comply with the laws of such foreign country and transact business therein.

C. This section shall not be construed as preventing any company from acquiring or holding property taken in reorganization or foreclosure proceedings, or property which may be obtained in satisfaction of any debt previously contracted.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Sections 404, 517, and 602, 40 PS Secs. 504, 652 and 722.

Comments:

1. The specifications for the investment of the capital and reserve funds of a domestic company are, broadly speaking, a financial requirement of the company, in addition to the provisions of this act which require such capital and reserve funds. Inasmuch as this article covers the financial requierments of all domestic companies, this section is included in this article. The provisions which relate to the computation of reserves vary for each type of insurance covered; for this reason, they are not contained in this article relating to financial requirements, but are set up under the appropriate article which refers to the specific type of insurance.

2. The existing law permits loans not exceeding sixty-six and two-thirds per cent. of the fair market value of the real estate for fire, marine, fire and marine, and casualty companies. This draft permits loans only to the extent of sixty per cent. of the fair market value of the real estate, in accordance with the present law relating to the investments of life companies, and thus makes the law on this subject uniform for all types of companies.

Refer to Section 1004 of this draft, which gives life companies the power to make loans upon security of its own policies out of its capital and reserve. Refer also to Sections 1203 and 1403, which give to fire and marine, and casualty companies, having a million dollar capital and a million dollar surplus, the right to invest any of their surplus in the capital of a casualty company organized for the purpose of transacting business outside of the United States.

The present insurance company law contains three separate provisions for the investment of capital; Section 404 relates to the investment of the capital and reserve of life companies; Section 517 relates to the investment of capital of stock fire, stock marine, or stock fire and marine companies; Section 602 relates to the investment of capital of stock casualty companies. This section consolidates these separate provisions for the sake of uniformity, and because they are in reality general provisions applicable to all types of companies.

Section 311. Investment of Surplus.—Any domestic company may invest any money which it has in addition to its capital and reserve as follows:

(1) In the securities enumerated in this act as proper investments for the capital and reserve of any domestic company; or

(2) In the standard and listed shares of stock, or other evidence of indebtedness, of any solvent dividend paying[1] corporation created under the laws of this Commonwealth or of any other state; or

(3) In loans upon the pledge of any securities heretofore authorized in this section as investments, except its own shares of stock or the shares of stock of any other company authorized to transact the same classes of insurance business. The current market value of such securities shall at the time of making any loan be at least twenty per centum more than the sum loaned thereon.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Sections 405, 518, and 603, 40 PS Secs. 505, 653 and 723.

Comments:

1. The present law permits life companies and casualty companies to invest their surplus funds in the stock of a solvent dividend paying corporation; however, the present law relating to the investment of the surplus of stock fire, stock marine, and stock fire and marine companies, permits the investment in the stock "* * * of any solvent corporations * * *" For the sake of uniformity this draft permits investment in stock of only dividend paying corporations.

This section would seem to belong in this article relating to financial requirements to the same extent as the previous section. Under the present law, the provisions of this section are now separately stated in three sections of the insurance company law: Section 404, relating to life companies; Section 517, relating to stock fire, stock marine, and stock fire and marine companies; Section 602, relating to stock casualty companies. This section likewise consolidates those provisions for the sake of uniformity.

Section 312. Restrictions on Investment of Capital, Reserve and Surplus.—A. A domestic company shall not invest any of its funds:

(1) In any unincorporated business or enterprise; or

(2) In shares of stock or evidences of indebtedness of any corporation, the owners or holders of which shares or evidences of indebtedness may, in any event, be or become liable on account thereof for any assessment, except for taxes; or

(3) In loans on personal security.

B. Not more than one-fifth of the capital of a domestic company shall be invested in a single mortgage. No such company shall hereafter invest or acquire, directly or indirectly, more than ten per centum of the shares of stock of any corporation; nor shall more than ten per centum of its capital and surplus be invested in the shares of stock of any corporation. No such company shall enter into any agreement to withhold from sale any of its property.

C. If any domestic company makes an investment not authorized by this act, the officers, directors, and trustees making or authorizing the investment shall be personally liable for any loss to the company, or its members or policyholders, occasioned thereby.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Sections 405, 518, and 603, 40 PS Secs. 505, 653, and 723.

Comments:

These provisions at the present time exist under the various sections relating to the investment of surplus of the different types of companies. This section separates these provisions from the section on the investment of surplus, and sets them up as specific restrictions on the investments of all the funds of companies.

Section 313. Real Estate Which May Be Purchased and Held.—A. Any domestic company may lawfully purchase, receive, hold and convey real estate, when such real estate is:

(1) Required for the transactions of its business.

(2) Conveyed to it in satisfaction of debts previously contracted in the course of its dealings.

(3) Purchased for the purpose of protecting its lien thereon at a sale had pursuant to a judgment, decree or mortgage.[1]

B. Any real estate, other than that required for the business of a domestic company, which it has lawfully acquired, and which it has held for a period of more than five years from the date of its acquisition, shall be sold and disposed of within a period of six months after the Department has duly notified it to sell and convey such real estate. The Department may extend the period of six months permitted for the disposition of real estate, if it believes that the interests of the company will suffer materially by a forced sale.

C. The provisions of this section shall not apply to any real estate which is lawfully acquired under any other provision of this act.

Comments:

1. A company may purchase real estate at a sheriff's sale, under this provision, not only when the sale is made in foreclosing a mortgage of the company, but also when the sale is made in foreclosing a mortgage of some other party on real estate on which the company has a subsequent lien.

The present insurance company law provides in separate sections for the real estate which each type of domestic company may hold: Section 405, relates to life companies; Section 519 relates to stock fire, stock marine, and stock fire and marine companies; Section 604 relates to stock casualty companies; Section 803, relates to mutual companies other than mutual life companies. This section consolidates all these provisions in the existing law, because they are substantially the same, and should appear as a general provision.

Refer to Section 1005, which gives life companies the power to hold real estate as trustees. Refer also to Section 307, which gives title insurance companies the right to hold whatever real estate is necessary to their corporate functions.

Section 314. Defense of Ultra Vires.[1]—A. No limitation upon the business, purpose or purposes, or powers of a company, expressed or implied in its articles or implied by law, shall be asserted in order to defend any action at law or in equity between the company and a third person, or between a shareholder and a third person, involving any contract to which the company is a party, or any right of property, or any alleged liability of whatsoever nature; but such limitation may be asserted:

(1) In an action by a shareholder against the company to enjoin the doing of unauthorized acts or the transaction or continuation of unauthorized business. If the unauthorized acts or the business sought to be enjoined are being transacted pursuant to any contract to which the company is a party, the court may, if all of the parties to the contract are parties to the suit, and if it deems the same to be equitable, be aside and enjoin the performance of such contract, and in so doing shall allow to the company, or the other parties, as the case may be, compensation for the loss or damage sustained by either of them, which may result from the action of the court in setting aside and enjoining the performance of such contract, but anticipated profits to be derived from the performance of the contract shall not be awarded by the court as a loss or damage sustained.

(2) In an action at law or in equity by the company, whether acting through a receiver, trustees, or other legal representative, or through shareholders in a representative suit, against the officers or directors of the company for exceeding their authority.

(3) In a proceeding in which the Department is defending any action taken by it against the company, or is seeking to enforce an order against such company, or to enjoin it from the transaction of unauthorized or unlawful business.[2]

B. No conveyance or transfer by or to a company of property, real or personal, of any kind or description, shall be invalid or fail because in making such conveyance or transfer, or in acquiring the property, real or personal, the board of directors or any of the officers of the company, acting within the scope of the actual or apparent authority given to them by the board of directors, have in so doing exceeded any of its objects, purposes, or powers.

Comments:

1. This proposed section follows in general Sections 9, 301, and 303 of the proposed Business Corporation Law.

Fletcher Cyclopedia Corporations (Permanent Edition) Volume 7, Section 3439 (1931), at page 589, states of the ultra vires doctrine, as applicable to any corporation.

"Until a few years ago, there were no statutes in this country relating to ultra vires as a defense. However, the conflict and confusion in the decisions as to the effect of ultra vires, and the desire of many to abolish the doctrine as between the parties to the ultra vires act, have resulted in the past few years in numerous proposed codifications and restatements of the ultra vires doctrine and also in the enactment of statutes in several states either limiting or abolishing the doctrine of ultra vires as between the parties to the alleged ultra vires transaction. These statutes may be classified as (1) those adopting wholly or in substance the Uniform Business Corporation Act, and (2) statutes in states not adopting this act. This first class of statutes does not go so far, and is not as comprehensive, as the latter class of statutes."

The Uniform Act merely attempts to make uniform the decisions relating to the defense of ultra vires by abolishing two doctrines which give rise to most of the confusion in such decisions; namely: (1) the doctrine of constructive notice of the contents of the charter, and (2) the doctrine of limited corporate capacity. If these two doctrines are abolished, the effect will be to bring the few states in this country which follow the Federal rule in line with the majority of the states, which do not follow the Federal rule in the field of ultra vires. This draft, in Sections 11 and 313, follows the suggestion of the Uniform Act.

It is submitted, however, that the elimination of the doctrines of constructive notice and limited corporate capacity will make little change in the present Pennsylvania law. In Pennsylvania an unexecuted corporate act or agreement which is ultra vires can ordinarily be repudiated by the corporation.—Pittsburgh and Steubenville Railroad Company v. Allegheny County, 79 Pa. 210 (1875); Twelfth Street Market Company v. Jackson, 102 Pa. 269 (1883).—but a corporation may not avail itself of ultra vires as a defense where a contract has been entered into and executed in good faith by the other party and the corporation has received the benefit of the performance. This rule is founded upon the doctrine or estoppel rather than ratification, and relates to all contracts except those absolutely void on the ground of public policy,—Boyd v. The American Carbon Black Company, 182 Pa. 206 (1897); Presbyterian Board v. Gilbee, 212 Pa. 310 (1905); Lemmon v. The East Palestine Rubber Company, 260 Pa. 28 (1918); Doylestown and Danborough Turnpike Railroad Company v. Philadelphia and Easton Electric Railway Company, 49 Pa. Super. 381 (1912). If an ultra vires contract is partly executory, a corporation may, if the contract is easily divisible, avoid the executory portions, because of their ultra vires nature,—Thomas et al., v. West Jersey Railroad Company, 101 U. S. 71 (1800); Gloninger v. Pittsburgh & C. R. Company, 139 Pa. 13 (1891); Bosshardt v. Crescent Oil Company, Ltd., 171 Pa. 109 (1895),—otherwise the doctrine of equitable estoppel is applicable to the partly executory contract,—Leslie and Company, Ltd., v. Baird Manufacturing Company, 66 Pitts. 753 (1918). Also, in Pennsylvania this doctrine may be set up by stockholders, the State, or by creditors, but not by a stranger to the transaction,—Hazelwood Brewing Company v. Siebert, 256 Pa. 9 (1917). Generally speaking, the defense of ultra vires is not looked upon favorably by the courts of this Commonwealth. As is stated in Wright et al., v. The Pipe Line Company, 101 Pa. 204 (1882), "The law never sustains a defense of this nature out of regard for a defendant; it does so only where an imperative rule of public policy requires it."

On the other hand, in very recent years, Vermont, Ohio, California, Illinois and Michigan have abolished the defense of ultra vires between the corporation and a third party or a stockholder and a third party. Ohio, however, expressly retains the ultra vires doctrine as against a person having actual knowledge of the want of authority of the corporation. These states, however, permit such defense to be set up between the corporation and the stockholders. None of the statutes enacted by these states changes the law as to the power of the State to forfeit or oust because of ultra vires, or the power of the corporation or its stockholders to prevent ultra vires transactions, or obtain redress therefor as against corporate officers. This draft follows the proposed Business Corporation Law and goes further than the Uniform Act and abolishes the doctrine of ultra vires between the corporation and third parties or shareholders of the corporation and third parties. The provisions of this section are taken from the Illinois and California acts, which were adopted in 1931.

The proposed Business Corporation Law queries whether Pennsylvania should follow the Ohio act and permit the corporate body to use the defense of ultra vires against a third party which dealt with the corporate agents, knowing that the transaction was ultra vires and that the agents had no authority from the corporation to engage in this transaction.

2. Clause (3) is completely different from the proposed Business Corporation Law, but seems necessary by virtue of the special powers given to the Insurance Department over all insurance companies, which are much broader than those given to the Department of States over general business corporations.

Section 315. By-Laws.; Adoption, Amendment, or Repeal; Approval by Department.—A. Except as herein otherwise provided, the shareholders and members shall have the power to make, alter, amend and repeal the by-laws of a company. The by-laws may be adopted, altered, amended, and repealed by a majority vote of the shareholders or members, as the case may be, at any regular or special meeting duly convened after notice to the shareholders or members of that purpose.[1]

B. The by-laws may contain any provision for the regulation and management of the affairs of the company not inconsistent with law or its articles and may provide penalties for the breach thereof not exceeding twenty dollars.

C. Immediately upon the adoption of the by-laws or of any additions thereto or any alteration, amendment, or repeal thereof, notice of such fact and a copy of such by-law or such alteration, amendment, or repeal shall forthwith be sent to the Department. The Department shall have the power to disapprove any such by-law or any such alteration, amendment, or repeal thereof, but such by-law, alteration, amendment, or repeal shall be effective until the Department actually disapproves it and gives notice thereof to the company.[2]

Pennsylvania

Corporation Act of 1874, Section 5, amended by Act of May 14, 1891, P. L. 61, 15 PS Sec. 41.

Comments:

1. Subsections A and B of this proposed section correspond in part to Section 304 of the proposed Business Corporation Law. Section 5 of the Corporation Act of 1874, supra, as amended, provides that the by-laws "shall be made by the stockholders or members of the corporation at a general meeting called for that purpose unless the charter prescribes another body or a different body." The recent general corporation acts of Illinois and Indiana and a few other states vest the power to make by-laws primarily in the board of directors, unless the articles provide otherwise. There appears to be no reason why the power normally exercised by the shareholders and members should be delegated to the directors. This draft vests this power solely in the shareholders. The general rule is now, as it was under the common law, that the power to adopt by-laws resides inherently and primarily in the shareholders,—Fletcher Cyclopedia Corporation (Permanent Edition) Volume 8, Section 4172.—and there seems to be no reason for shifting this inherent power from the shareholders to the board of directors.

2. This draft requires the articles of any company, as well as any amendments thereto, to be approved by the Department.

Under existing law there is no requirement that the by-laws of a company be approved by the Department. It seems clear that the Department should have the power to exercise some supervision over the contents of the by-laws. However, to require that the Department approve them, or any amendments to them, before they become effective, would serve as a hardship upon the company. Therefore, this draft provides that the by-laws shall remain effective until actually disapproved by the Department.

Section 316. Parties Bound by By-Laws; Execution of Instruments.—The by-laws of a company shall operate merely as regulations among its shareholders and members, and shall not affect contracts or other dealings with other persons, unless such persons have actual knowledge of such by-laws, or unless the company has given to such persons a copy of such by-laws.

Any form of execution provided in the by-laws to the contrary notwithstanding, any note, mortgage, evidence of indebtedness, contract, or other instrument of writing, or any assignment or endorsement thereof, executed or entered into between a company and any other corporation or person, when signed by the president or vice president and by the cashier or treasurer of such company, shall be held to have been properly executed for and in behalf of the company.

Act of May 12, 1925, P. L. 615, 15 PS Sec. 42.

Comments:

The Act of 1925 overruled the cases (1) which held that a person dealing with a corporation is charged with notice of the by-laws, and (2) which held that parties acting under agreements with a corporation are bound by the form of execution provided for in the by-laws or resolutions authorizing the specific contracts.

Section 317. Registered Office.—Every company shall have and continuously maintain in this Commonwealth a registered office which shall be its principal place of business. The address, including street and number, if any, of the initial registered office, shall be stated in the articles of the company, as heretofore provided in this act.

Pennsylvania Corporation Act of 1874, Section 3, 15 PS Sec. 21.

Comments:

This clause is substantially similar to Section 306 of the proposed Business Corporation Law.

Under the provisions of the Corporation Act of 1874, every corporation of the second class is required to have a "principal office" in this Commonwealth. However, unlike the laws of most states, that act does not require a domestic corporation to designate a resident or registered agent to be in charge of the principal office and to receive service of process against the corporation.

This draft makes no change in the present Pennsylvania law with respect to corporation generally. It does change the law with respect to insurance companies as there is now no provision for the location of the principal office. This draft also does not embody the provisions of existing statutes relating to service of process upon corporations, as such provisions are contained in law relating also to individuals, joint-stock associations, and limited partnerships.

Section 318. Change of Registered Office.—After incorporation, a change of the location of the registered office may be authorized at any time by a two-thirds vote of the board of directors. Before the change of location shall become effective, the directors shall file with the Department of State, the Insurance Department and the recorder of deeds of the county in which the registered office is then located, a statement signed and verified by two duly authorized officers of the company, setting forth:

(1) The name of the company;

(2) The address, including street and number, if any, of its then registered office;

(3) The address, including street and number, if any, to which the registered office is to be changed,

(4) That such change was authorized by resolution duly adopted by at least two-thirds of the members of the board of directors. If the registered office of the company is changed from one county to another county, then the company shall also file for record in the office of the recorder of deeds of the county to which such registered office is changed a copy of its articles, together with a copy of the statement of change of address of its registered office. The change of address of the registered office shall become effective upon the filing of such statement with the Department of State, the Insurance Department and the recorder of deeds.

Pennsylvania Act of June 8, 1893, P. L. 355, 15 PS Sec. 55.

Comments:

This section is substantially similar to Section 307 of the proposed Business Corporation Law.

The Act of June 8, 1893, P. L. 355, permits any corporation of this Commonwealth to change the location of its principal office "by resolution of its board of directors, adopted by a two-thirds vote thereof, approved at any annual meeting or special meeting duly called of the stockholders, by a two-thirds vote thereof."

It will be noted that the Pennsylvania act requires the stockholders of the corporation to approve the change of the principal office of the corporation and that a two-thirds vote of the stockholders is required. The Uniform Act, the laws of Delaware and New Jersey, and the more recent corporation acts of most states permit the board of directors to change the registered office of a domestic corporation without the approval of the stockholders. As there is no outstanding reason why the stockholders of the company should approve a change in the location of its registered office, this draft, like the Uniform Act and the laws of the other states, does not require the stockholders to approve a change of location of its registered office. This draft, instead of prescribing a penalty for failing to notify the Secretary of the Commonwealth of a change in the location of the registered office, as is suggested in the Uniform Act, provides that the change in location may only be made by filing a formal statement with the Department of State.

While the Act of 1893 does not so provide, this draft requires written notice of the change of location of the registered office to be filed in the recorder of deeds' office of the county where the articles of incorporation setting forth the location of the initial registered office are filed, and in the event the registered office is moved to another county, also in the recorder of deeds' office of that county. In the latter event, the company is also required to file its articles with that recorder of deeds, as under the scheme of this draft the articles of a company are to be on file in the office of the recorder of deeds of the county in which the registered office of the company is at any time located.

Section 319. Change of Name.—A. Any company, by resolution of its board of directors, adopted by a majority thereof and approved at a shareholders' or members' meeting by a majority thereof, may apply to the Department for authority to change its name, provided the proposed change does not violate the provisions of this act or of any other law as to the name of an insurance company.

Such application shall be prepared in triplicate originals, shall bear the seal of the company and shall state, under the oath or affirmation of the officers, the exact results of the votes of the directors and shareholders or members respectively.

B. The Department shall, within thirty days after receipt of such application, approve or disapprove the change of name. If it shall disapprove such change, it shall inform the company of its reason in full. If it shall approve such change, it shall retain one of the triplicate originals; it shall sign its approval upon the two others and send one to the Department of State for filing and one to the company, which shall have it recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds of the county in which the registered office of the company is situated. This instrument, upon being recorded by the recorder of deeds, shall be returned to the company.

Upon thus recording the application, the company may change its name as provided in its application.

Comments:

As to a voluntary change of name, prior to the Act of 1903, supra, the name of a corporation of the second class was changed by an amendment to its charter under the general provisions of the Act of June 13, 1883, P. L. 122, Section 1, 15 PS Sec. 401, see Fort Pitt Building and Loan Association, 159 Pa. 308 (1893). Now, however, under the Act of 1903, the corporate name is changed by filing a certificate of the change of name with the Secretary of the Commonwealth, after a two-thirds vote of the shareholders has been obtained. The Secretary of the Commonwealth, in turn, issues a certificate authorizing the use of the new name upon the filing of the certificate in the office of the recorder of deeds of the proper county.

As the Uniform Act and the laws of most states, including Delaware, New Jersey, and New York require a business corporation to amend its articles in order to change its name, for the sake of uniformity, this draft restores the former practice in Pennsylvania of changing the name of any corporation by an amendment to its articles. See Article VIII of this draft for the amendment procedure.

So far as insurance companies are concerned the procedure for changing the name of a company is by amendment of the charter, as provided in Section 352 of the Insurance Company Law of 1921.

Section 320. Corporate Records; Inspection.—A. Every company shall keep at its registered office recodrs of the proceedings of the shareholders or members and of the directors, and the original or a copy of its by-laws, including all amendments or alterations thereto to date, certified by the secretary of the company, and shall keep at its registered oiffce, an original or a duplicate share register giving the names of the shareholders in alphabetical order, and showing their respective addresses, the number and classes of shares held by each, the number and date of certificates issued for the shares, and the number and date of cancellation of every certificate surrendered for cancellation. Every such company shall also keep appropriate, complete and accurate books or records of account, which may be kept at its registered office, or at its principal place of business.

B. Every shareholder shall have a right to examine, in person or by agent or attorney, at any reasonable time or times, for any reasonable purpose, the share register, books or records of account, and records of the proceedings of the shareholders and directors, and make extracts therefrom.

C. A company shall be liable to the Commonwealth for a penalty of fifty dollars for each day it neglects to keep or maintain any or all of the books and records required by this section.

Comments:

This section of the draft is substantially similar to Section 35 of the Uniform Act.

Under this section, a company must keep a share register at its registered office within this Commonwealth, unless it has a transfer agent within the Commonwealth, in which event the share register may be kept at the office of such agent.

The books of account, unlike the minutes, share register, etc., may be kept at that place at which the corporation is actually doing business, even though that may be outside the Commonwealth.

The provision relating to inspection of corporate books is the same as the common law rule, and the existing law in Pennsylvania. McClintock v. Young Republicans of Philadelphia, 210 Pa. 115 (1904); Commonwealth v. Pennsylvania Silk Company et al., (No. 1), 267 Pa. 331 (1920). This provision makes the shareholders' rights and the directors' duties dependent upon the reasonableness of the motive and purpose of the shareholder. The right to inspect cannot be exercised for speculative purposes or the mere gratification of curiosity. The right to inspect may, in a proper case, be enforced by a preemptory writ of mandamus. Phoenix Iron Company v. Commonwealth, 113 Pa. 563 (1886).

The penalty provided by this section is taken from the Uniform Act, and is included solely for the purpose of discussion.

ARTICLE IV

DIRECTORS, OFFICERS AND EMPLOYES

Section 401. Board of Directors; Terms of Office; Qualifications.—A. The business and affairs of every company shall be managed by a board of at least seven[1] directors, which, except as otherwise provided by this act or by the articles or by-laws of the company, shall exercise all the powers and fulfill all the duties granted to, or imposed upon, the company by this act. Each director shall hold office for the term for which he is elected and qualified. The names and terms of office of the first directors shall be stated in the articles. Except as otherwise provided in this act for the filling of vacancies, directors, other than those constituting the first board of directors, shall be elected by the shareholders or members.

B. Every director shall, during his term of office, be a citizen of the United States, and a majority of the directors shall, during their terms of service, be bonafide residents in this Commonwealth.

C. Every director shall be a shareholder or member of the company.

D. Any mutual fire company may provide, by its by-laws, for written nominations by its members of candidates for election as directors or officers thereof, for the time and manner of filing such nominations with the company prior to the meeting for the election of directors and officers, and for the election as director or officer of only such members as are nominated in accordance with such by-laws.

Comments:

1. Section 401 of the proposed Business Corporation Law requires only three directors in the case of general business corporations. This draft is in accordance with present law with respect to insurance companies. It seems reasonable that insurance companies should be managed by a board of directors of not less than seven.

See Section 502 of the proposed Banking Code and Section 401 of the proposed Business Corporation Law.

Section 402. Number and Election of Directors.—Subject to the provisions of this act, the number, qualifications, terms of office, manner of election, time and place of meeting, compensation, and powers and duties of the directors may be prescribed from time to time by the by-laws. Except as otherwise provided in the by-laws:

(1) A director shall be elected for a term of one year.

(2) The number of directors shall be the same as that stated in the articles.

(3) Vacancies in the board of directors shall be filled by the remaining members of the board, and each person so elected shall be a director until his successor is elected by the shareholders or members, who may make such election at the next annual meeting of the shareholders or members or at any special meeting duly called for that purpose and held prior thereto.

(4) The meetings of the board of directors shall be held at such place within this Commonwealth as a majority of the directors may from time to time appoint.

(5) A majority of the directors shall be necessary to constitute a quorum for the transaction of business, and except as otherwise provided in this act, or in the articles or by-laws of a particular company, the acts of a majority of the directors present at a meeting at which a quorum is present shall be the acts of the board of directors, but if the directors shall severally or collectively consent in writing to any action to be taken by the company, such action shall be as valid corporate action as though it had been authorized at a meeting of the board of directors.

(6) The board of directors may, by resolution duly adopted, delegate to a committee or committees of their number the powers of the board in regard to the ordinary operations of the business of the company between the dates of the monthly meetings. Every such committee shall keep full minutes of all business transacted by it and shall present detailed reports of all such transactions at each monthly meeting of the board.

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 308, 40 PS Sec. 429.

Section 403. Classification of Directors.—If the articles or by-laws of a company so provide, the directors thereof may be classified in respect to the time for which they shall severally hold office. In such case, each class shall be as nearly equal in number as possible, the term of office of at least one class shall expire in each year, and the members of a class shall not be elected for a shorter period than one year, or for a longer period than three years. At each ensuing election of directors after such classification, only the number of directors equal to the number of the class whose terms expire at the time of the election shall be elected, and such directors shall be elected for the longest term for which any class may have been elected as provided in this section.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 308, 40 PS Sec. 429.

Section 404. Meetings of Board of Directors; Notice Thereof.—A. The board of directors of every company shall hold a regular meeting at least once in each month, except that the board of directors of every mutual fire company shall meet at least once in each year. Meetings of the board of directors shall be held upon such notice as the by-laws may prescribe. Attendance of a director at any meeting shall constitute a waiver of notice of such meeting, except where a director attends a meeting for the express purpose of objecting to the transaction of any business because the meeting was not lawfully called or convened. Neither the business to be transacted at, nor the purpose of, any meeting need be specified in the notice or waives of notice of such meeting.

B. The board of directors shall keep complete records of their proceedings in a minute book kept for that purpose alone. When a director shall request it, the vote of each director upon a particular question shall be recorded in the minutes.

Comments:

It seems clear that a proper safeguarding of the interests of policyholders and members of a company requires that its directors meet regularly. In the case of a stock company and most mutual companies monthly meetings should be held. In the case of a mutual fire company, where usually the directors are residents of the same county, and the business of the company does not require more frequent meetings, it would be an unnecessary hardship to require them more often than once a year.

Section 405. Compensation of Directors.—The directors of a company shall be entitled to such compensation as is provided in the articles or the by-laws thereof. Except as otherwise specifically provided in this act, a director may also be a salaried officer of the company.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 312, 40 PS Sec. 435.

Section 406. Oaths of Directors.—A. Each director of a company shall, within thirty days after his election, and before assuming the duties of his office, take an oath or affirmation that he will, so far as the duty devolves upon him, diligently and honestly administer the affairs of the company, and will not knowingly or willingly permit to be violated any of the provisions of law applicable to the company of which he is a director, and that he meets the requirements of this act and of the articles and by-laws of the company for directors.

B. Such oath or affirmation shall be signed by the director making it and shall be immediately transmitted to the Department, where it shall be filed.

Act of June 3, 1911, P. L. 652, Section 1, amended by Act of April 4, 1929, P. L. 143, 7 PS Sec. 184.

Comments:

This draft corresponds substantially to the Act of 1911, as amended, supra, which applies to several types of banking institutions, including "bank of discount, banking company . . . trust company . . . and savings bank." There seems to be good reason why an oath should be required of a company under the supervision of the Insurance Department.

Section 407. Officers and Agents.—Every company shall have a president, a secretary, and a treasurer, and may have such other officers and assistant officers and agents as the needs of the company may require. The officers, assistant officers and agents shall be elected or appointed, either by the board of directors or by the shareholders or members, at such time, in such manner, and for such terms as the by-laws may prescribe. It shall not be necessary for the officers, except the president, to be directors, but a vice president who is not a director shall not succeed to or fill the office of president. If the by-laws so provide, any two or more offices may be held by the same person, except the offices of president and secretary. The board of directors may secure the fidlity of any or all of such officers by bond or otherwise. Unless otherwise provided in the by-laws, the board of directors shall have power to fill any vacancies in any office occurring from whatever reason. All officers and agents of the company, as between themselves and the company, shall have such authority and perform such duties in the management of the property and affairs of the company as may be provided in the by-laws, or, in the absence of controlling provisions in the by-laws, as may be determined by resolution of the board of directors.

Section 408. Removal of Officers.—An officer or agent elected or appointed by the board of directors may be removed by the board of directors whenever in its judgment the best interests of the company will be served thereby, but such removal shall be without prejudice to the contract rights, if any, of the person so removed.

Bielefeld and Spahn Company, et al., 256 Pa. 543 (1917). If an officer lawfully elected has been improperly removed, mandamus will lie to prevent his further exclusion from office. Spahn v. Bielefeld and Spahn Company, supra; also Riddell v. The Harmoney Fire Company, 8 Phila. 310 (1871).

Section 409. Relation of Directors and Officers to Company.[1]—Officers and directors shall be deemed to stand in a fiduciary relation to the company, and shall discharge the duties of their respective positions in good faith and with that diligence, care and skill which ordinarily prudent men would exercise under similar circumstances in like positions. Before they are qualified to act they shall file with the secretary of the company a written acceptance of the trust, which shall be filed in addition to the oath required by this act.[2]

Comments:

1. According to a note contained under this section in the Uniform Act, the section is necessary in view of the unsettled state of the case law upon the question of the relation of directors to the corporation. Some cases liken the relation of directors to the corporation to that of a trustee to a cestui que trust (Bent v. Priest, 86 Mo. 475); other cases liken directors to mandataries (Spering's Appeal, 71 Pa. 11 (1872); The Citizens Building, Loan and Savings Association of Plainfield v. Corlell et al., 34 N. J. Eq. 383 (1881)); still other cases hold that directors are agents of the corporation (Ten Eyk v. R. R., 74 Mich. 227; Briggs v. Spaulding, 141 U. S. 132 (1891); Hun v. Carey, 82 N. Y. 65 (1880)). There is a conflict also in the decisions as to whether directors should use that degree of care that the ordinarily prudent man would use in his own business (Hun v. Carey, supra; Hanna v. Lyon, 179 N. Y. 107 (1904); Kavanaugh v. Commonwealth Trust Company, 223 N. Y. 103), or that amount of care that an ordinarily prudent director would use (Briggs v. Spaulding, supra; Allen v. Roydhouse, 232 Fed. 1010 (1916); Stone v. Rottman, 183 No. 552 and Spering's Appeal, supra). The draftsman of the Uniform Act states that the weight of authority support the rule adopted in this draft, and that this rule is the most fair and the most practicable.

The proposed section will effect a change in Pennsylvania law. Back in 1872, Judge Sharswood, in Spering's Appeal, supra, said: "It is by no means a well-settled point what is the precise relation which directors sustain to stockholders. They are undoubtedly said in many authorities to be trustees, but that as I apprehend is only in a general sense, as we term an agent or any bailee intrusted with the care and management of the property of another. It is certain that they are not technical trustees. They can only be regarded as mandataries—persons who have gratuitously undertaken to perform certain duties, and who are therefore bound to apply ordinary skill and diligence, but no more."

Since directors receiving no compensation are treated as gratuitous mandataries, it is held in Pennsylvania that they are required to exercise only ordinary skill and diligence, and are personally liable only for fraud or for such gross negligence as amounts to fraud, and for acts clearly ultra vires. Spering's Appeal, supra.

In Commonwealth v. Anchor Building and Loan Association, 20 Pa. Super. 101 (1902), it was stated: "This rule of law is based upon the fact that directors are gratuitous mandatories. . . . the insignificant payments to directors when attending meetings of the board, were not compensation and did not change the measure of duty and liability of the directors."

In Swentzel v. Penn Bank, 147 Pa. 140 (1892) Judge Paxson, in reiterating the rule of ordinary care laid down in Spering's Appeal, stated: "The ordinary care of a business man in his own affairs means one things; the ordinary care of a gratuitous mandatory is quite another matter. The one implies an oversight and knowledge of every detail of his business; the other suggests such care only as a man can give in a short space of time to the business of other persons, from whom he receives no compensation. . . . care must be taken that we do not hold mere gratuitous mandatories to such a severe rule as to drive all honest men out of such positions."

From the foregoing, it is obvious that in Pennsylvania today a director is held to but the ordinary skill and diligence of a director in the business of the corporation and not to the ordinary skill and diligence which a man takes of his own business.

Pennsylvania Act of April 18, 1919, P. L. 67, 15 PS Sec. 593.

Comments:

In view of the doubt existing in Pennsylvania prior to the Act of 1919, as to the eligibility of a married woman to act as incorporator, director, or officer of a corporation for profit, it seems advisable to include the provisions of the Act of 1919 in this draft. Ses Section 201, which makes married woman eligible to be incorporators.

Section 411. Bonds of Officers and Employes.—A. The officers of every company and such of its employes as may be designated by the board of directors shall, before entering upon the performance of their duties, furnish to the company bonds in such amount as the board of directors shall require, with corporate surety approved by the board of directors conditioned for the faithful performance of their duties. The cost of such bonds may be paid by the company.

B. The Department shall have power to require any such officer or employe, at any time during the term of his office or employment, to furnish a bond in an amount greater than that required by the board of directors of the company, or it may require new or additional corporate surety.

Comments:

Section 314 of The Insurance Company Law of 1921 provides that the "Treasurer shall give bond in such form and with such sureties as shall be prescribed by the by-laws." There seems to be no reason why officers other than the treasurer and certain employes should not likewise be bonded. Section 18 of the Bank Act of 1876 requires such bonds, and they are common today, at least in nominal amount.

This section, in substance, appears as Section 512 of the proposed Banking Code.

Section 412. Communications from Insurance Department.—Every official communication directed by the Department to a company, or to any officer thereof, shall be transmitted by the officer receiving it to the board of directors at the next meeting of such board, and shall be duly recorded in the minutes of such meeting.

Comments:

This proposed section is new in Pennsylvania law. It appears as Section 508 in the draft of the proposed Banking Code. It is intended to assure the disclosure to the board of directors of any official communications received by a company or by any officer thereof. It is similar to the provisions in the banking laws of several other states, particularly the Banking Law of New York, supra.

Section 413. Purchases from and Sales to Directors; Penalty.—A. A company shall not contract for or purchase from any of its officers or directors or from a corporation or unincorporated association of which any of its officers or directors is a member, any securities or other property, unless such purchase is made in the regular course of business upon terms not less favorable to the company than those offered to any other corporation or person, unles such purchase could not be made elsewhere at a more favorable price or upon more favorable terms, and unless such purchase is authorized by the vote of a majority of the members of the board of directors of such company, who are not interested in such transaction except in their capacity as officers or directors of the company.

B. Any company shall not sell securities or other property owned or held by it to any of its officers or directors or to a corporation or unincorporated association of which any of its officers or directors is a member, unless such sale is made in the regular course of business upon terms not less favorable to the company than those offered to any other corporation or person, unless such sale could not be made elsewhere at a more favorable price or upon more favorable terms, and unless such sale is authorized by the vote of a majority of the members of the board of directors of such company, who are not interested in such transaction except in their capacity as officers or directors of the company.

C. The Department may require from any officer or director who has purchased from or sold to the company of which he is an officer or director, any securities or other property, a full disclosure, under oath or affirmation, of all the details of such transaction, including a full statement as to any commission received or profit realized by such officer or director or by any other officer or director of the company.

D. Any officer or director of a company who knowingly violates the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction thereof, be subject to an imprisonment not exceeding one year, or a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or both; he shall also be subject to a further fine equal to any profit which he shall have made upon the transaction.

Comments:

This section is substantially the same as Section 519 of the proposed Banking Code. It is based upon the provisions of the Federal Reserve Act, supra. The purpose of this proposed section is obvious. It seems that a propert safeguarding of the interests of policyholders and other creditors makes the inclusion of some provision preventing the continued relations, between directors and officers and the company of which they are members of the board, from continuing on the same basis as it has heretofore. This proposed section does not prevent purchases and sales in which the directors are either purchasers or vendors and conversely the company is vendor or purchaser. It merely attempts to prevent recurrences of the type of violation discussed in this footnote.

In general, an individual stands in a very high fiduciary relationship to the company of which he is a director. A sale of the assets of an individual to the estate of which he is a trustee or other fiduciary has always been looked upon with suspicion by the law. There is certainly as much reason, if not more, for a careful circumscribing of the authority to engage in such transactions in the case of directors.

Finally, it should certainly be the privilege of all the directors to know of any business transaction being conducted between one of their number and the company.

Section 414. Payment of Salaries of Employes in Military Service.—Any company may continue the salaries of such of its employes as may have enlisted or enrolled, or may hereafter enlist or enroll, in any branch of the military or naval service of the United States or any state thereof, or in any other organization established for the protection of the lives and property of citizens of the United States, during the term of such enlistment or enrollment, or during such part thereof as the said employes may, by reason of such enlistment or enrollment, be unable to perform their duties as employes of said company.

ARTICLE V

SHAREHOLDERS' AND MEMBERS' MEETINGS, RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES

Section 501. Meetings of Shareholders or Members.—A. Meetings of the shareholders or members of a company shall be held within this Commonwealth[1] at such place as may be provided in the by-laws of the company. Unless the by-laws provide otherwise, all meetings of the shareholders or members shall be held at the registered office of the company.

B. The by-laws may provide for the number and the time of meetings of shareholders or members, but at least one meeting of the shareholders or members shall be held in each calendar year on or before the first day of May for the election of directors. If the annual meeting shall not be called and held within one month after the designated time, any shareholder or member shall have the power to call upon the Department to issue an order in the manner provided by law to compel the calling and holding of such meeting.[2]

C. Special meetings of shareholders or members may be called at any time by the president, by the board of directors, by such other officers or persons as may be provided in the articles or by-laws; in the case of a stock company, by the holders of not less than one-fifth of all the shares outstanding, and in the case of mutual companies, special meetings may be called by not less than twenty-five of the members.

D. At any time upon written request of any person or persons entitled to call a special meeting, it shall be the duty of the secretary of the company to call a special meeting of the shareholders or members to be held at such time as the secretary may fix, not less than ten or more than sixty days after the receipt of the request. If the secretary shall neglect or refuse to issue such call, the person or persons making the request shall have the power to call upon the Department to issue an order to compel the calling and holding of such meeting.[3] The Department may issue such order upon call of such person or persons.

E. Any annual or special meeting may be adjourned for any period of time, but any meeting at which directors are to be elected shall be adjourned only from day to day unitl such directors have been elected.[4]

Comments:

1. Section 501 of the proposed Business Corporation Law provides that meetings may be held within or without the Commonwealth. This changes the existent Pennsylvania law. However, in the case of an insurance company it seems clear that it is undesirable to permit meetings of the shareholders to be held outside the Commonwealth.

2. Section 501 of the proposed Business Corporation Law provides that failure to hold the annual meeting at the designated time shall not work any forfeiture or dissolution of the corporation. It is unnecessary to make any such provision in the case of an insurance company, since the proposed Insurance Department Code provides for the rights of the Department upon the commission of any offense by a company.

A company failing to hold an annual meeting of its board of directors is clearly violating the provisions of the above proposed section. The duty of the Department under Section 201 of the proposed Insurance Department Code to enforce and administer all laws of the Commonwealth which relate to any company under its supervision, and the power to issue and enforce its orders provided by Section 206 of that code seem adequately to provide for the case of a company which fails to hold an annual meeting of its shareholders or members. The Department would customarily discover such failure to hold a meeting upon the date of the examination of the company or upon the date of the report of the company to it. However, an additional safeguard is provided by this section in that if an annual meeting shall not be called and held within one month after the designated time, any shareholder or member may call upon the Department to issue an order compelling the calling and holding of such meeting.

3. Section 501 of the proposed Business Corporation Law pro-call for a special meeting, the person or persons making the vides that if the secretary shall neglect or refuse to issue a request shall do so. However, in the case of an insurance company it seems desirable to provide for such person or persons to call upon the Department to compel the calling of the meeting. The Department is the proper authority for the compelling of compliance with the laws regarding the business of an insurance company. In addition, this provision will make more certain the department's learning of undesirable practices by a company or its officers.

4. This changes existing law. Section 311 of the Insurance Company Law of 1921, provides upon failure to elect directors at the annual meeting for a special meeting for that purpose upon some subsequent day. There seems to be no reason why adjournment from day to day is not preferable. It eliminates the expense and delay incident to giving notice of a special meeting as is now required. This subsection (e) is similar to provisions in Section 501 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 601 of the proposed Banking Code.

Section 502. Notice of Meetings of Shareholders or Members.—Written notice of every meeting of the shareholders or members of a company shall be given by, or at the direction of, the person authorized to call the meeting, to each shareholder of record or member, at least three weeks prior to the day named for the meeting, unless a greater period of notice is required elsewhere in this act or by the by-laws in a particular case. The notice shall specify the place, day, and hour of the meeting, and, in the case of a special meeting, the general nature of the business to be transacted. Such notice shall also be published once a week for three consecutive weeks before such meeting in the manner prescribed by this act. When a meeting is adjourned it shall not be necessary to give any notice of the adjourned meeting or of the business to be transacted at an adjourned meeting, other than by announcement at the meeting to which such adjournment is taken, unless otherwise provided in the by-laws.

Comments:

This section is similar to Section 502 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and to Section 622 of the proposed Banking Code.

There is no general statutory provision in Pennsylvania on the subject of notice. Particular statutes prescribe the period of notice required of meetings called for increasing capital stock or indebtedness, for amending charters, or for merger or consolidation proceedings, and the like.

Generally speaking, the by-laws, in the absence of statutory regulation, usually provide how much notice shall be given in advance of a meeting. If the statute and the by-laws both are silent on the subject, the notice must be given a reasonable time before the day of the meeting. The Mercantile Library Hall Company v. The Pittsburgh Library Association, et al., 173 Pa. 30 (1896). This draft prescribes a minimum period of five days.

Unless unusual business is to be transacted, it is not necessary for notice of a regular meeting to specify the object of the meeting, but the notice of a special meeting must specify the character of the business to be transcated. Bagley v. Reno Oil Company, 201 Pa. 78 (1902). Unless the by-laws otherwise provide, stockholders are not entitled to any notice of an adjourned meeting other than that implied in the adjournment. Savidge on Pa. Corps., Volume 1, Section 729.

Section 10 of this draft permits the waiver of notice of a shareholders' meeting.

Section 503. Quorum of Shareholders or Members.—A shareholders' or members' meeting duly called shall not be organized for the transaction of business unless a quorum is present. Unless otherwise provided in the articles:[1]

(1) A quorum shall be constituted as follows:

(a) In the case of a stock company, when the holders of a majority of the outstanding shares are present.

(b) In the case of a mutual company, when that number of members provided by the by-laws for such purposes is present.

(2) The shareholders or members present at a duly organized meeting can continue to do business until adjournment notwithstanding the withdrawal of enough shareholders or members to leave less than a quorum.[2]

(3) If a meeting cannot be organized because a quorum has not attended, those present may, except as otherwise provided in this act, adjourn the meeting to such time and place as they may determine, but in the case of any meeting called for the election of directors, those who attend the second of such adjourned meetings, although less than a quorum as fixed in this section or in the articles, shall nevertheless constitute a quorum for the purpose of electing directors.[3]

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 305, 40 PS Section 426.

Comments:

This proposed section is similar to Section 503 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 603 of the proposed Banking Code.

1. This provision is taken from Section 30 (II) of the Uniform Act, and is substantially similar to Section 6 of the Corporation Act of 1874. Unlike the Act of 1874, this draft requires the articles, instead of the by-laws, to specify the requirements of a quorum, if the corporators desire a greater number than a majority to constitute a quorum.

A note to the Uniform Act points out that the prevailing practice is to leave to the shareholders the determination of what constitutes a quorum, by provision either in the charter or by-laws, but in view of the conflict in the case law on the question of what constitutes a majority, it seems best to have the matter regulated by statute subject to control by shareholders to meet their particular requirements, such control to be expressed in the articles of incorporation rather than in the by-laws.

2. This provision is also taken from Section 30 of the Uniform Act, and is consistent with the Pennsylvania view that a meeting properly constituted cannot be derived of the right to transact the business for which it was called by the refusal of certain members prseent to participate therein, or by their capricious withdrawal. Commonwealth v. Vandegrift, 232 Pa. 53 (1911); Lutz v. Webster, 249 Pa. 226 (1915). A few other states, representing the minority view on this point, hold that there must be a quorum present at the time of voting. Bridgers v. Staton, 150 N. C. 216.

3. This provision is taken from Section 30 (II) (c) of the Uniform Act. The purpose of this provision is to insure the election of directors by preventing indefinite adjournments, or by preventing the majority from defeating a quorum by failing to attend the meeting. Without the latter part of this provision, an intrenched board of directors could prevent the holding of an election.

As pointed out in a note to the Uniform Act, the provisions of this subsection should accelerate the settlement of controversies over management and accord to any minority group of shareholders the right of such preferential representation on the board of directors as their shares entitle them to. It is provided by statute in New York (Section 30, G. C. L.), that if directors are not elected at a regular meeting, a special meeting may be called, and at such special meeting "the members attending shall constitute a quorum."

Section 504. Vote by Shareholders or Members in Person or by Proxy.[1]—Except as otherwise provided by this act every shareholder of record of a stock company and every member of a mutual company shall have the right, at every shareholders' meeting, to a vote as follows: A shareholder of a stock company shall have one vote for every share standing in his name on the books of the corporation;[2] a member of a mutual company shall have one vote or a number of votes based upon the insurance in force, the number of policies held, or the amount of premiums paid. Every shareholder or member may vote either in person or by proxy executed in writing by the shareholder or member or by his duly authorized attorney in fact, and filed with the secretary of the company. A proxy, unless coupled with an interest, shall be revocable at will, notwithstanding any other agreement or any provision in the proxy to the contrary, but the revocation of a proxy shall not be effective until notice thereof has been given to the secretary of the company. An unrevoked proxy shall not be valid after eleven months from the date of its execution, unless a longer time is expressly provided therein, but in no event shall a proxy, unless coupled with an interest, be voted on after three years from the date of its execution. A proxy shall not be revocable by the death or incapacity of the maker unless before the vote is counted or the authority is exercised, written notice of such death or incapacity is given to the secretary of the company. A shareholder or member shall not sell a vote or execute a proxy to any person for any sum of money or anything of value.

Comments:

1. This proposed section is similar to Section 504 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 604 of the proposed Banking Code which are modelled on Section 28 (IV) of the Uniform Act, and are substantially similar to the Act of 1903, supra, except that they change the time limit on proxies. Under existing law, the statutory time limit of a proxy is two months. Under this draft, and the Uniform Act, the validity of a proxy that contains no time limit will automatically expire in eleven months, but a definite time limit contained in the proxy will be given effect up to, but not exceeding, three years.

As pointed out in a note to the Uniform Act, the statutory time limit on the validity of proxies in the general corporation laws of the various states varies. In Delaware, New Jersey, and North Carolina, it is three years from the date of execution; in New York, Illinois, Connecticut, and California, it is eleven months; in Maine and Maryland, it is ninety days. In the great majority of states, the statutory limitation is made to control only in the absence of a period of validity being fixed in the proxy itself. In a small minority of states, it is provided that the validity of a proxy cannot, by its own terms be made to exceed the period limited by statute.

2. Section 504 of the proposed Business Corporation Law excepts from the provision that every share shall be entitled to one vote, any different rule established elsewhere in that act or in the articles of a particular corporation. This is omitted in this draft, since every share in a company shall have the same rights as every other share. See Section 601 of this draft.

Section 505. Voting by Fiduciaries and Pledgees.—A. Shares of a stock company, held in a fiduciary capacity by a fiduciary appointed by last will and testament or by decree of the orphans' court shall be voted by such fiduciary, either in person or by proxy, in the manner and under the circumstances provided by law.[1]

B. Shares standing in the name of a fiduciary other than one appointed by last will and testament or by decree of the orphans' court, or shares held by an assignee for the benefit of creditors, or by a receiver, may be voted by such fiduciary, assignee, or receiver, either in person or by proxy.

C. A shareholder whose shares are pledged shall be entitled to vote thereon, in person or by proxy, until the shares have been transferred on the books of the company to the pledgee, and thereafter the pledgee shall be entitled to vote the shares in person or by proxy.[2]

Comments:

This proposed section is substantially the same as Section 506 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 606 of the proposed Banking Code.

1. The voting of shares by fiduciaries, subject to the orphans' court, is now covered by Section 43 of the Fiduciaries Act of 1917, which is a restatement of Section 1 of the Act of 1905, supra, which formerly governed the voting of shares by all fiduciaries. The Fiduciaries Act repealed the Act of 1905 only in so far as it related to fiduciaries subject to the jurisdiction of the orphans' court, as the "act of 1905 is apparently intended to include trustees appointed by the common pleas, though it makes no provision as to trustees appointed by deed." Report of Commission Appointed to Codify and Revise the Law of Decedents' Estates (1917) Page 209.

While practically all corporation statutes have provisions covering rights of fiduciaries, Section 43 of the Fiduciaries Act of 1917 was not embodied in this draft, as it was deemed unwise to mutilate that act, but in order to preclude the interpretation that this act implied by amendments the Fiduciaries Act, it has been expressly incorporated into this act by reference.

2. This provision is taken from Section 28 (V) of the Uniform Act, and makes a change in existing law. Section 3 of the Act of 1893, supra, directs that as between a pledgee and pledgor of shares, the pledgor shall be entitled to vote the shares unless the agreement provides otherwise. Under the Uniform Act, and this draft, the pledgor may vote the shares as long as they are registered in his name on the books of the company; otherwise, the pledgee may vote them.

This changes the existing law. Section 307 of The Insurance Company Law of 1921 determines the right to vote pledged shares by the written agreement of the pledgor and pledgee. In other instances, the pledgor is considered the owner and is entitled to vote. The new law, irrespective of agreement between the parties, gives the right to vote to the party in whose name the stock is registered.

Section 506. Voting by Joint Holders of Shares.—A. Where shares of a stock company are held jointly by more than one corporation or person, the will of the majority of such joint holders shall control the manner of voting or the giving of a proxy. If only one of such joint holders is present in person or by proxy, he shall have the right to vote all such shares, and all of the shares standing in the names of such corporations or persons shall be deemed to be represented for the purpose of determining a quorum. The same shall be true in the case of fiduciaries, other than those appointed by last will and testament or by decree of the orphans' court, unless such fiduciaries have been appointed under an instrument or a decree of court which directs otherwise. Where in any case, such fiduciaries are equally divided upon the manner of voting the shares jointly held by them it shall be lawful for the orphans' court or the court of common pleas, upon petition filed by any of the fiduciaries, or by any beneficiary, to direct the voting of such shares in the manner which, in the opinion of the court, will be for the best interests of the parties beneficially interested in the shares.

B. Where shares of a stock company are held jointly in a fiduciary capacity by two or more fiduciaries appointed by last will and testament or by decree of the orphans' court, they shall be voted in the manner and under the circumstances provided by law.

Act of March 16, 1905, P. L. 42, 15 PS Sec. 107.
Fiduciaries Act of 1917—see Section 43.

Comments:

This section is similar to Section 507 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 607 of the proposed Banking Code.

The provisions of this section relating to voting by joint holders, other than trustees, were taken from Section 320 (c) of the new California act. Shares standing in the name of a firm on the books of a corporation may be voted by any partner, but if the partners, disagree as to the vote, neither can vote the stock. The same is true where shares are owned by two or more persons jointly. Fletcher Cyclopedia Corporations (Permanent Edition), Volume 5, Section 2038; Savidge on Pa. Corps., Volume I, Section 758.

In regard to executors, administrators, guardians, and trustees, the Act of 1905, supra, and Section 43 of the Fiduciaries Act of 1917, permit a majority of such fiduciaries to determine how shares held jointly by them may be voted. The Act of 1905 was repealed by the Fiduciaries Act of 1917 in so far as it related to fiduciaries under the jurisdiction of the orphans' court. Accordingly, the Act of 1905 now applies only to trustees appointed by deed or by the court of common pleas. This distinction is maintained by this section of the draft.

The provision authorized a petition to the court by trustees in a deadlock is similar to a provision in Section 43 of the Fiduciaries Act of 1917, permitting fiduciaries who cannot agree to petition the orphans' court for advice.

Section 507. Voting Shares Held by a Corporation.—A company or other corporation owning shares in any company may vote them by its president, or by proxy appointed by him, unless some other person, by resolution of its board of directors, shall be appointed to vote such shares, in which case such person shall be entitled to vote the shares upon the production of a certified copy of such resolution. Shares of its own capital stock belonging to a company shall not be voted, directly or indirectly, at any meeting, and shall not be counted in determining the total number of outstanding shares at any given time.

Comments:

This section is taken from Subsections (VI) and (VII) of Section 28 of the Uniform Act, and is substantially similar to the Act of 1901, supra, which provides that a corporation which owns the stock of another corporation "may exercise all the rights, powers and privileges of ownership, including the right to vote thereon."

The provision prohibiting a corporation from voting its own shares is the common law rule (14 C. J. 904), and many of the corporation laws of the states contain a similar provision.

Section 508. Determination of Shareholders of Record.—Unless the by-laws otherwise provide, the board of directors of a stock company may fix a time, not less than ten or more than forty days, prior to the date of any meeting of shareholders, or the date fixed for the payment of any dividend or distribution, or the date for the allotment of rights, or the date when any change or conversion or exchange of shares will be made or will go into effect, as a record date for the determination of the shareholders entitled to notice of, and to vote at, any such meeting, or entitled to receive payment of any such dividend or distribution, or to receive any such change, conversion, or exchange of shares. In such case, only the shareholders of record on the date so fixed shall be entitled to notice of, and to vote at, such meeting, or to receive payment of such dividend, or to receive such allotment of rights, or to exercise such rights, as the case may be, notwithstanding any transfer of any shares on the books of the company after any record date fixed, as aforesaid. The board of directors may close the books of the company against transfers of shares during the whole or any part of such period, and in such case written or printed notice thereof shall be given at least ten days before the closing thereof to each shareholder of record at the address appearing on the records of the company or supplied by him to such company for the purpose of notice. While the stock transfer books of such company are closed, no transfer of shares shall be made thereon.[1] Unless a record date is fixed by the by-laws or the board of directors for the determination of shareholders entitled to receive notice of, or to vote at, a shareholders' meeting, transferees of shares which are transferred on the books of the company within ten days next preceding the date of such meeting shall not be entitled to notice of or to vote at such meeting.[2] Nothing herein contained shall be deemed to abridge the constitutional requirement of sixty days' notice of a meeting called for the purpose of increasing the authorized capital stock of a stock company or to deprive anyone who was a shareholder of record, sixty days prior to the meeting, of his right to vote at the meeting.[3]

Comments:

This section is similar to Section 509 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 609 of the proposed Banking Code.

1. This part of this section of the draft is taken from Section 28 (I) of the Uniform Act, and is substantially similar to the Act of 1929, supra.

2. This provision is taken from the new Indiana and Michigan corporation acts, and appears to be desirable in view of Section 502 of this draft, which provides that a shareholder must receive at least five days' notice of a shareholders' meeting, and Section 510, which requires a voting list to be prepared at least five days before a meeting.

3. This provision appears necessary in view of Article XVI, Section 7, of the Constitution of Pennsylvania, which requires sixty days' notice to be given of a meeting called to consider an increase of the capital stock or idebtedness of a corporation. In this respect, the Act of 1929, supra, provides "No transfer or transfers of shares of such corporations, within sixty days of any election or meeting of stockholders, shall deprive the holder of said shares of the right to vote in respect of the same at such election or meeting, if otherwise entitled thereto."

Section 509. Voting Lists.—A. The officer or agent having charge of the transfer books for shares of a stock company shall make, at least five days before each meeting of shareholders, a complete list of the shareholders entitled to vote at the meeting, arranged in alphabetical order, with the address of and the number of shares held by each, which list shall be kept on file at the principal place of business of such company and shall be subject to inspection by any shareholder at any time during usual business hours. Such list shall also be produced and kept open at the time and place of the meeting, and shall be subject to the inspection of any shareholder during the whole time of the meeting. The original share ledger or transfer book, or a duplicate thereof kept in this Commonwealth, shall be prima facie evidence as to who are the shareholders entitled to examine such list or share ledger or transfer book, or to vote, in person or by proxy, at any meeting of shareholders. An officer or agent having charge of the transfer books who shall fail to prepare the list of shareholders, or keep the same on file for a period of five days, or produce and keep the same open for inspection at any meeting, as provided in this section, shall be liable to any shareholder suffering damages on account of such failure, to the extent of such damages.

B. A complete list of the shareholders, arranged in alphabetical order, with the address and number of shares held by each, shall be sent to the Department at least once in each year, upon a date to be designated by the Department.

Comments:

This section is the same as Section 510 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 610 of the proposed Banking Code.

This section is new to Pennsylvania law, and is taken from Section 31 of the Illinois Business Corporation Act. A substantially similar provision is found in the statutes of many states, including New Jersey, Delaware, Illinois and Michigan. Some states, like Delaware, require a list to be prepared only in the case of an election of directors. There seems to be no reason why such a list should not be prepared prior to every meeting of shareholders, and this draft so provides. Under this section, as under the Act of 1889, supra, the transfer books are prima facie evidence of the shareholder's right to vote, but the certificate of stock is not such evidence. Therefore, if the stock list omits a name which the stock book or ledger shows, the record holder is entitled to vote.

Section 510. Election of Directors; Cumulative Voting.—Unless otherwise provided in the by-laws, elections for directrs need not be by ballot, except upon demand made by a shareholder or member at the election and before the voting begins. In all elections for directors, every shareholder or member shall have the right, in person or by proxy, to multiply the number of votes to which he may be entitled by the number of directors to be elected, and he may cast his whole number of such votes for one candidate or he may distribute them among any two or more candidates. The candidates receiving the highest number of votes shall be elected.

Comments:

This section is substantially the same as Section 505 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 605 of the proposed Banking Code.

In Pennsylvania, the right to cumulative voting is conferred and guaranteed by Article XVI, Section 4, of the Constitution. This right is also expressly conferred by the Act of 1876, supra. This section of the draft is taken from Section 28 (III) of the Uniform Act. Section 310 of The Insurance Company Law of 1921 provides for cumulative voting by shareholders and members of stock or mutual isurace companies. Votes may be distributed among the different candidates or may be cumulative in favor of any one candidate.

Section 511. Voting Trusts.—A. Two or more shareholders of a stock company may, by agreement in writing, transfer their shares to any person or persons, or to a corporation or corporations having authority to act as trustee within this Commonwealth, for the purpose of vesting in the transferee or transferees all voting or other rights pertaining to such shares for a period not exceeding ten years, and upon the terms and conditions stated in the agreement. An unexecuted copy of the agreement shall be filed in the registered office of the company and shall be open daily, during business hours, to the inspection of any shareholder, or any transferor under the agreement, or the attorney of any shareholder or transferor.

B. Upon the filing of the agreement, the share certificates of shares so transferred shall be surrendered and cancelled, and new certificates therefor shlall be issued to the transferee or transferees, as voting trustee or trustees, in which new certificates it shall appear that they are issued pursuant to the agreement. In the registration of the transfer of the shares on the books of the company it shall be noted that the transfer is made pursuant to the agreement. The trustee or trustees shall execute and deliver to the transferors voting trust crtificates which shall be transferable in the same manner and with the same effect as certificates of shares, under the provisions of the Uniform Stock Transfer Act, approved the fifth day of May, one thousand nine hundred eleven (Pamphlet Laws, one hundred twenty-six), and its amendments and supplements, upon the transfer and registration of the shares. The trustee or trustees shall possess all voting and other rights pertaining to the shares so transferred and registered, subject to the terms and conditions of, and for the period specified in the agreement.

C. Unless otherwise provided in the agreement:

(1) The trustees may vote in person or by proxy.

(2) If there are two or more trustees, the manner of voting shall be determined as heretofore provided in this act for the voting of shares by joint holders.

(3) Vacancies among the trustees shall be filled by the remaining trustees.

(4) A trustee shall incur no responsibility as trustee except for his own individual neglect or malfeasance.

(5) Any other shareholder may transfer his shares to the same trustee or trustees upon the terms and conditions stated in the agreement, and thereupon shall be bound by all the provisions of the agreement, and in every such case a new voting trust shall be deemed to have been formed.

Comments:

This section is similar to Section 511 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 611 of the proposed Banking Code.

This section of the draft has no counterpart in existing Pennsylvania statutes and is substantially the same as Section 29 of the Uniform Act.

The tide of opinion is now away from condemnation of voting trusts toward a discriminating approval of them. See Fletcher Cyclopedia Corporations (Permanent Edition), Volume 5, Section 2078. Voting trusts are not contrary to the public policy of this Commonwealth,—Boyer v. Nesbitt, 227 Pa. 398 (1910); Shelmerdine v. Welsh, 20 Phila. 199 (1890),—but it is difficult to form a valid one in Pennsylvania,—see Morgan v. Hartley Oil and Gas Company, 30 Pa. C. C. 22 (1904); Commonwealth v. Roydhouse, 233 Pa. 234 (1911); Murphy v. Baker, 6 D. & C. 479 (1925). By the weight of authority, a voting trust will be held invalid only when it has been created for a purpose which is illegal or against public policy (i. e. in violation of the anti-monopoly laws), or when it results in working a fraud in the minority stockholders. See Fletcher Cyclopedia Corporations (Permanent Edition), Volume 5, Chapter 14.

Voting trusts are governed by statute only in Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Michigan and California. The permissible duration of such a trust is five years in Maryland; in Delaware, New Jersey, New York, Ohio and Michigan, it is ten years; in California, it is twenty-one years. This draft permits a voting trust to be formed for a period of ten years.

Under the typical voting trust statute, as under this draft, the trustor stockholders are required to transfer their stock to trustees, who, in turn issue to the stockholders voting trust certificates.

Most, but not all, of the voting trust statutes expressly provide that every other stockholder may come into a voting trust agreement. The Uniform Act contains a similar provision. The statutes of Delaware, New Jersey, Michigan and California do not so provide. Such a provision in the New York statute was construed in the recent case of In re Morse, 247 N. Y. 290, 160 N. E. 374, to mean that no voting trust could be formed without this provision and that the trust remains inchoate until those come in who may. Accordingly, it appears that in New York a voting trust which includes any number less than all stockholders is invalid, that a voting trust remains inchoate, and, therefore, revocable, until the last stockholder has come in, and that the trustees may vote the stock, although the voting trust is yet inchoate and incomplete.

Accordingly, this draft departs from the Uniform Act in two respects: (1) It permits a closed voting trust if the agreement so provides. (2) If the agreement does not so provide, then every other shareholder is entitled to come into the trust, and, in order to prevent the trust from being inchoate, as in New York, the draft provides "in every such case a new voting trust shall be deemed to have been formed."

Section 512. Judges of Election.—A. In advance of any meeting of shareholders or members of a company, the board of directors may appoint judges of election to act at such meeting or any adjournment thereof. If judges of election be not so appointed, the chairman of any such meeting may, and on the request of any shareholder or member or his proxy shall make such appointment at the meeting. The number of inspectors shall be one or three. If appointed at a meeting on the request of one or more shareholders or members, or the proxies of either, the majority of shares or of members present shall determine whether one or three judges are to be appointed. No person who is a candidate for office shall act as a judge.

B. In case any person appointed as judge fails to appear or fails or refuses to act, the vacancy may be filled by appointment made by the board of directors in advance of the convening of the meeting, or at the meeting by the person or officer acting as chairman.

C. The judges of election shall determine the number of shares outstanding and represented at the meeting, or the number of members present, the existence of a quorum, the authenticity, validity, and effect of proxies, receive votes or ballots, hear and determine all challenges and questions in any way arising in connection with the right to vote, count and tabulate all votes, determine the result, and do such acts as may be proper to conduct the election or vote with fairness to all shareholders or members. The judges of election shall perform their duties impartially, in good faith, to the best of their ability, and as expeditiously as is practical. If there be three judges of election, the decision, act, or certificate of a majority shall be effective in all respects as the decision, act, or crtificate of all.

D. On request of the chairman of the meeting, or of any shareholder or member, or the proxy of either, the judges shall make a report in writing of any challenge or question or matter determined by them, and execute a certificate of any fact found by them. Any report or certificate made by them shall be prima facie evidence of the facts stated therein.

Comments:

This section is the same as Section 512 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 612 of the proposed Banking Code.

This section of the draft is substantially similar to Section 321 (b) of the new California act. It changes existing law in that (1) judges need not be appointed unless those participating in a meeting desire them, and (2) the judges are not required to go through the formality of taking an oath, and they are not subject to penalties prescribed in the election laws.

Under the Act of 1903, supra, three judges are required, and under the Act of 1874 they must take an oath and are subject to all the penalties imposed by law on election officers for the violation of their duties.

Under this draft, the shareholders of a small or closed corporation need not have judges, while those of a larger corporation may (as they probably will) if they so desire. Recent corporation acts impose no penalties on judges or inspectors of election. In fact, some of the more recent acts do not specifically require the appointment of judges of election in any event. It is submitted that this section of the draft is preferable to the existing provisions in Pennsylvania on this subject.

Section 513. Informal Action by Shareholders.—Except for the action required by this act for increasing or decreasing the capital of a stock company or effecting a merger with another company, or going through voluntary liquidation, any action required by this act to be taken at a meeting of the shareholders may be taken without a meeting, if a consent in writing, setting forth the action so taken, shall be signed by all of the shareholders who would be entitled to vote at a meeting for such purpose and shall be filed with the secretary of the company.

Comments:

This section is similar to Section 513 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 613 of the proposed Banking Code.

This provision is substantially similar to Section 146 of the new Illinois act. The exception is necessary in view of Article XVI, Section 7 of the Constitution of Pennsylvania, which provides: "The stock and indebtedness of corporations shall not be increased * * * without the consent of the persons holding the larger amount in value of the stock, first obtained at a meeting to be held after sixty days notice * * *." It has been ruled that the requirement of notice may be waived, but the meeting must be held. Bellefonte and Buffalo Run Railroad Company (Op. Atty. Gen.), 2 Chester 128 (1883); Tally-on-Top Salesbook Company (Op. Atty. Gen.), 4 D. R. 779 (1895).

Section 514. Liability of Shareholders for Debts:—A. A shareholder of a stock company shall not be personally liable for any debt or liability of the company, except salaries and wages due and owing to its laborers and employes, for services rendered to the company. In such event, every shareholder shall be personally liable in an amount equal to the amount of shares of the company owned by him, but no shareholder shall be so liable unless suit for the collection of such salaries and wages shall be brought against him within six months after the same shall become due.

B. In any action brought to enforce the liability imposed by this section upon shareholders, the plaintiff may include as defendants the company any any one or more shareholders of such company claimed to be liable therefor. Service of summons or other process may be made upon the stockholders resident within such county in the same manner as writs of summons are now directed to be served, and upon those residing in other counties of this Commonwealth by the sheriff of the county in which they may respectively reside, and upon those nonresidents of this Commonwealth in such manner as the court may direct. If judgment be given in favor of the plaintiff for his claim, or any part thereof, the judgment shall be given against the company and any shareholders found liable. The execution upon such judgment shall be first levied on the property of the company within the Commonwealth, and in case such property, sufficient to satisfy the judgment, cannot be found, then execution shall be levied on the property of such shareholders for the deficiency, or so much thereof as the shareholder defendants in such judgment shall be liable to pay. The shareholders who satisfy any such judgment, or any part thereof, shall be entitled to contribution from the company in the first instance, and if contribution is unobtainable from the company, then pro rata from the other solvent shareholders originally liable for the claim on which the judgment was obtained.

SHARES OF CAPITAL STOCK

Section 601. Par Value of Shares; Forfeitures; Personal Property.—A. The capital of a stock company shall be divided into shares of not less than five dollars, and each share shall be in all respects equal to every other share.[1]

B. Any stock company may prescribe rules with regard to the forfeiture of partial payments on subscriptions, and such rules shall be binding upon subscribers, if made known at the time of the subscription.[2]

C. Shares of a company shall be deemed personal property.

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 205, 40 PS Sec. 385.

Comments:

1. Section 205 of The Insurance Company Law, as amended by the Act of April 26, 1929, P. L. 71, provides that the capital of a stock life insurance company shall be divided into shares of not less than one hundred dollars, and the capital of all other stock insurance companies shall be divided into shares of not less than five dollars. There seems to be no reason for this discrimination. This section of the draft will make the minimum par value for all stock insurance companies the same.

2. The phraseology of paragraph B. is the same as that of the second paragraph of Section 205 of the Insurance Department Law of 1921, as amended.

Section 602. Consideration for Shares.—A. Subscriptions for shares of a company shall not be made payable in whole or in part with any other consideration than cash, nor to an amount less than the par value of such shares.[1] Ten per centum shall be paid on each share at the time of subscribing, and the balance shall be paid at such times as the company may direct, provided that full payments on all shares are made within a period of nine months from the date of organization.[2]

B. Shares of a company shall not be issued except pursuant to subscriptions received therefor, or pursuant to the declaration of share dividends. The consideration for the issuance of shares by a company as a share dividend shall be that part of earned surplus or profits of such company which is transferred to capital upon the issuance of such shares.[3]

C. Shares of a company issued or thereafter acquired by it, in the manner authorized by law, may be disposed of by such company in such manner as may be fixed from time to time by its board of directors.

Comments:

1. Article XVI, Section 7, of the Constitution, provides: "No corporation shall issue stocks or bonds except for money, labor done, or money or property actually received; and full fictitious increase of stock or indebtedness shall be void." Section 17 of the Corporation Act of 1874 as amended, supra, contains a similar requirement. However, it seems clear that in the case of an insurance company shares should be paid for solely by cash, particularly where all capital is required to be paid in as is the case under this act. It seems clear, also, that subscriptions for shares of an insurance company should not be sold for less than par.

2. See Section 701 of this draft. This requirement is taken from Section 205 of the Insurance Company Law, supra.

3. Where an insurance company has lawfully acquired shares which it has issued, it seems that in exceptional cases the company should be permitted by action of its board of directors to sell such shares for less than par. The actual cost to the company of such shares might be half of its par value although usually such procedure would not be followed by its directors, there seems to be no harm in following the proposed Business Corporation Law and permitting such shares to be sold for less than par.

Section 603. Opening of Books for Subscriptions to Shares and Guarantee Capital and Application for Insurance.—A. In any case where a stock company is being organized, the incorporators shall open books for the subscription for shares of stock in the company, at such times and places as they shall deem convenient and proper, and shall keep such books open until the full amount of capital stock specified in the articles of agreement is subscribed.

B. In any case where any mutual company is being organized, the incorporators shall open books to receive applications for insurance, at such times and places as they shall deem convenient and proper, and shall keep such books open until applications for insurance have been obtained in sufficient number and amount to comply with the requirements of this act.

C. In the case of a mutual life company, the incorporators shall also, in the same manner as in the case of a stock company, open books to receive subscriptions to the guarantee capital hereinbefore required by this act.[1]

Comments:

This provision seems to be peculiar to insurance law. It is reproduced from Section 209 of the existing law.

1. This is required in Section 303C of this draft.

Section 604. Provisions of Contract of Subscription.—Every subscription for stock, and every application for insurance, made prior to the issuance by the Department of a certificate of authority, to the company involved, shall contain:

(1) A clause providing that no sum shall be used for commission, promotion and organization expenses, on account of any share of stock in the company, in excess of ten per centum of the amount actually paid upon separate subscriptions for such shares; and the remainder of such payments shall be deposited or invested as authorized by this act, and shall be held by the incorporators and the directors and officers of such company, after incorporation, as bailees for the subscriber, to be used only in the conduct of the business of insurance by such company, after it has been incorporated and granted authority to transact business pursuant to the provisions of this act.

(2) The names of the incorporators, or the promoter who solicits the subscription or application which is the subject of the contract, and their residences.

(3) The par value of the shares of the company, the prices at which shares have been, are, or are to be sold, the number of shares at such prices, and the total number of shares.

(4) A stipulation that the money advanced by the applicant shall be returned to him without any deduction if the company fails to complete its organization, procure a certificate of authority to do business in this Commonwealth, or issue the policy applied for in the application.

Comments:

This section contains in substance the provisions of Sections 3 and 4 of the Act of 1917.

This section, together with Sections 605, 606, 607, 608, 609, and 610, have been taken from the Act of 1917 cited supra. The title of this act is: "An Act relating to domestic and foreign insurance companies and corporations holding and dealing in insurance stock and certificates; regulating the sale of stock and evidences of indebtedness of such companies and corporations, and of subscriptions and applications therefor; and prescribing penalties."

This article relates only to insurance companies, whereas the Act of 1917 relates also to holding companies. These provisions obviously belong in this Code. Query: should there be a section making this article applicable to holding companies as well?

Section 605. Authority to Solicit Subscriptions to Capital or Applications for Insurance.—No person shall solicit subscriptions for the capital stock of, or applications for insurance in, any company, unless he has been duly authorized by the company to act as its promoter, and a certificate of his authority, duly signed by a principal officer of the company, has been filed with the Department.

Section 606. Special Agreements with Subscribers or Purchasers.—Any promoter who sells or agrees or attempts to sell any shares of stock, at any time, in consideration of, or in connection with, any sale or contract of subscription, shall not, directly or indirectly, make or offer to make any contract or agreement which differs from the terms of the contract of subscription; nor shall any such contract or subscription contain any agreement for employment, or for any deposit, or for any special advantage, to the person purchasing or agreeing to purchase such shares of stock.

Section 607. Effect of Violations on Contract; Penalties.—A. In the event of any violation of the provisions of this article relating to contracts of subscription, the subscriber or purchaser affected thereby may,, at his option, rescind the contract, and recover from the promoter, or the company which he represents, all payments with interest at the legal rate from time of payment; or may elect to treat the contract as valid and enforceable in his favor. However, such contract shall not in either case be valid or enforceable against such subscriber or purchaser.

B. Any person violating any provision of this article, relating to contracts of subscription, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be sentenced either to pay a fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars, or to undergo imprisonment for a period not exceeding six months, or both.

Section 609. Unnamed Persons Not to Receive Commission.—No person shall participate in, receive or accept, any part, or promise of any part, of any of the commission of any incorporator or promoter for the sale of any shares of stock unless the name of such person and the fact of his interest in such commission or reward shall appear upon such application or contract of subscription. The omission of such statement from any such contract shall, in addition to the penalty herein provided, make such person liable to the purchaser or his assignees for all sums paid by such purchasers, with interest at the legal rate from date of payment, upon the assignment or tender of assignment of the shares of stock purchased in this manner.

Section 611. Share Certificate.—A. The shares of a company shall be represented by share certificates, which shall state:[1]

(1) That the company is organized under the laws of this Commonwealth.

(2) The name of the registered holder of the shares represented thereby.

(3) The number of shares which the certificate represents.

(4) The par value of each share represented.

B. Every share certificate shall be signed by the president and secretary, or by such officers as the by-laws may provide, and sealed with the corporate seal, which may be a facsimile, engraved or printed. In case any officer who has signed, or whose facsimile signature has been placed upon any share certificate shall have ceased to be such officer because of death, resignation, or otherwise, before the certificate is issued, it may be issued by the company with the same effect as if the officer had not ceased to be such at the date of its issue.[2]

C. Every shareholder of record shall be entitled to a share certificate representing the shares owned by him, but a share certificate shall not be issued by a company to any shareholder until the shares represented thereby have been fully paid for.[3]

Comments:

This section is substantially the same as Section 607 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 406 of the proposed Banking Code.

1. The Act of 1895, as amended, supra, which applies to all corporations organized under the laws of Pennsylvania, does not specify what the "certificate of stock," shall set forth. However, the Uniform Act and virtually all of the recent corporation revisions of other states state exactly what the share certificate shall contain. In the case of insurance companies, this seems particularly desirable.

2. This proposed provision is a restatement of Section 1 of the Act of 1895, as amended, supra, and is substantially similar to corresponding provisions in the Uniform Act and the laws of other state. However, all reference to transfer agents, transfers clerks, or registrars is omitted, since they seem to have no particular application to insurance companies.

Most statutes prescribe the particular officers by whom share certificates must be signed, but as different companies may delegate different types of duties to its officers, it seems desirable to permit the provisions of this draft to be varied in this respect by the articles or by-laws. In Idaho, Illinois, Maine, Michigan, Rhode Island, Texas, and Virginia, this may be regulated by the by-laws. In Arizona, Mississippi, Missouri and Nebraska there is no statutory provision as to the manner of executing share certificates and this subject must, therefore, be covered by the by-laws. In the District of Columbia it seems that the statutes do not specifically require share certificates. In New Hampshire, Oregon, Pennsylvania and West Virginia, the statutes provide for execution by one named officer and such other officer as the by-laws require. Under this draft the by-laws may prescribe the officers who are to sign share certificates.

3. The proposed Business Corporation Law provides that "a share certificate shall not be issued by a corporation to any shareholder until the shares represented thereby have been fully paid for." This provision is taken frmo Section 16 (1) of the Uniform Act and makes a change in Pennsylvania law. Under the Act of 1895 as amended, supra, a shareholder who has not paid for his shares in full is entitled to a share certificate. Under Section 607 of the proposed Business Corporation Law just quoted, a certificate cannot be issued until shares are fully paid for. That proposed act contemplates that shares may be issued on an installment basis and that one may be a shareholder even though his shares are not fully paid for. This draft however does not permit the creation or issuance of a share or the acquiring by anyone of any of the rights of a shareholder, until the share is fully paid for. There is, therefore, no need to add in this proposed section a statement corresponding to the portion quoted in this footnote from the proposed Business Corporation Law.

Section 612. Liability of Subscribers and Shareholders to Company.—A subscriber to, or holder of, shares of a stock company formed under this act shall not be under any liability to the company with respect to such shares, other than the obligation of complying with the terms of the subscription for such shares.[1] Any person becoming an assignee or transferee of shares, or of a subscription for shares, in good faith and without knowledge or notice that the full consideration therefor has not been paid, shall not be personally liable to the company or its creditors for any unpaid portion of such consideration.[2] Except when he has voluntarily invested the estate or trust funds in such shares, no person holding shares as executor, administrator, guardian, trustee, receiver, or in any representative or fiduciary capacity, shall be personally liable as a shareholder by reason of so holding such shares, but the estate and funds in the hands of such fiduciary or representative shall be so liable.[3] No pledgee or other holder of shares as collateral security shall be personally liable as a shareholder, but the person pledging such shares shall be considered the holder thereof and shall be liable as a shareholder.[4]

Comments:

This section is substantially similar to Section 609 of the proposed Business Corporation Law.

1. This provision is taken from Section 20 of the Uniform Act. This provision is in conformity with the provisions of this draft which provide that shares of stock of business corporations, upon being fully paid, are non-assesable.

2. This provision is taken from Section 22 of the Illinois act and is substantially similar to a provision contained in Section 20 of the Uniform Act. In Pennsylvania, it has been decided that a transferee who has been accepted by a corporation as a shareholder and his name registered on the stock books is liable for the unpaid portion of his shares to the extent that the unpaid capital is required for the payment of corporate creditors,—The Merrimac Mining Company v. Levy, 54 Pa. 227 (1867); Bell's Appeal, 115 Pa. 88 (1886),—unless he is an innocent purchaser for value,—French v. Harding, 235 Pa. 79 (1912). Section 1 of the Act of 1895, supra, also provides that an assignee or transferee of shares shall be a member of the corporation and have and enjoy all the immunities, privileges and franchises, and be subject to all the liabilities, conditions and penalties incident thereto, in the same manner as the original subscriber or holder would have been.

3. This provision is modeled on Section 20 (III) of the Uniform Act and Section 29 of the Michigan Act. The laws of most states contain a corresponding provision.

4. This provision is, in effect, a restatement of existing case law in Pennsylvania. See Wood's Appeal, 92 Pa. 379 (1880); Aulltman's Appeal, 98 Pa. 505 (1882); Kirschler v. Wainwright, 525 (1917).

Section 613. Validity of Shares.—The fact that shares are issued in violation of, or without full compliance with, the provisions of this act shall not make the shares so issued invalid, unless they are issued in violation of Article XVI, Section 7, of the Constitution of this Commonwealth.

Comments:

This section of the draft, except the proviso, is taken from Section 19 of the Uniform Act. The proviso appears to be necessary, in view of Article XVI, Section 7, of the Constitution, which provides that: "No corporation shall issue stocks or bonds except for money, labor done, or money or property actually received; and all fictitious increase of stock or indebtedness

Section 614. Transfer of Share Certificates and Shares.—The transfer of share certificates and the shares represented thereby may be regulated by the by-laws, provided such by-laws are not inconsistent with the provisions of the Uniform Stock Transfer Act, approved the fifth day of May, one thousand nine hundred eleven (Pamphlet Laws, one hundred twenty-six), and its amendments and supplements.

Comments:

This provision follows Section 613 A of the proposed Business Corporation Law, which is taken from the Uniform Act, supra. Section 11 of the Corporation Act of 1874, supra, provides: 'the shares of the capital stock of every such company may be transferred on the books of such company in person or by attorney, subject to such regulations as the by-laws may prescribe."

As the Uniform Stock Transfer Act applies also to corporations beyond the scope of this act, that act is not included in this draft. A note to the Uniform Act points out that this proposed section is necessary, as Sections 1 and 15 of the Uniform Stock Transfer Act expressly refer to possible by-law or other corporate regulation of transfer. By the inclusion of this section, this act and the Uniform Stock Transfer Act would be made to dovetail without unnecessary repetition. Michigan, which has adopted the Uniform Stock Transfer Act, has a similar provision in its new corporation act.
shall be void."

ARTICLE VII

DIVIDENDS, CAPITAL AND SURPLUS OF STOCK COMPANIES

Section 701. Declaration and Payment of Cash and Share Dividends.—A. Except as otherwise provided in this act and subject to any restrictions contained in the articles of incorporation, any stock company, by its board of directors, may declare and pay dividends upon its outstanding shares, out of its earned surplus, as hereinafter provided, from time to time, but not more frequently than once in every three months, and to such extent as the board of directors may deem advisable.[1] A dividend shall not be declared or paid, unless, both upon the day such dividend is declared and upon the day it is to be paid, the capital, or any paid-in or contributed surplus, and the reserve funds, required by this act would, despite such dividend, be unimpaired.[2]

B. Such dividends may be paid to the shareholders in cash, or, if such increase of capital has been authorized in the manner provided by this act,[3] it may be paid in shares of the company. If the dividend is in the form of shares of the company, it may, if properly authorized, be paid out of earned surplus, provided that such share dividend shall include a surplus contribution equal to and not less than fifty per centum of the share dividend so declared and paid, and provided further that the surplus at all times shall not be less than fifty per centum of the total capital stock for the purposes of paying dividends.

C. No company may declare dividends to the shareholders exceeding ten per centum of its capital in any one year unless, in addition to the amount of its capital, such dividend, all outstanding liabilities, and the amount of all unearned premiums on unexpired risks and policies as aforesaid, it shall have a surplus equalling thirty per centum of its unearned premiums, or fifty per centum of its capital, whichever shall be greater.[4]

D. Such dividend declared shall not be paid to the shareholders entitled thereto before sixty days subsequent to the declaration thereoof.[5]

Comments:

1. See Section 702 of this draft.

2. The only provisions in the present law covering dividends are those of Section 518 A of The Insurance Company Law of 1921 as added by the Act of June 23, 1931, P. L. 904.

The Act of 1913, supra, provides that dividends shall be paid out of net profits. The Bank Act of 1876, supra, likewise provides that dividends shall be paid out of net profits. This draft, except as later developed in these footnotes, requires that dividends be paid out of earned surplus as defined in Section 702.

3. Both the Act of 1913 and the Bank Act of 1876, supra, provide that dividends may not be paid out of capital. This draft makes such provision but also provides that such dividend cannot disturb the reserves required by this act.

4. This paragraph follows the language of Section 518 A of The Insurance Company Law of 1821.

5. The provision as to share dividends is new. It seems clearly desirable. There is no reason why, if the surplus of a company exceeds the minimum required by this act, and if, in addition an increase in capital has been duly authorized, such company should not be authorized to declare a share dividend. The minimum period of sixty days before a dividend may be paid is imposed in order to give the Department some time to ascertain whether the dividend is legally declared.

Section 702. Determination of Earned Surplus or Profit.—To determine the amount of earned surplus or profits of a company for any dividend purposes, the following items shall first be charged as a liability:

(1) The capital of the company.
(2) Paid-in or contributed surplus.
(3) All unpaid losses or other loss claims,

(4) All liabilities for reserve or unearned premiums on undetermined risks as required by law.

(5) All sums due the company on bonds and mortgages, book accounts and judgments, on which the interest has not been paid during the last calendar year, or on the principal of which no payment, if due, has been made during such year, or for which foreclosure or suit has not been commenced for collection.

(6) All shares of stock on which no dividend has been paid during the last calendar year.

(7) All other debts or obligations of the company.

The balance thus obtained shall constitute the earned surplus or profits of such company, out of which dividends may be declared and paid.

Comments:

The method of computation of earned surplus is substantially that prescribed by existing law. Section 421 of The Insurance Company Law of 1921 relates to dividends of stock life companies, and Section 605, to dividends of casualty companies.

Section 703. Statement to Directors by Treasurer Prior to Declaration of Dividend.—Prior to the declaration of a dividend by a company, the treasurer thereof shall furnish to the board of directors a detailed written statement, under oath or affirmation, of the condition of the company as of the last date of the period for which the dividend is to be declared. Such statement shall set forth in detail all the items required by this act to be considered by the board of directors in determining whether to declare a dividend, and if so, to what amount.

Reference:

Bank Act of 1876, Section 17, 7 PS Sec. 152.

Comments:

This section is based on the Bank Act of 1876, supra, and appears as Section 703 of the proposed Banking Code.

Section 704. Lien on Dividends.—A shareholder who is liable to the company, either as principal debtor, surety, or otherwise, for any obligation which is overdue and unpaid, shall not be entitled to receive any dividend on such shares so long as such obligation to the company remains overdue and unpaid, but all such dividends shall be retained by the company and applied to discharge such obligation.[1]

This section shall not be construed to affect the right of a shareholder who is indebted to the company to transfer his share or shares.[2]

Comments:

1. This is substantially similar to Section 21 of the Bank Act of 1876 and follows Section 704 of the proposed Banking Code.

In general, it seems that an insurance company like a bank should have a lien upon any assets in its possesions belonging to a corporation or person indebted to it upon an obligation to it which is overdue and unpaid.

2. This provision is introduced in order not to impede the transfer of shares and not to conflict with the provisions of the Uniform Stock Transfer Act.

Section 705. Report to Department after Declaration of Dividend; Penalty.—A. Every company shall within ten days after the declaration of any dividend, make a written report to the Department of the amount of the dividend declared and the amount of its earned surplus or profits determined in the manner provided by this act. The report shall be made in the form prescribed by the Department and shall be attested by oath or affirmation of the president or the treasurer of the company.[1]

B. Any company which fails to make the report required by this section, shall pay to the Department a penalty of one hundred dollars for each day that it delays making such report, but the Department may, in its discretion, relieve any company from the payment of such penalty, in whole or in part, if good cause be shown to it for the failure of such company to make such report. If a company fails to pay a penalty from which it has not been relieved by the Department, the Department may, through the Department of Justice, maintain an action at law to recover it.[2]

Comments:

1. This section is similar to Section 705 of the proposed Banking Code. It seems clearly desirable to provide that the Department should receive notice within ten days after the declaration of a dividend, in order that it may have an opportunity to determine whether the dividend is legal and should have been declared. Under Section 701 of this draft the company is prohibited from paying such dividend until twenty days after it shall have been declared. Therefore, the Department would have ten days in which to check on the legality of the dividend.

2. The national law with respect to banks, 12 USCA Sec. 164, likewise provides a penalty for failure to file the report required. However, this draft allows the Department to relieve a company from payment of the penalty, since there may be occasions where the failure to give notice is due to unavoidable causes and inflicts no injury upon anyone.

Section 706. Liability for Unlawful Dividends and Distributions.—A. The directors of a company shall not declare or pay dividends, or authorize or ratify the withdrawal or distribution of any part of its assets, to shareholders, except as authorized by this act. If any dividend shall be paid, or if any withdrawal or distribution of the assets shall be made, except as provided in this act, the directors under whose administration such payment, withdrawal or distribution was made, except those who shall have caused their dissent therefrom to be entered on the minutes of the meeting at which such action was authorizd, or who being absent at the time which such action was authorized, or who being absent at the time shall have promptly filed their written objection thereto with the secretary of the company upon learning of such action, shall be jointly and severally liable to the company in an amount equal to the amount of the unlawful dividend or the unlawful withdrawal or distribution of assets. Any director against whom a claim shall be asserted under or pursuant to this section and who shall be held liable thereon, shall be entitled to a contribution from the other directors who are likewise liable thereon, pro rata, according to the number of directors. Any two or more directors may be sued in the same action.[1]

B. Any shareholder who shall nkowingly accept or receive any dividend or distribution of the assets of a company not authorized by this act to be made shall be individually liable to the company in an amount equal to the amount so accepted or received by him. Any two or more shareholders may be sued in the same action.[2]

Insurance Company Law of 1921, Sec. 518A, as supplied by the Act of June 23, 1931, P. L. 904.

Comments:

1. This section is substantially similar to Section 518A of The Insurance Company Law of 1921 as applied to stock fire and marine companies. There seems to be no reason why it should not apply to all stock insurance companies.

2. This provision increases the existing liability of shareholders in Pennsylvania, and a similar provision is contained in the laws of some of the other states. Under this provision of the draft, innocent shareholders, as well as those who knowingly participated in the illegal dividend or distribution, are made liable to the corporation for the amount they received. As pointed out in a note to the Uniform Act, the authorities are in conflict as to whether a shareholder who has innocently received a dividend paid out of capital when the corporation is solvent can be made liable for the amount received. Of course, if the payment to the shareholder causes insolvency, or is made at a time when the corporation is insolvent, that payment can be treated as a fraud on creditors, and the shareholder, even though innocent, can be made to repay the amount of such payment. This would be true though the payment were made from surplus or profits.

The only statutory provision in Pennsylvania on this subject is Section 39, Clause 4, of the Corporation Act of 1874, supra, which makes shareholders liable for the debts of the company contracted before any part of the capital of the company is withdrawn and refunded to the shareholders. The statutes of other states are not uniform on this point. In some states, as in this draft, all shareholders are made liable to the amount of any unlawful dividend or distribuiton of the corporate assets received by them. In other states only those shareholders who knowingly receive any unlawful dividend or distribution of assets are made liable to the corporation for the amount received. In some states, like Pennsylvania, there is no specific statutory provision on this point.

To require shareholders receiving illegal dividends or distributions to return the same to the corporation would seem to be logical and just. Accordingly, this draft so provides.

A similar provision appears in Section 706 of the proposed Banking Code.

Section 707. Increases of Authorized Capital; Increase of Capital Pursuant Thereto; Sale of Increase of Capital.—A A stock company may amend its articles to increase its authorized capital, in the same manner and with the same approval as is required by this act for any amendment to the articles of a company,[1] except that written notice of a proposed amendment for increasing the authorized capital of the company shall be given to each shareholder entitled to vote thereon at least sixty days prior to such meeting.[2]

Such increase of authorized capital shall, however, become invalid and inoperative, unless the actual increase of capital which is authorized, shall be made within one year from the date of the issuance of the certificate of amendment.[3] If any portion of such authorized capital shall be created and issued within such one-year period, only such portion as remains uncreated and unissued within such period shall become invalid and inoperative. In the case of a company, which upon the effective date of this act, has an authorized capital which exceeds its actual capital, such one-year period shall date from the effective date of this act. Such actual increase of capital may be made from time to time within such period of one year, but no such increase shall be made until paid for in full, pursuant to the provisions of this act as to the creation or issuance of any share.[4] Such increase may, however, be made by the declaration of a share dividend in accordance with the provisions of this act concerning share dividends.[5]

B. A share shall not be create or issued, pursuant to such increase of capital, for a cash consideration of less than the par value of such share, plus fifty per centum thereof as a surplus contribution thereon.

C. Each shareholder shall have the right first to subscribe for the new shares in proportion to his interest in the company. Notice to the shareholders to exercise their rights to subscribe for and to take the shares of stock at the price so fixed or waive such right, shall be mailed to each shareholder, at the last address of such shareholder appearing on the books or records of the company, thirty days previous to the date fixed by the board of directors for the expiration of the right to subscribe, and shall also be given by publication once a week for three weeks in a newspaper of general circulation published in the city or county in which the company has its principal office. Any shares of stock not subscribed for and taken by the stockholders may be sold and disposed of by the board of directors, in such manner as the shareholders may direct, but no such stock shall be sold or disposed of at a price less than that originally fixed by the shareholders.[6]

D. Upon effecting an actual increase in its capital, a company shall issue to its shareholders new share certificates, setting forth the changed capital of the company, in exchange for the outstanding shares of such shareholders, which shall then be cancelled.[7] The company shall withohld any cash or share dividend due on a share certificate which has not been exchanged within six months after the date upon which the increase in capital was created and issued, but upon the shareholder's thereafter exchanging such certificate, the company shall pay to him any dividends which were thus withhold.[8]

Comments:

This section is quite similar to Section 411 of the proposed Banking Code. It follows in substance Sections 323, 324, and 325 of The Insurance Company Law of 1921. It does not repeat the detailed provisions relating to calling and holding the meeting as they are covered by other sections of this draft relating to amendments to the articles. Full provisions is made in Articles V and VIII for notice of the meeting, the manner of conducting it, the duty of the company to furnish the judges with the names of shareholders and the number of outstanding shares, the notification to the Department of State, the payment of bonus, the approval by the Insurance Commisisoner, etc.

1. See Article VIII of this draft.

2. This deviation from the regular procedure for an amendment is necessitated by Article XVI, Section 7 of the Constitution of Pennsylvania.

3. Section 10 of the Bank Act of 1876, supra, provided that "no increase of capital shall be valid unless the same shall be actually paid-in within one year from the date of the written consent as aforesaid to such increase."

4. See Section 602 of this draft.

5. See Section 701 of this draft.

6. This paragraph is a repetition of Section 326 of The Insurance Company Law of 1921.

7. Section 5 of the Act of 1879, supra, reqires the issuance of new share certificates. This seems clearly desirable, since otherwise share certificates will be outstanding which do not tell the true story of the financial set-up of the bank or bank and trust company.

8. This provision has been introduced in order to add some incentive for the shareholder to turn in his share certificate to be cancelled and to have a new certificate issued therefor. It does not permanently deprive any shareholder of any rights, but merely provides for the withholding of any dividend accruing more than six months after such shareholder should have turned in his share certificate for cancellation and exchange.

Section 708. Decrease of Capital.—A. A stock company may amend its articles to decrease its capital, either by reducing the number of its shares, or by reducing the par value of each share, or by both such methods, in the same manner and with the same approval as is required by this act for any amendment to the articles of a company;[1] but the capital of a company shall not be decreased to an amount below the minimum prescribed by this act for such company.[2]

B. The responsibility for the contracts, debts, or engagements of the company, to which its shareholders are subject upon the date when the certificate of amendment is issued, shall continue for one year thereafter.[3]

C. Any excess of capital created by such decrease of the capital of a company, shall forthwith be transferred to the surplus of such company, or it may, with the approval of the Department, be returned to the shareholders in the form of a cash dividend, provided that the surplus of the company after the payment of such cash dividend, equals at least fifty per centum of the capital as reduced.

D. Upon effecting a decrease in its capital, a company shall issue to its shareholders new share certificates, setting forth the changed par value of each share or the changed capital of the company, in exchange for the outstanding shares of such shareholders, which shall then be cancelled.[4] The company shall withhold any cash or share dividend due on a share certificate which has not be exchanged within six months after the date upon which the certificate of amendment authorizing the decrease in capital was issued, but upon the shareholder's thereafter exchanging such certificate, the company shall pay to him any dividends which were thus withheld.[5]

Comments:

This section is quite similar to Section 412 of the proposed Banking Code. Paragraph A is substantially like Section 327 of The Insurance Company Law of 1921.

The provisions of Sections 328 to 331, inclusive, of that act are not repeated here, as they relate to the method of calling and holding the meeting of shareholders. There matters are fully covered by other sections of this draft relating to amendments. Full provision is made in Articles V and VIII for notice of the meeting, the manner of conducting it, the notification to the Department of State, the approval by the Insurance Commissioner, etc.

1. See Article VIII of this draft.

2. See Sections 303 to 308, inclusive, of this draft.

3. The Act of 1883, supra, provides that such responsibility shall not be divested but sets no limit on the time for which such shareholders remain responsible. It seems unreasonable to continue such responsibility indefinitely and therefore this draft specifies a one-year period.

4. The Act of 1879, supra, and the Act of 1901, supra, require the issuance of substituted share certificates upon a decrease of capital. Such a requirement seems clearly desirable, since otherwise there would be a great many share certificates outstanding which would not tell the true story of the financial set-up of the company.

5. Like the existing statutes in the case of an increase in capital, the statutes covering decrease of capital do not provide any penalty on a shareholder who does not turn in his share certificate to be cancelled and to have a new certificate issued thereon. For the reasons set forth in footnote 7 to Section 707, a substantially similar provision has been included in this proposed section.

Section 709. Surplus for Stock Companies; Impairment Thereof.—Every stock company, subject to the provision of this act, shall maintain, at all times, a surplus at least equal to fifty per centum of its capital.[1] If the surplus of such a company becomes impaired below such fifty per centum minimum, it shall, at the close of each dividend period, or at least annually, if no dividend is paid, credit to its surplus an amount which shall not be less than one-half of its net earnings for such period, until its surplus shall equal at least fifty per centum of its capital.[2]

Comments:

This section is similar to Section 413 of the proposed Banking Code.

1. Section 16 of the Bank Act of 1876, supra, requires that in the case of a bank one-tenth of the net profits of each dividend period shall be credited to a surplus fund until such fund amounts to twenty-five per centum of capital. However, no provision is made requiring such surplus to be maintained or setting up a system for its accumulation in the event of impairment.

This draft requires a paid-in surplus of at least twenty-five per centum and an accumulated surplus of at least fifty per centum, which shall be maintained and which shall be accumulated out of net earnings in any case in which it has become impaired. The laws of Massachusetts, Louisiana, Kansas, Wisconsin, Texas, Nebraska, Maine, Colorado, and Michigan relating to banks all require a surplus of fifty per centum to be accumulated and maintained out of net earnings. The commissions appointed respectively by the states of Indiana and Delaware to study changes in banking laws of those states have, after extensive research, recommended that surplus be accumulated to one hundred per centum of capital. The whole trend of modern legislation is in the direction of providing greater buffers in the financial set-ups of banking institutions. There seems to be justification for imposing on insurance companies the same requirements. Why should they continue without any surplus and still pay dividends in full?

2. The method provided by this draft for accumulating surplus to meet the requirements of thi sact is substantially similar to that in existence in most of the states which require a maintenance of surplus for banks, although the percentages of net earnings vary considerably. It is obvious, of course, that the shareholders in fact lose nothing when a portion of net earnings is carried on surplus rather than paid as a dividend. This is the easiest and most equitable method of accumulating surplus.

AMENDMENT OF ARTICLES

Section 801. Amendment of Articles Authorized.—Except as specifically provided otherwise in this act, a company may by the method provided hereafter in this act for the adoption of amendments, make any amendment whatsoever in its articles, provided that the articles as so amended would be authorized by this act as original articles of incorporation.

The Insurance Company Law of 1921, Secs. 322, 352, and 532, 40 PS Secs. 445, 447, and 672.

Comments:

Preliminary Note to Articles VIII: Except for the Act of 1883, supra, there is no law in this Commonwealth applicable to corporations, which treats generally of the power to amend the articles of any corporation and the method for doing so.

The Insurance Company Law of 1921 contains specific provisions on this subject. Section 322 as amended by the Act of April 26, 1929, P. L. 782, provides for the amendment of stock and mutual company charters upon two-thirds vote followed by filing the proposed amendment with the Commission for certification to the Governor and recording in the Office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth. Section 352 as amended by the Act of June 23, 1931, P. L. 904, provides that in case of amendment the entire charter of the company may be restated. This likewise is permitted in the case of merger or consolidation under existing law.

Section 532 of The Insurance Company Law of 1921 provides for the rechartering of mutual fire and marine companies whose charters are about to expire. It does not seem necessary to include the contents of this section in this draft for the reason that in the case of companies formed for a definite period of existence amendment of the charter is alone required to continue such term or to make the life of the company perpetual.

It seems desirable to provide a general method to be followed in making amendments of any kind whatsoever to the articles of a company. This is the method which has been uniformly followed in all the recent corporation codes adopted by other states, and it is likewise followed in the proposed Business Corporation Law.

The present article, which deals with amendments to the articles of companies for the sake of uniformity, follows, in so far as possible, Article VIII of the proposed Business Corporation Law, which deals with the same subject in connection with business corporations. The provisions of that proposed act have been drafted after a careful study of the recent codification of corporation laws in the various states, and of the Uniform Act adopted by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws. It seems unnecessary in this draft to give the citations and to discuss the reasons for these changes, since they are fully and adequately discussed therein.

In addition, the present article follows the procedure adopted in Article II of this draft on the formation of companies. Here, as there, the Department of State is retained as the clearing house for amendments to articles; the Insurance Department is established as the authority to approve the substantive changes proposed by the amendments. In Article II of this draft the footnotes discussed in detail the reasons for this procedure. These comments are therefore not repeated in this article.

Section 802. Proposal of Amendments.—Except as otherwise specifically provided in this act, every amendment to the articles of a company shall first be proposed by the board of directors by the adoption of a resolution setting forth the proposed amendment and directing that it be submitted to a vote of the shareholders entitled to vote thereon or members at a designated meeting, which may be either an annual meeting of the shareholders or members of a special meeting of the shareholders or members entitled to vote on the amendment. The resolution of the board of directors shall establish the language of the proposed amendment to the articles by providing that the articles shall be amended so as to read as therein set forth in full, or that any provision thereof be amended so as to read as therein set full, or that the matter stated in the resolution be added to or stricken from the articles.

Comment:

This section is substantially the same as Section 802 of the proposed Business Corporation Law.

Section 803. Adoption of Amendments.—A. Except as otherwise specifically provided in this act, every proposal of an amendment to the articles of a company, made by its board of directors, shall be adopted at the shareholders' or members' meeting designated for that purpose pursuant to the provisions of this act, in the case of a stock company, by the holders of at least a majority of the outstanding shares entitled to vote at such meeting, unless the articles require a greater number, and, in the case of a mutual company, by a majority of the members present, unless the by-laws otherwise provide.

B. Any number of amendments may be voted upon by the shareholders or members at one meeting.

Comments:

This section is substantially similar to Section 805 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 803 of the proposed Banking Code.

The Act of 1883, supra, which authorizes the amendment of charters of corporations of the second class, does not specify the vote by which the proposed amendment must be approved by the shareholders. Accordingly, a majority vote is required, unless the articles specify a larger vote. The Act of 1901, authorizing an increase of the capital stock of a corporation, also requires a majority vote of the shareholders. The Act of 1903, authorizing corporations of the second class to change their names, requires a two-thirds vote of the shareholders.

The Uniform Act and the laws of most states, including Illinois, Delaware and New Jersey, require a two-thirds vote of the shareholders to amend the articles of a corporation. The Uniform Act, however, permits a majority vote for the approval of an amendment changing the corporate name. The new acts of Michigan and California require a majority vote of the shareholders to amend the articles of a corporation.

This draft continues the Pennsylvania practice of requiring a majority vote to amend the articles of a corporation, and also permits a change of the corporate name by a similar vote, unless the articles require a greater vote.

Section 804. Notice of Meetings to Adopt Amendments to Articles.—A. Except as otherwise specifically provided in this act, written notice shall, not less than three weeks before the shareholders' or members' meetings called by the board of directors for the purpose of considering any proposed amendment to the articles of a company, be given to each shareholder of record, entitled to vote, or member.

B. Such notice to the shareholders or the members, respectively, shall state the place, the day, and the hour of the meeting, and shall set forth the proposed amendment or a summary of the changes to be effected thereby. Notice of such meeting shall also be published once a week for three consecutive weeks before such meeting, in the manner prescribed by this act.

Comments:

This section is substantially similar to Section 804 of the proposed Banking Code. It changes existing law, which, as provided in Section 322 of The Insurance Company Law of 1921, as amended, calls for advertisement of the meeting for four weeks preceding and for favorable action by two-thirds of the votes cast. It is not considered necessary to have a different period during which notice shall be advertised than that which is prescribed for advertising the annual meeting of a company.

The Act of 1883, authorizing amendments to charters of corporations of the second class, requires the corporation to publish notice of its intention to apply for an amendment "in two newspapers of general circulation, printed in the county wherein the principal office or place of business of said corporation is located, once a week for three weeks." Here we have another anomalous situation in our existing corporation law. In the formation of a corporation, advertisement must be made once for at least three days before the application for a charter is filed with the Secretary of the Commonwealth, but in order subsequently to amend the charter so obtained it is necessary to advertise once a week for three weeks before the application for amendment is filed with the Secretary of the Commonwealth. This draft requires the same amount of advertising in the case of an amendment of a charter as is required to give notice of the annual meeting.

Section 805. Articles of Amendment.—A. After an amendment to the articles of a company has been adopted in the manner provided by this act, triplicate originals of articles of amendment shall be executed under oath or affirmation and under the seal of the company by two duly authorized officers thereof and shall set forth:

(1) The name and location of the registered office or the principal place of business of the company.

(2) The Act of Assembly under which the company was formed, and the date when and the place where the original articles were recorded.

(3) The time and place of the meeting of the shareholders or of the members of the company, at which the amendment was adopted, and the kind and period of notice given to such shareholders or members.

(4) In the case of a stock company, the number of shares outstanding and the number of shares entitled to vote on the amendment.

(5) In the case of a mutual company, the number of members of the company, the number present, and the number voting for or against such amendment.

(6) The amendment adopted, which shall be set forth in full.

Comments:

This section is substantially similar to Section 805 of the proposed Banking Code and Section 806 of the proposed Business Corporation Law.

Under the provisions of the Act of 1883, the corporation is required to prepare a certificate, under its corporate seal, setting forth "the character and objects of the proposed improvement, amendment or alteration of their charter." That act does does not enumerate what shall be set forth in the certificate of amendment. This draft specifically requires certain facts to be set forth which, in practice, are generally set forth in the certificate of amendment. As Section 204 of this draft requires the share structure of a corporation to be set forth in its articles, this section of the draft also requires any change in the share structure to be set forth explicity in the articles of amendment.

The Act of 1883 requires the corporation to prepare a certificate of amendment. While some other states use the same terminology, this draft follows the suggestion of the Uniform Act and designates the document to be filed by a corporation amending its charter as "articles of amendment." The new Illinois and Indiana acts use the same designation. Under the following section of this draft, the Department of State is authorized to issue a certificate of amendment, which constitutes official evidence that the articles of amendment have been filed in its office and that the charter of the corporation has been amended.

The provision of this section prescribing the basis of exchangeable value of shares is taken from Section 40 of the Uniform Act. That section of the Uniform Act, in turn, is based upon Section 38 of the New York Stock Corporation Law. Only a few states, including Illinois, California and Delaware, attempt to prescribe, by statute, the basis of exchangeable value of shares. This provision is inserted solely for the purpose of discussion

Section 806. Filing of Articles of Amendment; Approval by Department of State.—A. The triplicate originals of the articles of amendment and the proof of advertisement, required by this act, shall be delivered to the Department of State.

B. In addition to any bonus fees, taxes and charges provided by law in the case of any corporation, a company shall pay to the Department such reasonable fees, as shall be established by rule and regulation by the Insurance Department for the investigation made by it pursuant to the provisions of this act, to determine whether the articles of amendment should be approved. Such fee for the investigation by the Insurance Department shall be paid to the Department at the time of the filing of the articles of amendment with it and shall be paid by the Department to the Department of Revenue.

C. The Department of State shall examine such articles of amendment and such proof of publication to determine whether they contain all the information and are in the form required by this act, the Department of State shall endorse its approval upon each of the triplicate originals of the articles of amendment and shall forthwith transmit them to the Insurance Department.

D. If the Department of State shall disapprove the articles of amendment, pursuant to the provisions of this act, it shall forthwith give notice thereof to the company, stating in detail its reasons for doing so, and stating how such company can remedy the nonconformance with the provisions of this act. Upon remedying the defect such company may in the same manner file the same or amended articles whichever the particular case may require.

Comments:

This section is similar to Section 806 of the proposed Banking Code. The procedure differs somewhat from that in Sections 206 and 212 of this draft. Those sections dealing with the cost of examination to be conducted by the Insurance Department require payment of such costs by the incorporators. When an Amendment to the articles is being made, it will, of course, always be by an existing company and the cost therefor should be paid by such company rather than by the incorporators.

Section 807. Approval of Articles of Amendment by Insurance Department.—A. The Insurance Department shall immediately upon the receipt of the articles of amendment from the Department of State conduct such examination as it may deem necessary to ascertain, from the best sources of information at its command, whether such amendment of amendments will be lawful and beneficial and not injurious to the community and in accordance with the purposes of the articles of incorporation.

B. Within sixty days after the receipt of the articles of amendment from the Department of State, the Insurance Department shall, upon the basis of the facts disclosed by the investigation provided for by this section, either approve or disapprove such articles. It shall immediately notify the Department of State in writing of its action. If it shall approve the articles of amendment, it shall retain one of the triplicate originals and shall sign its approval upon the remaining two of the triplicate originals.

C. If the Insurance Department disapproves the articles of amendment, it shall return them to the Department of State, stating in detail is reasons for doing so. The Department of State shall immediately give notice to the company, of the action of the Insurance Department and of the reasons therefor as stated to it by that Department. The company may, within thirty days after the Department of State sends it notice of the disapproval of the articles of amendment, appeal from such disapproval to the Governor who shall hear such appeal promptly, and, within thirty days thereafter, decide the matter and certify a decision to the Insurance Department. The decision of the Governor shall be conclusive and not subject to any review. The Insurance Department shall act in accordance therewith.

Comment:

This section is similar to Section 807 of the proposed Banking Code.

Section 808. Issuance of Certificate of Amendment.—Immediately upon receipt of the two signed triplicate originals of the articles of amendment of a company from the Insurance Department, the Department of State shall file and record one of the triplicate originals and shall issue a certificate of amendment. The remaining triplicate of the articles of amendment and the certificate of amendment shall be returned by the Department of State to the company, which shall then have them recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds of the county in which the registered office of the company is situated. The triplicate original of the articles of amendment and the certificate, upon being recorded by the recorder of deeds, shall be returned to the company or its represntative.

Comment:

This section is similar to Section 808 of the proposed Banking Code.

Section 809. Effective Date of Amendment.—Upon the issuance of the certificate of amendment by the Department of State, the amendments shall become effective and the articles of incorporation shall be deemed to be amended accordingly. The certificate of amendment shall be conclusive evidence of the performance of all conditions required in this act in proceedings to amend the articles of incorporation, except as against the Commonwealth. No amendment shall affect any existing cause of action in favor of or against the company or any pending suit in which suit company shall be a party, or the existing rights of persons, other than shareholders in the case of a stock company; and, in the event the corporate name shall be changed by the amendment, no suit brought by or against the company under its former name shall be abated for that reason.

Comments:

This section is similar to Section 809 of the proposed Banking Code.

Under the Act of 1883, the amendment of a charter becomes effective upon the recording of the certificate of amendment in the office of the recorder of deeds of the proper county.

Under this draft, as under the Uniform Act and the laws of many states, the amendment becomes effective upon the issuance of the certificate of amendment by the Department of State. Before that department may issue such certificate, all taxes, bonus, fees and other charges required by law must first have been paid, but this draft does not require the corporation to state in its articles of amendment that all taxes have been paid. It is submitted that the Department of State may readily ascertain this from the Department of Revenue, and that there is no necessity for imposing upon the corporation the duty of stating this fact in the articles of amendment.

ARTICLE IX

MERGER AND CONSOLIDATION

Section 901. Merger and Consolidation Authorized.—A. Any two or more domestic companies, or any one or more domestic companies and any one or more foreign companies doing the same or similar class of business, may, in the manner hereinafter provided in this article, be merged into one of such domestic companies hereinafter designated as the surviving company, or consolidated into a new company to be formed under this act, provided such foreign companies are authorized by the law or laws of the state in which they were formed to effect such merger or consolidation.[1]

B. Any one or more domestic companies, and any one or more foreign companies doing the same or similar class of business, may, in the manner hereinafter provided in this act, be merged into one of such foreign companies hereinafter designated as the surviving company, or consolidated into a new company to be formed under the law or laws of the state in which one of the foreign companies was formed, provided the laws of such state authorize such merger or consolidation, and the insurance supervising official of such state approves it, and further provided the domicile of the surviving or new company is located in this Commonwealth unless the Department shall consent in writing, endorsed on the merger or consolidation agreement, that the surviving or new company may be domiciled in some other state.

C. Nothing in this article shall be construed or interpreted as permitting or authorizing the merger of a stock company with a mutual company.

Comments:

Preliminary Note to Article IX: At the outset it is to be noted that the Act of 1909, supra, and the other Pennsylvania acts, have always seemed to use the words "consolidate" and "merge" synonymously. However, the two words have different technical meanings. In a merger, only one of the constituent corporations survives, whereas the others lose their identities, while in a consolidation all the constituent corporations lose their identities and a new corporation springs up in their place. This draft, like the proposed Business Corporation Law, makes a clear distinction between a merger and a consolidation.

The present article, for the sake of uniformity, follows in so far as possible, Article IX of the proposed Business Corporation Law, which deal with merger and consolidation of business corporations. The provisions of that proposed act have been drafted after a careful study of recent codifications of corporation laws in the various states, and of the Uniform Act adopted by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws. It seems unnecessary in this draft to give the citations and discuss the reasons for these changes, since they are fully and adequaetly discussed therein. In addition, the present article follows the procedure adopted in Article II of the draft on the formation of companies and Article VIII of this draft on the amendment of the articles of Companies. Here, as in those two articles, the Department of State is retained as the clearing house for merger or consolidation; the Insurance Department is established as the authority to approve the substantive elements of the merger or consolidation. In Article II of this draft, the footnotes discussed in detail the reasons for this procedure. These comments, too, are therefore not repeated in this article.

1. The power of domestic companies to merger with foreign companies was first given by Section 337 of The Insurance Company Law of 1921, as added by the Act of June 23, 1931, P. L. 915. The provisions of that section are included in substance in the sections of this article.

Section 902. Approval of Joint Plan of Merger or Consolidation.—A. In the case of a proposed merger or consolidation of two or more companies the board of directors of each of the companies shall, by resolution adopted by vote of at least a majority of all the members of each board of directors, approve a joint plan of merger or consolidation, as the case may be, setting forth the terms and conditions of the merger or consolidation and the mode of carrying the same into effect, and such other details and provisions as are deemed necessary.

B. The board of directors of each company, upon approving such plan of merger or plan of consolidation in accordance with the provisions of this act, shall, by resolution, direct that the plan be submitted to a vote of the shareholders or members of such company entitled to vote thereon, at an annual or special meeting of the shareholders or members. Written notice shall, not less than three weeks before such meeting, be given respectively to each shareholder of record or to each member. The notice shall state the place, day, hour and purpose of the meeting, and a copy or a summary of the plan of merger or plan of consolidation, as the case may be, shall be included in or enclosed with such notice. Such notice shall also be published once a week for three consecutive weeks before such meeting in the manner prescribed by this act.

C. The plan of merger or consolidation shall be ratified upon receiving, in the case of stock companies, the affirmative vote of the holders of at least a majority of the outstanding shares entitled to vote of each of the merging or consolidating companies, and, in the case of mutual companies, the affirmative vote of a majority in interest of the members of each of such merging or consolidating companies.

Comments:

This section is similar to Section 902 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 1402 of the proposed Banking Code. The provisions for giving notice of the meeting and for majority action follow existing insurance law.

Section 903. Articles of Merger or Consolidation.—Upon the approval, pursuant to the provisions of this act, of the plan of merger or the plan of consolidation by the shareholders or members of the companies desiring to merge or consolidate, triplicate originals of the articles of merger or the articles of consolidation, as the case may be, shall be executed under the seal of each company by two duly authorized officers thereof and shall set forth:

(1) The name and the location of the registered office of the surviving or new incorporated company.

(2) The time and place of the meeting of the shareholders or members of each company at which the plan of merger or consolidation, as the case may be, was adopted, the kind and period of notice given to the shareholders or members, and the total vote by which the plan was adopted.

(3) In the case of a merger any changes desired to be made in the articles of the surviving company, or, in the case of a consolidation, all of the statements required by this act to be set forth in the original articles in the case of the formation of a company.

(5) The plan of merger or consolidation.

Section 904. Filing of Articles of Merger or Consolidation; Payment of Fees; Approval by Department of State.—A. The triplicate originals of the articles of merger or articles of consolidation, as the case may be, and the proof of publication of the advertisements, required by this act shall be delivered to the Department of State.

B. In addition to any bonus fees, taxes and charges provided by law in the case of any corporation, a company shall pay to the Department such reasonable fees, as shall be established by rule and regulation by the Department for the investigation made by it pursuant to the provisions of this act, to determine whether the articles of merger or articles of consolidation, as the case may be, should be approved. Such fee for the investigation by the Insurance Department shall be paid to the Department at the time of the filing with it of the articles of merger or articles of consolidation, and shall be paid by the Department to the Department of Revenue.

C. The Department of State shall examine such articles of merger or articles of consolidation and such proof of publication to determine whether they contain all the information and are in the form required by this act, and also whether the name of the surviving or new company, as the case may be, conforms with the requirements of law for the name of such a company or, if the name is not the same as either or any of the merging or consolidating companies, whether it is the same as one already adopted or reserved by another company or person, or is so similar thereto that it is likely to mislead the public.

D. After all the bonus fees, taxes, and other charges have been paid as required by law, if the articles of merger or articles of consolidation and the proof of publication contain the information and are in the form required by this act the Department of State shall endorse its approval upon each of the triplicate originals of the articles of merger or articles of consolidation and shall forthwith transmit them to the Insurance Department.

E. If the Department of State shall disapprove the articles of merger or the articles of consolidation pursuant to this act, it shall forthwith give notice thereof to the company stating in detail its reasons for dong so, and stating how such company can remedy the nonconformance with the provisions of this act. Upon remedying the defect such company may in the same manner file the same or amended articles which ever the particular case may require.

Section 905. Approval of Articles of Merger or Consolidation by Insurance Department.—A. The Insurance Department shall immediately upon the receipt from the Department of State of the articles of merger or articles of consolidation, conduct such examination as it may deem necessary to ascertain from the best sources of information at its command:

(1) Whether the name of the surviving or new company is likely to mislead the public as to its character or purpose.

(2) Whether the consolidation or merger is made for legitimate purposes.

(3) Whether the interests of the creditors and the shareholders are adequately protected.

(4) Whether the surviving or new company meets all the requirements of this act, and violates none of its prohibitions.

B. Within sixty days after the receipt of the articles of merger or articles of consolidation from the Department of State the Insurance Department shall, upon the basis of the facts disclosed by the investigation provided for by this section, either approve or disapprove such articles. It shall immediately notify the Department of State in writing of its action. If it shall approve the articles of merger or articles of consolidation, it shall retain one of the triplicate originals and shall sign its approval upon the remaining two of the triplicate originals.

C. If the Insurance Department disapproves the articles of merger or the articles of consolidation, it shall return them to the Department of State stating in detail the reasons for doing so. The Department of State shall immediately give notice to the companies desiring to merge or consolidate, of the action of the Insurance Department and of the reasons therefor as stated to it by the Department. Such companies may, within thirty days after the Department of State sends them notice of the disapproval of their articles of merger or articles of consolidation, appeal from such disapproval to the Governor who shall hear such appeal promptly, and within thirty days thereafter decide the matter and certify a decision to the Insurance Department. The decision of the Governor shall be conclusive and not subject to review. The Insurance Department shall act in accordance therewith.

Comments:

This section is similar to Section 1405 of the proposed Banking Code.

Section 906. Issuance of Certificate of Merger or Certificate of Consolidation.—Immediately upon receipt of the two of the triplicate originals of the articles of consolidation of a company from the Insurance Department, the Department of State shall file and record one of the triplicate originals and shall issue a certificate of merger or a certificate of consolidation. The remaining triplicate of the articles of merger or articles of consolidation and the certificate of merger or articles of consolidation, and the certificate, upon being recorded by the recorder of deeds, shall be returned to the company.

Comments:

This section is similar to Section 1406 of the proposed Banking Code.

Section 907. Effective Date of Merger or Consolidation.—Upon the issuance of the certificate of merger or the certificate of consolidation by the Department of State, the merger or consolidation shall be effective. The certificate of merger or the certificate of consolidation shall be conclusive evidence of the performance of all conditions precedent to such consolidation or merger and the creation or existence of a new or surviving company, except as against the Commonwealth.

Comments:

This section is similar to Section 905 of the proposed Business Corporation Law.

Section 908. Effect of Merger or Consolidation.—Upon the merger or consolidation becoming effective, the several companies parties to the plan of merger or consolidation shall be a single company, which, in the case of a merger, shall be that company designated in the plan of merger as the surviving company, and, in the case of a consolidation, shall be the new company provided for in the plan of consolidation. The separate existence of all companies parties to the plan of merger or consolidation shall cease, except, in the case of a merger, that of the surviving company. The surviving or new company, as the case may be, shall have all the rights, privileges, immunities and franchises of each of the merging or consolidating companies, except that the surviving or new company shall not thereby acquire authority to engage in any business or exercise any right which is forbidden to such a company when originally incorporated under this act. The surviving or new company shall be subject to all the restrictions, limitations, or duties imposed upon such companies when originally incorporated under this act. All the property, real, personal, and mixed, of each of the companies parties to the plan of merger or consolidation, and all debts or obligations due them, shall be taken and deemed to be transferred to and vested in the surviving or new company, as the case may be, without further act or deed. The surviving or new company shall thenceforth be responsible and liable for all the liabilities and obligations of each of the companies so merged or consolidated, in the same manner as if the surviving or new company had itself incurred such liabilities or obligations; but the liabilities of the merging or consoldating companies, or of their shareholders, members, directors, or officers, shall not be affected, nor shall the rights of the creditors thereof or of any persons dealing with such companies, or any liens upon the property of such companies, be impaired by such merger or consolidation, and any claim existing or action or proceeding pending by or against any of such companies may be prosecuted to judgment as if such merger or consolidation had not taken place, or the surviving or new company may be proceeded against or substituted in its place. In the case of a merger, the articles of incorporation of the surviving company shall be deemed to be amended to the extent, if any, that changes in its articles are stated in the articles of merger; and in the case of a consolidation, and which are required or permitted to be set forth in the articles of incorporation of companies formed under this act, shall be deemed to be the articles of incorporation of the new company. The aggregate amount of the net assets of merging or consolidating companies which was available for the payment of dividends immediately prior to such merger or consolidation, to the extent that the value thereof is not transferred to capital by the issuance of shares or otherwise, or to surplus or reserve, shall continue to be available for the payment of dividends by such surviving or new company.

Comments:

This section is similar to Section 906 of the proposed Business Corporation Law.

Section 909. Rights of Dissenting Shareholders or Members.—A. If any shareholder of a stock company or member of a mutual company which becomes a party to a plan of merger or consolidation shall file with such company prior to or at the meeting of shareholders or members at which the plan of merger or consolidation is submitted to a vote, a written objection to such plan of merger or consolidation, and shall not vote in favor thereof, and such shareholder or member, within twenty days after the merger or consolidation was effected, shall make written demand on the surviving or new company for the payment of the fair value of his shares of a shareholder or of his interest if a member as of the day prior to the date on which the vote was taken approving the merger or consolidation, without regard to any depreciation or appreciation thereof in consequence of the merger or consolidation, the surviving or new company, if a stock company shall pay to such shareholder the fair value of his shares upon surrender of the share certificate or certificates representing his shares and if a mutual company shall pay to such member the value of his interest after which the interest of such member in the company shall cease. The demand of the shareholder or member shall state the number of the shares owned or the interest held by him. Any shareholder or member failing to make demand within the twenty-day period shall be conclusively presumed to have consented to the merger or consolidation, and shall be bound by the terms thereof. If within thirty days after the date on which such merger or consolidation was affected, the value of such shares or interest shall be agreed upon by the dissenting shareholder or member and the surviving or new company, payment thereof shall be made within ninety days after the date on which such merger or consolidation was effected, upon the surrender of the share certificate or certificates representing his shares or the interest held by him. Upon payment of the agreed value, the dissenting shareholder or member shall cease to have any interest in such shares or in the company.

B. If within such period of thirty days the shareholder or member and the surviving or new company do not so agree, then the dissenting shareholder or member may, within sixty days after the expiration of the thiry-day period, apply by petition to the court of common pleas within the county in which the registered office of the surviving or new company is situated for the appointment by the court of three disinterested persons to appraise the fair market value of his shares or interest without regard to any depreciation or appreciation thereof in consequence of the merger or consolidation. The award of the appraisers, or of a majority of them, when confirmed by the court, shall be final and conclusive. The costs of such appraisal, including a reasonable fee to the appraiser, shall be fixed by the court and shall be borne by the surviving or new company, unless in the opinion of the court the action of any shareholder or member in refusing the offer of the company has been arbitrary, vexatious, or in bad faith, in which case the costs shall be assessed in the discretion of the court. The award shall be payable only upon and simultaneously with, the surrender to the surviving or new company of the share certificate or certificates representing the shares of the dissenting shareholder or the cancellation of the member's interest in such company. If the award shall not be paid by the surviving or new company within thirty days after the award was made by the appraisers, the amount of the award shall be a judgment against the surviving or new company, as the case may be, and may be collected as other judgments in such court are by law collectible. Upon the payment of the award or judgment, the dissenting shareholder or member shall cease to have any interest in such shares or in the surviving or new company. Such shares or interest may be held and disposed of by the surviving or new company as it may see fit. Unless the dissenting shareholder or member shall file a petition within the time herein limited, such shareholder or member and all persons claiming under him shall be conclusively presumed to have approved and ratified the merger or consolidation and shall be bound by the terms thereof. The right of the dissenting shareholder or member to be paid the fair value of his shares or interest, as herein provided, shall cease if and when the company shall abandon the merger or consolidation.

STOCK AND MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES

A. General Provisions Relating to Domestic Companies—

Section 1001. Compensation of Officers, Directors, Trustees, and Employes.—No domestic life company shall make any agreement with any officer, director, trustee or salaried employe, whereby the company agrees that, for services rendered or to be rendered, the salary or compensation or emulment will extend for a period beyond twelve months from the date of such agreement. The directors or trustees shall not receive any compensation or emulment, other than a fee for attendance at committee or board meetings and reimbursement for proper expenses actually incurred in travel, and for maintenance for the purpose of attending such meetings. No salary, compensation, or emulment, exceeding five thousand dollars in any one year, shall be paid to any officer, director, trustee, person, partnership, or corporation, unless such salary, compensation, or emulment is first authorized by a vote of the board of directors. The provisions of this section shall not apply to commissions accruing on agents' contracts or any agreement between the company and its agents for the payment of renewal commissions.

Any officer who is paid by any domestic life company a salary exceeding twelve hundred dollars a year for his services shall not receive compensation or emulment from any source other than such salary or renewal commissions which may become due to him from time to time on business obtained by him, as agent, prior to the time of his election to office.

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 402, 40 PS Sec. 502.

Section 1002. Vouchers for Payment of Moneys.—A domestic life company shall not make any expenditure of one hundred dollars or more, unless the expenditure is evidenced by a voucher signed by or on behalf of the person, partnership, or corporation receiving the money, and correctly describing the consideration for the payment. If the expenditure is both for services and disbursements, the voucher shall set forth the services rendered and an itemized statement of the disbursements made. If the expenditure is in connection with any proceeding pending before any legislative body, any department or officer of any state or government, or any court, the voucher shall correctly describe, in addition to the foregoing information, the nature of the proceeding and the interest of such company therein. When such voucher cannot be obtained, the expenditure shall be evidenced by an affidavit describing the character and object of the expenditure, and stating the reason for not obtaining such voucher.

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 403, 40 PS Sec. 503.

Section 1003. Pecuniary Interests of Directors, Trustees and Officers Assisting in Transactions with Company; Penalty.—The directors, trustees, and officers of any domestic life company shall not receive any money or remuneration in return for negotiating, procuring, recommending, or aiding in the sale or purchase of any property by, or the securing of any loan from, such company; and they shall not be pecuniarily interested, directly or indirectly, as principal, partner, agent, or beneficiary, in any such sale, purchase or loan. Any person violating any provision of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or undergo imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both, in the discretion of the court.[1]

Comments:

The present provision in the law imposes a maximum fine of five hundred dollars, and is silent about a term of imprisonment. However, the sum of five hundred dollars does not seem to be sufficient determent against a violation of this section, if the profits realized from such a violation would be greatly in excess of five hundred dollars. The additional fine and the provision concerning imprisonment have been added to this section in order to render it more effective.

Section 1004. Loans upon Security of Policies.—A domestic life company may invest part of its capital, surplus and reserve funds, in addition to the investments hereinbefore in this act authorized for domestic companies, in loans upon the security of its own policies, not exceeding the net value of the policies at the time of making the loans.

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 404, 40 PS Sec. 504.

Comments:

The investments which a company may make of its capital reserve and surplus funds are set forth in Sections 310, 311 and 312 of this draft.

Section 1005. Life Company May Hold Real Estate as Trustee.—Any domestic life company heretofore organized and having the power to receive and execute trusts, may receive and hold, in addition to the real estate which it is hereinbefore in this act authorized to receive and hold, all estates and property, real and personal, which are transferred or committed to it, in trust, with its consent, by any person, partnership, or corporation, or by any court of the United States or of this Commonwealth.

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 406, 40 PS Sec. 506.

Comments:

The general powers of companies to receive and hold real estate are set forth in Section 313 of this draft.

Section 1006. Proceeds of Annuities and Policies Retained at maturity Part of General Corporate Funds.—Whenever the proceeds of any contract of annuity or policy of life insurance are retained by a domestic life company pursuant to the terms of such contract or policy, or any written agreement supplemental thereto, such company shall not be required to segregate such proceeds, but may hold them as part of its general corporate funds.

B. Conversion of Stock Companies into Mutual Companies

Section 1007. Conversion into Mutual Companies Authorized.—Any domestic stock life company may be converted and transformed into a mutual life company, in the manner hereinafter provided in this article, and for this purpose such stock company may lawfully acquire all the shares of its capital stock and hold them in trust for the benefit of its policyholders.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Act of April 20, 1921, P. L. 175, Section 1, 40 PS Sec. 592.

Comments:

This subsection of this article deals with the conversion of a stock life company into a mutual life company. Here again an attempt has been made to keep the procedure followed consistent with that followed elsewhere in this act for the formation of companies and for all structural changes in the charter thereto.

Section 1008. Plan of Conversion; Approval.—Any domestic stock life company may carry out a plan for the acquisition of the shares of its capital stock, for the purpose of being converted into a mutual company, if such plan:

(1) Has been adopted by a resolution passed by the vote of a majority of the entire number of the directors of such stock company.

(2) Has been submitted to the Department and approved by it in writing.

(3) Has been approved by a vote of the shareholders representing a majority in amount of the entire capital stock of such company, at a special meeting of shareholders called pursuant to the provisions of this act for the purpose of holding an election for or against such plan.

(4) Has been approved by the vote of a majority of those policy-holders of such company who attend a meeting of policyholders called, as hereinafter provided, for the purpose of holding an election for or against such plan.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Act of April 20, 1921, P. L. 175, Section 2, 40 PS Sec. 593.

Section 1009. Meeting of Policyholders for Approving Plan of Conversion.—A meeting of the policyholders of any domestic stock life company, for the purpose of approving the plan of converting such company into a domestic mutual life company, shall be called by the directors as soon as possible after such plan has been approved by a vote of the shareholders, as hereinbefore provided in this article. Notice of the time, place and object of such meeting shall be given to the policyholders by publication once a week for three successive weeks before the meeting, in at least two daily or weekly newspapers, and in the legal periodical, if any, designated by the rules of court of the proper county for the publication of legal notices, published in the county, city, or borough wherein such stock company has its principal office, and in at least one daily or weekly newspaper published in the capital city of every state in which such stock company is transacting business.

At such meeting called in this manner, or any adjournment thereof, an election of policyholders, as aforesaid, shall be held for or against such plan. Such election shall be conducted by three judges who are policyholders of such stock company, appointed by the Department to hold said election. If one or more of these judges is absent, the judge or judges present shall appoint a judge or judges, who shall act in the place of the judge or judges absent. Every judge shall take and subscribe to an oath or affirmation before an officer authorized by law to administer oaths, that he will well and truly, and according to law, conduct such election to the best of his ability.

All votes shall be cast by ballot. Each policyholder whose insurance is then in force shall be entitled to cast one vote, in person or by proxy. A proxy shall not entitle its holder to vote unless it has been dated and executed within two months immediately preceding such meeting. The judges shall decide upon the qualifications of voters.

When the election is closed, the judges shall count the number of votes cast for, and the number of votes cast against, such plan, and declare whether a majority of policyholders voting at such meeting have approved or disapproved such plan; and they shall make out and certify triplicate returns of said election, stating therein the number of policyholders who voted for such plan and the number of policy holders who voted against it, and deliver the returns to an officer of such stock company.

It shall be the duty of such stock company to furnish the judges such of its books, records, and papers as the judges may request, for the purpose of assisting them in the proper conduct of such meeting.

Section 1010. Articles of Conversion.—Upon the approval pursuant to the provisions of this article, of the plan of conversion, triplicate originals of the articles of conversion shall be executed, under the seal of the stock life company which proposes to become converted into a mutual life comapny, by two of its duly authorized officers, and shall set forth:

(1) The proposed name of the mutual life company.

(2) The exact location of the principal office of the stock life company and of the mutual life company into which it plans to become converted.

(3) A copy of the plan of conversion.

(4) A copy of the resolution of the board of directors adopting such plan.

(5) The time and place of the meeting of the shareholders at which the plan was approved, the kind and period of notice given to the shareholders, and the return of the vote of the shareholders by which the plan was adopted.

(6) The time and place of the meeting of the policyholders at which the plan was approved, proof of publication of the notices hereinbefore required in this article for such meetings, and the vote of the policyholders by which the plan was adopted.

(7) The number, names and addresses of the persons to be the first directors of the mutual life company.

Section 1011. Filing of Articles of Conversion; Payment of Fees; Approval by Department of State.—A. The triplicate originals of the articles of conversion of a stock company into a mutual life company shall be delivered to the Department of State.

B. The Department of State shall examine such articles of conversion to determine whether they contain all the information and are in the form required by this act, and also whether the name of the proposed mutual life company conforms with the requirements of law for the name of such companies, or whether it is the same as one already adopted by another mutual company, or is so similar thereto that it is likely to mislead the public.

If all the bonus, fees, taxes and other charges have been paid, as required by law, and if the articles of conversion contain the information, and are in the form, required by this act, the Department of State shall endorse its approval upon each of the triplicate originals of the articles of conversion, and shall forthwith transmit them to the Insurance Department.

C. If the Department of State shall disapprove the articles of conversion, pursuant to this act, it shall forthwith give notice of its disapproval to the stock life company, stating in detail the reasons for its disapproval, and stating how such company can remedy the non-compliance with the provisions of this act. Upon remedying the defect, such company may, in the same manner, file the same or amended articles of conversion, which ever the particular case may require.

Section 1012. Approval by the Insurance Department of Articles of Conversion.—A. The Insurance Department shall immediately, upon receipt from the Department of State of the articles of conversion of a stock life company into a mutual life company, conduct such examination as it may deem necessary to ascertain from the possible sources of information at its command:

(1) Whether the name of the proposed mutual life company is likely to mislead the public as to its character or purpose.

(2) Whether the conversion is made for legitimate purposes.

(3) Whether the interests of the creditors, policyholders, and shareholders are adequately protected.

(4) Whether the proposed mutual life company meets all the requirements of this act and violates none of its prohibitions applicable to mutual life companies.

B. Within sixty days after the receipt of the articles of conversion from the Department of State, the Insurance Department shall, upon the basis of the facts disclosed by the investigation provided for by this section, either approve or disapprove such articles. It shall immediately notify the Department of State, in writing, of its action. If it shall approve the articles of conversion, it shall retain one of the triplicate originals and shall sign its approval upon the remaining two of them.

C. If the Insurance Department disapproves the articles of conversion, it shall return them to the Department of State, stating in detail its reasons for doing so. The Department of State shall immediately give notice to the stock life company desiring to become converted into a mutua llife company of the action of the Insurance Department and of the reasons therefor, as stated by that Department. Such stock life company may, within thirty days after the department sends the notice of the disapproval of its articles of conversion, appeal from such disapproval to the Govennor, who shall hear such appeal promptly, and shall, within thirty days thereafter, decide the matter and certify his decision to the Department. The decision of the Governor shall be conclusive and not subject to review. The Department shall act in accordance therewith.

Section 1013. Issuance of Certificate of Conversion; Effect Thereof.—A. Immediately upon receipt of the two triplicate originals of the articles of conversion of a stock life company into a mutual life company, from the Insurance Department, the Department of State shall file and record one of them and shall issue a certificate of conversion. The remaining triplicate of the articles of conversion shall be sent by the Department of State to the company, which shall then have such articles recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds of the county in which the principal place of business of such company is situated. The triplicate original of the articles of conversion, and the certificate, upon being recorded by the recorder of deeds, shall be returned to the company, and shall constitute the charter of such company.

B. Upon the issuance of the certificate of conversion by the Department of State, the corporate existence of the converted company as a domestic mutual life company shall begin, and its corporate existence as a stock life company shall end. The certificate of conversion shall be evidence that such mutual life company is a duly incorporated mutual life company under the laws of this Commonwealth, in the same manner and effect as a certificate of incorporation of a mutual life company is evidence that such company has been duly incorporated pursuant to the provisions of this act.

Section 1014. Rights of Dissenting Shareholders of Stock Life Company Converted into Mutual Life Company.—The mutual life company into which the stock life company has been converted shall be liable to any shareholder of the stock life company has been converted shall be liable to any shareholder of the stock life company who has objected to the plan of conversion according to the method provided by this act in the case of a merger or consolidation, for any amount due him, as the dissenting shareholder, under the provisions of this act which relate to the dissenting shareholders of a company which merges or consolidates.

Section 1015. Cancellation of Stock in Converted Life Companies.—When any domestic mutual life company which has been converted from a stock life company, pursuant to the provisions of this article, has acquired all of the shares of the capital stock of such stock life company, as hereinbefore provided in this article, the shares shall be duly cancelled by such mutual life company. Notice of such cancellation shall be given by duplicate certificates executed by the secretary, and under the seal, of the company. One duplicate certificate shall be filed with the Insurance Department, and the other shall be filed with the Department of State. When such duplicate certificates have been filed, all the rights of the shareholders of the former stock company in the property or assets thereof shall be terminated.

Section 1016. Notice of Qualification to Commence Business; Certificate of Authority to do Business.—A. The president or secretary of any domestic mutual life company which has been converted under this act from a domestic stock life company shall notify the Department, in writing, that the mutual company is qualified to commence business, after a certificate of cancellation of all shares in the former stock company has been filed with the Department, and after proper reserves required by this act of all domestic mutual life companies have been established by such mutual company.

B. If after receiving notice, as hereinbefore provided, that a company is qualified to commence business, the Department as a result of its examination finds that the company has complied with the provisions of this act, it shall issue to such a company a certificate of authority to do business in this Commonwealth as a domestic mutual life company. As soon as the company receives such certificate of authority, it may issue policies and otherwise transact the business of insurance as a domestic mutual life company.

C. Provisions Relating to Mutual Companies

Section 1017. Assessments on Unpaid Subscriptions to Guarantee Capital.—Every person subscribing to the guarantee capital of any domestic mutual life company, organized under this act, shall give to the company his promissory note, in such form as its by-laws prescribe, for the unpaid moiety of the guarantee capital so subscribed, which note shall be liable to any assessment or assessments, from time to time, as are deemed necessary by the directors or trustees of the company for the successful transaction of its business. Such assessments may be made to meet the losses, expenses, insurance reserve, and other obligations of such company, until the total amount specified in such note is paid. All assessments shall be made pro rata upon the entire amount of unpaid subscriptions, and, if any assessments are not paid, they shall be collected by suit at law, as similar debts may be collected.

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 426, 40 PS Sec. 611.

Section 1018. Interest on Subscriptions to Guarantee Capital.—The subscribers to the guarantee capital of any domestic mutual life company shall be entitled to receive from such company, interest payable semiannually at any rate not exceeding six per centum, as is agreed upon at the time of making the subscription. The company may pay interest on such subscriptions only out of the net surplus in excess of the requisite reservation for liabilities and contingencies. If the net surplus is not sufficient to pay the amount of interest originally agreed upon, the amount by which the net surplus was deficient shall be paid to the subscribers when the profits of the company are sufficient.

Section 1020. Surplus or Safety Fund.—A. Any domestic mutual life company may establish and maintain, or, if it is already established, may continue to maintain, a surplus or safety fund in an amount not in excess of either ten per centum of its reserve, or one hundred thousand dollars, whichever is greater, and in addition, thereto, the excess, if any, of the market value of its securities over their book value.

B. Where the surplus or safety fund existing at the present time, exclusive of all accumulations held on account of the outstanding deferred dividend policies, exceeds the limit hereinbefore designated, the company shall be entitled to retain such surplus or safety fund at its present amount, but shall not be entitled to add thereto so long as its exceeds such limit.

C. The Department may, at any time, permit any company which presents reasons therefor to accumulate and maintain a surplus or safety fund in excess of the limit hereinbefore mentioned, for a prescribed period not exceeding one year. The decision of the Department granting permission to maintain such fund, and the reasons therefor, shall be filed in the office of the Department.

D. Previously Organized Companies

Section 1021. Certain Companies Heretofore Organized May Come within Provisions of Act.—Stock companies heretofore organized under the act of April twenty-eighth, one thousand nine hundred and three (Pamphlet Laws, three hundred twenty-nine), entitled "An act to provide for the incorporation and regulation of corporations for the purpose of making insurance upon the health of individuals, and against personal injury and disablement and death therein; limiting the amount for which such corporations may issue policies, and providing the manner in which certain existing corporations may become re-incorporated under this act," having a paid-up capital of not less than three hundred thousand dollars, and a paid-in surplus at least equal to fifty per centum of the subscribed capital, shall have the same powers to insure lives and make contracts of insurance and annuity as are hereinbefore in this act granted to stock life companies.[1]

ARTICLE XI

LIFE INSURANCE

A. Reserve Liability for Life Insurance

Section 1101. Computation of Reserve Liability.—A. The reserve liability of every life company authorized to transact business in this Commonwealth shall be computed in accordance with the terms of its policies or contracts, and the rules hereinafter set forth.

B. The net value of a policy of life insurance at any time shall be taken to be the single net premium which will, at that time, effect the insurance, less the value at that time of the future net premiums called for by the table of mortality and rate of interest designated for each of the following groups of policies:

(1) The net value of all outstanding policies of life insurance, issued by the company prior to the first day of January, one thousand eight hundred ninety, shall be computed upon the basis of the American experience table of mortality, with interest at not less than four and one-half, and not more than six, per centum per annum.

(2) The net value of all outstanding policies, issued between the first day of January, one thousand eight hundred ninety, and the first day of January, one thousand nine hundred three, shall be computed on the combined experience or actuaries' table of mortality, with interest at four per centum per annum.

(3) The net value of all outstanding policies of life insurance, issued on and after the first day of January, one thousand nine hundred three, shall be computed on the American experience table of mortality, with interest at three and one-half per centum per annum; however, any company may value its group term insurance policies, under which premium rates are not guaranteed for a period in excess of five years, according to the American men ultimate table of mortality, with interest at three and one-half per centum per annum.

(4) The net value of all policies of life insurance, issued on and after January first, one thousand nine hundred twenty-one, where the premiums are payable monthly or oftener, shall be valued according to the American experience table of mortality, with interest at three and one-half per centum per annum; however, any company may voluntarily value its industrial policies acocrding to the standard industrial mortality table, with interest at three and one-half per centum per annum.

Any life company may, however, at any time elect to calculate the value of its policies on the basis of the American experience table of mortality, with a lower rate of interest, but at a rate not less than three per centum, and its policy obligation shall thereafter be valued accordingly.

C. The legal minimum standard for valuation of annuities issued after January one, one thousand nine hundred twelve, shall be McClintock's table of mortality among annuitants, with interest at three and one-half per centum per annum, or the valuation standard for annuities, if any company so elects, may be the combined annuity tables at four per centum;[1] but annuities deferred ten or more years, and written in connection with life or term insurance, may[2] be valued upon the same mortality table from which the consideration or premiums were computed, with interest not higher than three and one-half per centum per annum.

D. The aggregate net value of the insurance policies and annuity contracts of any life company, ascertained pursuant to the provisions of this section, shall be the reserve liability of such company. Each life company shall provide for its reserve liability by holding in proper legal investments, as hereinbefore provided by this act, a balance equal to the amount by which such net value exceeds all the other liabilities of such company.

E. The provisions of this section shall not apply to companies or associations transacting business on the mutual assessment plan.

Pennsylvania Insurance Department Act of 1921, Section 301, 40 PS Sec. 71.

Comments:

Refer to Section 601 of the proposed Insurance Department Code, wherein the duty to compute the reserve liability of life insurers is imposed upon the Department.

1. The purpose of this addition to the existing law is to permit the use of the combined annuity tables with interest at 4 per cent. in lieu of the obsolete McClintock's Table. The combined annuity tables have been prescribed by other states such as New York and Massachusetts and the permissive use in Pennsylvania will dispense with the unnecessary labor and expense involved in valuing on two bases.

2. In this section, "may" is substituted for "shall" in the present law, so as to make the valuation basis for supplementary deferred annuities permissive instead of compulsory; this agrees with the corresponding provision of the New York Law.

Section 1102. Separate Liability of Companies Charging Less than Net Premiums Computed on Mortality Tables; Unlawful to Issue Policies Below Rate Fixed in Mortality Tables.—When the actual premium charged for an insurance policy by any life company doing business in the Commonwealth is less than the net premium for such policy, computed according to the table of mortality and rate of interest hereinbefore prescribed in this article, such company shall be charged, as a separate liability, with the value of an annuity, the amount of which shall equal the difference between the actual premium charged and the net premium, and the term of which, in years, shall equal the number of future annual payments due on such insurance at the date of the valuation. The actual premium charged for an insurance policy in this Commonwealth shall not be less than the net premium for such policy, computed according to the American experience table of mortality, with interest at four per centum per annum; however, in the case of group term insurance policies, valued according to the American men ultimate table of mortality, with interest at three and one-half per centum per annum, as hereinbefore permitted by this article, premiums may be charged in any amount not less than the net premium according to the American men ultimate table of mortality, with interest at three and one-half per centum per annum.

Section 1103. Amortization in Valuation of Securities.—All bonds or other evidences of debt held by life companies authorized to do business in this Commonwealth may, if amply secured, and if not in default as to principal or interets, be valued as follows: If purchased at par, at the par value; if purchased above or below par, on the basis of the purchase price adjusted so as to bring the value at maturity, and so as to yield meantime the effective rate of interest at which the purchase was made, but the purchase price shall in not case be taken at a greater value than the actual market value at the time of purchase. Any such company may return, in its financial statements and reports to the Department, such bonds or other evidences of debt at their market value or their book value, but in no case at an aggregate value exceeding the aggregate of the values calculated according to the foregoing rule.

This section shall not be construed to require any life company authorized to do business in this Commonwealth, which shall not elect to value its bonds and other evidences of debt by amortization, as herein provided, to do so, but any company or society electing to adopt the amortized basis shall continue to have its bonds valued upon that basis.

Comments:

Refer to Section 604 of the proposed Insurance Department Code, wherein the Department is given full discretion in determining the method or calculating the values of bonds, etc., of all insurers.

Section 1104. Procedure in Case of Impairment of Reserve Liability.—Any life company which has received notice from the Department that its reserve liability, after all other debts and claims against it, including fifty per centum of its capital, have been deducted, has been impaired, shall not issue new policies, under its authority to do business in this Commonwealth, until its funds have become equal to its liabilities and it has obtained from the Department a certificate to that effect, with authority to resume business.

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 408, 40 PS Sec. 508.

Comments:

Refer to Section 602 of the proposed Insurance Department Code, wherein it is provided that the Department shall notify life insurers to issue no new policies until their funds become equal to their liabilities, and that the Department may issue a certificate of authority to resume business.

B. Life Insurance Policies

Section 1105. Form of Policies to be Filed With Department.—No policy of life or endowment insurance or annuity contract shall be issued or delivered by any life company in this Commonwealth until a copy of the form thereof has been filed with the Department; nor shall any life company issue or deliver any such policy if the company receives notice, in writing, from the Department that, in its opinion, the form of such policy or contract does not comply with the requirements of the laws of this Commonwealth, for the reasons specified therein.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 409, 40 PS Sec. 509.

Section 1106. Uniform Policy Provisions.—A. A policy of life or endowment insurance or annuity contract, except policies of industrial insurance, shall not be issued or delivered in this Commonwealth by any life company, unless it contains, in substance, the following provisions:

(1) A provision that all premiums shall be payable in advance, either at the home office of the company or to an agent of the company, upon delivery of a receipt signed by one or more of the officers of the company, who shall be named in the policy.

(2) A provision that the insured is entitled to a period of grace, either of thirty days or one month, within which the payment of any premium after the first year may be made, subject, at the option of the company, to a maximum interest charge of six per centum per annum for the number of days of grace elapsing before the payment of the premium, during which period of grace the policy shall continue in full force; but in case the policy becomes a claim during the said period of grace, before the overdue premium, or the deferred premiums of the current policy year, if any, are paid, the amount of such premiums, with interest on any overdue premiums, may be deducted in any settlement under the policy.

(3) A provision that the policy shall be incontestable after it has been in force, during the lifetime of the insured, two years from its date of issue, except for nonpayment of premiums and for engaging in military or naval service in time of war without the consent in writing of an executive officer of the company.

(4) A provision that the policy shall constitute the entire contract between the parties; but if the company desires to make the application a part of the contract, it may do so, provided a copy of such application shall be endorsed upon or attached to the policy when issued, in which case the policy shall contain a provision that the policy and the application therefor shall constitute the entire contract between the parties.

(5) A provision that, if the age of the insured has been misstated, the amount payable under the policy shall be such as the premium would have purchased at the correct age.

(6) A provision that the policy shall participate in the surplus of the company, and that, beginning not later than the end of the third policy year, the company will annually determine the portion of the divisible surplus accruing on the policy, and that the owner of the policy shall have the right to have the dividend arising from such participation paid in cash, or applied to the payment of premium, or the purchase of paid-up additions to the policy, as the policyholder may elect.

In lieu of the foregoing provisions in this subsection, the policy may contain a provision that the policy shall participate in the surplus of the company, and that, beginning not later than the end of the tenth policy year, the company will determine the portion of the divisible surplus accruing on the policy, and that the owner of the policy shall have the right to have the current dividend arising from such participation paid in cash, and that, at periods of not more than five years thereafter such apportionment and payment, at the option of the policyholder, shall be had.

Renewable term policies of ten years or less may provide that the surplus accruing to such policies shall be determined and apportioned each year after the second policy year, and accumulated during each renewal period, and that at the end of any renewal period, or renewal of the policy by the insured, the company shall apply the accumulated surplus as an annuity for the next succeeding renewal term in the reduction of premiums.

(7) A provision specifying the options to which the policyholder is entitled in the event of default in a premium payment after three full annual premiums shall have been paid.

(8) In the case of a policy issued by a domestic company, a provision that after three full years premiums have been paid the company, at any time while the policy is in force, will advance, on proper assignment or pledge of the policy, and on the sole security thereof, at a specified rate of interest, a sum equal to, or, at the option of the owner of the policy, less than, the reserve at the end of the current policy year on the policy, and on any dividend additions thereto, less a sum not more than two and one-half per centum of the amount insured by the policy and of any dividend additions thereto; and that the company will deduct from such loan value any existing indebtedness on the policy, and any unpaid balance of the premium for the current policy year, and may collect interest in advance on the loan to the end of the current policy year; which provision may further provide that such loan may be deferred for not exceeding six months after the application therefor is made. A company may, in lieu of the provision hereinabove permitted for the deduction from a loan on the ploicy of a sum not more than two and one-half per centum of the amount insured by the policy and of any dividend additions thereto, insert in the policy a provision that one-fifth of the entire reserve may be deducted in case of a loan uder the policy; or may provide therein that the deduction may be the said two and one-half per centum, or the one-fifth of the said entire reserve, at the option of the company.

(9) A provision which, in event of default in premium payments after premiums shall have been paid for three years, shall secure to the owner of the policy a stipulated form of insurance, the net value of which shall be at least equal to the reserve at the date of default on the policy and on any dividend additions thereto, specifying the mortality table and rate of interest adopted fo rcomputing such reserves, less a sum not more than two and one-half per centum of the amount insured by the policy and of any existing dividend additions thereto, and less an yexisting indebtedness to the company on the policy. Such provision shall stipulate that the policy may be surrenderd to the company, at its home office, withi none month from date of default, for a specified cash value at least equal to the sum which woud otherwise be available for the purchase of insurance as aforesaid, and may stipulate that the company may defer payment for not more than six months after the application therefor is made. This provision shall not be required in term insurance of twenty years or less.

(10) A table showing in figures the loan value, if any, and the options available under the policy, each year, upon default in premium payments, during at least the first twenty years of the policy; and, if the proceeds of the policy are payable in installments or as an annuity, a table showing the amount of the instalment or annuity payments.

(11) A provision that the holder of a policy shall be entitled to have the policy reinstated, at any time within three years from the date of default in premium payments, unless the policy has been duly surredered or the extension period expired, upon the production of evidence of insurability satisfactory to the company, and the payment of all overdue premiums and any other indebtedness to the company upon said policy, with interest at the rate of not exceeding six per centum per annum.

(12) A provision that when a policy shall become a claim by the death of the insured settlement shall be made upon receipt of due proof of death.

B. Any of the foregoing provisions, or parts thereof, not applicable to single premium or non-participating or term policies, shall, to that extent, not be incorporated in such policies.

C. The policies of a foreign or alien company may contain, when issued in this Commonwealth any provision which is required by the laws of the state or country under which the company was organized. The policies of a domestic company may, when issued in any other state or foreign country, contain any provision required by the laws of such state or foreign country to be contained in policies issued therein.

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 410, 40 PS Sec. 510.

Section 1107. Prohibited Policy Provisions.—A policy of life or endowments insurance or annuity contracts shall not be issued or delivered in this Commonwealth by any life company, except policies of industrial insurance, if it contain any of the following provisions:

(1) Any provision for forfeiture of the policy for failure to repay any loan on the policy or to pay inerest on any such loan, while the total indebtedness on the policy is less than the cash value thereof. In ascertaining the indebtedness due upon the policy loan, the interest, if not paid when due, shall be added to the principal of such loan, and shall bear interest at the rate specified in the note or loan agreement.

(2) Any provision limiting the time within which any action at law or equity may be commenced to less than two years after the cause of action shall accrue.

(3) Any provision by which the policy shall purport to be issued or to take effect more than six months before the original application for the insurance was made.

(4) Any provision for a mode of settlement at maturity of less value than the amount insured on the face of the policy, plus dividend additions, if any, less the indebtedness to the company on the policy, and less any premiums that may by the terms of the policy be deducted.

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 411, 40 PS Sec. 511.

Section 1108. Exchange, Alteration and Conversion of Policies.—Any life company may, at the request of a policyholder, exchange, alter or convert any policy of life or endowment insurance issued by it, for or into any policy conforming with the laws in force, either when the original policy was issued, if the rewritten policy bears the date thereof, or when the exchange, alteration, or conversion is effected, if the rewritten policy bears the current date thereof. If a rewritten policy bears the date of the original policy, the amount of insurance specified in such rewritten policy shall not exceed the amount of insurance in effect under such original policy, or the amount of insurance which the premium required by the original policy would have purchased if the rewritten policy had been originally applied for, whichever is greater. Nothing contained in this act shall be construed as prohibiting the exchange, alteration, or conversion of policies provided by this section.

Section 1109. Industrial Policies.—A. Every policy of industrial insurance issued in this Commonwealth after the effective date of this act, shall designate the name of the beneficiary to whom the proceeds of the policy are to be paid when the insured dies, and the relationship of such beneficiary to the insured.[1]

B. No policy of industrial life insurance, wherein the premiums are payable monthly or more frequently, shall be issued in this Commonwealth after the effective date of this act, if it contains any provision by which the company may deny liability under the policy for the reason that the insured has previously obtained other insurance from the same company.[2]

Comments:

These provisions relating to industrial policies are new.

1. This provision, requiring that the name of the beneficiary be named in the policy, has been included here to remedy the present situation in industrial insurance, wherein one person may retain the policy while the other person has the receipt books and pays the premiums. Frequently the premiums are paid by several people, and, consequently, the companies cannot definitely determine who is entitled to the proceeds.

2. Practically every form of industrial policy in use today contains a clause which exempts the company from liability if the insured has previously obtained insurance from the same company, unless a waiver of the provision is endorsed on the policy. Many people who take out industrial policies are not informed of, or do not understand, these provisions, and as a result may be cheated out of their insurance by an unscrupulous company. Insurance companies should know whether a person has been previously insured by them, and it, therefore, seems that this section is necessary.

Section 1110. Antedating of Policies Prohibited.—No policy of life insurance shall be issued or delivered in this Commonwealth if it shall purport to be issued or to take effect before the application for the insurance was made, if in this manner the applicant would obtain a rate at an age younger than at the date when the application was made, according to his age at the nearest birthday.

Insurance Laws of Connecticut, Section 4189.

Section 1111. Certain Corporations and Associations May Be Made Beneficiaries.—Any life company doing business in this Commonwealth may issue policies of insurance, predicated upon the life or lives of any person or persons, which are payable at maturity, to any educational, ecclesiastical, benevolent, charitable, or eleemosynary corporation which can legally take and receive testamentary legacies, irrespective of a financial interest on the part of such corporation in the life of the person or persons insured.

Insurance Laws of Connecticut, Section 4192.

Comments:

This section is new. It is included in this draft in order to relax the provision contained in section 1119 of this draft relative to insurable interest to the extent of permitting charitable institutions to benefit by life insurance of a donor.

C. Group Life Insurance

Section 1112. Definition of Group Life Insurance.—A. Group life insurance is hereby declared to be that form of life insurance covering not less than fifty employes, with or without medical examination, written under a policy issued to the employer, the premium on which is to be paid by the employer, or by the employer and employes jointly, and insuring only all of his employes, or all of any class or classes, thereof determined by conditions pertaining to the employment, for amounts of insurance based upon some plan which will preclude individual selection, for the benefit of persons other than the employer. When the premium is to be paid by the employer and employe jointly, and the benefits of the policy are offered to all eligible employes, not less than seventy-five per centum of such employes may be so insured.

B. The following forms of life insurance are hereby declared to be group life insurance within the meaning of this act:

(1) Life insurance covering the members of one or more companies, batteries, troops, battalions, divisions, or other units of the National Guard or naval militia of any state, written under a policy issued to the commanding general of the National Guard, or commanding officer of the naval militia, as the case may be, who shall be deemed to be the employer for the purposes of this act, the premium on which is to be paid by the members of such units, for the benefit of persons other than the eployer; however, when the benefits of the policy are offered to all eligible members of the National Guard or naval militia, not less than seventy-five per centum of the members of such a unit may be so insured.

(2) Life insurance covering the members of one or more troops, or other units, of the state troopers, or state police, of any state, written under a policy issued to the commanding officer of the state troopers or state police, who shall be deemed to be the employer for the purposes of this act, the premium on which is to be paid by the members of such units, for the benefit of persons other than the employer; however, when the benefits of the policy are offered to all eligible members of a unit of the state troopers or state police, not less than seventy-five per centum of the members of such a unit may be so insured.

(3) Life insurance covering the members of any labor union or organization of police employed by any municipal, county or state authority, any organization or association of state employes,[1] or public school teachers or nurses, written under a policy issued to such union or organization, which shall be deemed to be the employer for the purposes of this act, the premium on which is to be paid by the union or organization, or by the union or organization and its members jointly, and insuring its members for the amounts of insurance based upon some plan which will preclude individual selection, for the benefit of persons other than the union or organization or the officials of either; however, when the premium is to be paid by the union or organization and its members jointly, and the benefits are offered to all eligible members, not less than seventy-five per centum of such members may be so insured. When members apply and pay for additional amounts of insurance, a smaller percentage of members may be insured for such additional amounts if they pass satisfactory medical examinations.

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 415, 40 PS Sec. 531.

Comments:

1. At the present time group insurance is not available to groups of state employes; this section permits them to be insured.

The Act of June 22, 1931, P. L. 844, Section 1, 40 PS Sec. 535, provides as follows:

"The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, or any department or division thereof, and any county, city borough, incorporated town, township, school district or poor district, now or hereafter authorized by law to make appropriations or contributions for any such purpose, may make contracts of insurance with any insurance company authorized to transact business within the Commonwealth insuring its employes or any class or classes thereof under a policy or policies of group insurance covering life, health, or accident insurance, and may contract with any such company granting annuities or pensions for the pensioning of such employes; and for such purposes, may agree to pay part or all of the premiums or charges for crarying such contracts, and may appropriate out of its treasury any money necessary to pay such premiums or charges or portions thereof."

This act is not included in this proposed code, because it is primarily an enabling act whereby the Commonwealth and municipalities may take out group insurance for their employes.

Refer to Section 1613 of this act, relating to group health and accident insurance.

Section 1113. Standard Provisions for Policies of Group Life Insurance.—A. No policy of group life insurance shall be issued or delivered in this Commonwealth, unless a copy of the form thereof has been filed with the Department and formally approved by it, nor shall such policy be issued or delivered uhless it contains in substance the following provisions:

(1) A provision that the policy shall be incontestable after two years from its date of issue, except for nonpayment of premiums, and except for violation of the conditions of the policy relating to military or naval service in time of war.

(2) A provision that the policy, the application of the employer, and the individual applications, if any, of the employes insured, shall constitute the entire contract between the parties, and that all statements made by the employer, or by the individual employes, shall, in the absence of fraud, be deemed representations and hot warranties, and that no such statement shall be used in defense to a claim under the policy unless it is contained in a written application.

(3) A provision for the equitable adjustment of the premium, or the amount of insurance payable, in the event of a misstatement of the age of an employe.

(4) A provision that the company will issue to the employer, for delivery to the employe whose life is insured under such policy, an individual certificate, setting forth a statement as to the insurance protection to which he is entitled, to whom payable, together with provision to the effect that, in case of the termination of the employment for any reason whatsoever, the employe shall be entitled to have issued to him by the company, without evidence of the insurability, and upon application made to the company within thirty-one days after such termination, and upon the payment of the premium applicable to the class of risks, to which he belongs, and to the form and amount of the policy at his then attained age, a policy of life insurance in any one of the forms customarily issued by the company, except term insurance, in an amount equal to the amount of his protection under such group insurance policy at the time of such termination.

(5) A provision that the group or class thereof originally insured shall be added, from time to time, all new employes of the employer eligible to insurance in such group or class.

B. Except as provided in this act, it shall be unlawful to make a contract of life insurance covering a group in this Commonwealth.

C. Policies of group life insurance issued in this Commonwealth by any foreign or alien company may also contain, when issued, any provision required by the law of the state or foreign country under which the company was organized; and policies issued in other states or foreign countries by domestic companies may also contain any provision required by the laws of the state or foreign country in which such policies are issued.

D Any policy of group life insurance may be issued or delivered in this Commonwealth, which, in the opinion of the Department, contains provisions on any one or more of the several foregoing requirements more favorable to the employer or to the employe than hereinbefore required by this section.

Comments:

Refer to Section 618 of The Insurance Company Law of 1921, relating to standard provisions in health and accident policies.

Section 1114. Premium for Group Insurance; Records of Experience of Company.—Life companies shall not issue any policy of group life insurance in this Commonwealth, the premium for which shall be less than the net premium based on the American men ultimate table of mortality, with interest at three and one-half per centum per annum, plus a loading, the formula for the computation of which shall be determined by the Department. All policies of group insurance shall be segregated into a separate class, and the mortality experience kept separate. Any such policy may, however, anything in this act to the contrary notwithstanding, provide for a readjustment of the rate, based on experience at the end of the first, or any subsequent year of insurance, which readjustment may be made retroactive for such policy year only.

The number of policies, amount of insurance, reserves, premiums and payments to policyholders thereunder, together with the mortality table and interest assumption adopted by the company, shall be reported separately in the company's annual statement.

D. Rights of Creditors in Proceeds of Policies and Annuities

Section 1116. Exemption of Group Insurance from Execution.—No policy of group insurance, nor the proceeds thereof which have been paid to any employe or employes thereunder, shall be liable to attachment, garnishment, or other process, or liable to be seized, taken, appropriated, or applied by any legal or equitable process or by operation of law to pay any debt or liability of such employe, or his beneficiary, or any other person, who may have a right under such policy, either before or after payment. The proceeds of such policy of group insurance, when not made payable to a named beneficiary, shall not constitute a part of the estate of the employe for the payment of his debts.

Section 1117. Retaining Proceeds Under Policy; Anticipating or Alienating; Rights of Creditors. — Whenever, under the terms of any contract of annuity or policy of life insurance, or under any written agreement supplemental thereto, issued by any life company lawfully doing business in this Commonwealth, the proceeds are retained by such company at maturity, or otherwise, the person entitled to any part of such proceeds, or any instalment of interest due or to become due thereon, shall not be permitted to commute, anticipate, encumber, alienate, or assign such proceeds, or any part thereof, if permission to do so is expressly denied by the terms of such policy or supplemental agreement. Payments of interest or of principal under such policy or supplemental agreement shall not be in any way subject to such person's debts or contracts, or to any judicial process issued because of them, if such payments are exempted in this manner by the provisions of the policy or supplemental agreement.

Comments:

The present act, above referred to, also provided that the company was not required to segregate the proceeds retained by it, but had the authority to hold them as part of its general corporate funds. This provision is now contained in Section 1005 of this draft.

Section 1118. Exemption of Insurance Policies and Annuities, and the Proceeds Thereof.—A. Any contract of annuity or policy of life insurance hereafter issued to any solvent citizen in this Commonwealth by any life company, lawfully doing business in this Commonwealth, whereby the insured or purchaser of the annuity shall be the beneficiary or annuitant, shall be exempt and free and clear from the claims of all the creditors of such beneficiary or annuitant and from all legal and judicial processes of execution, attachment, or otherwise whatsoever, if the income or return does not exceed One Hundred Dollars per month.

B. The net amount payable under any policy of life insurance or under any annuity, contract upon the life of any person, heretofore or hereafter made for the benefit of, or assigned to, the wife or children or dependent relative of such person, shall be exempt from all claims of the creditors of such person arising out of or based upon any obligation created after the passage of this act, whether or not the right to change the named beneficiary is reserved by or permitted to such person.

C. This section shall not be construed to affect, modify, or repeal in any manner any exemption laws of this Commonwealth which are now in force or may hereafter be passed.

E. Miscellaneous Provisions Relating to Life Insurance

Section 1119. Application for Insurance; Insurable Interest.—No policy or agreement for insurance shall be issued by any life company in this Commonwealth unless upon the application of the person insured. A person liable for the support of a child may take out a policy of insurance on such child; and persons, partnerships, business associations and corporations may insure the lives and health of officers, directors, principals, partners, and employes, without the signing of a personal application as hereinbefore in this section required. Any person may insure his own life for the benefit of any person, partnership, business association, or corporation, but no person shall cause the life of another to be insured unless the beneficiary named in such policy or agreement of life insurance, whether himself or a third person, has an insurable interest in the life of the insured. An insurable interest, within the meaning of this section, is that interest which, in the case of persons related with the insured by blood or in law, is engendered by love and affection, and, in, the case of other persons, is a lawful economic interest in having the life of the insured continue, as distinguished from an interest which arises only after the death of the insured.

Section 1120. Minors May Enter into Insurance Contracts and Have Full Rights, Powers and Privileges Thereunder.—All minors in this Commonwealth of the age of eighteen years and upwards, shall have full power and authority to make all needful contracts to become members of any life company authorized to do business in this Commonwealth, and shall have all the powers, rights, and privileges of ownership of any and all life insurance policies or annuity contracts applied for or issued to them, together with full power to surrender, assign, pledge or receive dividends, or modify or change such contracts, and any other powers which persons who are twenty-one years of age have relative to similar policies and contracts.

Section 1121. Misrepresentation or False Statements for the Purpose of Securing Insurance; Penalty.—Any agent of a life company, or any physician or other person whatsoever, who shall knowingly make, or be concerned or interested in making, any misrepresentation or false statement for the purpose of securing, from any life company, a policy of insurance upon his own life or the life of any other person, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, be fined not exceeding One Thousand Dollars, or undergo imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both.

Comments:

Section 414 of the Insurance Company Law of 1921, as amended by the Act of June 23, 1931, P. L. 904, provided, in addition to this section, the following:

"* * * or, upon satisfactory evidence of the violation of this section by any agent or solicitor of any insurance company, association, or exchange, or by any insurance broker, or excess insurance broker, the Insurance Commissioner may, in his discretion, take, against the offending party, any one or more of the following courses of action; (1) Suspend or revoke the license of such offending solicitor or agent, insurance broker, or excess insurance broker; (2) refuse, for a period of not to exceed one year thereafter, to issue a new license to such offending agent, solicitor, broker, or excess insurance broker; (3) impose a penalty of not more than one thousand dollars for each act of violation of this section. When the Insurance Commissioner shall have taken any action as above set forth, the party aggrieved may appeal to the court of common pleas of Dauphin County."

These additional provisions are covered by Section 1204 of the proposed Insurance Department Code.

ARTICLE XII

STOCK FIRE, STOCK MARINE, AND STOCK FIRE AND MARINE INSURANCE COMPANIES

Section 1201. Procedure When Capital Impaired.—A. Any stock fire, stock marine, and stock fire and marine company which has received notice from the Department that its capital is impaired, shall not issue new policies, under its authority to do business in this Commonwealth, until its admitted assets have become equal to its liabilities and it has obtained from the Department a certificate to that effect, with authority to resume business.

B. Such company shall immediately give notice to its shareholders, in a manner approved by the Department, that they are required to pay a designated amount per share. The total amount required of the shareholders shall be sufficient to restore its capital to the amount fixed by its articles. In case any shareholder neglects or refuses to pay the amount called for, the company shall require the return of the original share certificate held by such shareholder, and, in lieu thereof, issue new certificates in the proportion that the ascertained value of the assets of the company may, as determined by the Department, bear to the original capital.[1] The directors may create new capital stock, issue share certificates therefor, and dispose of them at not less than par, for an amount sufficient to make up the original capital. The Department may, in its discretion, permit the company in lieu of the creation of new stock to reduce its capital and the par value of its shares shall at no time be reduced in this manner to an amount less than that required by law for the organization of any such company. In fixing such reduced capital, no part of the assets on hand, deducted from the original capital,[2] shall be distributed to shareholders.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 520, 40 PS Sec. 655.

Comments:

1. The existing law here provides in addition, "the company paying for any fractional parts of shares." It does not seem proper to permit the company to do this.

2. The existing law restricts the amount which may be deducted from the asests on hand, to be retained as surplus funds, to fifty per centum of the original capital. This is omitted from this section, because in effect it does not permit the reduction of the capital to the legal minimum where the company has a capital more than twice as large as the minimum required by this act.

Section 1202. Unearned Premium Reserve Liability.—A. Every fire, marine, and fire and marine insurer transacting business in this Commonwealth shall at all times maintain reserves equal in amount to its unearned premium liability, unless it is provided otherwise by this act.

B. In determining its unearned premium liability, such insurer shall charge for fire insurance the unearned portions of the gross premiums due or paid upon all policies which cover unexpired risks, and such unearned portions shall be computed on a monthly pro rata basis. The Department may, in its discretion, require that such unearned portions of the gross premiums shall be computed on each respective risk from the date of the issuance of the policy covering such risk. If the Department believes that either of these methods of computing the unearned portions of gross premiums is not practicable or advisable, it may, in its discretion, permit such insurer to compute its unearned premium liability by charging one-half of the premiums on all policies covering risks for one year or less, and by charging, on policies covering risks for one year or less, and by charging, on policies covering risks for more than one year, one-half of the premium for the first year, together with the whole of the premiums for subsequent years. Under any method of calculation, the insurer shall charge for perpetual fire insurance the difference between the cash deposit received and a surrender charge not exceeding ten per centum of such deposit.

C. In determining its unearned premium liability, such insurer shall charge for marine and inland insurance the unearned portions of the gross premiums due or paid upon all policies which cover unexpired risks, and such unearned portions shall be computed on a monthly pro rata basis. The Department may, in its discretion, require that such unearned portions of the gross premiums shall be computed on each respective risk from the date of the issuance of policy covering such risk. If the Department believes that either of these methods of computing the unearned portions of gross premiums is not practicable or advisable, it may, in its discretion, permit such insurer to compute its unearned premium liability by charging one-half of the premiums on all policies covering risks for one year or less, and risks covering more than one passage not terminated, and by charging the full amount of the premiums on all policies upon all other marine and inland risks not terminated.

Comments:

At the present time the law provides for an arbitrary fifty per centum of the current year's premiums, without consideration being given to the actual unearned premium, as it might be determined on a pro rata basis. The revised annual statement blanks which have been prepared and issued by the National Convention of Insurance Commissioners, indicate that the Pennsylvania law is at variance with the requirements of a number of other states. These blanks previously provided a column specifically labeled "Unearned Premiums—50 Per Centum." For the past two years these uniform blanks have eliminated the fifty per centum definition, substituting in its place a footnote requiring that the basis used be stated. This change is a positive indication that a more exact method of computation than the fifty per centum method has the approval of a majority of the supervising insurance officials of the country. With the more refined methods of statistical recording now in use in most companies, it seems that the Pennsylvania law could readily be amended to permit the use of proper actuarial data, instead of providing an arbitrary factor which may work to the advantage or disadvantage of a particular company.

The statutes of many other states permit the commissioner to determine the proper basis of computation. The Connecticut Insurance Laws, Section 4139, provide as follows:

"Each insurance company transacting business in this state shall, at all times, maintain reserves equal in amount to its liability under all its policy contracts, as the same shall be computed in accordance with the provisions of the statutes or with the requirements of the commissioner adopted upon reasonable consideration of ascertained experience for the purpose of adequately protecting the insured or securing the solvency of such company."

The New York Insurance Law, in Section 86(1)A, provides as follows for the reserve liability of casualty or surety insurance:

"A premium reserve on policies in force, equal to fifty per centum of the gross premiums charged for covering the risks, provided that the superintendent may, in his discretion, charge a premium reserve equal to the unearned portions of the gross premiums charged, computed on each respective risk from the date of issuance of the policy."

By ruling of the superintendent, casualty companies under the New York Law compute their premium reserve as being equal to the unearned portion of the gross premium charged, computed pro rata in groups according to the month of issuance of the policy.

The Michigan Insurance Laws, Section 12585 clearly sets forth that the pro rata unearned premium is the proper basis of computation, the law directing that the Commissioner of Insurance:

"* * * shall compute the unearned premium reserve to be maintained by such companies on a monthly pro rata basis, that is, a liability shall be set forth for the unearned monthly pro rata portion of the aggregate premiums on all unexpired risks * * *"

Another state in which the method is left in the hands of the Commissioner is Oregon. The law states:

"In ascertaining its liabilities, * * *, there shall be charged * * * a sum equal to the total unearned premiums on the policies in force computed on a pro rata basis * * *. In determining the amount of such reserve or unearned premium liability, the insurance commissioner, his deputy or examiner may formulate such rules as he may deem proper and consistent with the law or he may adopt such rules as are used in other states or approved by the National Convention of Insurance Commissioners."

It appears that in several states where the unearned premium statute calls for a fifty per centum reserve, discretionary power has been exercised and annual statements are accepted on the more scientific and correct monthly pro rata basis.

Some companies may not have the necessary records for computation on a monthly pro rata basis, but that would not appear to be sufficient reason for requiring every company to use the less accurate fifty per centum basis. This section will enable the companies to compute their unearned premiums for Pennsylvania in the same manner as they now compute them for other states.

Section 1203. Additional Investment For Surplus.—A domestic stock, fire, stock marine, or stock fire and marine company may invest any of its surplus funds, in addition to the investments hereinbefore in this act authorized for domestic companies, in the capital of any similar company organized under the laws of this Commonwealth or of any other state solely to transact the same class of business in countries outside of the United States, if the company which makes the investment has one million dollars of capital and surplus. Such investment shall be limited to an amount not exceeding thirty per centum of the surplus of the company which makes the investment.

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 517, 40 PS Sec. 652.

Comments:

Refer to Section 1403 of this draft wherein similar provision for stock casualty companies is set forth. Under the present law, this investment may be made out of capital. It seems preferable to restrict such investments to surplus funds of the company, and thus eliminate another possibility of the impairment of capital.

ARTICLE XIII

FIRE INSURANCE

A. Provisions Relating to Domestic Mutual Fire Companies Organized Before May First, One Thousand Eight Hundred Seventy-Six

Section 1301. Reinsurance and Reserve of Certain Mutual Fire Companies.—It shall be lawful for mutual fire companies, organized prior to May first, one thousand eight hundred seventy-six, which by their charters are authorized to issue policies for cash premiums and without premium notes, to accumulate, out of the profit of their cash business, a reinsurance fund or reserve; but no such mutual company shall be deemed insolvent, nor shall the Department require such compnay to make an assessment upon its mutual policyholders, so long as it spremium notes in hand subject to assessment amount in gross to three per centum of the entire amount of insurance of said company in effect.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 533, 40 PS Sec. 673.

Section 1302. Conversion of Certain Domestic Mutual Fire Companies Into Stock Fire Companies.—A. Any domestic mutual fire company incorporated prior to May first, one thousand eight hundred seventy-six, which has accumulated in the course of its business not less than twenty thousand dollars over and above all liabilities, including the cash reserve required by law on cash risks, and which desires to set up capital stock, may be converted and transformed into a stock fire company, in the manner hereinafter provided in this article, if such conversion:

(1) Has been adopted by a resolution passed by the vote of a majority of the entire number of directors of such mutual company;

(2) Has been submitted to the Department and approved by it in writing:

(3) Has been approved by the vote of a two-thirds majority in interest of those policyholders of such company who attend a meeting of the policyholders called for the purpose of holding an eection for or against such plan. Such interest shall be determined by the amount of premiums paid, or premium notes given, at such meeting. Six weeks' previous notice of such meeting shall be given by the publication of an advertisement in a newspaper of general circulation publisehd in the county in which the principal office of the mutual company is located, and also by written or printed notice addressed and mailed to each policyholder.

B. If the approval of a vote of a two-thirds majority in interest of the policyholders is obtained, and due proof of such approval is made to the Department, the directors of the mutual company shall open books and receive subscriptions to the capital stock of the company, and otherwise proceed in the manner provided by this act for the incorporation of stock fire companies. No share of stock shall be disposed of or certificate issued therefor unles sthe actual par value has been paid to the company in cash. The policyholders of such mutual company shall have the first right to subscribe to its shares, subject to its equitable regulations prescribed by the directors or trustees. The surplus of such mutual company shall not be disturbed, but shall remain intact as the surplus of the stock company. The mutual policies and all the rights and liabilities attached thereto, and all the powers and obligations of such mutual company relating thereto, shall survive and be obligations of the stock company, as long as such policies remain in force. When such policies have expired, the company shall be subject in all respects to the provisions of this act, in the same manner as if it were originally incorporated under this act. No fire company shall insure upon both the stock and mutual plan, except as is provided in this section.

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 534, 40 PS Sec. 674.

Comments:

The remainder of this subsection of this article deals with the conversion of these particular mutual fire companies into stock companies. The procedure is similar in many respects to that followed in the conversion of stock life companies into mutual life companies, as found in Sections 1007 to 1016 inclusive of this draft.

Section 1303. Articles of Conversion.—Upon the approval, pursuant to the provisions of this article, of the plan of conversion, triplicate originals of the articles of conversion shall be executed, under the seal of the mutual fire company which proposes to become converted into a stock fire company, by two of its duly authorized officers, and shall set forth:

(1) The proposed name of the stock fire company.

(2) The exact location of the principal office of the mutual fire company and of the stock fire company into which it plans to become converted.

(3) A copy of the plan of conversion.

(4) A copy of the resolution of the board of directors adopting such plan.

(5) The time and place of the meeting of the policyholders at which the plan was approved, proof of publication of the notices hereinbefore required in this article for such meetings, and the vote of the policyholders by which the plan was adopted.

(6) The number, names and addresses of the persons to be the first directors of the stock fire company.

Section 1304. Filing of Articles of Conversion; Payment of Fees; Approval by Department of State.—A. The triplicate originals of the articles of conversion of a mutual fire company into a stock fire company shall be delivered to the Department of State.

B. The Department of State shall examine such articles of conversion to determine whether they contain all the information and are in the form required by this act, and also whether the name of the proposed stock fire company conforms with the requirements of law for the name of such companies, or whether it is the same as one already adopted by another stock company, or is so similar thereto that it is likely to mislead the public.

If all the bonus, fees, taxes and other charges have been paid, as required by law, and if the articles of conversion contain the information, and are in the form, required by this act, the Department of State shall endorse its approval upon each of the triplicate originals of the articles of conversion, and shall forthwith transmit them to the Insurance Department.

C. If the Department of State shall disapprove the articles of conversion, pursuant to this act, it shall forthwith give notice of its disapproval to the mutual fire company, stating in detail the reasons for its disapproval, and stating how such company can remedy the noncompliance with the provisions of this act. Upon remedying the defect, such company may, in the same manner, file the same or amended articles of conversion, which ever the particular case may require.

Section 1305. Approval by the Insurance Department of Articles of Conversion.—A. The Insurance Department shall immediately, upon receipt from the Department of State of the articles of conversion of a mutual fire company into a stock fire company, conduct such examination as it may deem necessary to ascertain from the possible sources of information at its command:

(1) Whether the name of the proposed stock fire company is likely to mislead the public as to its character or purpose.

(2) Whether the conversion is made for legitimate purposes.

(3) Whether the interests of the creditors, policyholders, and members are adequately protected.

(4) Whether the proposed stock fire company meets all the requirements of this act and violates none of its prohibitions applicable to stock fire companies.

B. Within sixty days after the receipt of the articles of conversion from the Department of State, the Insurance Department shall, upon the basis of the facts disclosed by the investigation provided for by this section, either approve or disapprove such articles. It shall immediately notify the Department of State, in writing, of its action. If it shall approve the articles of conversion; it shall retain one of the triplicate originals and shall sign its approval upon the remaining two of them.

C. If the Insurance Department disapproves the articles of conversion, it shall return them to the Department of State, stating in detail its reasons for doing so. The Department of State shall immediately give notice to the mutual fire company desiring to become converted into a stock fire company of the action of the Insurance Department and of the reasons therefor, as stated by that Department. Such mutual fire company may, within thirty days after the Department of State sends the notice of the disapproval of its articles of conversion, appeal from such disapproval to the Governor, who shall hear such appeal promptly, and shall, within thirty days thereafter, decide the matter and certify his decision to the Insurance Department. The decision of the Governor shall be conclusive and not subject to review. The Insurance Department shall act in accordance therewith.

Section 1306. Issuance of Certificate of Conversion; Effect Thereof.—A. Immediately upon receipt of the two triplicate originals of the articles of conversion of a mutual fire company into a stock fire company from the Insurance Department, the Department of State shall file and record one of them and shall issue a certificate of conversion. The remaining triplicate of the articles of conversion shall be sent by the Department of State to the stock company, which shall then have such articles recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds of the county in which the principal place of business of such company is situated. The triplicate original of the articles of conversion, and the certificate, upon being recorded by the recorder of deeds, shall be returned to the company, and shall constitute the charter of such company.

B. Upon the issuance of the certificate of conversion by the Department of State, the corporate existence of the converted company as a domestic stock fire company shall begin, and its corporate existence as a mutual fire company shall end. The certificate of conversion shall be evidence that such stock fire company is a duly incorporated stock fire company under the laws of this Commonwealth, in the same manner and effect as a certificate o fincorporation of a stock fire company is evidence that such company has been duly incorporated pursuant to the provisions of this act.

Section 1307. Notice of Qualification to Commence Business; Certificate of Authority to do Business.—A. The president or secretary of any domestic stock fire company, which has been converted under this act from a domestic mutual fire company, shall notify the Department, in writing, that the stock fire company is qualified to commence business, after a certificate of cancellation of all shares in the formed mutual company has been filed with the Department, and after proper reserves required by this act of all domestic stock fire companies have been established by such converted stock company.

B. If after receiving notice, as hereinbefore provided, that a company is qualified to commence business, the Department as the result of its examination finds that the company has complied with the provisiosn of this act, it shall issue to such a company a certificate of authority to do business in this Commonwealth as a domestic stock fire company. As soon as the company receives such certificate of authority, it may issue policies and otherwise transact the business of insurance as a domestic stock fire company.

B. Fire Insurance Policies

Section 1308. Joint Fire Insurance Policies.—Two or more stock fire companies authorized to transact business in this Commonwealth may issue a joint policy, executed by the officers of each of such companies, which policy shall have a distinctive title, indicating the titles of the several companies obligated thereby. Such policy shall state that it is a joint contract, and tha each company is liable for only a specific percentage of any loss or damage occurring thereunder. Before any companies shall issue such joint policy, they shall first obtain the express approval of the Department to the issuance of such policy and the title thereof.

Section 1309. Cash Premium Policies of Certain Mutual Fire Companies, without Contingent Liability for Assessment, and Instead of Cash Deposits.—A. Any domestic mutual fire company, organized prior to May first, one thousand eight hundred seventy-six, having a surplus not less than the minimum capital required by this act for the organization of a domestic stock fire company and unearned premium reserve computed upon the same basis as that required by this act of domestic stock fire companies, may issue policies for a cash premium without any contingent liability for assessment.

B. Any such domestic mutual fire company incorporated by a special act of the Legislature, which has a surplus and unearned premium reserve, as hereinbefore required in this section, and whose charter provides for a premium deposti which shall remain as a pledge for the performance of the depositor's covenants, which deposit, under a provision of such charter, shall be returned to the depositor at the expiration of the policy, together with a proportional dividend of the profits after deducting losses and incidental charges, and whose charter further provides that the net profit, arising by interest or otherwise, shall be ascertained and allocated yearly to every member in proportion to his, her, or their deposit, for which each member shall have credit on the company's books, payable at the cancellation of the policy, may, instead of collecting such deposit money as above provided under such charter, charge a cash premium in advance on which no dividend or return shall be due or accrue, other than return premiums on cancelled policies.

C. The surplus of any domestic mutual fire companies, issuing policies in accordance with the provisions of this section shall be held as a reserve for the payment of losses and expenses; and, in the event of dissolution of the company, shall be divided pro rata among the policyholders whose policies are in force at the time of dissolution, but no policyholder, other than loss claimants, shall receive more than the amount of the unearned cash premium last paid to the company for the current term of such policy. Any balance remaining shall escheat to this Commonwealth.

Section 1310. Permitted Provisions in Standard Fire Policies.—Stock fire companies shall not issue fire insurance policies, except policies of perpetual insurance, on property in this Commonwealth, other than those of the standard form hereinafter in this article set forth, except as follows:

(1) A company may print on its policies its name, location, and date of incorporation; plan of operation; the amount of its paid-up capital stock; the names of its officers and agents; the number and date of the policy, and, if it is issued through an agent, the words "This policy shall not be valid until countersigned by the duly authorized agent of the company at .....".

(2) A company may print or use in its policies printed forms of descriptions and specifications of the property insured.

(3) A domestic company may print in its policies any provisions which it is authorized or required by law to insert therein; and any foreign or alien company may, with the approval of the Department, in like manner print any provisions required by its charter or deed of settlement, or by the laws of its own state or country, not contrary to the laws of this Commonwealth; but the Department shall require any provision which, in its opinion, modifies the contract of insurance in such way as to affect the question of loss to be appended to the policy by a slip or rider, as hereinafter provided.

(4) The blanks in said standard form may be filled in print or writing.

(5) A company may print upon policies issued in compliance with the preceding provisions of this section the words "Pennsylvania Standard Policy," and may include the name of any state or states which may adopt this form of policy.

(6) A company may write upon the margin or across the face of the policy, or print in type not less than seven point upon separate slips or riders to be attached thereto, provisions adding to or modifying those contained in the standard form, and all such slips and provisions must be signed by the officers or agents of the company so issuing them.

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 522, 40 PS Sec. 657.

Section 1311. Standard Fire Policy Form.—The standard form of policy to be issued by any stock fire company shall be plainly printed, and no portion thereof shall be in type smaller than the type used in printing the form on file in the office of the Department. The standard fire policy form shall be as follows:

No .....

(Insertion of name of company or companies issuing the policy and other matter permitted to be stated at the head of the policy.)

Amount, $.....; Rate .....; Premiums, ...

In consideration of the stipulations herein named, and of ..... dollars premium does insure .....and legal representatives to the extent of the actual cash value (ascertained with proper deductions for depreciation) of the property at the time of loss or damage, but not exceeding the amount which it would cost to repair or replace the same with material of like kind and quality within a reasonable time after such loss or damage, without allowance for any increased cost of repair or reconstruction by reason of any ordinance or law regulating construction or repair and without compensation for loss resulting from interruption of business or manufacture, for the term of ..... for the ..... day of ..... 19 ...., at noon, to the ..... day of ..... 19 .., at noon, against all direct loss and damage by fire, and by removal from premises endangered by fire, except as herein provided, to an amount not exceeding ..... dollars, to the following described property while located and contained as described herein, or pro rata for five days at each proper place to which any of the property shall necessarily be removed for preservation from fire, but not elsewhere, namely:

Description of Property

This policy is made and accepted subject to the foregoing stipulations, and conditions as may be endorsed hereon or added hereto as herein provided.

In witness whereof this company has executed and attested these presents.

(Date and signatures and titles of officers and agent.)

Fraud, Misrepresentation, Et Cetera

This entire policy shall be void if the insured has concealed or misrepresented any material fact or circumstances concerning this insurance or the subject thereof; or in case of any fraud or false swearing by the insured touching any matter relating to this insurance or the subject thereof, whether before or after a loss.

Property Uninsurable and Excepted

This policy shall not cover accounts, bills, currency, deeds, evidences of debt, money, notes or securities; nor, unless specifically named hereon in writing, bullion, manuscripts, mechanical drawings, dies, or patterns.

Hazards Not Covered

This company shall not be liable for loss or damage caused directly or indirectly by invasion, insurrection, riot, civil war, or commotion, or military or usurped power, or by order of any civil authority; or by theft; or by neglect of the insured to use all reasonable means to save and preserve the property at and after a fire, or when the property is endangerd by fire in neighboring premises.

This entire policy shall be void, unless otherwise provided by agreement in writing added hereto,—

Ownership, Et Cetera

(a) If the interest of the insured be other than unconditional and sole ownership; or (b) if the subject of insurance be a building on ground not owned by the insured in fee simple; or (c) if, with the knowledge of the insured, foreclosure proceedings be commenced, or notice given of sale of any property insured hereunder, by reason of any mortgage or trust deed; or (d) if any change other than by the death of an insured take place in the interest, title, or possession of the subject of insurance (except change of occupants without increase of hazard); or (e) if this policy be assigned before a loss.

Unless otherwise provided by agreement in writing added hereto, this company shall not be liable for loss or damage occurring,—

Other Insurance

(a) While the insured shall have any other contract of insurance, whether valid or not, on property covered in whole or in part by this policy; or

Increase of Hazard

(b) While the hazard is increased by any means within the control of the insured; or

Repairs, Et Cetera

(c) While mechanics are employed in building, altering, or repairing the described premises beyond a period of fifteen days; or

Explosives, Gas, Et Cetera

(d) While illuminating gas or vapor is generated on the described premises; or while (any usage or custom to the contrary notwithstanding) there is kept, used, or allowed on the described premises fireworks, Greek fire, phosphorous, explosives, benzine, gasoline, naptha, or any other petroleum product of greater inflamability than kerosene oil, gunpowder exceeding twenty-five pounds, or kerosene oil exceeding five barrels; or

Factories

(e) If the subject of insurance be a manufacturing establishment, while operated in whole or in part between the hours of ten post meridian and five ante meridian, or while it ceases to be operated beyond a period of ten days; or

Unoccupancy

(f) While a described building, whether intended for occupancy by owner or tenant, is vacant or unoccupied beyond a period of ten days; or

Explosion; Lightning

(g) By explosion or lightning, unless fire ensue, and in that event for loss or damage by fire only.

Chattel Mortgage

Unless otherwise provided by agreement in writing added hereto, this company shall not be liable for loss or damage to any property insured hereunder while encumbered by a chattel mortgage, and during the time of such encumbrance this company shall be liable only for loss or damage to any other property insured hereunder.

Fall of Building

If a building or any material part thereof fall, except as the result of fire, all insurance by this policy on such building or its contents shall immediately cease.

Added Clauses

The extent of the application of insurance under this policy and of the contribution to be made by this company in case of loss or damage, and any other agreement not inconsistent with or a waiver of any of the conditions or provisions of this policy, may be provided for by agreement in writing added thereto.

Waiver

No one shall have power to waive any provision or condition of this policy, except such as by the term of this policy may be the subject of agreement added thereto; nor shall any such provision or condition be held to be waived unless such waiver shall be in writing added hereto; nor shall any provision or condition of this policy, or any forfeiture, be held to be waived by any requirement, act, or proceeding, on the part of this company relating to appraisal or to any examination herein provided for; nor shall any privilege or permission affecting the insurance hereunder exist or be claimed by the insured unless granted herein or by rider added hereto.

Cancellation of Policy

This policy shall be cancelled at any time at the request of the insured; in which case the company shall, upon demand and surrender of this policy, refund the excess of paid premium above the customary short rates for the expired time. This policy may be cancelled at any time by the company by giving to the insured a five days' written notice of cancellation, with or without tender of the excess of paid premium above the pro rata premium for the expired time, which excess, if not tendered, shall be refunded on demand. Notice of cancellation shall state that said excess premium (if not tendered) will be refunded on demand.

Pro Rata Liability

This company shall not be liable for a greater proportion of any loss or damage than the amount hereby insured shall bear to the whole insurance covering the property, whether valid or not, and whether collectible or not.

Noon

The word "noon" herein means noon of standard time at the place of loss or damage.

Mortgage Interests

If loss or damage is made payable, in whole or in part, to mortgagee not named herein as the insured, this policy may be cancelled as to such interest by giving to such mortgagee a ten days' written notice of cancellation. Upon failure of the insured to render proof of loss, such mortgagee shall, as if named as insured hereunder, but within sixty days after such failure, render proof of loss, and shall be subject to the provisions hereof as to appraisal and time of payment and of bringing suit. On payment to such mortgagee of any sum for loss or damage hereunder, if this company shall claim that as to the mortgagor or owner no liability existed, it shall, to the extent of such payment, be subrogated to the mortgagee's right to recovery and claim upon the collateral to the mortgagee debt, but without impairing the mortgagee's right to sue, or it may pay the mortgage debt and require an assignment thereof and of the mortgage; other provisions relating to the interest and obligation of such mortgagee may be added hereto by agreement in writing.

Requirements in Case of Loss

The insured shall give immediate notice in writing to this company of any loss or damage, protect the property from further damage, forthwith separate the damaged and undamaged personal property, put it in the best possible order, furnish a complete inventory of the destroyed, damaged, and undamaged property, stating the quantity and cost of each article and the amount claimed thereon; and the insured shall, within sixty days after the fire, unless such time is extended in writing by this company, render to this company a proof of loss, signed and sworn to be the insured, stating the knowledge and belief of the insured as to the time and origin of the fire; the interest of the insured and of all others in the property; the cash value of each item thereof and the amount of loss or damage thereto; all encumbrances thereon; all other contracts of insurance, whether valid or not, covering any of said property; and a copy of all the descriptions and schedules in all policies; any changes in the title, use, occupation, location, possession, or exposure of said property since the issuing of this policy; and by whom and for what purpose any building herein described and the several parts thereof were occupied at the time of fire; and shall furnish, if require, verified plans and specifications of any building, fixtures, or machinery destroyed or damaged. The insured, as often as may be reasonably required, shall exhibit to any person designated by this company, and all that remains of any property herein described, and submit to examinations, under oath, by any person named by this company, and subscribe the same; and, as often as may be reasonably required, shall produce for examination all books of accounts, bills, invoices, and other vouchers, or certified copies thereof, if originals be lost, at such reasonable time and place as may be designated by this company or its representative, and shall permit extracts and copies thereof to be made.

Appraisal

In case the insured and this company shall fail to agree as to the amount of loss or damage, each shall, on the written demand of either, select a competent and disinterested appraiser. The appraisers shall first select a competent and disinterested umpire, and, failing for fifteen days to agree upon such umpire, then, on request of the insured or this company, such umpire shall be selected by a judge of a court of record in the county in which the property insured is located. The appraisers shall then appraise the loss and damage, stating separately sound value and loss or damage to each item, and, failing to agree, shall submit their differences only to the umpire. An award in writing, so itemized, of any two, when filed with this company, shall determine the amount of sound value and loss or damage. Each appraiser shall be paid by the party selecting him, and the expenses of appraisal and umpire shall be paid by the parties equally.

Company's Options

It shall be optional with this company to take all or any part of the articles at the agreed or appraised value, and also to repair, rebuild, or replace the property lost or damaged with other of like kind and quality, within a reasonable time, giving notice of its intention so to do prior to thirty days after ascertainment of loss or damage is made, as herein provided.

Abandonment

There can be no abandonment to this company of any property.

When Loss Payable

The amount of loss or damage for which this company may be liable shall be payable sixty days after proof of loss as herein provided is received by this company, and ascertainment of the loss or damage is made, either by agreement between the insured and this company expressed in writing or by the filing with this company of an award as herein provided.

Suit

No suit or action on this policy for the recovery of any claim shall be sustainable in any court of law or equity unless the claimant shall show compliance with all the requirements of this policy, nor unless commenced within twelve months next after the fire.

Subrogation

This company may require from the insured an assignment of all right of recovery against any party for loss or damage to the extent that payment therefor is made by this company.

Comments:

The standard fire policy form now in use has been retained in its entirety by this draft.

Section 1312. Penalty for Issuing other than Standard Fire Policies.—A. Upon satisfactory evidence that any person, corporation, or stock fire company has issued, or caused to be issued, any policy or contract of fire insurance on property situated in this Commonwealth, contrary to the provisions of the two preceding sections of this act, the Department may, in its discretion, take, against the offending party, any one or more of the following courses of action:

(1) Suspend or revoke the license or certificate of authority of such offending person, corporation, or stock fire insurance company;

(2) Refuse, for a period of not to exceed one year thereafter, to issue a new license to such offending person, corporation, or stock fire insurance company;

(3) Impose a penalty of not more than one thousand dollars for each act of violation of any of said sections. When the Department has taken any action as above set forth, the party aggrieved may appeal to the Court of Common Pleas of Dauphin County.

B. Any person, corporation, or stock fire company that shall, either as principal or agent, wilfully issue, or cause to be issued, any policy or contract of fire insurance on property situated within this Commonwealth, contrary to the provisions of the two preceding sections of this act, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to paya fine not exceeding five hundred dollars.

C. Any policy issued in violation of this act shall nevertheless be construed in accordance with the provisions of this act. Perpetual policies of fire insurance shall not be required to conform to the requirements of the two preceding sections of this act.

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 524, 40 PS Sec. 659.

C. Fire Insurance Rates and Rating Bureaus

Section 1313. Scope of Sections of This Article Relating to Fire Rates and Rating Bureaus.—The sections hereinafter contained in this article which relate to fire rates and fire rating bureaus shall apply to:

(1) All stock fire companies doing business in this Commonwealth, and

(2) All other fire insurers which have filed an application for, or which have membership in a fire rating bureau, and which have agreed in their application for such membership to become subject to the sections hereinafter contained in this article which relate to fire rates and fire rating bureaus.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 541, 40 PS Sec. 691.

Section 1314. Stock Fire Companies to File Schedule of Rates or be Members of Fire Rating Bureaus.—A. Every stock fire company authorized to effect insurance against the risk of loss or damage by fire or lightning in this Commonwealth, before being permitted to write fire insurance in this Commonwealth, shall either file with the Department a schedule of rates, or be a member of a fire rating bureau. Such company shall not be a member of more than one fire rating bureau for the purpose of obtaining rates for the same risk.

B. A fire insurer other than a stock fire company shall not be required to file a schedule of rates or become a member of a fire rating bureau.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 542, 40 PS Sec. 692.

Section 1315. Membership of Fire Rating Bureaus.—A fire rating bureau may consist of one or more fire insurers, and, when it consists of two or more fire insurers, it must admit to membership any authorized fire insurer, applying therefor, who shall agree to abide by the rules and regulations of such bureau. The expenses of the bureau shall be shared by each member in proportion to the gross premiums which it received in this Commonwealth during the preceding year. In addition to these expenses, a reasonable annual fee which shall not exceed fifty dollars may be levied by the fire rating bureau.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 543, 40 PS Sec. 693.

Section 1316. Fire Insurers to Notify Department of Memberships in Fire Rating Bureaus.—Every fire insurer shall, in its annual application for a certificate of authority, specify each fire rating bureau, if any, of which it is a member; and, during the year, file with the Department written notice of any other fire rating bureaus of which it becomes a member.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 544, 40 PS Sec. 694.

Section 1317. Variations From Fire Rating Bureau Rates.—Every member fire insurer shall, at least fifteen days in advance of any variation by it from the fire rating bureau rate, file with the bureau of which it is a member a schedule showing such variations. Any deviation of any insurer from the schedule of rates established by such fire rating bureau shall be uniform in its application to all of the risks in the class from which the deviation is made, and no such uniform deviation shall be made unless notice thereof and the reason therefor shall be filed with the Department.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 545, 40 PS Sec. 695.

Section 1318. Discriimnation in Fire Rates Prohibited.—No fire insurer nor any fire rating bureau shall fix or charge any rate for fire insurance upon property in this Commonwealth which discriminates unfairly between risks in the application of like charges and credits, or which discriminates unfairly between risks of essentially the same hazards, territorial classification, and having substantially the same degree of protection against fire.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 546, 40 PS Sec. 696.

Section 1319. Inspection of Fire Risks.—Every fire rating bureau, or other fire insurer, engaged in making rates or estimates for rates for fire insurance on property in this Commonwealth, shall inspect every risk specifically rated by it upon schedule, and make a written survey of such risk, which shall be filed as a permanent record in the office of such bureau or insurer. A copy of such survey shall be furnished, upon request, to the owner of the property rated therein.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 547, 40 PS Sec. 697.

Section 1320. Agreements For Fire Insurance Rates; Filing; Approval; Prohibited Contracts.—A. No fire insurer, and no fire rating bureau, or any representative of any such insurer or rating bureau, shall enter into or act upon any agreement with regard to the making, fixing, or collecting of any rate for fire insurance upon property within this Commonwealth, except in compliance with those sections of this article which relate to fire insurance rates and fire rating bureaus.

B. Any fire rate agreement may be made and enforced, provided it is not contrary to the laws of this Commonwealth, and is in writing, if, prior to its taking effect, a copy thereof is filed with the Department and with every fire rating bureau of which anyone of the parties thereto is a member.

C. The Department may, after due notice and hearing, upon complaint or upon its own motion, make an order disapproving any fire rating agreement or any part of such agreement. No such agreement shall be in force, nor shall any rights be based thereon, after service of a copy of such order upon each of the parties to such agreement and upon each bureau with which such agreement is required to be filed. Service may be made by mail and shall be deemed to be completed upon the expiration of a reasonable period of time for transmission, fixed in such order. The action of the Department in making, or refusing to make, any such order may be subject to summary review before the Court of Common Pleas of Dauphin County.

D. Except as contained in the policy and the usual agreement for other insurance, no fire insurer or fire rating bureau shall make any contract or agreement with any person insured or to be insured that the whole or any part of any fire insurance shall be written by or placed with any particular fire insurer, agent, or any group of fire insurers or agents.

Comments:

Section 12 of the Act of April 27, 1927, P. L. 450, No. 291, 35 PS Sec. 1192, provides:

"Every board, association, or bureau, which now exists or hereafter may be formed for the purpose of suggesting, establishing, or maintaining rates of fire insurance on property located in this state, shall supply to the State Police, on request, or permit the State Police to copy from its files, reasonable data relating to the physical condition of insurable property in this State and relating to physical fire hazards in the various communities thereof."

D. Miscellaneous Provisions

Section 1322. Reports of Fires to Pennsylvania State Police.—A. Every fire insurer transacting business in this Commonwealth shall file with the Pennsylvania State Police annual and monthly reports, in writing, containing such information as is required to be reported by such fire insurers by the act, approved the twenty-seventh day of April, one thousand nine hundred twenty-seven, (Pamphlet Laws, four hundred fifty), number two hundred ninety-one, entitled "An act relating to fires and fire prevention; imposing duties and conferring powers upon the State Police; authorizing the appointment of the chiefs of fire departments and certain public officers and others as assistants to said State Police, and defining their powers and duties; providing for the investigation of the cause, origin and circumstance of fires and the inspection of all, and the removal or change of, certain buildings; imposing duties on school authorities and on certain corporations, associations, and fire rating agencies; providing for the attendance of witnesses before the said State Police, and the enforcement of its orders; and prescribing penalties," and its amendments or supplements.

B. Failure to make the reports required by this section shall subject such insurer to the penalties prescribed in the act hereinbefore cited, and, in addition thereto, such insurer shall forfeit its right to do business in this Commonwealth.

Comments:

Section 11 of the Act of April 27, 1927, P. L. 450, No. 291, 35 PS Sec. 1191, provides as follows:

"Every fire insurance corporation or association transacting business in this State shall file with the State Police, through an acturial bureau of any board of fire underwriters or through the secretary or other officer of the insurance corporation or association, a monthly report of fire losses showing: (a) The name of the assured; (b) location of property burned; (c) date of the fire; (d) the class of occupancy and construction; (e) the probable cause of the fire; (f) the sound valuation; (g) total insurance; (h) the total loss paid.

"Such corporation or association shall also file through officers an annual report of all fires on which losses have been paid during the preceding calendar year, designating the amount of insurance written on such risk by the corporation or association, the amount of probable loss, the character of the property destroyed or damaged, and the supposed cause of the fire.

"In all cases where such corporation or association receives evidence or information indicating that any fire was of incendiary origin, a report of such fire and of such evidence or information shall be immediately communicated to the State Police.

"The monthly report hereinbefore required shall be made in writing and sent by registered mail to the department, addressed to its office in the city of Harrisburg, on or before the tenth day of each month, as to all fires of which notice was received during the preceding month, and shall include, either in the first or subsequent monthly report, the amount of loss as adjusted and actually paid by such corporation or association for, on account of, or by reason of such loss.

"The annual report hereinbefore required shall be made to the State Police on or before the first day of May.

"The notices and reports hereinbefore required by this section shall be in addition to any notices and reports such corporation or association may be required to make under the laws of this Commonwealth to the Insurance Commissioner or to any other State officer."

Section 13 of the same Act, 35 PS Sec. 1193, provides as follows:

"Any fire insurance company or association, wilfully violating any of the provisions of this act, shall be liable to a penalty of two hundred and fifty dollars ($250), to be recovered at the suit of the State Police as debts of like amount are now by law recoverable; and any foreign fire insurance company or association licensed to do business in this Commonwealth wilfully violating any of the provisions of this act shall, in addition to incurring said penalty, forfeit its rights to continue the transaction of its business in this State."

ARTIVLE XIV

STOCK CASUALTY INSURANCE COMPANIES

Section 1401. Reduction and Withdrawal of Capital Stock.—Any domestic stock casulty company now in existence, or incorporated under the provisions of this act, which has a paid-up capital in excess of the minimum hereinbefore required by this act, may reduce the excess, in whole or in part, in the manner hereinbefore provided in this act for the reduction of capital stock by all companies. Any domestic stock casualty company which has undertaken two or more classes of insurance, and which desires to discontinue a particular class, may withdraw the entire additional capital previously paid in because of the discontinued class.

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 606, 40 PS Sec. 726.

Section 1402. Procedure When Capital Impaired.—A. Any domestic stock casualty company which has received notice from the Department that its capital is impaired, shall not issue new policies, under its authority to do business in this Commonwealth, until its admitted assets have become equal to its liabilities and it has obtained from the Department a certificate to that effect, with authority to resume business.

B. Such company shall immediately give notice to its shareholders, in a manner approved by the Department, that they are required to pay a designated amount per share. The total amount required of the shareholders shall be sufficient to restore its capital to the amount fixed by its articles. In case any shareholder neglects or refuses to pay the amount called for, the company shall require the return of the original share certificate held by such shareholder, and, in lieu thereof, issue new certificates in the proportion that the ascertained value of the assets of the company may, as determined by the Department, bear to the original capital. The directors may create new capital stock, issue share certificates therefor, and dispose of them at not less than par, for an amount sufficient to make up the original capital. The Department may, in its discretion, permit the company, in lieu of the creation of new stock, to reduce its capital and the par value of its shares in proportion to the extent of the impairment, but the capital and the par value of its shares shall at no time be reduced in this manner to an a mount less than that required by law for the organization of any such company. In fixing such reduced capital, no part of the assets on hand, deducted from the original capital, shall be distributed to shareholders

Section 1403. Additional Investment for Surplus.—A domestic stock casualty company may invest any of its surplus funds, in addition to the investments hereinbefore in this act authorized for domestic companies, in the capital of any similar company organized under the laws of this Commonwealth or of any other state solely to transact the same class of business in countries outside of the United States, if the company which makes the investment has one million dollars of capital and one million dollars of surplus. Such investment shall be limited to an amount not exceeding thirty per centum of the surplus of the company which makes the investment.

Section 1405. Applicability of Act to Stock Casualty Companies.—All domestic stock casualty companies, heretofore, or hereafter incorporated or formed by the authority of any general or special law, shall be subject to the provisions and requirements of this act except:

(1) Those companies incorporated under the provisions of the act, approved April twenty-eight, one thousand nine hundred and three, entitled "An act to provide for the incorporation and regulation of corporations for the purpose of making insurance upon the health of individuals, and against personal injury and disablement and death, therein limiting the amount for which such corporations may issue policies, and providing the manner in which certain existing corporations may become reincorporated under this act"; such companies, which have a paid-up capital of not less than one hundred thousand dollars, may issue policies of insurance against injury, disability, or death resulting from traveling or general accident, and against disablement resulting from sickness, and every insurance appertaining thereto, including a funeral benefit, and an indemnity for death arising from natural causes, to an amount not exceeding one hundred dollars.

(2) Those companies heretofore incorporated under the act, approved the twenty-ninth day of April, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four (Pamphlet Laws, seventy-three), entitled "An act to provide for the incorporation and regulation of certain corporations," and the several supplements thereto, for the purpose of guaranteeing the fidelity of persons in positions of trust and to act as surety on official bonds; such companies may transacts business under the provisions of this act if they duly accept the provisions of this act in accordance with the procedure hereinbefore set forth; an acceptance of the provisions of this act by any one of such companies shall exempt any such company from the provisions and requirements of said act, approved April twenty-nine, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four, and of the act, approved May nine, one thousand eight hundred and seventy four, and of the act, approved May nine, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-nine (Pamphlet Laws, one hundred fifty-nine), entitled "An act supplementary to an act, entitled 'An act to provide for the incorporation and regulation of certain corporations,' approved the twenty-ninth day of April, Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four, amending the twenty-ninth section of said act so as to provide for the further regulation of, and granting additional powers to, all corporations nor or hereafter incorporated under the provisions of said act for the insurance of owners of real estate, mortgages, and others interested in real estate, and loss by reason of defective titles, liens, and encumbrances," and the several supplements thereto.

ARTICLE XV

RESERVES FOR CASUALTY INSURANCE

Section 1501. Casualty Insurers and Self-insured Employers Required to Maintain Reserves.—A. Every casualty insurer transacting business in this Commonwealth shall at all times provide for its reserve liability by holding in proper legal investments, as hereinbefore provided by this act, funds equal in amount to the sum of the unearned premium reserve liability and the reserve against unpaid losses of such insurer, computed in accordance with the provisions of this article.

B. Every self-insured employer under the supervision of the Department shall at all times maintain separate trust funds equal to the reserve against all unpaid loss claims of employes for workmen's compensation pursuant to law. Such reserve against unpaid losses of self-insured employers shall be computed in accordance with the provisions of this article which relate to the computation of loss reserves of compensation insurers, and shall apply only to those loss claims incurred by the employer subsequent to the effective date of this act. The reserve funds of any self-insured employer shall be invested only in those investments which are permitted by this act as investments of the reserve funds of stock casualty companies.[1]

Comments:

1. At the present time casualty insurers which write compensation insurance are required to maintain loss reserves, but self-insured employers are not required to carry any reserves whatsoever. As a result, the casualty insurers are at an obvious disadvantage in writing the very hazardous compensation insurance. Furthermore, under modern business conditions, it is possible for an employer, who has not placed his employes' compensation insurance with a casualty company, to become bankrupt or insolvent upon short notice. It, therefore, seems proper for the best interests of the employes, for whom the Workmen's Compensation Law was passed, to require self-insured employers to maintain at least funds necessary to meet in some measure their unpaid claims for losses.

"Trust" funds are required of self-insured employers in order to make the requirement of loss reserves effective. It would defeat the purpose of this section to permit such employers to retain the reserves as part of their general assets, even though they are kept under a separate bookkeeping entry. However, the requirement of reserve is not made retroactive, because of the difficulty which would be experienced by many employers in obtaining such trust funds at this time.

Refer to Section 202 (4) of the proposed Insurance Department Code, which places self-insured employers under the supervision of the Department, and to Section 307, which permits the Department to examine the books, papers, business and accounts of any such employer.

Section 1502. Unearned Premium Reserve Liability.—Every casualty insurer, in determining its unearned premium liability, shall charge for casualty insurance the unearned portions of the gross premiums due or paid upon all policies which cover unexpired risks, and such unearned portions shall be computed on a monthly pro rata basis. The Department may, in its discretion, require that such unearned portions of the gross premiums shall be computed on each respective risk from the date of the issuance of the policy covering such risk. If the Department believes that either of these methods of computing the unearned portions of gross premiums is not practicable or advisable, it may, in its discretion, permit such insurer to compute its unearned premium liability by charging one-half of the premiums on all policies covering risks for one year or less, and by charging, on policies covering risks for more than one year, one-half of the premium for the first year, together with the whole of the premiums for subsequent years.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Insurance Department Act of 1921, Section 310, 40 PS Sec. 91.

Comments:

This proposed section changes the present method of calculation of unearned premium, i. e., an arbitrary fifty per centum of the current year's premium, to the more accurate monthly basis, for the reasons found in the comments to Section 1202 of this draft relating to unearned premium reserve liability of fire, marine, and fire and marine insurers.

Section 1503. Reserve against Unpaid Losses in Casualty Insurance other than Compensation or Liability Insurance.—Each casualty insurer, in calculating its reserve against unpaid losses in casualty insurance, other than liability and compensation policies, shall make a careful estimate in each case of the loss likely to be incurred by reason of every claim presented, or that may be presented pursuant to notice from the insured of the occurrence of an event that may result in a loss. The probable accuracy of such estimate shall be investigated and approved by the Department after such examination as it deems necessary. The sum of the items so estimated and approved shall be the total amount of the reserve against unpaid losses of the insurer. Each casualty insurer engaged in writing credit insurance shall, in addition, charge as a part of the loss reserve fifty per centum of the premiums on all credit policies expiring in the months of October, November, and December of the current year, less the amount of losses paid on such policies.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Insurance Department Act of 1921, Section 311, 40 PS Sec. 92.

Section 1504. Reserve against Unpaid Losses in Liability Insurance.—The reserve required of casualty insurers for outstanding losses under liability insurance and for which the insured is liable, shall be computed as follows:

(1) For all liability suits being defended under policies written more than ten years prior to the date as of which the statement is made, such reserve shall be one thousand five hundred dollars for each suit.

(2) For all liability suits being defended under policies written more than five and less than ten years prior to the date as of which the statement is made, such reserve shall be one thousand dollars for each suit.

(3) For all liability suits being defended under policies written more than three and less than five years prior to the date as of which the statement is made, such reserve shall be eight hundred fifty dollars for each suit.

(4) For all liability policies written during the three years immediately preceding the date as of which the statement is made, such reserve shall be sixty per centum of the earned liability premiums for each of such three years, less all loss and loss expense payments made under liability policies written in the corresponding years; but, in any event, such reserve shall, for the first of such three years, be not less than seven hundred fifty dollars for each outstanding liability suit on the policies issued in such first year.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Insurance Department Act of 1921, Section 313, 40 PS Sec. 112.

Section 1505. Reserve against Unpaid Losses in Compensation Insurance.—The reserve required of casualty insurers and of self-insured employers for outstanding losses under compensation insurance, and for which the insured or the employer is liable, shall be computed as follows:

(1) For all compensation claims under policies written more than three years prior to the date as of which the statement is made, such reserve shall be the present value, at four per centum interest, of the determined and estimated future payments.

(2) For all compensation claims under policies written in the three years immediately preceding the date as of which the statement is made, such reserve shall be sixty-five per centum of the earned compensation premiums for each of such three years, less all loss and loss expense payments made in connection with such claims under policies written in the corresponding years; but, in any event, in the case of each year of any such three-year period, such reserve shall not be less than the present value, at four per centum interest, of the determined and estimated unpaid compensation claims under policies written during such year.[1]

Reference:

Pennsylvania Insurance Department Act of 1921, Section 313, 40 PS Sec. 112.

Comments:

1. The latter portion of paragraph (d) of Section 313 of the present Insurance Department Act is as follows:

"* * * in the case of the first year of any such three-year period, such reserve shall be not less than the present value, at four per centum interest, of the determined and the estimated unpaid compensation claims under policies written during such year."

Schedule "P" of the annual statement form prepared by the Blanks Committee of the National Convention of Insurance Commissioners, upon which basis workmen's compensation claims are reserved, does not conform to our present law as quoted, supra. It would seem that the present law shuold be amended to conform with the requirements of Schedule "P," and thereby permit our domestic companies to set up reserves upon the same basis of assumption that other states require such companies to follow; as a result, the reserve requirements of foreign companies transacting business in this Commonwealth will become uniform.

Section 1506. Distribution of Unallocated Liability Loss Expense Payments.—All unallocated liability loss expense payments made in each of the first four calendar year, in which an insurer issues liability policies, shall be distributed as follows: In the first calendar year, one hundred per centum shall be charged to the policies written in that year; in the second calendar year, fifty per centum shall be charged to the policies written in that year, and fifty per centum to the policies written in the preceding year; in the third calendar year, forty per centum shall be charged to the policies written in that year, forty per centum to the policies written in the preceding year, and twenty per centum to the policies written in the second year preceding; and in the fourth calendar year, thirty-five per centum shall be charged to the policies written in that year, forty per centum to the policies written in the preceding year, fifteen per centum to the policies written in the second year preceding, and ten per centum to the policies written in the third year preceding.

All unallocated liability loss expense payments made in a given calendar year, subsequent to the first four years in which an insurer has been issuing liability policies, shall be distributed as follows. Thirty-five per centum shall be charged to the policies written in that year; forty per centum to the policies written in the preceding year; ten per centum to the policies written in the second year preceding; ten per centum to the policies written in the third year preceding; and five per centum to the policies written in the fourth year preceding.

Section 1507. Distribution of Unallocated Compensation Loss Expense Payments.—All unallocated compensation loss expense payments made in each of the first three calendar years, in which an insurer issues compensation policies, shall be distributed as follows: In the first calendar year, one hundred per centum shall be charged to the policies written in that year; in the second calendar year, fifty per centum shall be charged to the policies written in that year and fifty per centum to the policies written in the preceding year; in the third calendar year, forty-five per centum shall be charged to the policies written in that year, forty-five per centum to the policies written in the preceding year, and ten per centum to the policies written in the second year preceding.

All unallocated compensation loss expense payments made in a given calendar year, subsequent to the first three years in which an insurer has been issuing compensation policies, shall be distributed as follows: Forty per centum shall be charged to policies written in that year; forty-five per centum to the policies written in the preceding year; ten per centum to the policies written in the second year preceding; and five per centum to the policies written in the third year preceding.

Section 1508. Additional Liability or Compensation Loss Reserves.—Whenever the Department notifies a liability or compensation insurer or a self-insured employer that its loss reserves are inadequate, it shall be the duty of such insurer or employer to maintain additional loss reserves upon the basis, and in the amount required by the Department.

Comments:

This section corresponds to Section 605 of the proposed Insurance Department Code, wherein it is provided that the Department in its discretion may require additional reserves, based either on estimated individual claims, or on a satisfactory actuarial table.

Section 1509. Information in Annual Reports of Liability and Compensation Insurers.—A. Each insurer that writes liability or compensation policies shall include, in the annual statement required by this act, a schedule of its experience under such policies in such form as the Department may prescribe, a schedule showing the distribution of unallocated liability loss expense payments, and a schedule showing the distribution of unallocated compensation loss expense payments.

B. Each self-insured employer shall file with the Department an annual report in such form as the Department may prescribe, containing a schedule of such employer's experience in claims for workmen's compensation.

ARTICLE XVI.

HEALTH AND ACCIDENT INSURANCE

Section 1601. Copies of Policies to be Filed with Department.—No policy of health or accident[1] insurance shall be issued or delivered by any casualty insurer, or any life company issuing such policies, to any person in this Commonwealth, until a copy of the form thereof, and of the classification of risks and the premium rates pertaining thereto, have been filed with and not disapproved by the Department; nor shall any such policy be issued or delivered until the expiration of thirty days after it has been so filed, unless the Department previously gives its written approval thereto. If the Department shall notify in writing the insurer, which has filed such copy of the form, that it does not comply with the requirements of law, specifying the reasons for its opinion, it shall be unlawful thereafter for any such insurer to issue any policy in such form. The refusal by the Department to approve any form of such policies shall be subject to review by the Court of Common Pleas of Dauphin County.

Comments:

1. Refer to Section 2 of this draft, wherein "health or accident" is defined.

Section 1602. Conditions for the Issuance of Health or Accident Policies.—No health or accident policy shall be issued in this Commonwealth unless it is issued subject to the following conditions:

(1) The entire money and other consideration for the policy shall be expressed therein.

(2) The time at which the insurance thereunder takes effect and terminates shall be stated in a portion of the policy preceding its execution by the insurer.

(3) The policy shall not purport to insure more than one person.

(4) Every printed portion of the policy, and any endorsements or papers attached thereto, shall be plainly printed in type which the face shall not be smaller than ten point.

(5) A brief description of the policy shall be printed on its first page, and on its filing back in type of which the face shall not be smaller than fourteen point; this shall not be required of railroad ticket policies sold only at railroad stations, or at railroad ticket offices by railroad employes.[1]

(6) Exceptions of the policy shall be printed with the same prominence as the benefits to which they apply; however, any portion of the policy which purports, by reason of circumstances under which a loss is incurred, to reduce any indemnity promised therein to an amount less than that provided for the same loss occurring under ordinary circumstances shall be printed in bold face type, and with greater prominence than any other portion of the text of the policy.

(7) The applicant for the insurance shall personally sign an application with each policy issued, except railroad ticket policies sold only at railroad stations or at railroad ticket offices by railroad employes,[1] requiring the following information:

(a) Name, age, address, and occupation of the applicant.

(b) Other insurance carried, with the names of the companies and the amounts.

(c) Previous record of disability from health or accident.

(d) Whether or not the applicant has been refused insurance or has had insurance cancelled by any company.

(8) The initial premium shall be paid to the agent who countersigns the policy, who shall be a resident licensed agent residing in this Commonwealth.

Comments:

1. These provisions excepting railroad ticket policies are found in Section 629 (d) of The Insurance Company Law of 1921.

Section 1603. Standard Policy Provisions.—Every health or accident policy issued in this Commonwealth, subject to the conditions imposed by the previous section, shall contain certain standard provisions, which shall be in the words and in the order hereinafter set forth, and be preceded in every policy by the caption "Standard Provisions." In each such standard provisions, whever the word "insurer" is used in this section, there shall be substituted therefor in the policy the word "company," or "corporation," or "association," or "society," whichever is appropriate. Such standard provisions shall be:

A. A standard provision relative to the contract, which may be in either of the following two forms: Form (a), to be used in policies which do not provide for reduction of indemnity on account of change of occupation; and Form (b), to be used in policies which do so provide. If Form (b) is used, and the policy provides indemnity against loss from sickness, the words "or contracts sickness" may be inserted therein immediately after the words "in the event that the insured is injured";

"(a)—1. This policy includes the endorsements and attached papers, if any, and contains the entire contract of insurance. No reduction shall be made in any idemnity herein provided by reason of change in the occupation of the insured or by reason of his doing any act or thing pertaining to any other occupation."

"(b)—1. This policy includes the endorsements and attached papers, if any, and contains the entire contract of insurance except as it may be modified by the insurer's classification of risks and premium rates in the event that the insured is injured after having changed his occupation to one classified by the insurer as more hazardous than that stated in the policy, or while he is doing any act or thing pertaining to any occupation so classified, except ordinary duties about his residence or while engaged in recreation, in which event the insurer will pay only such portion of the indemnities provided in the policy as the premium paid would have purchased at the rate, but within the limits so fixed by the insurer for such more hazardous occupation."

"If the law of the State in which the insured resides at the time this policy is issued requires that prior to its issue a statement of the premium rates and classification of risks pertaining to it shall be filed with the State official having supervision of insurance in such State, then the premium rates and classification of risks pertaining to it shall be filed with the State official having supervision of insurance in such State, then the premium rates and classification of risks mentioned in this policy shall mean only such as have been last filed by the insurer in accordance with such law, but if such filing is not required by such law, then they shall mean the insurer's premium rates and classification or risks last made effective by it in such State prior to the occurrence of the loss for which the insurer is liable."

B. A standard provision relative to changes in the contract, which may be omitted from railroad ticket policies sold only at railroad stations or at railroad ticket offices by railroad employes, and which shall be in the following form:

"2. No statement made by the applicant for insurance not included herein shall avoid the policy or be used in any legal proceeding hereunder. No agent has authority to change this policy or to waive any of its provisions. No change in this policy shall be valid unless approved by an executive officer of the insurer, and such approval be endorsed hereon."

C. A standard provision relative to reinstatement of policy after lapse, which may be omitted from railroad ticket policies sold only at railroad stations or at railroad ticket offices by railroad employes, and which may be in either of the three following forms: Form (a), to be used in policies which insure only against loss from accident; Form (b), to be used in policies which insure only against loss from sickness; and Form (c), to be used in policies which insure against loss from both accident and sickness:

"(a)—3. If default be made in the payment of the agreed premium for this policy, the subsequent acceptance of a premium by the insurer or by any of its duly authorized agents shall reinstate the policy, but only to cover loss resulting from accidental injury thereafter sustained."

"(b)—3. If default be made in the payment of the agreed premium for this policy, the subsequent acceptance of a premium by the insurer or by any of its duly authorized agents shall reinstate the policy, but only to cover such sickness as may begin more than ten days after the date of such acceptance."

"(c)—3. If default be made in the payment of the agreed premium for this policy, the subsequent acceptance of a premium by the insurer or by any of its duly authorized agents shall reinstate the policy, but only to cover accidental injury thereafter sustained and such sickness as may begin more than ten days after the date of such acceptance."

D. A standard provision relative to time of notice of claim, which may be in either of the three following forms: Form (a), to be used in policies which insure only against loss from accident; Form (b), to be used in policies which insure only against loss from sickness; and Form (c), to be used in policies which insure against loss from both accident and sickness. If Form (a) or Form (c) is used, the insurer may, at its option, add thereto the following sentence: "In event of accidental death, immediate notice thereof must be given to the insurer":

"(a)—4. Written notice of injury on which claim may be based must be given to the insurer within twenty days after the date of the accident causing such injury.

"(b)—4. Written notice of sickness on which claim may be based must be given to the insurer within ten days after the commencement of the disability from such sickness."

"(c)—4. Written notice of injury or of sickness on which claim may be based must be given to the insurer within twenty days after the date of the accident causing such injury or within ten days after the commencement of disability from such sickness."

E. A standard provision relative to sufficiency of notice of claim, which shall be in the following form, and in which the insurer shall insert, in the blank space, such office and its location as it may desire to designate for such purpose of notice:

"5. Such notice given by or in behalf of the insured or beneficiary, as the case may be, to the insurer at ....., or to any authorized agent of the insurer, with particulars sufficient to identify the insured, shall be deemed to be notice to the insurer. Failure to give notice within the time provided in this policy shall not invalidate any claim if it shall be shown not to have been reasonably possible to give such notice and that notice was given as soon as was reasonably possible."

F. A standard provision relative to furnishing forms for the convenience of the insured in submitting proof of loss, as follows:

"6. The insurer, upon receipt of such notice, will furnish to the claimant such forms as are usually furnished by it for filing proofs of loss. If such forms are not so furnished within fifteen days after the receipt of such notice, the claimant shall be deemed to have complied with the requirements of this policy as to proof of loss upon submitting, within the time fixed in the policy for filing proofs of loss, written proof covering the occurrence, character, and extent of the loss for which claim is made."

G. A standard provision relative to filing proof of loss, which shall be in such one of the following forms as may be appropriate to the indemnities provided:

"(a)—7. Affirmative proof of loss must be furnished to the insurer at its said office within ninety days after the date of the loss for which claim is made."

"(b)—7. Affirmative proof of loss must be furnished to the insurer at its said office within ninety days after the termination of the period of disability for which the company is liable."

"(c)—7. Affirmative proof of loss must be furnished to the insurer at its said office in case of claim for loss of time from disability within ninety days after the termination of the period for which the insurer is liable, and in case of claim for any other loss, within ninety days after the date of such loss."

H. A standard provision relative to examination of the person of the insured and relative to autopsy, which may be omitted from railroad ticket policies sold only at railroad stations or at railroad ticket offices by railroad employes, and which shall be in the following form:

"8. The insurer shall have the right and opportunity to examine the person of the insured when and so often as it may reasonably require during the pendency of claim hereunder, and also the right and opportunity to make an autopsy in case of death where it is not forbidden by law."

I. A standard provision relative to the time within which payments, other than those for loss of time on account of disability, shall be made, which provision may be in either of the following two forms, and which may be omitted from any policy providing only indemnity for loss of time on account of disability. The insurer shall insert, in the blank space, either the word "immediately," or appropriate language to designate such period of time, not more than sixty days, as it may desire: Form (a), to be used in policies which do not provide indemnity for loss of time on account of disability; and Form (b), to be used in policies which do so provide:

"(a)—9. All indemnity provided in this policy will be paid ..... after receipt of due proof."

"(b)—9. All indemnities provided in this policy for loss, other than that of time on account of disability, will be paid ..... after receipt of due proof."

J. A standard provision relative to periodical payments of indemnity for loss of time on account of disability, which provision shall be in the following form, and which may be omitted from any policy not providing for such indemnity. The insurer shall insert, in the first blank space of the form, appropriate language to designate the proportion of accrued indemnity it may desire to pay, which proportion may be all or any part not less than one-half, and, in the second blank space, shall insert any period of time not exceeding sixty days:

"10. Upon request of the insured and subject to due proof of loss ..... accrued indemnity for loss of time on account of disability will be paid at the expiration of each .....during the continuance of the period for which the insurer is liable; and any balance remaining unpaid at the termination of such period will be paid immediately upon receipt of due proof."

K. A standard provision relative to indemnity payments, which may be in either of the two following forms: Form (a), to be used in policies which designate a beneficiary; and Form (b), to be used in policies which do not designate any beneficiary other than the insured:

"(a)—11. Indemnity for loss of life of the insured is payable to the beneficiary if surviving the insured, and otherwise to the estate of the insured. All other indemnities of this policy are payable to the insured."

"(b)—11. All the indemnities of the policy are payable to the insured."

L. A standard provision providing for cancellation of the policy at the instance of the insured, which may be omitted from railroad ticket policies sold only at railroad stations or at railroad ticket offices by railroad employes, and which shall be in the following form:

"12. If the insured shall at any time change his occupation to one classified by the insurer as less hazardous than that stated in the policy, the insurer, upon written request of the insured and surrender of the policy, will cancel the same and will return to the insured the unearned premium."

M. A standard provision relative to the right of the beneficiary under the policy, which shall be in the following form, and which may be omitted from any policy not designating a beneficiary:

"13. Consent of the beneficiary shall not be requisite to surrender or assignment of this policy, or to change of beneficiary or to any other changes in the policy."

N. A standard provision limiting the time within which suit may be brought upon the policy, as follows:

"14. No action at law or in equity shall be brought to recover on this policy prior to the expiration of sixty days after proof of the loss has been filed in accordance with the requirements of this policy, nor shall such action be brought at all unless brought within two years from the expiration of the time within which proof of loss is required by the policy."

O. A standard provision relative to time limitations of the policy, as follows:

"15. If any time limitation of this policy with respect to giving notice of claim or furnishing proof of loss is less than that permitted by the law of the State in which the insured resides at the time this policy is issued, such limitation is hereby extended to agree with the minimum period permitted by such law."

Comments:

This section and the following section substantially reenact the existing provisions of the law.

Section 1604. Optional Standard Policy Provisions.—The provisions hereinafter set forth in this section are hereby designated as optional standard provisions. No health or accident policy, which contains any provisions similar in substance and content to any one of the optional standard provisions, shall be issud in this Commonwealth unless such policy provisions are in the order and in the words hereinafter set forth. The insurer which issues such policy may, at its option, omit from the policy any one of such optional standard provisions. Such optional standard provisions, if inserted in the policy, shall immediately succeed the standard provisions named in the preceding section of this act.

A. An optional standard provision relative to cancellation of the policy at the instance of the insurer, as follows:

"16. The insurer may cancel this policy at any time by written notice delivered to the insured or mailed to his last address as shown by the records of the insurer, together with cash or the insurer's check for the unearned portion of the premiums actually paid by the insured, and such cancellation shall be without prejudice to any claim originating prior thereto."

B. An optional standard provision relative to reduction of the amount of indemnity to a sum less than that stated in the policy, as follows:

"17. If the insured shall carry with another company, corporation, association, or society, other insurance covering the same loss without giving written notice to the insurer, then, in that case, the insurer shall be liable only for such portion of the indemnity promised as the said indemnity bears to the total amount of like indemnity in all policies covering such loss, and for the return of such part of the premium paid as shall exceed the pro rata for the indemnity thus determined."

C. An optional standard provision relative to deduction of premium upon settlement of claim, as follows:

"18. Upon the payment of claim hereunder, any premium then due and unpaid or covered by any note or written order may be deducted therefrom."

D. An optional standard provision relative to other insurance by the same insurer, which shall be in such one of the following forms as may be appropriate to the indemnities provided, and in the blank spaces of which the insurer shall insert such upward limits of indemnity as are specified by the insurer's classification of risks, filed as required by this act:

"(a)—19. If a like policy or policies, previously issued by the insurer to the insured, be in force concurrently herewith, making the aggregate indemnity in excess of $....., the excess insurance shall be void, and all premiums paid for such excess shall be returned to the insured."

"(b)—19. If a like policy or policies, previously issued by the insurer to the insured, be in force concurrently herewith, making the aggregate indemnity for loss of time on account of disability in excess of $..... weekly, the excess insurance shall be void, and all premiums paid for such excess shall be returned to the insured."

"(c)—19. If a like policy or policies, previously issued by the insurer to the insured, be in force concurrently herewith, making the aggregate indemnity for loss, other than that of time on account of disability, in excess of $....., or the aggregate indemnity for loss of time on account of disability in excess of $..... weekly, the excess insurance of either kind shall be void, and all premiums paid for such excess shall be returned to the insured."

E. An optional standard provision relative to the age limits of the policy, which shall be in the following form, and in the blank spaces of which the insurer shall insert such number of years as it may elect:

"20. The insurance under this policy shall not cover any person under the age of ..... years not over the age of ..... years. Any premium paid to the insurer for any period not covered by this policy will be returned upon request."

Section 1605. Policy Provisions Required by Foreign Laws.—Health or accident policies issued in this Commonwealth by a foreign or alien insurer may contain any provision which the law of the State or country under which the insurer is organized prescribes for insertion in such policies. Health or accident policies issued by a domestic insurer may contain, when issued or delivered in any other State or country, any provision required by the laws of the State or country in which they are issued.

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 620, 40 PS Sec. 755.

Section 1606. Contradictory Policy Provisions Prohibited.—No health or accident policy shall be issued in this Commonwealth if it contains any provision contradictory, in whole or part, of any of the provisions hereinbefore in this article designated as "Standard Provisions" or as "Optional Standard Provisions." No endorsements or attached papers shall vary, alter, extend, or be used as a substitute for, or in any way conflict with, any of the said "Standard Provisions" or the said "Optional Standard Provisions." No such policy shall be issued in this Commonwealth if it contains any provision purporting to make any portion of the charter, constitution, or by-laws of the insurer a part of the policy, unless such portion of the charter, constitution, or by-laws shall be set forth in full in the policy; but this prohibition shall not be deemed to apply to any statement of rates or classification of risks, filed with the Department in accordance with the provisions of this act.

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 621, 40 PS Sec. 756.

Section 1607. False Statements in Applications.—The falsity of any statement in the application for any health or accident policy shall not bar the right of the insured or the beneficiary to recover under such policy, unless the false statement was made with actual intent to deceive, or unless it materially affected either the acceptance of the risk or the hazard assumed by the insurer.

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 622, 40 PS Sec. 757.

Section 1608. Alterations of Written Applications.—No alteration of any written application for health or accident insurance, by erasure, insertion, or otherwise, shall be made by any person other than the applicant without the written consent of the applicant, and the making of any such alteration without his consent shall be a misdemeanor. If an alteration shall be made by any officer of the insurer, or by any employe of the insurer with the insurer's knowledge or consent, then such act shall be deemed to have been performed by the insurer thereafter issuing the policy upon such altered application. The Department may suspend the certificate of authority of any insurer which violates this section.

Section 1609. Rights of Insurer Not Waived.—The acknowledgment by any insurer of the receipt of notice given under any health or accident policy, or the furnishing of forms for filing proofs of loss, or the acceptance of such proofs, or the investigation of any claim thereunder, shall not operate as a waiver by the insurer of any of its rights in defense of any claim arising under such policy.

Section 1612. Definition of Group Health and Accident Insurance.—A. Group health and accident insurance is hereby declared to be that form of life insurance covering not less than fifty employes, with or without medical examination, written under a policy issued to the employer, the premium on which is to be paid by the employer, or by the employer and employes jointly, and insuring only all of his employes, or all of any class or classes thereof determined by conditions pertaining to the employment, for amounts of insurance based upon some plan which will preclude individual selection, for the benefit of persons other than the employer. When the premium is to be paid by the employer and employe jointly, and the benefits of the policy are offered to all eligible employes, not less than seventy-five per centum of such employes may be so insured.

B. The following forms of health and accident insurance are hereby declared to be group health and accident insurance within the meaning of this act:

(1) Health and accident insurance covering the members of one or more companies, batteries, troops, battalions, divisions, or other units of the National Guard or naval militia of any state, written under a policy issued to the commanding general of the National Guard, or commanding officer of the naval militia, as the case may be, who shall be deemed to be the employer for the purposes of this act, the premium on which is to be paid by the members of such units, for the benefit of persons other than the employer; however, when the benefits of the policy are offered to all eligible members of the unit of the National Guard or naval militia, not less than seventy-five per centum of the members of such a unit may be so insured.

(2) Health and accident insurance covering the members of one or more troops, or other units, of the state troopers, or state police, of any state, written under a policy issued to the commanding officer of the state troopers or state police, who shall be deemed to be the employer for the purposes of this act, the premium on which is to be paid by the members of such units, for the benefit of persons other than the employer; however, when the benefits of the policy are offered to all eligible members of a unit of the state troopers or state police, not less than seventy-five per centum of the members of such a unit may be so insured.

(3) Health and accident insurance covering the members of any labor union or organization of police employed by any municipal, county or state authority, any organization or association of state employes, public school teachers or nurses, or volunteer firemen,[1] written under a policy issued to such union or organization, which shall be deemed to be the employer for the purposes of this act, the premium on which is to be paid by the union or organization, or by the union or organization and its members, jointly, and insuring its members for the amounts of insurance based upon some plan which will preclude individual selection, for the benefit of persons other than the union or organization or the officials of either; however, when the premium is to be paid by the union or organization and its members jointly, and the benefits are offered to all eligible members, not less than seventy-five per centum of such mmbers may be so insured. When members apply and pay for additional amounts of insurance, a smaller percentage of members may be insured for such additional amounts if they pass satisfactory medical examinations.

Comments:

The Massachusetts Insurance Law, Chapter 175, Section 110, and the Oregon Insurance Laws, Section 46-806, which sections relate to health and accident insurance, exempt from their application group policies. In the New Jersey Laws of 1928, Chapter 222, Section 1, permits the writing of group health and accident insurance.

At the present time, there are no statutory provisions for the writing of group accident insurance in this Commonwealth, except the Act of June 22, 1931, P. L. 844, which authorizes the Commonwealth and municipalities to write policies of group life, health and accident policies for their employes. It seems that some provisions should be included in this proposed act, in order to eliminate any doubt as to propriety of such insurance from the standpoint of the insurer. There are likewise no provisions in the existing law which prescribe what are proper provisions for policies of group health and accident insurance. It has been the custom of the Department to exercise its discretion with respect to such policies. This discretion is continued in this proposed code, and is specifically set forth in the next section.

1. In formal opinion number sixty-three of the Department of Justice by Harold D. Saylor, Deputy Attorney General, to Charles F. Armstrong, Insurance Commissioner, dated September 21, 1932, the Insurance Department was advised that it may approve, for sale within the Commonwealth, group accident policies insuring the members of volunteer fire companies and firemen's relief associations, provided that such policies contained no phraseology objectionable to good insurance standards.

Section 1613. Group Health or Accident Policies; Records of Experience.—A. No policy of group health or accident insurance shall be issued or delivered in this Commonwealth, unless a copy of the form thereof has been filed with the Department and formally approved by it.

B. The Department may, in its discretion, refuse to approve a group health or accident policy if it does not contain any of the standard provisions hereinbefore in this act required of group life insurance policies, or if such policy does not conform in other respects to the applicable provisions of this act relating to group life insurance, or if such policy contains provisions which are contrary to the public interest.

C. All policies of group insurance shall be segregated into a separate class, and the experience kept separate. Any such policy may, however, anything in this act to the contrary notwithstanding, provide for a readjustment of the rate, based on experience at the end of the first, or any subsequent year of insurance, which readjustment may be made retroactive for such policy year only.

D. The number of policies, amount of insurance, reserves, premiums and payments to policyholders thereunder, together with the interest assumption adopted by the company, shall be reported separately in the company's annual statement.

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Sections 415 and 416, 40 PS Secs. 531 and 532.

Section 1614. Voting Power Under Policies of Group Health or Accident Insurance.—In every group health or accident policy issued by a domestic life company, the employer shall be deemed to be the policyholder for all purposes within the meaning of this act, and, if entitled to vote at a meeting of the company, shall be entitled to one vote at such meeting.

Section 1615. Fines and Penalties.—A. Any company or other insurer, or any officer or agent thereof, or any broker which or who issues or delivers to any person in this Commonwealth any health or accident policy, or alters any written application therefor, in violation of the provisions of this article, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to pay a fine of not more than three hundred dollars for each offense.

B. The Department may, in its discretion, take, against the offending party, any one or more of the following courses of action:

(1) Revoke the certificate of authority of any insurer, or the license of any agent or broker, which or who violates any of the provisions of this article;

(2) Impose a penalty of not more than one thousand dollars for each act of violation of any of the provisions of this article.

C. Before the Department shall take any action pursuant to this section, it shall give written notice to the agent, broker or insurer accused of violating the law, stating specifically the nature of such alleged violation and fixing a time and place, at least ten days thereafter, when a hearing of the matter shall be held. After such hearing or upon failure of the accused to appear at such hearing, the Department shall impose such of the above penalties as it deems advisable. When the Department has taken any action pursuant to this section, the party aggrieved may appeal to the Court of Common Pleas of Dauphin County.

Section 1616. Limitations of This Article.—A. Nothing in this article shall apply to or affect any policy of workmen's compensation insurance.

B. Nothing in this article shall apply to or in any way affect contracts supplemental to contracts of life or endowment insurance, where such supplemental contracts contain no provisions except such as operate to safeguard such insurance against lapse or to provide a special surrender value therefor in the event that the insured shall be totally and permanently disabled by reason of accidental bodily injury or by sickness; but no such supplemental contract shall be issued, or delivered to any person in this Commonwealth, unless a copy of the form thereof has been submitted to and approved by the Department, under such reasonable rules and regulations as it shall make concerning the provisions in such contracts and their submission to and approval by it.

C. Nothing in this article shall be applicable to policies issued by companies organized under the provisions of the act, approved April twenty-eight, one thousand nine hundred and three (Pamphlet Laws, three hundred twenty-nine), entitled "An act to provide for the incorporation and regulation of corporations for the purpose of making insurance upon the health of individuals and against personal injury and disablement and death therein; limiting the amount for which such corporations may issue policies; and providing the manner in which certain existing corporations may become reincorporated under this act."

ARTICLE XVII

EMPLOYERS' MUTUAL LIABILITY INSURANCE ASSOCIATIONS

Section 1701. Examination of Premises and Records of Subscribing Employers.—The board of directors of any employers' mutual liability association shall be entitled to inspect the plant, workroom, shop, farm, or other premises of any subscribing employer, and, for such purpose, may appoint inspectors, who shall have free access to all such premises during the regular working hours. The board of directors shall, from time to time, be entitled to examine, by their auditor or other agent, the books, records, and payrolls of any subscribing employer for the purposes of determining the amount of premium chargeable to such employer.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 637, 40 PS Sec. 782.

Section 1702. Rules and Regulations; Refusal and Forfeiture of Insurance.—The board of directors of any employers' mutual liability association shall make reasonable rules and regulations for the prevention of injuries upon the premises of subscribing employers. The board of directors may refuse to insure, or may terminate the insurance of, any subscribing employer who refuses to permit such examination, or disregards such rules and regulations, and may forfeit one-half of the unearned premiums previously paid by him. Such termination of the insurance of any subscribing member shall not release him from liability for the payment of assessments then or thereafter made by the board of directors to make up deficiencies existing at the termination of his insurance.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 638, 40 PS Sec. 783.

Section 1703. Premiums.—A. The board of directors of any employers' mutual liability association shall determine the amount of the premiums which the subscribing employers shall pay for their insurance, in accordance with the nature of the business in which such employers are engaged, and the probable risk of injury to their employes under existing conditions. They shall fix premiums at such amounts as, in their judgment, shall be sufficient to enable the association to create and maintain the surplus hereinafter required in this article, and to pay to its subscribing employers all sums which may become due and payable to their employes under the provisions of article three of The Workmen's Compensation Act of one thousand nine hundred and fifteen, or any amendment or revision thereof, and also the expenses of conducting the business of the association. Such premiums shall not be levied upon the subscribing members until they have been approved by the Department.

B. In fixing the premium payable by an subscribing employer, the board of directors may take into account the condition of all the property or premises of such employer, in respect to the safety of those employed thereon, as shown by the report of any inspector appointed by such board.

C. The board of directors may, from time to time, change the amount of premiums payable by any of the subscribing employers as circumstances may require, and the condition of the property or premises of such employers in respect to the safety of their employes may justify. Such board may increase the premiums of any subscribing employer neglecting to provide safety devices required by law, or disobeying the rules or regulations made by the board of directors in accordance with the provisions of the preceding section.

D. No policy of insurance issued to any subscribing employer shall be effective until he shall have paid the premium so fixed and determined.

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 639, 40 PS Sec. 784.

Section 1704. Division of Subscribers into Groups.—A. The board of directors of employers' mutual liability associations may divide the subscribing employers into groups, in accordance with the nature of their business and the probable risks of injury to their employes. They shall fix all premiums for each business in such group, and for the various classes of employment therein, in accordance with the probable risks of injury to the employes in such business and in each class of employment therein; and they shall make all assessments, and determine and pay all dividends, by and for each group in accordance with the experience thereof.

B. All funds of the employers' mutual association and the contingent liability of all the subscribing employers, shall be available for the payment of any claim against the association, prior to any payment of dividends; however, the general funds of the association and the contingent liability of the members of other groups shall not be available, as between the association and its subscribing employers, for the payment of losses and expenses incurred by a particular group in excess of the earned premiums paid by the members thereof, until the whole of the contingent liability of the members of such group shall be exhausted.

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 640, 40 PS Sec. 785.

Section 1705. Dividends.—The board of directors of any employers' mutual liability association may, from time to time, fix and determine the amount to be paid as dividends upon policies expiring each year, after retaining the unearned premiums upon undetermined risks and sufficient sums to pay all the compensation then payable or which may become payable on account of injuries theretofore received by employes of the subscribing employers, and to pay the expenses incurred in the operation of the business of the association, and such percentage of the premiums as have been paid or are payable to create and maintain the surplus hereinafter provided in this article.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 642, 40 PS Sec. 787.

Section 1706. Surplus.—The board of directors of an employers' mutual liability association may set aside such part of all premiums collected as it may deem necessary for the creation of an adequate surplus to cover the catastrophe hazard of all of its subscribing employers and to guarantee the solvency of the association.

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 643, 40 PS Sec. 788.

Seection 1707. Contingent Mutual Liability of Subscribing Employers.—Every subscribing employer of any employers' mutual liability association shall be subject to a contingent mutual liability for the payment of losses and expenses in excess of the cash funds of the association, to an amount at least equal to the premium paid by him during the current year.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 644, 40 PS Sec. 789.

Section 1708. Assessments.—If any employers' mutual liability association is not possessed of cash funds, over and above its unearned premiums on undetermined risks, sufficient for the payment of incurred losses and expenses, it shall make an assessment for the amount needed to pay such losses and expenses upon the subscribing employers liable to assessment therefor, in proportion to their several liabilities.

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 645, 40 PS Sec. 790.

Section 1709. Approval by Department of Premiums, Assessments, Dividends, and Groupings.—Every employers' mutual liability association shall file a statement of any proposed premium, assessment, dividend, or distribution of subscribing employers into groups, with the Department, which shall not take effect until approved by the Department.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 641, 40 PS Sec. 786.

Section 1710. Withdrawal of Subscribing Employers.—Any subscribing employer of any employers' mutual liability association, who has complied with all of its rules and regulations, may withdraw therefrom by written notice to that effect, sent by such employer by registered mail to the association. Such withdrawal shall become effective on the first day of the month immediately following the tenth day after the receipt of such notice. Such withdrawal shall not release such employer from liability for the payment of assessments thereafter made by the board of directors to make up deficiencies existing at the date of his withdrawal, provided assessment therefor is made within one calendar year from date of withdrawal; and such employer shall be entitled to his share of any dividend earned at the date of his withdrawal.

ARTICLE XVIII

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION INSURANCE

Section 1801. Policy Provisions.—Every policy of insurance against liability under The Workmen's Compensation Act of nineteen hundred fifteen, its amendments and supplements, shall contain the agreement of the insurer to pay all compensation and provide all medical, surgical, and hospital attendance for which the insured employer may become liable under such act during the term of such insurance, and the further agreement that, as between the insurer and any claimant under such act, notice to, or knowledge of, the employer of an injury constituting the basis of a claim under such act shall be deemed notice to and knowledge of the insurer. Such agreements shall be construed to be direct promises to the injured employe or to the dependents of a deceased employe having a claim under the act, and shall be enforceable by an action brought in the name of such injured employe or in the name of such dependents. The obligations of the insurer shall not be affected by any default of the insured, after the accident, in the payment of premiums or in the giving of any notices required by such policy or otherwise.

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 655, 40 PS Sec. 811.

Section 1802. Suits for Premiums.—No suit shall be maintained for the collection of premiums upon any policy of insurance under The Workmen's Compensation Act of nineteen hundred fifteen, its amendments and supplements, which violates any of the provisions of this act.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 652, 40 PS Sec. 812.

Section 1803. Prohibited Policy Provisions.—No policy of insurance against liability under The Workmen's Compensation Act of nineteen hundred fifteen, its amendments and supplements, shall contain any limitation of the liability of the insurer to an amount less than that for which the insured employer may become liable under the act during the term of such insurance. No such policy nor any agreement to deliver such policy shall be issued, except upon a form approved by the Department as complying with all the terms and provisions of this act. But a policy may be issued to a self-insured employer providing for the payment of any stated loss in excess of ten thousand dollars falling upon such self-insured employer under the terms of the said act, by reason of any single accident.

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 653, 40 PS Sec. 813.

Section 1804. Classification of Risks; Underwriting Rules; Premium Rates; and Schedule and Merit Rating Plans.—The classification of risks, underwriting rules, premium rates, and schedule or merit rating plans for insurance of employers and employes under The Workmen's Compensation Act of nineteen hundred fifteen, its amendments and supplements, shall be established by one or more rating bureaus, situate within this Commonwealth, subject to supervision and to examination by the Department, and approved by it as being adequately equipped to compile rates on an equitable and impartial basis. Such schedule or merit rating plans shall be applied only by the approved rating bureau or bureaus, and, in the preparation of schedules, no employer shall be discriminated against or penalized because of physical impairment of any employe or because of the number of dependents of any employe.

No risk classification, underwriting rule, premium rate, or schedule or merit plan shall take efffect without the consent and approval of the Department, which may withdraw its approval whenever it deems any one of them as inadequate or discriminating unfairly between risks of essentially the same hazard.

Neither the State Workmen's Insurance Fund nor any insurer or employers' mutual liability association shall issue, renew, or carry any policy or contract of insurance against liability under The Workmen's Compensation Act of one thousand nine hundred fifteen, its amendments and supplements, except in accordance with the classifications, underwriting rules, premium rates, and schedules or merit rating, promulgated by the rating bureau hereinbefore provided in this section for the risk insured, and approved by the Department for the State Workmen's Insurance Fund, or such insurer or association.

A complete copy of every policy or a true copy of the substantive provisions of any policy of insurance against liability under The Workmen's Compensation Act of one thousand nine hundred fifteen, its amendments and supplements, and a true copy of every endorsement upon any such policy and of every agreement pertaining thereto, shall be filed with such rating bureau within a reasonable time after the effective date of any such policy, endorsement, contract, or agreement.

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 654, 40 PS Sec. 814.

Section 1805. Annual Report of Premiums and Loss Experience; Penalties.—A. The State Workmen's Insurance Fund, and every insurance company and every employer's mutual liability association, which insure employers or employes under The Workmen's Compensation Act of one thousand nine hundred fifteen, its amendments and supplements, shall annually, on or before the thirtieth day of June, file with the Department, a sworn report of its premium and loss experience, in such detail and form as may be prescribed by the Department. Every self-inusred employer shall in the same manner file with the Department an annual report of its loss experience. Any such insurance carrier or employer which neglects to make and file such statemnet in the form or within the time herein provided shall forfeit one hundred dollars for each day during which such neglect continues, and, upon notice by the Department, its authority to do business shall cease which such default continues.

B. The Department shall have the power to suspend or revoke the license of any compensation insurer which violates any of the provisions of this article, or has failed to meet any obligation imposed upon it under the terms of The Workmen's Compensation Act of one thousand nine hundred fifteen, its amendments and supplements, or has in any way failed to comply with any of the provisions of such act.

ARTICLE XIX

SURETY COMPANIES

Section 1901. Surety Companies May Become Approved Sureties.—Whenever any person individually, or in any public or private trust, is required or permitted by law to execute or give a bond or undertaking with security, conditioned for the faithful performance of any duty, or for the doing or not doing of anything in said bond or undertaking specified, any head of a department of this Commonwealth, judge of the Supreme Court or prothonotary thereof, judge of a court of Common Pleas or the prothonotary thereof, judge of an orphans' court, register of wills, sheriff, magistrate, or any other officer who is required by law to approve the sufficiency of any such bond or undertaking shall approve it whenever the conditions of such bond or undertaking are guaranteed by a surety company duly authorized by the Department to do business in this Commonwealth, and authorized to guarantee the [illegible] delity of persons holding positions of public or private trust, and whenever such company has filed, in the office of the prothonotary of the county in which the bond is to be approved, a certificate issued by the Department authorizing it to become surety on all bonds, obligations, and undertakings until such certificate has been revoked by the Department.

Pennsylvania Act of June 15, 1885, P. L. 181, Section 1, as amended by the Act of June 29, 1923, P. L. 943, 40 PS Sec. 831.

Section 1902. Restrictions on Amount of Surety Risks; Penalties.—A. Any surety company which is authorized to do business in this Commonwealth shall not expose itself to any loss or hazard on any one fidelity or surety risk in an amount exceeding ten per centum of its capital and surplus, or similar funds required of such company in the place of capital and surplus, unless it shall be protected in excess of that amount by:

(1) Reinsurance in a company authorized to transact the fidelity or surety business in this Commonwealth, if such reinsurance is in a form which enables the obligee or benificiary to maintain an action thereon against the company reinsured jointly with such reinsurer, and, upon recovering judgment against such reinsured, to have recovery against such reinsurer for payment to the extent in which it may be liable under such reinsurance and in discharge thereof; or

(2) The co-suretyship of a surety company authorized to transact business in this Commonwealth; or

(3) A deposit of property with it, in pledge or conveyance to it in trust, for its protection; or

(4) A conveyance or mortgage for its protection; or

(5) When a suretyship obligation is made on behalf or on account of a fiduciary holding property in a trust capacity, a deposit or other disposition of a portion of the property so held in trust that as a result no future sale, mortgage, pledge, or other disposition can be made thereof without the consent of such company, except by decree or order of a court of competent jurisdiction.

B. No such company shall execute suretyship obligations guaranteeing the deposits of any single financial institution in an aggregate amount in excess of ten per centum of the capital and surplus of such surety company, unless it shall be protected in excess of that amount by credits in accordance with the previous provisions of this section.

C. When the penalty of the suretyship obligation exceeds the amount of a judgment described therein as appealed from and thereby secured, or exceeds the amount of the subject matter in controversy or of the estate in the hands of the fiduciary for the performance of whose duties it is conditioned, the bond may be executed if the actual amount of the judgment or the subject matter in controversy or estate not subject to supervision or control of the surety is not in excess of the limitations imposed upon the amount of bonds by this section. When the penalty of the suretyship obligation executed for the performance of a contract exceeds the contract price, the latter shall be taken as the basis for estimating the limit of risk within the meaning of this section.

D. The foregoing restrictions of this section imposed upon the amount of surety risks shall not prevent any surety company authorized to transact business in this Commonwealth from executing what are known as transporation or warehousing bonds for United States internal revenue taxes to an amount equal to fifty per centum of its capital and surplus.

E. Upon satisfactory evidence of the violation of this section by any company, its officers, directors, or attorney-in-fact, the Department shall, in its discretion, take, against the offending party, any one or more of the following courses of action: (1) Revoke the certificate of authority of such offending company; (2) refuse, for a period of not to exceed one year thereafter, to issue a new license to such offending company; (3) impose a penalty of not more than one thousand dollars for each act of violation of said section. When the Department takes any action as above set forth, the party aggrieved may appeal to the Court of Common Pleas of Dauphin County.

F. Any company, or the officers, directors, members, or attorney-in-fact of any company, or any other person, violating any of the provisions of this section, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to pay a fine of not more than five hundred dollars for each and every violation, or to imprisonment in the jail of the county in which the offense is committed for a period of not more than six months, or both.

Section 1903. Effect of Certificate of Authority to do Business.—The certificate of authority to transact business within this Commonwealth issued by the Deparment to a surety company, and the copies of such certificate issued to each agent of such company, shall set forth that such company is authorized to become and be accepted as sole surety on all bonds, undertakings, and obligations required or permitted by law or the charter, ordinances, rules, or regulations of any municipality, board, body, organization, or public officer. Such certificate shall be proof of the solvency and credit of such company for all purposes and of its right to be accepted, and its sufficiency, as sole surety.

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 665, 40 PS Sec. 836.

Section 1906. Financial Condition of Surety Companies.—A. A surety company shall not be permitted to transact business within this Commonwealth at any time during which its liabilities exceed its assets. The amount of its liabilities shall be determined by adding together its capital stock, its outstanding debts, and its unearned premium reserve liability, calculated in accordance with the rules hereinbefore in this act set forth for the computation of unearned premium reserve of casualty companies.

B. Any surety company, which has received notice from the Department that its liabilities have become greater than its assets, shall not issue any new policies, under its authority to do business in this Commonwealth, until its assets have become equal to its liabilities, and it has obtained from the Department a certificate to that effect, with authority to resume business.

Section 1907. Annual Statement of Surety Companies.—The annual statement of every surety company authorized to transact business in this Commonwealth shall contain, in addition to other information required by this act to be contained in annual statements of casualty companies, the following information:

1. The amount of its paid-up cash capital.
2. Each particular item of investment of its funds.
3. The amount of premium on existing bonds upon which it is surety.

4. The amount of unearned premium reserve liability, computed in accordance with the requirements of this act.
5. The amount of its entire outstanding debt.

STEAM BOILER INSURANCE

Section 2001. Insuranc Powers of Companies.—All casualty companies authorized to do business in this Commonwealth, which have the power to insure against loss by the explosion of steam boilers, may insure all loss or damage which the owner or owners of said boiler, or their employes or other persons, may suffer or be liable for in case of an explosion of the boiler, mentioned in any policy of insurance issued by such company for the amount specified therein.

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 671, 40 PS Sec. 851.

Section 2002. Authority to Inspect and Insure Boilers in First Class Cities.—A. Whenever any steam boiler insurance company shall have complied with the provisions of this act relating to casualty companies, it shall be authorized to inspect and insure boilers in all cities of the first class upon the terms and conditions hereinafter imposed by this article, and upon no others.

B. The provisions hereinafter included in this article shall apply only to insurance and inspection of steam boilers located in cities of the first class.

Pennsylvania Act of March 11, 1891, P. L. 5, Section 1, 40 PS 852.

Comments:

The ensuing sections of this article codify in a modified form the Act of 1891, cited above, relating to steam boiler insurance in cities of the first class. These sections are included in this draft because they relate to boiler insurance, and prescribe certain rules and regulations for the conduct of boiler insurance companies.

Section 2003. Interest in Manufacture of Steam Boilers; Inspectors to be Sworn.—Neither a steam boiler insurance company nor its executive officers shall, directly or indirectly, be interested in the manufacture or sale of steam boilers or of any of the appliances connected with steam engines and boilers. The company shall employ skillful and competent persons for the inspection of steam boilers, who, before entering upon their duties, shall be duly sworn or affirmed that they will not accept, for the performance of their duties, any money, gift, gratuity or consideration whatsoever, from any person or persons other than the company which employs them, and that they will not, directly or indirectly, be interested in the manufacture or sale of steam boilers, or of any of the appliances connected with steam engines and boilers.

Pennsylvania Act of March 11, 1891, P. L. 5, Section 2, Article 1, 40 PS Sec. 853.

Section 2004. Issuance of Steam Boiler Policies.—Any policy of steam boiler insurance shall not cover a longer period than three years, and steam boiler insurance shall not be effected until the boiler has been inspected and tested, and its inspection test, condition, attachments and indicators have been found to conform in all respects to the provisions of the existing city ordinance for the inspection of steam engines and boilers, and such ordinance or ordinances as may hereafter be enacted, and the details of such inspection, test, attachments and indicators have been furnished the city inspector in the form hereinafter provided for.

Pennsylvania Act of March 11, 1891, P. L. 5, Section 2, Article 2, 40 PS Sec. 854.

Section 2005. Rate of Premium.—Any policy of steam boiler insurance issued by such company shall not be valid, unless the premium upon such policy, including the fee paid to the city inspector shall be equal to or exceed in amount one and one-half times the charges prescribed by the city ordinance for the inspection of steam boilers. Such policy shall not be cancelled or modified, if, as a result of such cancellation or modification, the premium is less than the amount herein provided for, unless the company immediately notifies the city inspector in writing of such cancellation or modification, together with the reasons therefor.

Pennsylvania Act of March 11, 1891, P. L. 5, Section 2, Article 3, 40 PS Sec. 855.

Section 2006. Companies to Issue Certificates of Inspection.—Whenever a steam boiler insurance company has inspected a boiler or boilers as hereinbefore in this article provided, and has issued a policy of insurance thereupon, it shall be the duty of such company at the same time to issue a certificate of inspection, which shall set forth that the inspection, tests, attachments and indicators have been found to be in accordance with the requirements of the city ordinances. Such certificate shall also state the number of pounds pressure to which the boilers have been subjected in testing, together with the amount of pressure the user is authorized by city ordinance to carry within the boilers. It shall further state that the boilers so inspected, have been insured in such company, and that the holder of the certificate is required to maintain it in a conspicuous place near the boiler or boilers to which it refers.

Pennsylvania Act of March 11, 1891, P. L. 5, Section 2, Article 4, 40 PS Sec. 856.

Section 2007. Cancellation or Modification of Policy to Render Certificate Invalid.—If, for any cause, a steam boiler insurance company shall cancel a policy of insurance issued in accordance with the provisions of this act, or shall so modify the policy that the premiums shall be less than the amount hereinbefore in this article provided for, such cancellation or modifications shall render the certificate of inspection previously issued invalid, and notice of such cancellation shall be communicated to the city inspector immediately.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Act of March 11, 1891, P. L. 5, Section 2, Article 5, 40 PS Sec. 857.

Section 2008. Companies to Execute Printed Forms.—It shall be the duty of every steam boiler insurance company, or its authorized agents, to complete and execute the printed forms, furnished by the inspector of steam engines and boilers for any city of the first class, which provide for the insertion of the details of inspection, and in addition thereto, to complete and execute the forms of certificate, furnished by such inspector, which set forth that the premiums upon the policy of insurance to be issued in connection with the certificate of inspection equals or exceeds the amount of premium hereinbefore in this article provided.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Act of March 11, 1891, P. L. 5, Section 2, Article 6, 40 PS Sec. 858.

Comments:

The present Act of 1891, cited supra, contains also provisions governing the issue of a certificate of insuection by the city's inspector, and provides for his fee. These provisions are omitted from this draft, because they are not directly related to the insurance laws, and should properly be within the scope of the laws relating to first class cities.

Section 2009. Notice of Withdrawal of Certificate of Inspection.—If the inspector of steam engines and boilers for first class cities withholds or withdraws a certificate of inspection by reason of the incompetence or unreliability of the engineer, or because he considers the boiler or boilers unsafe, the written notice of his withdrawal which he gives to the user of the boiler or boilers, and the company issuing the policy thereon, shall be equivalent to the removal of the certificate, and shall render the policy of insurance upon all boilers to which said certificate had reference void and of no effect.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Act of March 11, 1891, P. L. 5, Section 2, Articles 6 and 7, 40 PS Secs. 858 and 859.

Section 2010. Violation of Act a Misdemeanor.—If any inspector of a steam boiler insurance company shall aid in procuring an insurance of any stationary steam engine or boiler which does not comply with the conditions, or stand the test provided for in the ordinance of all cities of the first class relative to boiler inspection, or which is not provided with the attachments and indicators required by such ordinance, or by such ordinance or ordinances as may hereafter be enacted, or shall knowingly permit an insurance policy to continue upon any stationary steam engine or boiler in said city, not furnished as aforesaid, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof in the court of quarter sessions for the said county, shall, for each offense, be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding five thousand dollars, and to undergo imprisonment in the jail of said county, either with or without labor, as the court may direct, for a term not exceeding two years.

MUTUAL COMPANIES OTHER THAN MUTUAL LIFE COMPANIES

Section 2101. Policy Provisions.—Mutual companies other than mutual life companies may insert, in any form of insurance policy prescribed by this act, any provisions or conditions required by its plan of insurance which are not inconsistent or in conflict with any law of this Commonwealth. Any policy issued by such companies may, in lieu of conforming to the language and form of policies prescribed by this act, conform thereto in substance, if such policy includes a provision or endorsement which stipulates that the policy shall be construed as having the same effect as if it were written in the language and form prescribed by this act. No such company shall issue any policy unless a copy of such policy and endorsements, if any, has been first filed with, and shall have been approved by, the Department.

Comments:

This article contains substantially the same material as Article VIII of the Insurance Company Law now contains. Section 801 of the Insurance Company Law is covered by Section 2801 et seq. of this draft; Sections 802 and 803 are covered by Secions 310, 311, 312, and 313 of this draft; Section 805 is included in Section 2811 of this draft.

Section 2102. Premiums.—The maximum premium payable by any member of a mutual company, other than a mutual life company, shall be expressed in the policy, or in the application for the insurance if attached to the policy. Such maximum premium shall be a cash premium and an additional contingent premium not less than the cash premium or may be solely a cash premium. No policy shall be issued for a cash premium without an additional contingent premium, unless the company has a surplus which is at least equal in amount to the unearned premiums on the policies without contingent premiums, or which is not less in amount than the capital required of domestic stock companfes transacting the same classes of insurance.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 806, 40 PS Sec. 916.

Section 2103. Reserves.—A mutual company other than a mutual life company shall maintain unearned premium and other reserves separately, for each kind of insurance, upon the same basis as that required of domestic stock companies transacting the same classes of insurance; however, the Department may, by written order, fix a different basis of reserve for losses and claims in compensation insurance. Any reserve for losses or claims based upon the premium income shall be computed upon the net premium income, after deducting any so-called dividend or premium returned or credited to the member. A domestic mutual fire company shall be required to maintain unearned premium reserves only for those policies which, by their provisions or by the provisions of the promissory note attached to such policies, exclude the policyholder from liability to assessment.[1]

Reference:

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 807, 40 PS Sec. 917.

Comments:

1. A domestic mutual fire company which issues non-assessable policies should be subject to the same reserve requirements as domestic stock fire companies. Compare this section with Section 1309 of this draft, where the issue of such policies is authorized.

Section 2104. Assessments.—A mutual company other than a mutual life company which is not possessed of assets at least equal to the unearned premium reserve and other liabilities, shall make an assessment upon its members liable to assessment for the purpose of providing for such deficiency. Such assessment shall be against each member in proportion to his liability, as it is expressed in his policy. The Department may, by written order, relieve the company from an assessment or other proceedings to restore such assets during the time fixed in such order. Any domestic company which shall be deficient in providing the unearned premium reserve required hereby may, notwithstanding such deficiency, come under this act on the condition that it shall each year thereafter reduce such deficiency at least fifteen per centum of the original amount thereof, and in such case it may increase its assessments accordingly.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 808, 40 PS Sec. 918.

Section 2105. Loans to Companies.—Any director, officer, or member of any mutual company other than a mutual life company may advance to such company any sum or sums of money necessary for the purpose of its business or to enable it to comply with any of the requirements of the law. Such moneys, and such interest thereon as may have been agreed upon, not exceeding ten per centum per annum, shall not be a liability or claim against the company or any of its assets, and shall be repaid only out of the surplus earnings of such company. No commission or promotion expenses shall be paid in connection with the advance of any such money to the company, and the amount of such advance shall be reported in each annual statement.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 809, 40 PS Sec. 919.

Comments:

Section 809 of The Insurance Company Law now permits, in addition to directors, officers, or members of mutual companies, any other person to advance money to such company. As the law now stands, a company could borrow from any person and not be liable for the return of the funds, at least not until its surplus earnings justified its returning the funds. This proposed section permits companies to borrow money only from their directors, officers or members.

ARTICLE XXII

TITLE INSURANCE COMPANIES

Section 2201. Power to Insure Titles to Real Estate; Loss of Power.—A. Every corporation which, upon the effective date of this act, shall lawfully possess and which has, within one year prior to such date, exercised the power to insure owners of real property, mortgagees and others interested in real property from loss by reason of defective titles, liens and encumbrances, shall, subject to the conditions herein prescribed, continue to possess such power.

B. Every corporation which shall possess the power to insure owners of real property, mortgagees and others interested in real property from loss by reason of defective titles, liens, and encumbrances, but which does not hereafter exercise such power for any consecutive period of one year, shall be forever barred from the exercise of such power.

Act of June 10, 1893, P. L. 435, 15 PS Sec. 2.

Comments:

The Corporation Act of 1874, supra, provides that corporations may be formed for the purpose of insuring titles to real estate. The Act of 1889, supra, grants the power to corporations formed for such purpose to accept deposits and engage in a fiduciary business. Although the power to insure titles is thus a charter power, a nonusage of such power for a period of one year is a sufficient basis for the removal of the power.

The laws of New York contain a similar prohibition, but provide that any bank and trust company not exercising such power upon the effective date of their statute, however short the period during which the power has not been exercised, shall be forever barred from insuring titles.

This limitation has been placed upon these institutions for the reason that the potential contingent liabilities arising from these contracts or policies of title insurance introduce an undesirable element of uncertainty into the general banking business. The assumption of insurance risks is not essentially a function of trust companies, or of institutions which accept deposits. Not only does the insuring of titles subject the depositors and others interested in the trust companies to uncertain risks, but it also makes the ascertainment of the exact financial condition of a trust company virtually impossible. The laws of most states, likewise provide that the business of insuring titles of real estate shall be limited to corporations doing only that type of business.

It is understood that the Federal Reserve Board requests all Pennsylvania trust companies, which possess the power to insure titles and which come into the Federal Reserve System, to agree to refrain from any exercise of the power to insure titles, unless they receive the specific written approvel of the Federal Reserve Board, an approval which, it is understood, is virtually never granted.

Section 1112 of the proposed Banking Code (1933), which was recently prepared by the Department of Justice and submitted to the Legislature in the form of a proposed act contains provisions similar to those found in the present section. See also the comment to that section of the proposed Banking Code.

Section 2202. Power to Accept Deposits; Loss Thereof.—If any corporation which shall possess the power to insure owners of real property, mortgagees, and others interested in real property from loss by reason of defective titles, liens and encumbrances, and also the further powers to receive deposits or otherwise to engage in a banking business, shall not have exercised, within one year preceding the effective date of this act, any of such further powers, then every such corporation shall be forever barred from the exercise of such further powers to receive deposits or otherwise engage in a banking business. If any such corporation shall not hereafter exercise any of such further powers for any consecutive period of one year, then each such corporation shall be forever barred from the exercise of such powers to receive deposits or otherwise engage in a banking business.

Comments:

This section and the one immediately following supplement the preceding section of this article in the separation of the business of insuring titles from that of banking and acting in a fiduciary capacity. See the comment to the preceding section of this draft.

As to corporations formed under the Corporation Act of 1874, its amendments and supplements, the powers to receive deposits or otherwise engage in a banking business and to exercise fiduciary functions are not charter powers but are conferred by subsequent statutes.

With respect to trust companies formed under a special act of the Legislature, there are existent at the present time six special charter trust companies. Four of these were incorporated after the amendment of 1857 to the Constitution of 1838. That amendment provides: "The legislature shall have the power to alter, revoke, or annul any charter of incorporation hereafter conferred by or under any special or general law whenever, in their opinion, it may be injurious to the citizens of the commonwealth, in such manner, however, that no injustice shall be done to the corporators." The remaining two charters contain specific provisions whereby the Legislature reserves the right to alter, revoke or annul.

As a further ground for the withdrawal of these powers, there is the principle that it is within the power of the Legislature to declare forfeited any corporate powers which have not been exercised within a reasonable period of time.

Section 2203. Power to Act as a Fiduciary.—If any corporation shall possess the power to insure owners of real property, mortgagees, and others interested in real property from loss by reason of defective titles, liens and encumbrances, and also the further powers to act as trustee, guardian, executor, administrator, or in any other similar fiduciary capacity shall not have exercised, within one year preceding the effective date of this act, any of such further powers, then every such corporation shall be forever barred from the exercise of any of such further powers which it shall not have exercised during such year. If any such corporation shall not hereafter exercise any of such further powers for any consecutive period of one year, then each such corporation shall be forever barred from the exercise of any of such further powers which it shall not have exercised during such year.

Section 2204. Establishment and Maintenance of Reserve Fund.—Each company which shall possess the power to insure owners of real property, mortgagees, and others interested in real property from loss by reason of defective titles, liens and encumbrances, shall establish and maintain a reserve fund by setting aside a sum equal to ten per centum of the premium paid on each policy of insurance which such company shall issue, until the total amount of the reserve fund shall equal two hundred and fifty thousand dollars. For the purposes of this article, the word "premium" shall mean the sum charged by the company for such insurance; it shall not include any sums charged for examinations or settlements. However, in lieu of thus accumulating the reserve fund, any such company may, after having secured the consent of the Department, set aside the total reserve fund at any one time or from time to time out of the earned surplus.

The investments of the reserve fund shall be carried at their cost price, but in no case, at an amount greater than their market price.

Such reserve fund shall be maintained as herein provided so long as there shall be any possible liability on any outstanding policy.

The provisions of this section are similar to those of the Act of 1929, cited supra.

Section 2205. Cancellation of Policy.—When the holder of any policy of title insurance which shall have been issued since the twenty-sixth day of April, one thousand nine hundred twenty-nine, shall have surrendered such policy, or if any policy of title insurance which shall have been issued since such date shall be cancelled, or liability thereon completely discharged, the company which shall have issued such policy of title insurance may withdraw the reserve of such policy or credit such reserve against any reserve that may be due.

B. The income from the reserve fund shall become a part of the general assets of the company.

Section 2207. Trust Fund; Depletion of Reserve Fund.—A. The principal of such reserve fund shall be a trust for the protection of the policyholders and shall be applied only to the payment of losses and expenses incurred by reason of the policies of title insurance.

B. If by reason of losses, depreciation in the market price of any investments, or other cause, the reserve fund of any such company should on any date be less than the minimum amount herein required to be maintained in such reserve fund on such date, such company shall forthwith give written notice thereof to the Department, and shall make no further contracts or policies or insurance until the reserve fund has been restored or until it shall have received a certificate from the Department authorizing it to issue such policies.

ARTICLE XXIII

MORTGAGE INSURANCE COMPANIES

Section 2301. Restrictions.—A mortgage insurance company shall not do any of the following acts:[1]

(1) Issue any policy of mortgage insurance guaranteeing the payment of any security except that which shall be a first lien upon a marketable title in fee to the property covered thereby.

(2) Issue any policy of mortgage insurance guaranteeing the payment of any portion of the principal of any security when the principal of such security shall exceed fifty per centum of the market value of the real estate and improvements covered by such security.[2]

(3) Issue any policy of mortgage insurance which would cause the aggregate amount of the unpaid principals of all of the securities guaranteed by outstanding policies of such company to exceed an amount equal to twenty times the amount of the company's paid-in capital.[3]

(4) Issue any mortgage participation certificate which would cause the aggregate amount of the outstanding mortgage participation certificates, which are based on the same security or group of securities, to exceed the amount of the unpaid principal of the debt or debts evidenced by such particular security or group of securities.

(5) Reduce its capital stock to an amount less than one hundred twenty-five thousand dollars.

(6) Grant any loan directly or indirectly to any of its officers, directors, or employes.

Insurance Laws of California, Section 453cc.
Insurance Laws of Oregon, Section 46-1203.

Comments:

1. The provisions of this article are new to the insurance law of the Commonwealth.

The Act of 1907, supra, permits all trust companies incorporated under the Corporation Act of 1874 to guarantee the payment of principal and interest of bonds secured by mortgages upon real property. The Act of 1929, supra, grants the same authority to banks, but restricts the amount of such guarantees to the combined capital and surplus of the institution.

Section 1021 of the proposed Banking Code (1933) which has recently been prepared by the Department of Justice and submitted to the Legislature in the form of a proposed act prohibits all of these institutions from guaranteeing the payment of the principal and interest of bonds or other obligations secured by mortgages upon real property.

This restriction has been placed upon such institutions for the reason that the potential contingent liabilities arising from these contracts of policies of mortgage guarantee introduce an undesirable element of uncertainty into the banking business. The assumption of insurance risks is not essentially a function of banks and trust companies. Not only does the guaranteeing of mortgages subject the depositors and others interested in the banks and trust companies to uncertain risks, but it also makes the ascertainment of the exact financial condition of a banking institution virtually impossible. Such a condition of uncertainty is undesirable in the banking business. The laws of most other states do not grant to banking institutions the authority to make such guarantees. See the note to Section 1021 of the proposed Banking Code, supra.

Under the provisions of this proposed insurance code, separate companies may be formed for the express purpose of guaranteeing or insuring the principal and interest of mortgages. These companies, being insurance companies will be subject to the supervision of the Insurance Department.

Neither the Act of 1907, supra, which granted to trust companies formed under the Corporation Act of 1874, the power of guaranteeing mortgages, nor the Act of 1929, supra, which granted a similar power to banks, contained any restrictions upon the exercise of the power, except that the Act of 1929, limited the amount of guarantees which the banks could make to the total of the capital and surplus of the respective institutions.

It is the intent of this section to provide a greater guarantee of safety to those who have invested in and are insured by these companies.

2. The provisions of the first two paragraphs of this section have been drawn from general business usage. Restricting these companies to mortgages the amounts of which shall not be in excess of fifty per centum of the market value of the property covered thereby, and which are first liens, will not unduly confine the scope of their business; it will, however, prevent the assumption of unnecessary risks.

3. Experience in other states has shown that the total amount of the guarantees should not exceed this limit. See the codes of California and Oregon, supra.

Section 2302. Reserve Fund.—Each mortgage insurance company, before issuing any policy of mortgage insurance, shall set aside the sum of one hundred thousand dollars as a reserve fund for the protection of its policyholders.

Each such company shall set aside a sum equal to ten per centum of all fees received by it in the course of its business until the total amount of the reserve fund, including the original one hundred thousand dollars herein provided, shall equal two hundred and fifty thousand dollars. However, in lieu of thus accumulating the reserve fund, any such company may, after having secured the consent of the Department, set aside the total reserve fund at any one time or from time to time out of the earned surplus.

The investments of the reserve fund shall be carried at their cost price, but in no case, at an amount greater than their market price.

Such reserve fund shall be maintained as herein provided so long as there shall be any possible liability on any outstanding policies.

As used in this section, the word "fees" shall mean the compensation or charge which a mortgage insurance company shall receive for its guaranteeing or insuring the payment of the principal, interest or other sum, or any of them, agreed to be paid under the terms of any security.

Comments:

Inasmuch as the business of guaranteeing the payment of the principal and interest of mortgages is one of insurance and involves the assumption of contingent liabilities, these companies should be required to set up definite reserves as a protection to their policyholders.

An analogous situation, where a reserve is required, is found in the case of title insurance companies. By the Act of 1929, P. L. 834, 40 PS Sec. 151, they are required to maintain reserves. These reserves are formed by setting aside ten per centum of each premium until the total amount thus placed into the reserve fund equals two hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

The requirement as to the original one hundred thousand dollars has been adopted in order that the persons or corporations who, early in the history of the mortgage guarantee company take out policies with it, may have the requisite protection. It will require a considerable length of time to build up any sizeable reserve by means of the setting aside of ten per centum of the fees received by the company.

Section 2303. Trust Fund; Depletion of Reserve Fund.—The principal of such reserve fund shall be a trust for the protection of the policyholders, and shall be applied only to the payment of losses and expenses incurred by reason of the policies of mortgage insurance.[1]

If by reason of losses, depreciation in the market price of any investments, or other cause, the reserve fund of any mortgage insurance company should, on any date, be less than the minimum amount herein required to be maintained in such reserve fund on such date, such company shall forthwith give written notice thereof to the Department, and shall make no further contracts or policies of mortgage insurance until the reserve fund has been restored, nor until it shall have received a certificate from the Department authorizing it to issue such policies.

Section 2305. Annual Statements.—Every mortgage insurance company shall annually, on dates to be determined by the Department, make a report in writing to the Department. Such statement shall be verified by the oath of its president or vice-president, and of its secretary or treasurer, or of any two of its principal officers, and shall, concerning each new policy of mortgage insurance issued by such company since the last preceding report, specifically set forth whether such policy constitutes an entire mortgage guarantee or a mortgage participation certificate.

Comments:

This and the following four sections set forth the manner in which mortgage insurance companies shall make their reports to the Department pertaining to the issuance of new policies of insurance. By means of these reports, the Department will be able to ascertain whether or not the respective companies are complying with the provisions of law relating to the guaranteeing of mortgages.

Section 2306. Information Concerning Policies of Entire Mortgage Guarantee.—When any such company shall have issued during the period covered by any such statement one or more new policies of an entire mortgage guarantee, such statement shall set forth separately the following facts regarding the security on which each such policy is based:

(1) The aggregate amount of the unpaid principal of the indebtedness evidenced by such security.

(2) A description of the property covered by such security.

(3) The market value of the land and the market value of the improvements thereon, if any, as shown by an appraisement which shall have been made as herein provided.

(4) The book and page of the record of the mortgage which is a part of such security.

Comments:

This section sets forth the data which the reports made by mortgage insurance companies must contain in so far as new policies of entire mortgage guarantee are concerned. The following section of this draft contains similar provisions concerning new mortgage participation certificates.

Section 2307. Information Concerning Policies Which Are Mortgage Participation Certificates.—When any such company shall have issued during the period covered by any such statement one or more new policies which are mortgage participation certificates, such statement shall separately set forth, directly or by reference to a previous statement, the following facts regarding the security or securities on which each such policy is based:

(1) The aggregate amount of the unpaid principal of the indebtedness evidenced and secured by such security or securities, and, if there be more than one security, the amount of the unpaid principal of the indebtedness evidenced and secured by each such security.

(2) A description of the property covered by each such security.

(3) The market value of the land covered by each such security and the market value of the improvements thereon, if any, as shown by an appraisement made as provided herein.

(4) The aggregate value of all such land and improvements.

(5) The book and page of the record of each mortgage which is a part of such security or securities.

(6) The aggregate amount of the mortgage participation certificates issued outstanding and based upon the particular security or group of securities on which each mortgage participation certificate so reported is based.

Section 2308. Appraisements.—Each such mortgage insurance company shall file with each such statement an appraisement of each separate parcel of property mentioned in the report. Each such appraisement shall have been made by a corporation or person approved by the Department. Each such appraisement shall state the market value of each parcel of land and of the improvements, if any, thereon, together with a general statement of the character of such land and of the kind and condition of such improvements.

Each such appraisement shall be signed and verified by such appraiser, or by an officer of the corporation which shall have made such appraisement. Each such appraisement shall be accompanied by a certificate signed and verified by at least three officers of such mortgage insurance company to the effect that in the opinoin of the affiants and each of them:

(1) The appraisement is correct.

(2) The amount of the appraisement does not exceed the market value of the property.

(3) The principal amount loaned on such property does not exceed fifty per centum of the market value of such property.

(4) The mortgage insurance company has in its possession or control evidence of title consisting of a full abstract of title, a full certificate of guarantee of title or a policy of title insurance showing that the mortgage securing such loan is a first lien upon a marektable title in fee to the property covered thereby.

Comments:

Inasmuch as the value of the real estate covered by the various mortgage insurance policies is one of the most important elements in the determination of whether or not a new policy of mortgage insurance has been issued in compliance with the requirements and restrictions of this article, the requirements for the appraisal have been set forth in detail in this section. The requirement that the appraisement shall have been made by a corporation or person approved by the Department will enable the Department to maintain an adequate check on the mortgage insurance companies, at least in so far as the amount of the guarantees are concerned.

Section 2309. Penalty For Failure to File Statement.—If any such mortgage insurance company shall neglect or fail to make any such annual statement, as herein required, such company shall forfeit to the Commonwealth the sum of ten dollars for each day during which such negect or failure shall continue.

Section 2310. Effect of Violations of Statutory Restrictions.—A violation of any of the restrictions imposed in this article upon mortgage insurance companies shall not make any security or any policy of mortgage insurance void or voidable; but any officer, director, agent, or employe of any mortgage insurace company who knowingly participates in or consents to any violation of any of the terms or provisions of this article shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction thereof shall be fined not less than fifty dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, or be sentenced to imprisonment for not less than thirty days nor more than one year, or both, at the discretion of the court.

Comments:

The policy of the two above cited codes on this subject has been adopted in this section.

The fact that a mortgage insurance company issues a policy of insurance to guarantee the payment of a mortgage which, in amount, exceeds fifty per centum of the market value of the property covered by the mortgage, and other similar violations of the restrictions set forth in this article should not affect the liability of the company on the policy. The criminal offense should, of itself, provide a sufficient deterrent.

ARTICLE XXIV

LLOYDS ASSOCIATIONS

Section 2401. Insurance on Lloyds Plan Authorized.—Associations as defined by this act may be authorized to engage in the business of insurance in this Commonwealth as insurers on the Lloyds plan, in accordance with the provisions of this act, but not otherwise.

Reference:

Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 901, 40 PS Sec. 931.

Comments:

This entire article is taken from the present law where it appears as Article IX. To date no certificate of authority has been issued by the Insurance Commissioner to a group operating on the Lloyds plan—consequently there has been no experience gained from a practical application of this part of the act since it became law. There have been no reasons or suggestions for change in the substance of the law. There are slight changes in phraseology.

Section 2402. Powers.—Associations, when authorized as hereinafter provided, shall have the power to transact the same classes of insurance which domestic stock fire and marine companies are authorized by this act to transact, and in addition thereto shall have the power to make any other insurances, except life insurance, if not contrary to law, and if allied or in harmony with the classes of insurance in which stock fire and marine companies may engage. Such additional insurance shall be transacted only on express license by the Department, and upon such terms and conditions as are from time to time prescribed by it.

Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 902, 40 PS Sec. 932.

Comments:

There is no need to repeat in this section the contents of subsection (1) of Section 304 of this code. The various powers are repeated in the present act.

Section 2403. Filing of Declaration; Contents.—Associations shall file with the Department a declaration, signed and sworn to by one or more of their duly authorized attorneys-in-fact, setting forth:

(1) The name or title under which the business is to be conducted, which name shall not be so similar to any existing association or exchange or to that of any company, as in the opinion of the Department is calculated to confuse or deceive.

(2) The location of the principal office at which the business is to be conducted.

(3) A copy of the form of power of attorney, agreement, or other authority of each attorney-in-fact, setting forth the character of each representative, his authority, and the agreement between the parties forming the association.

(4) Copies of the forms of policy, contracts, or agreements under or by which insurance is to be effected.

(5) The names and addresses of all the underwriters proposing to engage in such business.

(6) The class or classes of insurance to be written.

(7) That a fund for the protection of policyholders is in the possession, within the United States, of one or more attorneys-in-fact, or a committee for such association, and is in cash or is invested as required by the laws of the state in which the principal office of the underwriters is located in respect to securities deposited by companies authorized to transact similar classes of insurance. Such fund shall be not less than one hundred thousand dollars, if the applicants desire to be authorized to transact any one class of insurance which domestic stock fire and marine companies are by this act authorized to transact, and such fund shall be not less than two hundred thousand dollars, if the applicants desire to be authorized to transact any two or all of the classes of insurance which stock fire and marine companies are authorized to transact.

(8) The number of members of the association, which shall not be less than twenty-five, and that each member is worth, in his own right, not less than twenty thousand dollars, over and above all his debts and liabilities.

(9) A statement showing a list of all cash and invested assets owned by the members of the association and their estimated value.

The Department may, in its discretion, by a writing to be filed and kept in the Department, waive the filing of any part of the declaration mentioned on the part of the members of the association as are lawfully doing business in this Commonwealth at the time this act takes effect, and who have heretofore filed such duly verified information with the Department.

Section 2404. Certificate of Authority to Do Business.—A If, following receipt of the documents hereinbefore specified, it shall appear to the Department as a result of its examination that all the statements made in the said declaration are true, and that the rights of the policyholders will be protected thereunder, and that the financial responsibility of the association is sufficient to assure the performance of their contracts, the Department may issue a certificate of authority to such association, under the name chosen and approved, stating that it is authorized to transact the business of insurance specified in said declaration.[1]

B. Such certificate of authority shall be renewed annually; and no member of the association, attorney-in-fact, agent, or other person shall transact the business of insurance in this Commonwealth for such association until such certificate has been issued, nor during its suspension, revocation, or lapse.[2]

C. Upon violation of any of the provisions of this article the Department may revoke or suspend such certificate of authority.[3]

Insurance Company Law of 1921, Sections 904, 905 and 913, 40 PS Secs. 934 and 943.

Comments:

1. This clause now appears as Section 905 of the present law, and is included here as it provides a condition precedent to the issuance of a certificate of authority.
2. The words "or lapse" are added to the present phraseology of the act as it is obviously not proper for an association to do business if it has for any reason allowed its certificate to lapse.
3. This clause now appears in substance as Section 913 of the present law.

Section 2405. Deposits by Alien Underwriters.—If any underwriter applying for a certificate of authority hereunder is not a citizen of the United States, each such alien underwriter shall, at the time of the making of the aforesaid application for certificate of authority, deposit with the Department the sum of five thousand dollars in cash, or in securities such as are now required for the investment of the capital of companies authorized to do similar kinds of insurance business in this Commonwealth. The provisions of this section as to deposits shall not apply if such alien underwriter is one of an association of underwriters having on deposit with the insurance department of any state of the United States, a cash deposit or approved securities, worth not less than one hundred thousand dollars, held in trust for the benefit of all their policyholders in the United States; nor shall this section as to deposits apply if such alien underwriter is one of an association of underwriters nine-tenths of whom are at all times citizens of the United States, and who have complied with all other provisions of this act.

Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 906, 40 PS Sec. 936.

Section 2406. Return of Deposits.—After the conditions of any deposits made under the provisions of this act have been fulfilled, and the certificate of authority granted to such underwriters has been cancelled, or they have voluntarily withdrawn from and have ceased doing business in this Commonwealth, the Department shall return to said underwriters, or their duly authorized representative for this purpose specifically designated by them, or their principal attorney or attorneys-in-fact, all securities and cash so deposited in this Commonwealth.

Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 907, 40 PS Sec. 937.

Section 2407. Additional and Substituted Underwriters.—Whenever underwriters, applying for certificates of authority hereunder, after the issue of such certificate, are joined by other underwriters, additional or substituted, such additional or substituted underwriters must comply with the provisions of this act, and shall be held to be bound by the documents on file with the Department concerning such authorized underwriters, in the same manner and to the same extent as though they had been original applicants for the certificates of authority.

Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 908, 40 PS Sec. 938.

Section 2408. Information to be Furnished to Department.—Any association authorized hereunder shall, from time to time, furnish to the Department, under oath of one or more of its attorneys-in-fact, such information as the Department may require respecting the conduct of its affairs, changes in the name under which said business is done, the establishment of branch offices and their location, and any change in the membership of the association and in its attorneys-in-fact, including any amendment to the powers of attorney, agreements, or articles of association.

Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 909, 40 PS Sec. 939.

Section 2409. Maximum Amounts of Risks.—No association authorized to do business in this Commonwealth, under the terms hereof, shall expose itself to loss on any one risk to an amount in excess of one-fifth of its cash and invested assets, including therein the underwriting liability of the individual members, unless any excess shall be promptly reinsured by said association.

Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 910, 40 PS Sec. 940.

Section 2410. Supervision by and Reports to Department; Taxation.—All associations authorized hereunder and their representatives shall, respectively, be subject to the same supervision by, and required to make the same reports to, the Department, as is required of foreign companies and their representatives transacting the same or similar classes of insurance in this Commonwealth; and they shall pay the same taxes and license fees as are required to be paid by such companies and their representatives.

Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 911, 40 PS Sec. 941.

Section 2411. Penalty.—Any person who, as principal, attorney, agent, broker, or other representatives, shall engage in the business contemplated by this article, or any variety or part thereof, without complying with the requirements thereof, or who shall violate any provisions of this article, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars.[1]

Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 914, 40 PS Sec. 944.

Comments:

Section 912 of the present law, excepting inter-insurance and reciprocal underwriters from the provisions of the article on Lloyds Associations, is not included here. Article XXV following hereafter patently refers to such insurers.

1. The amount of the fine now provided is five hundred dollars. It is thought desirable to increase this to at lesat double that amount.

ARTICLE XXV

RECIPROCAL AND INTER-INSURANCE EXCHANGES

Section 2501. Exchange of Contracts Authorized.—Individuals, partnerships, and corporations of this Commonwealth, herein designated subscribers, are hereby authorized to exchange reciprocal or inter-insurance contracts with each other, or with individuals, partnerships, and corporations of other states and countries, providing indemnity among themselves from any loss which may be insured against under any provision of the insurance laws excepting those losses covered by life insurance.

Insurance Company Law of 1921, P. L. 682, Article X, Section 1001, 40 PS Sec. 961.

Comments:

This entire article with slight changes in phraseology is taken from the present law. The Insurance Department is substituted for the Commissioner for the reason that The Administrative Code imposes the duties of the Commissioner on the Department. There is an exception to this where the Commissioner is made attorney for a foreign insurer, a personal relationship which the Department could not have.

Section 2502. Corporations Authorized to Exchange Contracts.—Any corporation, now or hereafter organized under the laws of this Commonwealth, shall, in addition to the rights, powers and franchises specified in its articles of incorporation, have full power and authority to exchange insurance contracts of the kind and character mentioned in this article. The right to exchange such contracts is hereby declared to be incidental to the purpose for which such corporations are organized, and as much granted as the rights and powers expressly conferred.

Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 1002, 40 PS Sec. 962.

Section 2503. Execution of Contracts.—Contracts may be executed by an attorney, agent, or other representative duly authorized and acting for such subscribers, and any one so acting is hereby designated as attorney for the purposes of this article.

Reference:

Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 1003, 40 PS Sec. 963.

Section 2504. Declaration to be Filed With Department; Contents.—Such subscribers, so contracting among themselves, shall, through their attorney, file with the Department a declaration, verified by the oath of such attorney, setting forth:

(1) The name or title of the office at which such subscribers propose to exchange such indemnity contracts. Such name or title shall not be so similar to that previously adopted by a similar exchange or association or by any insurance company as, in the opinion of the Department, is calculated to confuse or deceive.

(2) The location of the office or offices from which such contracts or agreements are to be issued.

(3) A copy of the form of policy, contract, or agreement, under or by which such insurance is to be effected or exchanged.

(4) A copy of the form of power of attorney, or other authority of such attorney, under which such insurance is to be effected or exchanged, and which shall provide that the liability of the subscribers, exchanging contracts of indemnity, shall make provision for contingent liability, equal to not less than one additional annual premium or deposit charged.

(5) The kind or kinds of insurance to be effected or exchanged.

(6) That applications have been made for indemnity upon at least one hundred separate risks, aggregating not less than one and one-half million dollars as represented by executed contracts or bona fide applications to become concurrently effective, or, in case of employes' liability or compensation insurance, covering a total payroll of not less than one and one-half million dollars.

(7) That there is in the possession of such attorney, and available for the payment of losses, the sum of not less than one hundred thousand dollars.

Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 1004, 40 PS Sec. 964, as last amended by the Act of April 9, 1929, P. L. 464.

Section 2505. Certificate of Authority.—Each attorney, by or through whom are issued any policies of or contracts for indemnity of the character referred to in this article, shall procure from the Department, annually, a certificate of authority stating that all the requirements of this act have been complied with.

Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 1005, 50 PS Sec. 965.

Section 2506. Statements to be Filed by Attorney.—Such attorney, on or before the first day of March of every year and at such other time or times as required by the Department, shall file with it statements under his oath, showing:

(1) The maximum amount of indemnity upon any single risk.

(2) That he has examined the commercial rating of all subscribers, as shown by the reference book of a commercial agency having at least one hundred thousand individuals or firms subscribing thereto, and that, from such examination or from other information in his possession, it appears that no subscriber has assumed on any single risk an amount greater than the ten per centum of the net worth of such subscriber.

Reference:

Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 1006, 40 PS Sec. 966.

Section 2507. Reports by Attorney.—Such attorney shall make a report to the Department for each calendar year, on or before the first day of the following March, showing the financial condition of affairs at the office where such contracts are issued, and shall furnish any additional information and reports which the Department may require. Such attorney shall not be required to furnish the names and addresses of any subscribers, nor the loss ratio.

Reference:

Insurance Company Law of 1921. Section 1007, 40 PS Sec. 967.

Comments:

A clause in the existing law, subjecting the affairs and assets of exchanges to examination by the Commissioner, is not included here for the reason that provision therefor is made in the proposed Insurance Department Code, Section 301.

Section 2508. Reserves.—A. There shall at all times be maintained as a reserve, a sum in cash, or in securities of the character permitted by the laws of the jurisdiction under which the exchange is organized for the investment of the capital and funds of an insurer, equal to fifty per centum of the aggregate net annual deposits collected and credited to the account of the subscribers on policies having one year or less to run, and pro rata on those for longer periods. Net annual deposits shall be construed to mean the advance payments of subscribers, after deducting therefrom the amounts specifically provided in the subscribers' agreements for expenses. If said reserves at any time do not amount to one hundred thousand dollars, then there shall be maintained on deposit at the exchange at all times additional funds in cash or such securities which, together with said reserves, will equal one hundred thousand dollars. In calculating the foregoing reserves there shall be included, as part thereof, the funds or amounts required by this article to be in the hands of the attorney before the exchange can be authorized to transact business within this Commonwealth.

B. There shall also be maintained as a claim or loss reserve, cash or such securities, as authorized, sufficient to discharge all liabilities on all outstanding losses arising under policies issued. If at any time the amounts on hand are less than the foregoing requirements, the subscribers or their attorney for them shall make up the deficiency under penalty of a revocation of the license. Such advances shall be repaid only out of the surplus fund of the exchange.

Section 2509. Fees and Taxes.—Such attorney shall pay to the Commonwealth the same fees and taxes as are now required by law to be paid by stock and mutual companies transacting like kinds of business in this Commonwealth. In the payment of taxes, he may deduct, from the gross premiums or deposits received during the calendar year, all amounts returned to subscribers or credited to their accounts, other than for losses.

Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 1009, 40 PS Sec. 969.

Section 2510. Penalty.—Any attorney who shall, except for the purpose of applying for a certificate of authority as herein provided, exchange any contracts of indemnity of the kind and character specified in this article, or directly or indirectly solicit or negotiate any applications for such contracts, without first complying with the foregoing provisions, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to pay a fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars.

Reference:

Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 1011, 40 PS Sec. 971.

Comments:

Section 1010 of the present law relative to service of process on foreign exchanges is not repeated here for the reason that it is properly a matter for inclusion in the proposed Insurance Department Code. Section 205 thereof makes the Commissioner attorney for the service of process on all foreign insurers, including exchanges.

ARTICLE XXVI

FRATERNAL BENEFIT SOCIETIES

Section 2601. What Constitutes Lodge System and Representative Form of Goverment.—A. Any fraternal society having a supreme governing or legislative body and subordinate lodges or branches, by whatever name known, into which members shall be elected, initiated, and admitted in accordance with its constitution, by-laws, rules and regulations; prescribing ritualistic ceremonies; and providing in its constitution and by-laws for regular or stated meetings of its subordinate lodges or branches, shall be deemed to be operating on the lodge system.

B. Any such society shall be deemed to have a representative form of government when it shall provide, in its constitution and by-laws, for a supreme legislative or governing body composed of members elected either by the membership at large or by delegates elected, directly or indirectly, by the membership, together with such other members as may be prescribed by its constitution and by-laws.

C. The elective members shall, however, constitute a majority in number and have not less than the votes required to amend its constitution and by-laws. The meetings of every such supreme or governing body and the election of officers, representatives, or delegates, shall be held not less than once in four years. No officer, representative, delegate, or member of any fraternal benefit society shall vote by proxy.

Act of May 20, 1921, P. L. 916, Section 40 PS Sec. 1011.

Comments:

Refer to Section 2 of this draft, wherein "fraternal society" is defined. This section amplifies the definition of fraternal society by defining what constitutes operating on a lodge system and under a representative form of government.

Preliminary Note to Article XXVI. At the present time, substantially all the provisions of law relating to fraternal societies is contained in the Act of May 20, 1921, P. L. 916, its amendments and supplements. This act includes provisions for benefits, incorporation, supervision and regulation by the Insurance Commissioner, annual statements, the admission of foreign societies and other provisions relating to fraternal societies and also beneficial societies.

The proposed Insurance Department Code contains all those provisions now existing in the Fraternal Act of May 20, 1921, which relate to the supervision of the Department over fraternal societies. The following sections in the existing fraternal act are included within the scope of the proposed Insurance Department Code: Sections 14, 16, 18, 19, 20, 21, 25 in part, and 26. The admission of and the restrictions upon foreign and alien fraternal societies is included within the scope of Article XXVIII of this draft relating to foreign and alien insurance, and the provisions in the fraternal act regulating beneficial societies is included in Article XXVII of this draft relating to beneficial societies. Inasmuch as the proposed department code is an attempt to revise and codify all the laws pertaining directly to the supervision of the Department over various companies, associations, exchanges, societies, and bureaus, it would seem to be illogical to omit from such draft those provisions of the present Fraternal Act of 1921 which give the Commissioner the power and duty of supervising fraternal societies.

The purpose of this article is to set forth all necessary provisions for the government of fraternal societies which are not included elsewhere in this draft or in the proposed Insurance Department Code. It has been suggested that the provisions of the law which govern fraternal societies should not be included in the general insurance laws, because fraternal societies do not operate on a commercial basis. However, fraternal societies are insurance associations, as is evidenced by the fact that they are under the supervision of the Department. Furthermore, the provisions relating to fraternal societies are included in the codifications of the insurance laws of Connecticut, New York, Iowa, Oregon, and other states. This article would also seem to be properly included here because several of the provisions of the fraternal act have necessarily been included in the proposed Insurance Department Code, and a separate fraternal act would therefore be incomplete and misleading.

Section 2602. Formation and Conduct of Fraternal Societies Generally.[1]—A. Fraternal societies shall be incorporated under the same procedure[2] and subject to the same restrictions as are hereinbefore in this act set up as the procedure for and the restrictions upon the incorporation of mutual[3] insurance companies, except in so far as the specific provisions hereinafter contained in this article augment or alter such procedure and restrictions.

B. The adoption of the by-laws of a fraternal society, the amendment of its articles, the holding of the meetings of its members, the election of its officers, and other matters relating to its corporate existence which are not hereinafter in this article specifically provided for, shall be conducted in the same manner as it is hereinbefore provided, for the conduct of the affairs of mutual insurace companies.

Comments:

1. Those sections of the present fraternal act, in which the incorporation procedure varies from the general incorporation procedure for insurance companies, are included in Sections 2603 to 2609 inclusive.
2. This refers to Article II of this draft.
3. Mutual companies are used here as the standard, because they do not have shareholders, and because in other respects they resemble fraternal societies more closely than do other types of insurance corporations.

Section 2603. Qualifications for Incorporators.—Any fifteen or more natural persons of full age and of either sex, married or single, ten of whom are citizens and residents of this Commonwealth, may form an incorporated fraternal society, under the provisions of this act.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Act of May 20, 1921, P. L. 916, Section 12, 40 PS Sec. 1023.

Comments:

Refer to Section 201 of this draft in which only ten persons are required for the incorporation of insurance companies.

Section 2604. Purpose to be Included in Articles of Incorporation.—The articles of incorporation shall include, in addition to the items hereinbefore in this act required to be set forth in the articles of incorporation of companies,[1] a precise and accurate statement of the purpose or purposes for which the fraternal society is organized which shall not include more liberal powers than are granted by this article; however, any lawful social, intellectual, educational, charitable, beneficial, moral, or religious advantages may be set forth in the articles of incorporation among the purposes of the society.

Pennsylvania Act of May 20, 1921, P. L. 916, Section 12, 40 PS Sec. 1023.

Comments:

1. This refers to Section 204 of this draft wherein the requirements for the articles of incorporation of insurance companies are set forth.

Section 2605. Copies of Certain Documents together with Bond to be Filed.—Immediately after the articles of incorporation have been filed with the Department of State, the incorporators shall file with the Insurance Department:

(1) Duly certified copies of the constitution, by-laws, rules and regulations of the proposed society;

(2) copies of all proposed forms of benefit certificaates, applications therefor, and circulars to be issued by such society;

(3) a bond in the sum of five thousand dollars, with a surety approved by the Department, conditioned upon the return to applicants of the advanced payments, if the organization of the society is not completed within one year.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Act of May 20, 1921, P. L. 916, Section 12, 40 PS Sec. 1023.

Section 2606. Preliminary Certificate; Solicitation of Members; Return of Payments.—A. If the purpose of the fraternal society conforms to the requirements of this act, and all provisions of law have been complied with, the Department may furnish the incorporators of the society with a preliminary certificate authorizing them to solicit members as hereinafter in this section provided. A preliminary certificate shall be valid only for one year from the date of its issue, or for any further period not exceeding one year as may be authorized by the Department for reasons satisfactory to it.

B. If a fraternal society receives a preliminary certificate from the Department, such society may solicit members for the purpose of completing its organization. It shall collect from each applicant, the amount of not less than one regular monthly payment in accordance with its table of rates, as provided by its constitution and by-laws, and shall issue, to each such applicant, a receipt for the amounts collected in this manner. No part of any advance payment may be used at any time for the expenses of the society. Such advance payments shall be held in trust during the period of organization, and, if the organization is not completed within one year such payments shall be returned to the applicants.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Act of May 20, 1921, P. L. 916, Section 12, 40 PS Sec. 1023.

Section 2607. Conditions Precedent to Beginning Business.—A fraternal society shall not incur any liability other than for such advance payments, not issue any benefit certificates, or pay or allow, or offer or promise to pay or allow, to any person any death or disability benefit until:

(1) Actual bona fide applications for death benefit certificates have been secured upon at least five hundred lives for at least five hundred dollars each, and all such applicants for death benefits shall have been regularly examined by a legally qualified practicing physician, and certificates of such examinations have been duly filed and approved by the chief medical examiner of such society;

(2) there shall be established five subordinate lodges or branches into which said five hundred applicants have been initiated;

(3) there has been submitted to the Department, under oath of the president and secretary or corresponding officer of such society a certificate of progress,[1] which shall contain a list of its applicants, giving their names, addresses, date examined, date approved, date initiated, name and number of the subordinate branch of which each applicant is a member, amount of benefits to be granted, rate of state periodical contributions, which shall be sufficient to provide for meeting the mortuary obligations contracted when valued; for death benefits, the valuation shall be upon the basis of the American Experience Table of Mortality, with interest assumption of four per centum,[2] or any higher standard, at the option of the society; and for disability benefits, the valuation shall be computed by tables based upon reliable experience; and for combined death and permanent total disability benefits, the valuation shall be computed by tables based upon reliable experience; the interest assumption shall not be higher than four per centum per annum;

(4) a certificate of authority to transact business has been issued to it by the Department.

Reference:

Pennsylvania Act of May 20, 1921, P. L. 916, Section 12, 40 PS Sec. 1023.

Comments:

1. This report, which is now required of the society has been called a "certificate of progress" in this section, in order that, under Section 2601 of this draft, a society will not be required to file a certificate of progress as is required of insurance companies by Section 207 of this draft.

2. The present law here prescribes the National Fraternal Congress Table of Mortality as adopted August 23, 1899. This table has been found in many cases to be inadequate for the modern hazardous occupations in which many members are employed. It therefore seems more advisable to have at the inception of new societies a table which is more apt to produce actuarial solvency. However, this change will not affect existing societies and the method by which their certificates are valued, as found in Section 2623 of this draft.

Section 2608. Notice of Qualification to Commence Business; Certificate of Authority.—A. The president or secretary of a fraternal society incorporated under this act shall notify the Department, in writing and under oath, that the society is qualified to commence business, that not less than five hundred applicants have each paid in cash at least one regular monthly payment as hereinbefore in this article provided, which payments, in the aggregate amount to at least five hundred dollars have been credited to the mortuary or disability fund on account of such applicant, and that no part of it has been used for expenses.

B. If after receiving notice that a society is qualified to commence business, the Department, as a result of its examination, finds that the society has complied with the provisions of this act, it shall issue to such society a certificate of authority to do business in this Commonwealth. As soon as the society receives such certificate of authority, it may issue benefit certificates and otherwise transact the business for which it was incorporated.

Pennsylvania Act of May 20, 1921, P. L. 916, Section 12, 40 PS Sec. 1023.

Section 2609. General Corporate Powers.—Subject to the limitations and restrictions contained in this act or in its articles, every incorporated fraternal society shall have the authority:

(1) To have succession by its corporate name perpetually, subject to the powers of the General Assembly under the Constitution of the Commonwealth.

(2) To maintain and defend judicial proceedings.

(3) To make and use a common seal, and alter it at pleasure.

(4) To be capable of taking, receiving, purchasing, holding and transferring real and personal property for the purpose of its incorporation.

(5) To elect or appoint and remove its officers and agents for the management of its business and the carrying out of its objects, and to allow them a suitable compensation.

(6) To make a constitution and general laws for the government of the society, the mangement of its affairs, the admission and classification of its members, and the control and regulation of the terms and conditions governing the issue of its benefit certificates, as authorized and provided for by this act.

(7) To provide for the payment of benefits to its members and their beneciaries in such manner and for such amounts as may be authorized and directed by its constitution or by-laws, not inconsistent with the provisions of this act; to collect from its members, by admission fees, per capita tax, dues or rates of contribution, the funds necessary to carry on its business and provide for the payment of its obligations; to enter into any obligations necessary for the transaction of its affairs.

(8) To carry on its operations through a supreme or governing body, board of directors, or executive committee, and subordinate lodges, councils, or branches. Meetings of its supreme legislative or governing body may be held in any state, district, province, or territory wherein such society has subordinate branches, and all business transacted at such meetings shall be as valid in all respects as if the same were held in this Commonwealth, but its principal office shall be located in this Commonwealth.

Pennsylvania Act of May 20, 1921, P. L. 916, Section 12, 40 PS Sec. 1023.

Section 2610. Merger, Consolidation, Reinsurance, or Transfer of Members or Funds.—A. A domestic fraternal society shall not merge with, consolidate with, reinsure with, or accept the transfer of the membership or funds of, any other fraternal society, unless such merger, consolidation, reinsurance or transfer is evidenced by written articles, which set forth in full the terms and conditions of such merger, consolidation, reinsurance or transfer, and a statement describing the character of business which the new society desires to transact.

B. The plan of merger, consolidation, reinsurance, or transfer, shall be approved by a vote of two-thirds of the members of the supreme legislative or governing body of each of the societies involved, or by a referndum vote whereby a majority of the subordinate bodies of each of the several societies indicate their approval to such merger, consolidation, reinsurance, or transfer.

C. The articles of merger, consolidation, reinsurance, or transfer shall be filed with the Department of State, and approved by it and the Insurance Department in the same manner as hereinbefore in this act provided for the filing and the approval of articles of merger or consolidation of insurance companies. When the articles are filed with the Department of State, there shall also be filed with the Insurance Department, a sworn statemnt of the financial condition of each society, executed by its president and secretary, and a certificate of such officers that the merger, consolidation, reinsurance, or transfer has been approved in the manner hereinbefore in this section required.

Section 2611. Constitution and By-Laws; Filing with Department.—A. The supreme governing or legislative body of every fraternal society shall have power to make, alter, and amend its constitution and by-laws for its government, the management of its affairs, the admission and classification of its members, the control and regulation of the terms and conditions governing the issue of its benefit certificates, the character or kind of benefits or privileges payable or allowable thereunder, the fixing and adjustment of the rates of contribution fees or dues payable by its members, and the allotment thereof to the rates of contribution fees or dues payable by its members, and the allotment thereof to the different funds of the society.

B. Such constitution and by-laws, when made, and as altered and amended, shall be the law governing the society and its officers, board of directors or managers, subordinate or constituent lodges, councils, or branches, and all members and beneficiaries in their relation thereto. Each society shall file with the Department a duly certified copy of its constitution and laws as enacted, and as changed, added to, or amended, within ninety days after enactment. Printed copies of the same, duly certified by the secretary or corresponding officer thereof, shall be prima facie evidence of the legal adoption threof.

Act of May 20, 1921, Section 2, 40 PS Sec. 1012.

Section 2612. Waiver or Modification of Constitution and By-Laws or Violations Thereof; Individual Liability of Officers and Members.—Unless the constitution and by-laws of the society expressly so provide, no subordinate lodge, nor any of its subordinate officers or members, shall have power or authority, onbehalf of the society, to waive or modify any of the provisions thereof, nor to waive any violation or forfeiture of such provisions or default thereunder. No officer or member of any supreme, grand, or subordinate body of any such society shall be individually liable for the payment of any of the benefits provided for in its constitution and by-laws, but the same shall be payable only out of the funds of the society and in the manner provided by its by-laws.

Pennsylvania Act of May 20, 1921, Section 4, 40 PS Sec. 1014.

Section 2613. Membership; Beneficial, General and Social Members.—Any fraternal society may admit to beneficial membership any person not less than sixteen years of age, and it shall be lawful for minors who have attained the age of sixteen years to make all needed contracts and assume all needful obligations to become members. Each applicant shall be examined by a legally qualified physician, and the examination supervised and approved in accordance with the laws of the society, or, in lieu of a medical examination, persons may be admitted to beneficial membership upon such showing of eligibility as the laws of the society may provide. However, such additional reserve, upon contracts issued in this manner, shall be set up as the Department requires, if any, of all societies writing life insurance without medical examination. Any beneficial member applying for a certificate providing for disability benefits need not be required to pass an additional medical examination therefor. Nothing herein contained shall prevent such society from accepting general or social members.

Pennsylvania Act of May 20, 1921, P. L. 916, Section 7, 40 PS Sec. 1018.

Comments:

The provision in the existing law, which limits its membership to persons less than sixty years of age, has been omitted from this section, because there is no reason why inusrance should not be written for persons over sixty years of age, if it is written upon an adequate basis.

The insertion providing for non-medical insurance is taken from the Michigian Law Insurance Laws, Section 7, Page 101 (1929). It is believed that the societies should be free to provide in their laws such safeguards on the admission of new members as they deem necessary.

Section 2614. Benefit Certificates; Power to Issue; Copies as Evidence; Amendments to Charter, Constitution or By-Laws—A. Every fraternal society shall have power to issue whole life, old age, or whole life combined with old age, limited payment life, and endowment insurance policies,[1] term, sick, or relief and dependent benefit certificates, and make the specified benefit payment in a single cash payment or in instalments or in a term or life annuity.

B. Benefit certificates of every such society shall provide for the payment of death benefits, of specific amounts, and may provide for any one or more of the following.

(1) For the erection of monuments to mark the graves of deceased members.

(2) For the payment of old age benefit certificates which mature for payment to the member at not under sixty years of age.

(3) For the payment of permanent and temporary disability benefits.

(4) For the payment of benefits under endowment insurance contracts.

(5) For the payment of all or a portion of the face value of such certificate upon the surrender thereof when a member is permanently disabled or attains the age of sixty years.[2]

C. The benefit certificates of such societies shall contain a provision that the certificate, the charter or articles of incorporation, or, if a voluntary association, the articles of association, the constitution, and by-laws of the society, and the application for membership and medical examination, signed by the applicant, and all amendments to each thereof, shall constitute the obligation of the society.[3]

D. Copies of the certificates, articles, constitution, by-laws, and applications, certified by the secretary of the society or corresponding officer, shall be received in any proceedings in law or at equity as evidence of the terms and conditions thereof.

E. Any changes, additions, or amendments to said charter or articles of incorporation, or articles of association if a voluntary association, constitution, or by-laws, made or enacted subsequent to the issuance of the benefit certificate, shall bind the member and his beneficiaries in all respects the same as though such changes, additions, or amendments had been made prior to, and were in force at the time of, the application for membership.

Comments:

1. In the opinion of Paul C. Wagner, Deputy Attorney General, to Colonel Matthew H. Taggart, Insurance Commissioner, dated February 28, 1928, as reported in Official Opinions of the Attorney General, 1927-1928, at Page 274, it was ruled that under the existing laws fraternal societies have no authority to issue twenty-year endowment benefit certicates. At the present time, there are existing in Pennsylvania, numerous fraternal societies incorporated under the Act of April 29, 1874, P. L. 73, known as the General Corporation Act, and the Fraternal Act of April 6, 1893, P. L. 10. These acts do not limit the type of contracts which fraternal societies can issue. The majority of the fraternal societies now in operation in Pennsylvania have been incorporated under the two acts above mentioned, and are therefore permitted to issue endowment contracts. As a result, the opinion of the Department of Justice above referred to places a barrier between the fraternal societies organized under the prior acts. This section permits all fraternal societies to issue endowment contracts.

2. Provisions of Section 5 of the present act are here included, and specific authority to issue endowment certificates is added.

Section 2615. Certificates of Insurance and Annuities on Children.—A. Any fraternal society authorized to do business in this Commonwealth may provide in its by-laws, in addition to other benefits provided in this article, for certificates of insurance or annuities upon the lives of children, at any age, upon the application of some adult person, as the by-laws of such society may provide. Any such society may, at its option, organize and operate branches for such children, and membership in local lodges and initiation therein shall not be required of such children, nor shall they have any voice in the management of the society.

B. The contributions to be made upon such certificates shall be based upon the "Standard Industrial Mortality Table, Three and One Half Per Cent," or the "English Life Table Number Six," or such other mortality table as may be approved by the Department.

C. Any fraternal society issuing such benefit certificates shall maintain, on all such certificates, the reserve required by the standard of mortality and interest adopted by the society for computing contributions as hereinbefore provided in this section.

D. A fraternal society shall have full power to provide for means of enforcing payment of contribution, for designation of beneficiaries, and changing such designations, and in all other respects for the regulation, government, and control of such certificates and all rights, obligations, and liabilities incident thereto and connected therewith, provided that any such power exercised by a society is not at variance with the provisions of this act.

Pennsylvania Act of April 7, 1927, P. L. 177, Sections 1, 2, 3 and 4, 40 PS Secs. 1046, 1047, 1048 and 1049.

Section 2616. Beneficiaries; Power to Change.—A. Any member of such society may name, as his beneficiary, any person or persons, natural or artificial, permitted by the by-laws thereof, or if such by-laws permit, benefits may be made payable to his estate. Any member may change the beneficiary named in his certificate in the manner provided by the laws of the society.

B. If any beneficiary under a certificate shall die before the member, and no new designation shall have been made by him, and the constitution and by-laws of the society shall have made no provision for such contingency, the benefits under the certificate or certificates shall then be paid to the surviving beneficiary or beneficiaries, if any, and, if none of the beneciaries named in the certicate shall survive the member, the benefits shall then be paid to the excutor or administrator of the deceased member, to be by him paid over to, or divided among, the person or persons entitled to the personal estate of such deceased member under the interstate laws of the place of domicile of such member.

Pennsylvania Act of May 20, 1921, Section 6, 40 PS Sec. 1017.

Comments:

The existing law restricts the naming of a beneficiary to those individuals or institutions having a relationship by blood or marirage to the member or upon which he is dependent. The predominant sentiment among the fraternal societies at the present time is in favor of permitting a member to designate any person he desires as beneficiary. This section eliminates the present restrictions.

Section 2617. Provision for Additional or Increased Rates of Contribution by Members.—The laws of every fraternal society from the date of the passage of this act[1] shall provide that if the stated periodical contributions of the members are insuffcient to pay all matured claims in full, and to provide for the payment of its benefit fund obligations, valued by one of the standards herein authorized, and for the creation and maintenance of the funds required by its by-laws, additional or increased rates of contribution shall be collected from the membrs to meet such deficiency, or each certificate shall be charged with its proportion of any deficiency disclosed by the valuation hereinspecified, with lawful interest thereon.

Act of May 20, 1921, Section 3, as amended by the Act of April 26, 1929, P. L. 796, 40 PS Sec. 1013.

Comments:

1. The present law states:

"The laws of every such society from and aftre five years from the date of the passage of this act * * *"

The reference to the five year period has been omitted from this section, because this requirement for the laws of every socity has existed in the law since 1921, and because the five year period inserted by the amendment of 1929 will have expired by April 26, 1934. Furthermore, the present law is ambiguous where it provides "* * * from and after five years from the date of the passage of this act * * *."

Section 2618. Liens Against Benefit Certificates in Lieu of Cash Payments; Extended and Paid-Up Protection.—Any fraternal society may provide for the acceptance of liens against benefit certificates, with interest at not less than four per centum per annum, in lieu of cash payments, but the total of such liens against any benefit certificate shall not exceed its share of the accumulation thereunder. Any such society collecting a level rate of contribution, under any of its benefit certificates, based upon any table of mortality allowed for valuation purposes in this act, may grant to members holding such certificates extended and paid-up protection or such withdrawal equities as may be allowed under its constitution and by-laws, but no such grants or privileges shall exceed in value the portion of the accumulations to the credit of such certificate at the time such grant or privilege is allowed.

Section 2619. Funds; Derivation and Use.—A. Any society may create, maintain, invest, disburse, and apply a benefit fund, expense fund, or emergency or other fund, in accordance with its constitution and by-laws, and shall not, by reason thereof, be held to be organized or carried on for profit. Unless otherwise provided in the constitution and by-laws, such funds shall be held, invested, and disbursed for the use and benefit of the society, and no member or beneficiary shall have or acquire any individual rights therein, or become entitled to any apportionment of or the surrender of any part thereof.[1]

B. All funds of the society for benefits and expenses shall be derived from regular monthly or other periodical rates of contribution paid by the members, and accretions of said funds. No part of any funds set aside for the payment of benefits shall be used for expenses, other than expenses incurred in investgating or defending claims against such benefit funds.[2]

Section 2620. Investment of Funds; Safekeeping in the Commonwealth.—A. Except as herein otherwise permitted, every domestic society shall invest its funds only in securities designated by this act for the investment of reserves of life insurance companies.

B. Unless the Department shall give its written consent to do otherwise, every domestic society shall keep and maintain within this Commonwealth all of its assets except such as are necessary for the collection of current dues or may be required by the laws of another state or county for the purpose of qualifying to transact business therein.

Section 2621. Exemption of Funds from Taxation and Attachment.—Every fraternal society is hereby declared to be a charitable and benevolent institution, and all of its funds shall be exempt from all and every state, county, district, municipal, and school tax, other than taxes on real estate. No money or other benefit, charity, relief, or aid, to be paid, provided, or rendered by any such society, shall be liable to attachment garnishment, or other process, or be seized, taken, appropriated, or applied by any legal or equitable process or operation of law to pay any debt or liability of a member or beneficiary or any other person who may have a right thereunder, either before or after payment.

Pennsylvania Act of May 20, 1921, Section 11, 40 PS Sec. 1022.

Section 2622. Annual Statements.—Every fraternal society authorized to transact business within this Commonwealth, shall annually, or or before the first day of March, file with the Department in such form as it may require, a statement, under oath of its president and secretary or corresponding officers, of its transactions for the calendar year ending December thirty-first preceding and of its condition and standing on that date, and shall include therein all accrued liabiltiy under unpaid claims where notice was received by the society, at its home office, on or before the date of filing the annual statement and on which liability was incurred prior to the end of the calendar year. It shall also furnish such other information as the Department may deem necessary to a proper exhibit of its business and plan of working. The Department may at other times require any further statement it deems necessary to be made relating to such society.

Comments:

This section has been changed to conform to the annual statement blanks, which fraternal societies are required to file with the Department each year, by eliminating the exmption heretofore granted to such societies from inserting in the financial statement, those claims of which no notice was received at the office of the society. This change should produce in the annual statement, a more accurate picture of the financial condition of fraternal societies than now exists.

Section 2623. Annual Valuation Reports; Minimum Standards of Valuation; Distribution to Members.—A. In addition to the annual statement hereinbefore in this article required each fraternal society shall make an annual report to the Department showing the valuation of its benefit fund obligations in force on December thirty-first of the preceding year, excluding those entered into within the year for which the report is filed in cases where the contributions for the first year in whole or in part are used for current expenses. Such report of valuation shall show, as contingent liabilities, the present mid-year value of the promised benefits provided in the constitution and by-laws of such society under certificates then subject to valuation at not more than the average rate of interest earned on its invested assets during five calendar years preceding the date of such annual report, less such portion thereof as may have been assumed by other associations, societies, or companies, and as contingent assets, the present mid-year value, at the same rate of interest, of the future net conrtibutions provided in its constitution and by-laws, as the same are in practice actually collected.

In lieu of the above valuation, any society, at its option, may show the net value of its benefit fund obligation subject to valuation at the rate of interest as hereinbefore provided, and said net value, when computed in the case of monthly contributions, may be the means of the terminal value for the end of the preceding and of the current certificate years, from which said tabular values shall be deducted such portion thereof as may have been assumed by other associations, societies, or companies, and, in addition, there may be deducted the present worth of the probable future annual savings in death losses, as specified in the preceding paragraph.

Every such valuation report shall include, as a contingent liability, an estimate made by or on behalf of the society, of the probable future payments under unpaid claims, notice of which was received by the society, at its home office, before the end of the calendar year covered by the annual statement, but which has not been approved for payment at the date of such statement.

Deferred payments or instalments of claims, whether involving a life contingency or not, shall be included in the valuation report as contingent liabilities on the happening of the contingency upon which such payments or instalments are thereafter to be paid. All such liability shall be the present worth of such future payments or instalments, at the average rate of interest earned by the society during the five calendar years preceding the date of such annual report.

B. Each valuation report shall be certified by a competent accountant or actuary, or, at the request and expense of the society, verified by the actuary of the Insurance Department or similar supervisory department of the state wherein the society is incorporated and shall be filed with the Department on or before the first day of March for the calendar year ending December thirty-first preceding.

C. The minimum standard of valuation for all benefit fund obligations, except for disability and dependent benefits, shall be the National Fraternal Congress Table of Mortality, or, at the option of the society, by any other standard table or a table based upon the society's own experience of at least twenty years and covering not less than one hundred thousand lives, with an interest assumption of not more than the average rate of interest earned on its invested assets during the five calendar years preceding such annual report.

Every valuation report shall set forth clearly and fully the mortality and interest basis and the method of valuation. Any society providing for disability benefits shall keep a separate account of them in its valuation report, and shall charge as a liability the balance to the credit of such fund or funds at the date of such valuation. Where a combined contribution table is used by a society for both death and permanent and total disability benefits, the valuation may be of death benefits only, and in such case a separate accounting shall not be required.

D. A report of such valuation, with such explanation as the society may deem advisable, shall be printed and mailed to each beneficial member of the society not later than July first of each year, or, in lieu thereof, may be published in the society's official paper, and the issue containing the same mailed to each beneficial member of the society.

Pennsylvania Act of May 20, 1921, P. L. 916, Section 23, as amended by Section 4, Act of April 26, 1929, P. L. 796, 40 PS Sec. 1036.

Comments:

Under the present law, fraternal societies are required to file their annual statements by March first of the succeeding year, while the valuation report, from which is judged the actuarial solvency of a society, is not required to be filed with until March thirty-first of the succeeding year. A certain amount of confusion results from this situation. In order to produce the proper financial picture of a fraternal society, it is necessary to have available on simultaneous dates, the matter contained in both reports.

Section 2624. Valuation on Accumulation Basis and Tabular Basis; Carrying Forward Valuation Charges; Annual Loss Deficiency.—A. In lieu of the valuation hereinbefore required, any fraternal society may value its certificates on a basis, herein designated "accumulated basis," by crediting each member with the net amount contributed for each year, and with interest at approximately the net rate earned, and by charging him with his share of the losses for each year, herein designated "cost of insurance," and carrying the balance, if any, to his credit. The charge for the cost of insurance may be according to the actual experience of the society as applied to a table of mortality recognized by the law of this Commonwealth, and shall take into consideration the amount at risk during each year, which shall be the amount payable at death, less the credit to the member.

B. Unless specifically provided in the constitution or by-laws, no charge shall be carried forward from the first valuation hereunder against any member for any past share of losses exceeding the contributions and credit. If after the first valuation, any member's share of losses for any year exceeds his credit, including the contributions for the year, the contributions shall be increased to cover his share of the losses.

C. Any such excess share of losses chargeable to any member may be paid out of a fund or contributions especially created or required for such purpose. Any member may transfer to any plan adopted by the society with net rates on which tabular reserves are maintained, and, on transfer, shall be entitled to take such application of his credit as provided in the by-laws of the society. Certificates, issued, re-rated, or readjusted on a basis providing for adequate rates, with adequate reserves to mature such certificates upon assumption for mortality and interest recognized by the law of this Commonwealth, shall be valued on such basis herein designated the "tabular basis"; however, if, on the first valuation under this section, a deficiency in reserve shall be shown for any such certificate, the same shall be valued on the accumulation basis.

D. Whenever in any society having members upon the tabular basis, and upon the accumulation basis, the total of all costs of insurance provided for any year shall be insufficient to meet the actual death and disability losses for the year, the deficiency may be met for the year from the available funds, after setting aside all credits in the resreve or from increased contributions, or by an increase in the number of assessments applied in the society as a whole or to classes of members, as may be specified in it by-laws. Savings from a lower amount of death losses may be returned in like manner as may be specified in its by-laws.

Section 2625. Reserves; Table of Credits; Surplus.—A. If the by-laws of the society so provide, the assets representing the reserves of any separate class of members may be carried separate for such class as if an independent society, and the required reserve accumulation of such class so set apart shall not thereafter be merged with the assets of other classes of the society.

B. A table showing the credits to individual members for each age and year of entry, and showing opposite each credit, the tabular reserve required in the whole life or other plan of insurance specified in the contract, according to assumptions for mortality and interest recognized by the laws of this Commonwealth and adopted by the society, shall be filed by the society with each annual statement, and also be furnished to each member before July first of each year.

In lieu of a copy of such table, there may be furnished to each member, within the same time, a statement giving the credit for such member, and giving the tabular reserve and leve lrate required for the transfer carrying out the plan of insurance specified in the contract. No table or statement need be made or furnished where the reserves are maintained on the tabular basis. For this purpose, individual bookkeeping accounts for each member shall not be required, and all calculations may be made by acturial methods.

C. Nothing herein contained shall prevent the maintenance of such surplus, over and above the credits on the accumulation basis and the reserves on the tabular basis, as any society may provide by or pursuant to its by-laws, nor be construed as giving to the individual member any right or claim to any such reserve or credit, other than in manner and as expressed in its constitution and by-laws.

Section 2626. Additional Assessments or Increase of Rates.—If the valuation of the certificates of a fraternal society, as hereinbefore in this article provided, shall show that the present value of future net contributions, together with the admitted assets, is less than the present value of the promised benefits and accrued liabilities, such society shall,[1] either collect additional assessments, or increase therates of contribution from the members, to meet such deficiency, or classify its members according to the adequacy of the rates they are contributing and charge each class with its proportion of any deficiency disclosed by any such valuation.

Comments:

1. The present law requires such collection or increase only "within five years from the date of the passage of this act." This requirement has been eliminated from this section, because the five year period will soon elapse and the reason for allowing such societies a period of five years will no longer exist, since the collection of additional assessments has been required since 1929.

Section 2627. False Statements; Perjury; Penalties.—A. Any person or officer, member or examining physician of any fraternal society authorized to do business in this Commonwealth, who shall knowingly or wilfully make any false or fraudulent statement or representation in or with reference to any application for membership or for the purpose of obtaining money from or benefit in any society transacting business in this Commonwealth, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to pay a fine of not less than one hundred dollars, or undergo imprisonment for not less than thirty days or more than one year, or both.

B. Any person who shall wilfully make a false statement of any material fact or thing in a sworn statement as to the death or disability of a certificate holder in any such society, for the purpose of procuring payment of a benefit named in the certificate of such holder, and any person who shall wilfully make any false statement in any verified report or declaration under oath required or authorized by this act, shall be guilty of perjury, and shall be proceeded against and punished as provided by law.

Section 2628. Change of Location of Principal Place of Business.—Any fraternal society within this Commonwealth may change the location of its principal office or place of business to any other place within this Commonwealth, if a majority of its subordinate lodges or branches consent thereto, upon petition to and approval by the Department. A notice that such location has been changed shall be filed by the secretary of the society, under the corporate seal, in the prothonotary's office in the county to which said office or place of business has been removed, in the prothonotary's office in the county from which said office or place of business has been removed, in the office of the Insurance Department and in the office of the Department of State, ten days before the change shall take effect.

Section 2929. Existing Societies Paying Accident Benefits.—Any fraternal society organized and incorporated prior to the twentieth day of May, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-one, which provides for benefits in case of death or disability resulting solely from accidents, but which does not obligate itself to pay death or sick benefits generally, may be authorized by the Department to operate within this Commonwealth, and shall have all the privileges and shall be subject to all the provisions of this article, except the provisions relating to valuation of benefit fund obligations and specification in the certificate of the amount of benefit.

Section 2630. Scope of Article.—A. This act shall not be construed as attempting to deprive any existing fraternal society of any corporate power, right, privilege or franchise, which such society now enjoys.

B. Any fraternal society heretofore organized under any general or special law of this Commonwealth, and to which this act does not apply, shall be entitled to exist under, and shall be governed by, the provisions of this act, upon filing with the Department a resolution of the board of directors, approved by the shareholders or members at a meeting specially called for that purpose, accepting the provisions of the Constitution and of this act, and agreeing to be governed thereby as fully as though organized thereunder. The charters of all fraternal societies accepting the provisions of this act shall, after such acceptance, be repealed and of no effect, in so far as the same may be inconsistent with the provisions of this act.

Comments:

Substantially the same provisions are contained in Section 3 of this draft. However, it seems more appropriate to include this section in this article, because it relates to fraternal societies, and because Section 3 deals with insurance companies generally.

Section 2631. Penalty for Violation of Article.—Any officer, agent, solicitor, or employe of any society, who neglects or refuses to comply with, or violates, any of the provisions of this act, the penalty for which violation is not herein specified, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof, be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars.

Comments:

The remainder of the section in the present law imposes a penalty for the solicitation of membership for any unauthorized fraternal society. This is included within the scope of Section 1301 of the proposed Insurance Department Code.

ARTICLE XXVII.

BENEFICIAL SOCIETIES

Section 2701. Previously Organized Beneficial Societies May Pay Limited Sickness, Accident or Death Benefits.—Any beneficial society incorporated prior to the twentieth day of May, one thousand nine hundred twenty-one, under the provisions of the ninth paragraph, section two, relating to corporations of the first class, as amended, of the act, approved the twenty-ninth day of April, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four (Pamphlet Laws, seventy-three), entitled "An act to provide for the incorporation and regulation of certain corporations," for the purpose of maintaining a society for beneficial or protective purposes to its members from funds collected therein, may pay or enter into contracts to pay money or benefits, not exceeding ten dollars per week, in the event of sickness, accident, or disability, and not exceeding two hundred and fifty dollars in the event of death.

Reference:

Act of April 26, 1929, P. L. 805, Section 1, 40 PS Sec. 881.

Comments:

At the present time, there are a great many so-called beneficial societies in existence in Pennsylvania, ranging from the neighborhood protective associations and postmorten assessment societies to the large beneficial societies which operate in a manner similar to fraternal benefit societies. The small neighborhood societies operating on a mutual assessment plan fill a much needed position in modern American life. Moreover, these societies are not really affected with a public interest, because they are not engaged in the insurance business from any standpoint. On the other hand, there is a great number of larger beneficial societies which issue certificates of membership providing for sick, accident, or death benefits in return for periodic assessments or dues in the nature of premiums. Such societies are obviously engaged in the insurance business. They come within this act. The proposed Insurance Department Code also attempts to regulate and supervise them. For the purpose of distinguishing the one group from the other, the definition of beneficial societies contained in Section 2 of this act restricts the use of the term to those societies, other than fraternal societies, which have regular officers, agents or employes receiving a salary, or which issue to their members policies or certificates providing for benefits in return, for periodic, dues, or which otherwise transact any class of insurance.

Section 2702. Limits of Payment; Penalty for Violations.—A. It shall be unlawful for any beneficial society to pay or enter into contracts to pay more than ten dollars per week in the event of sickness, accident, or disability, or more than two hundred and fifty dollars in the event of death.

B. Any beneficial society paying or entering into contracts to pay money or benefits in excess of the limitations prescribed by the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to pay a fine of not less than one hundred dollars or more than five hundred dollars for each payment or contract so made or entered into.

C. Upon satisfactory evidence of the violation of this section by any beneficial society, the Department may, in its discretion, pursue any one or more of the following courses of action:

(1) Suspend or revoke the certificate of authority of such offending beneficiary society;

(2) Refuse, for a period of not to exceed one year thereafter, to issue a new certificate of authority to such beneficial society;

(3) Impose a penalty of not more than one thousand dollars for each and every act in violation of this act.

Before the Department shall take any action as above set forth, it shall give written notice to the beneficial society accused of violating the law, stating specifically the nature of such alleged violation and fixing a time and place, at least ten days thereafter, when a hearing of the matter shall be held. After such hearing or upon failure of a duly authorized representative of the accused beneficial society to appear at such hearing, the Department shall impose such of the above penalties as he deems advisable. The beneficial society may appeal from any action by the Department pursuant to this section to the Court of Common Pleas of Dauphin County.

Section 2703. Reincorporation of Beneficial or Protective Societies.—Any beneficial society now formed or organized under the provisions of the ninth paragraph, section two, of the act approved the twenty-ninth day of April, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four (Pamphlet Laws, seventy-three), entitled "An act to provide for the incorporation and regulation of certain corporations,' 'for the purpose of maintaining a society for beneficial or protective purposes to its members from funds collected therein, may be reincorporated for the purpose of making insurance, either upon the stock or mutual principle, upon the health of individuals and against personal injury or disablement and against death resulting from natural or accidental causes; but such beneficial society, after reincorporation pursuant to the provisions of this article, shall not issue policies agreeing to pay more than twenty dollars per week in the event of sickness, accident or disablement, nor more than two hundred and fifty dollars in event of death.

Act of April 20, 1927, P. L. 317, Section 1, 40 PS Sec. 887.

Comments:

This section substantially restates the existing law. The various societies exempted from the application of the present law have been included in Section 2713 of this article relating to the scope of the provisions of this article.

Section 2704. Procedure for Reincorporation; Certificate of Authority.—A. Any beneficial society desiring to reincorporate under the provisions of this article, shall hold a meeting of its members, and, if a majority of all of its members shall vote in person or by proxy in favor of the reincorporation, a resolution to that effect shall be adopted. Such resolution shall be recorded in the office for the recording of deeds in the county where such beneficial society has its principal office.

B. When the resolution of reincorporation has been recorded, the directors of the beneficial society shall draw up articles of association, which shall conform as nearly as possible to the provisions of this act relating to articles of incorporation of companies. Such articles of association shall be filed with the Department of State in the same manner as are articles of incorporation, and the beneficial society shall be reincorporated in the same manner as is hereinbefore in this act provided for the incorporation of companies.

C. Upon the issuance of a certificate of incorporation by the Department of State, the corporate existence of the reincorporated beneficial society shall begin, and such beneficial society shall have the corporate power to transact the business of insurance companies are by law empowered to do, subject to the provisions of this article.

Act of April 20, 1927, P. L. 317, Section 2, 40 PS Sec. 888.

Comments:

Refer to Section 210 of this draft, in which the effect of the issuance of a certificate of incorporation to insurance companies is set forth. This section follows the distinction there laid down, namely, that the corporate existence begins with the issuance of the certificate of incorporation, as compared with the right to commence the transaction of business, which right an insurer acquires only after the issuance to it of a certificate of authority by the Department.

Section 2705. Capital Stock and Surplus Requirements of Reincorporated Stock Beneficial Societies; Investment of Funds.—A. The capital stock of a reincorporated stock beneficial society shall be not less than twenty-five thousand dollars. Every such society shall, in addition to the capital required by this section, have a paid-in surplus equal at least to the amount of its authorized capital stock.

B. The funds of a reincorporated stock beneficial society equal to its authorized capital stock and its paid-in surplus shall be invested in accordance with the requirements hereinbefore in this act set forth for the investment of the capital and surplus of life companies.

Act of April 20, 1927, P. L. 317, Section 4, 40 PS Sec. 890.

Section 2706. Par Value of Shares; Consideration; Forfeiture of Payments; Personal Property.—A. The capital of a reincorporated stock beneficial society shall be divided into shares of not less than five dollars, and each share shall be, in all respects, equal to every other share.[1]

B. Subscriptions for such shares shall not be paid for, in whole or in part, by any other consideration than cash, nor in an amount less than the par value of such shares.[2] Ten per centum shall be paid on each share at the time of subscribing, and the balance shall be paid at such times as the beneficial society may direct, provided that full payment on all shares is made not later than nine months from the date of organization.[3]

C. Any such beneficial society may prescribe rules with regard to the forfeiture of partial payments on subscriptions, but such rules shall be binding upon subscribers only if made known at the time of the subscription.[4] Shares of a beneficial society shall be deemed personal property.

Act of April 20, 1927, P. L. 317, Section 4, 40 PS Sec. 890.

Comments:

1. Compare this section with Section 601A of this proposed code, wherein the capital of stock insurance companies is divided into shares of not less than five dollars. The present law relating to beneficial societies requires a minimum par value of ten dollars. This section has adopted a par value of five dollars for the sake of uniformity.
2. See Section 602 of this draft.
3. The present law relating to beneficial societies requires that full payments on all shares shall be made within a period of one year from the date of organization. Section 602 of this draft requires that full payment on shares shall be made within a period of nine months from the date of organization. The latter requirement is adopted in this draft for the sake of uniformity.
4. Refer to Section 601 B of this draft.

Section 2707. Financial Requirements and Deposits of Reincorporated Mutual Beneficial Societies.—Any reincorporated mutual beneficial society shall not be authorized to do the business of insurance unless:

(1) it has received, from not less than one[1] thousand persons, applications for insurance against death amounting to not less than two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, upon which applications one-twelfth of the total annual premiums has been paid;

(2) it has deposited with the Department the sum of fifty[2] thousand dollars, in cash or in securities approved by the Department, which deposit the Department is hereby authorized and empowered to receive,[3] and hold for the benefit of the members of such beneficial society and its creditors. The right to participate in the proceeds of such deposit shall be in the following order of preference: first, claims under policies; second, salaries of employes; third, general creditors.

Reference:

Act of April 20, 1927, P. L. 317, Section 6, 40 PS Sec. 892.

Comments:

1. At the present time, the law requires a minimum of two thousand persons. This has been changed in this section to permit societies with small memberships to take advantage of the reincorporation features of this article. Heretofore, the requirement of two thousand persons has prevented several societies from reincorporating.
2. The amount of the deposits required in the existing law is twenty-five thousand dollars. This section increases it to fifty thousand dollars, in order to protect more adequately the persons who have made applications for insurance.
3. Article VII of the proposed Insurance Department Code provides for the deposit of securities with the Department, the custody in the Treasury Department, and their return to domestic, foreign, and alien insurers.

Section 7 of the Act of 1927 above referred to has the following provision relating to the taxation of reincorporated beneficial societies:

> "In addition to any other tax to which companies reincorporated under the provisions of this act may be liable, there is hereby imposed upon such companies a tax, payable to the Commonwealth, of eight mills on the dollar upon the gross amount of premiums, premium deposits, and assessments received from business transacted within this Commonwealth. Reports shall be made by the proper officers of such companies and such tax shall be paid by, and in such manner, and at such time, and subject to such deductions and penalties, as reports are made and similar taxes paid by other insurance companies under the provisions of existing law."

This provision has not been included in this draft, because it relates to taxation and does not come within the scope of this code.

Section 2708. Notice of Qualification to Commence Business; Certificate of Authority.—A. The president or secretary of any beneficial society, reincorporated as a stock beneficial society under this act, shall notify the Department, in writing, that the society is qualified to commerce business, after the authorized capital and required surplus of such society have been said in and properly invested.

B. The president or secretary of any beneficial society, reincorporated under this act as a mutual beneficial society, shall notify the Department in writing that the society is qualified to commence business, after the necessary amount of insurance has been applied for and the deposits hereinbefore required in this article have been made with the Department.

C. If, after receiving notice, as hereinbefore provided, that a reincorporated beneficial society is qualified to commence business, the Department, as a result of its examination, finds that the reincorporated beneficial society has complied with the provisions of this act, it shall issue to such society, a certificate of authority to do business in this Commonwealth. As soon as the society receives such certificate of authority, it may issue policies and otherwise transact the business for which it was reincorporated.

Comments:

Refer to Section 212 of this act which relates to the certificates of authority of companies.

Section 2709. Number, Election, Term and Classification of Directors; Vacancies.—A. The annual meeting of shareholders or members for election of directors of a reincorporated beneficial society shall be held at such time prior to the first day of May in every year as the by-laws of the society may direct. Notice of the time and place of meeting shall be given to the shareholders or members in accordance with the provisions of the by-laws. At such annual meeting, the shareholders or members shall elect by ballot the number of directors stated in the articles of association, which shall be not less than five nor more than thirteen. Each director shall hold office for the term for which he is elected, and until his successor shall have been duly elected and qualified.

B. Except as otherwise provided in the by-laws, each director shall be elected for a term of one year. If the articles or by-laws of a company so provide, the directors thereof may be classified in respect to the time for which they shall severally hold office. In such case, each class shall be as nearly equal in number as possible, the term of office of at least one class shall expire in each year, and the members of a class shall not be elected for a shorter period than one year, or for a longer period than three years. At each ensuing election of directors after such classification, only the number of directors equal to the number of the class whose terms expire at the time of the election shall be elected, and such dirctors shall be elected for the longest term for which any class may have been elected as provided in this section.

C. Except as otherwise provided in the by-laws, vacancies in the board of directors shall be filled by the remaining members of the board, and each person so elected shall be a director until his successor is elected by the shareholders or members, who may make such election at the next annual meeting of the shareholders or members or at any special meeting duly called for that purpose and held prior thereto.

D. Except as otherwise provided in this article, the business and affairs of every reincorporated beneficial society shall be run and regulated in accordance with the provisions of this act relating to companies.

Act of April 20, 1927, P. L. 317, Section 5, 40 PS Sec. 891.

Section 2710. Reserves.—A. A beneficial society or a reincorporated beneficial society, doing business in this Commonwealth, shall, at all times, maintain reserves as follows:

(1) On the life portion contained in all policies or contracts issued, reserves shall be based upon a standard table of mortality approved by the Department, with interest at three and one-half per centum per annum and such reserves shall be computed in accordance with the requirements provided in this act for the computation of the reserve liability for life insurance.[1]

(2) On the disability portion contained in all policies or contracts issued, reserves shall be computed in accordance with the requirements provided in this act for the computation of the unearned premium reserve liability for casualty insurance.[2]

(3) For all definite and outstanding claims, reserves shall be calculated in accordance with the requirements provided in this act for the computation of reserves against unpaid losses in casualty insurance other than compensation or liability insurance.[3]

B. A sum equal to the amount of the reserves required by this section shall be invested in those investments hereinbefore in this act authorized for the investment of the reserve funds of life companies.

Section 2711. Annual Statements; Penalties.—A. Every beneficial society doing business in this Commonwealth shall annually, on or before the first day of March, file in the office of the Department a statement which shall exhibit its financial codition as of the thirty-first day of December of the previous year, and its business of that year. Such statement shall be in the form prescribed, or on forms furnished by the Department, and shall contain such information as shall seem, to the Department, best adapted for the purpose of eliciting from the beneficial society a true exhibit of its financial condition.

B. Any beneficial society which neglects to make and file its annual statement in the form or within the time required by this section, shall forfeit the sum of one hundred dollars for each day during which its failure to file a statement continues, and, upon notice from the Department, its authority to transact new business shall cease while its default continues.

C. A beneficial society, and the persons who make an oath, or subscribe to, a false annual statement in its behalf, shall severally be punished for wilfully making a false annual statement by a fine of not less than five hundred dollars or more than five thousand dollars. A person who makes oath to such false statement, with the knowledge that it is false, shall be deemed guilty of perjury.

Comments:

This section follows Section 320 of the Insurance Company Law of 1921 relating to stock and mutual insurance companies, associations, and exchanges.

The requirement that beneficial societies file an annual report is not new to Pennsylvania law. Section 29 of the Act of 1921, supra, provides as follows:

"Beneficial societies, other than those specifically exempted herein, without ritualistic work or a representative form of government, transacting any class of insurance, shall not be required to comply with this act. All such societies or associations shall, on and after the passage of this act, file with the Insurance Commissioner copies of their charter, constitution, and laws, and annually thereafter make a report, in such form as the commissioner may require, showing their condition and standing on the thirty-first day of December, preceding, and of their transaction for the year * * *".

Refer to Section 404 of the proposed Insurance Department Code, wherein it is provided that the Department shall annually, in the month of December furnish to each insurer doing business in this Commonwealth, two or more blanks in the form adopted for annual statements. This proposed section covers beneficial societies.

Section 2712. Copies of Certificates of Membership to be Filed with Department.—A certificate of membership shall not be issued, or delivered, by any beneficial society to any persons in this Commonwealth, until a copy of the form thereof has been filed with and approved by the Department. If the Department shall give written notice to a beneficial society that its form of certificates does not comply with the requirements of law, specifying therein the reasons for such non-compliance, it shall be unlawful for any such beneficial society to issue any certificate of membership in such form. The refusal by the Department to approve any form of certificate of membership shall be subject to review by the Court of Common Pleas of Dauphin County.

Section 2713. Scope of Article.—Provisions of this article shall not apply to:

(1) Beneficial associations which are formed by or for the exclusive benefit of those who, at the time of becoming members of such associations, are engaged in educational work in any department or district of the public school system of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, or in any college or university therein, and which issues beneficiary certificates only to such members.

(2) Fraternal, benevolent, charitable, or secret societies, issuing beneficial certificates and paying benefits to their membership through the lodge system.

(3) Insurance or relief associations formed by or for the exclusive benefit of employes of corporations or firms, or formed by or for the exclusive benefit of members of any religious corporation or association.

(4) Associations whose benefits are limited to postmortem assessments of the members.

ARTICLE XXVIII

FOREIGN AND ALIEN INSURERS

Section 2801. Admission of Foreign and Alien Insurers.—A. Foreign and alien insurers, which comply with the conditions hereinafter set forth, may be admitted to transact in this Commonwealth any of the classes of insurance business authorized by this act, subject to the provisions of the laws of this Commonwealth now or hereafter in force.[1]

B. A foreign or alien insurer, before transacting any business in this Commonwealth, shall procure a certificate of authority to do business from the Department, in a manner hereinafter provided in this article.

Comments:

1. The purpose of this Article is to segregate all provisions which pertain solely to foreign and alien insurers for the sake of convenience. General provisions which relate to all companies doing business within this Commonwealth are not included herein; consequently, the right of foreign and alien insurers to do business is here made "subject to the provisions of the laws of this Commonwealth now or hereafter in force."

Section 2802. Conditions Precedent to Procuring Certificate of Authority.A. A foreign or alien insurer, in order to procure a certificate of authority to do business in this Commonwealth, shall file with the Department:

(1) An application for a certificate of authority to do business, which shall conform to the requirements hereinafter set forth in this article.

(2) Duplicate copies of its charter, articles of incorporation, articles of association, or deed of settlement, duly certified by the proper public officer of the state or country of its incorporation, or if the insurer is created by a special law and has no charter or articles, duly certified duplicate copies of such law.

(3) A copy of its by-laws or regulations, if any, certified by the secretary or similar officer of the insurer.

(4) Copies of forms of all policies which the insurer proposes to issue in this Commonwealth, and also copies of the forms of application for such policies; or, in the case of a foreign or alien fraternal society, a copy of its certificate of membership, which must show that benefits are provided for by periodical or other payments of persons holding similar certificates.

(5) A duly executed power of attorney, in a form prescribed by the Department, which constitutes and appoints the Commissioner or his successor its true and lawful attorney, upon whom all lawful processes in any action in law or equity against it shall be served. Such power of attorney shall contain an agreement by the insurer that any lawful process against it, which may be served upon the Commissioner as is attorney, shall be of the same force and validity as if served upon the insurer, and that such power of attorney shall continue in force and be irrevocable so long as any liability of the insurer remains outstanding in this Commonwealth. Such power of attorney shall be executed by the president and secretary of the company, or other officers duly authorized thereto, under its corporate seal, and shall be accompanied by a certified copy of the resolution of the board of directors of the company making said appointment and authorizing the execution of said power of attorney.

(6) A statement of its financial condition and business, in the form prescribed by law for annual statements, signed and sworn to by the president and secretary, or similar principal officers of the insurer, and duly verified by an examination made by the supervising insurance official of the state of its organization, or of any other state satisfactory to the Department. In the case of an alien insurer, the statement shall comprise only the financial condition and other requisite details of its business transacted in the United States, and shall be signed and sworn to by its United States manager.

(7) A certificate from the proper official of the state or foreign country under whose laws it professes to be organized, that it is duly organized under those laws, and authorized thereunder to transact the classes of business which it proposes to transact in this Commonwealth.

(8) Proof which satisfies the Department that it has complied with the financial requirements hereinafter imposed in this article upon foreign and alien insurers which transact business in this Commonwealth, that it is entitled to public confidence, and that its admission to transact business in this Commonwealth will not be prejudicial to the public interest.

(9) Aninstrument setting forth the name and post office address of its duly authorized resident agent in this Commonwealth.

(10) A letter from the Department of Revenue acknowledging receipt of the statement of the insurer, which it is required by law to file.[1]

B. In addition to the papers and documents required in this section to be filed, each insurer shall also file a verified translation of each paper or document or any part thereof which is in a foreign language.

Comments:
1. Section 301 (d) of The Insurance Company Law of 1921 provides for the filing, with the office of the Auditor General, of a statement specifying the amount of paid—in capital, and the authorized capital, and other information relating to the foreign company. No similar provision is contained in this Article, because it is adequately covered by Section 730 of The Fiscal Code, as added by the Act of June 1, 1931, P. L. 318, Section 2. It seems advisable to refer here to the filing of such statement as a condition precedent to the admission of.

Section 2803. Application for Certificate of Authority.—An application by a foreign or alien insurer for a certificate of authority to do business in this Commonwealth shall be executed in duplicate under the seal of the insurer, and signed and verified by at least two duly authorized officers thereof, and it shall set forth:

(1) The name of the insurer.

(2) If the name of the insurer does not contain one of the words "corporation," "company," or "incorporated," or does not end with an abbreviation of one of such words, then the name of the insurer, with the word or abbreviation which it elects to add thereto for use in this Commonwealth.

(3) The name of the state or country under the laws of which it is formed.

(4) The address, including street and number, if any, of its principal office in the state or country under the laws of which it is formed.

(4) The address, including street and number, if any, of its principal office in the state or country under the laws of which it is formed.

(5) The address, including street and number, if any, of its proposed registered office in this Commonwealth.

(6) The character and nature of the business it proposes to do within this Commonwealth.

(7) A statement of the aggregate number and par value of shares which it has authority to issue, and the aggregate number of shares which it has issued.

(8) Such further and additional information as the Department may from time to time require.

Comments:
This section follows in general Section 1003 of the proposed Business Corporation Code. Foreign and alien insurers are admitted to do business in this Commonwealth by the Insurance Department, whereas foreign business corporations are admitted by the Department of State.

Section 2804. Financial Requirements of Foreign and Alien Insurers.—A. Every foreign insurer authorized to do business in this Commonwealth shall have, in the case of a stock company, a paid-up capital and surplus, and, in the case of a mutual company, assets or surplus, at least equal to the financial requirements imposed by this act upon similar domestic insurers engaged in the same classes of business, and invested in accordance with the requirements of the laws of the state wherein it was incorporated or organized.

B. Every alien insurer authorized to do business in this Commonwealth shall maintain at all times within the United States a deposit of securities at least equal in amount to the requirements of capital, surplus, and other financial requirements imposed by this act upon similar domestic insurers transacting the same classes of business. It shall be the duty of each such alien insurer to furnish to the Department, upon demand, a certificate from the proper officer or department of the state wherein its deposit has been made, enumrating and describing the securities on deposit. The securities on deposit shall be only those investments in which a company incorporated under the laws of the state, where in the deposit is maintained, may lawfully invest its capital.

C. A foreign or alien mutual life company may be authorized to do business in this Commonwealth if it has the requisite funds of a domestic mutual life company, and, in the opinion of the Department is in a sound financial condition, and has policies in force upon not less than five hundred lives, for an aggregate amount of not less than one mililon dollars.

D. A stock fire, stock marine, or stock fire and marine company, either foreign or alien, may be authorized to do in this Commonwealth any one of the classes of business which similar domestic companies are permitted to transact by this act, if it has a paid-up capital or deposit of not less than two hundred thousand dollars; and it may be authorized to do all of the classes of business which similar domestic companies are permitted to transact by this act, if it has a paid-up capital or deposit of not less than four hundred thousand dollars.

E. A mutual fire, mutual marine, or mutual fire and marine insurance company of another stae may be authorized to transact any one of the classes of business which similar domestic companies are permitted to transact by this act, if it has a surplus over all liabilities, including unearned premiums, computed in accordance with the laws of this Commonwealth, of not less than one hundred fifty thousand dollars. It may be authorized to transact any two of the classes of business which similar domestic companies are permitted to transact by this act, if its surplus over all liabilities is not less than four hundred thousand dollars.

F. Every foreign or alien surety company authorized to do business in this Commonwealth shall maintain, at all times, a deposit of at least one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000), invested in accordance with the requirements of the laws of the state wherein it was incorporated deposited, with the Insurance Commissioner or other corresponding official of a state wherein it is authorized to do business, in trust for the benefit of the holders of the obligations of such company.

G. A foreign or alien fraternal society authorized to do business in this Commonwealth, in addition to the qualifications required of domestic fraternal societies organized under this act, shall have its benefit fund obligations valued by one of the standards hereinbefore authorized by this act.

H. Nothing contained in this act shall prevent any foreign or alien stock life company now engaged in this Commonwealth in the business of accident and sickness or liability insurance, or both, from continuing to transact such business if the amount of its paid-up capital shall be equal to the amount required of a domestic life company and at least fifty thousand dollars additional for each of the other classes of insurance undertaken.

I. Any foreign or alien insurer authorized, at the effective date of this act, to transact business in this Commonwealth, which has less capital, surplus, or assets than those hereinbefore in this act required for similar domestic insurers transacting the same classes of business, may have its certificate of authority to do business in this Commonwealth renewed, so long as, in the opinion of the Department, it is in a sound financial condition and complies in all other respects with the requirements of law.

Section 2805. Annual Statements and Certificates of Deposit of Foreign and Alien Insurers.—A. Every foreign and alien insurer authorized to transact business in this Commonwealth shall file an annual financial statement, subject to the same requirements and penalties that this act[1] imposes upon domestic insurers. An alien insurer authorized to do business in this Commonwealth shall be required to include in its statement only the business which it transacted in the United States, and the assets held by and for it within the United States for the protection of its policyholders therein. An alien insurer may, in its annual statement, return as paid-up capital that amount of its deposit, required by the provisions of this article, which is equal to the capital required of similar domestic companies which transact the same classes of business.

B. A foreign or alien surety company may be required to furnish the Department, in addition to the annual statement, a certificate from the officer with whom the deposit hereinbefore provided in this article has been made, describing the securities deposited, and stating that he is satisfied that such securities are fully worth one hundred thousand dollars.

Comments:

Section 2911 of this draft requires every insurer to file an annual statement.

Section 2806. Additional Annual Reports from Foreign and Alien Insurers.—Every foreign or alien insurer authorized to do business in this Commonwealth shall make a report to the Department, on or before March first of each year, verified by the oath of its president, secretary, or attorney, showing the gross premiums of every character and description received from its business transacted in the Commonwealth during the year, or fraction of year, ending with the thirty-first day of December preceding, whether such premiums were received in money or in the form of notes, credits or any other substitute for money, or whether such premiums were collected in this Commonwealth or elsewhere. Such insurers shall also pay to the Department of Revenue the requisite tax upon all such premiums. Such insurers, in making such report, may deduct from the gross premiums received all premiums returned on policies cancelled or not taken, and all premiums actually paid for reinsurance where the reinsurances are effected in insurers duly authorized to do business in this Commonwealth. Foreign or alien stock companies with participating features, in addition to the aforesaid deductions, may deduct that portion of the premiums returned to the policyholders. Foreign or alien life companies may deduct dividends declared and actually used by policyholders in payment of renewal premiums. Foreign or alien mutual insurers may deduct that proportion of the advance premium or deposit returned to members upon the expiration or termination of their contracts. "Gross Premiums" within the meaning of this section are hereby defined to be the amount of dues, fees, or premiums stated in the policies or contracts of insurance.

Section 2807. Annual Returns of Business by Foreign or Alien Fire Insurers.—Every foreign and alien fire insurer shall, annually, and at such other times as the Department may require, in addition to all returns now by law required of it or its agents or managers, make a return to the Department, in such form and detail as may be prescribed by him, of all insurance, reinsurance, or cessions of risks or liability contracted for or effected by it, whether by issue of policy, entry on bordereau, or general participation agreement, or by excess loss reinsurance, or in any other manner whatsoever upon property located in this Commonwealth, or covering, whether specified or otherwise, any risk or liability upon property so located. Such return shall be certified by the oath of its president and secretary or attorney, if a foreign insurer; if an alien insurer, such return shall be certified by the oath of its managers in the United States, as to such reinsurance or cessions effected through its branch office in the United States, and by the oath of its president and secretary, or by officers corresponding thereto at its home office, wherever located, as to reinsurance or cessions as aforesaid, contracted for or effected through the alien office.

Section 2808. Penalties; Revocation of Certificate of Authority.—Any foreign or alien insurer authorized to do business in this Commonwealth, violating or failing to observe and comply with any of the provisions of this article applicable to it, shall be subject to a penalty of five hundred dollars for each violation. Such penalty, upon satisfactory evidence of the violation of any of the preceding sections by any foreign stock or mutual fire insurance company, association, or exchange, may be imposed by the Department. Any such insurer which shall neglect and refuse, for thirty days after the imposition of any penalty by the Department, to pay and discharge the amount thereof, shall have its certificate of authority to transact business in this Commonwealth suspended by the Department, pursuant to the laws of this Commonwealth, and such suspension shall continue for at least one year from its effective date. An insurer whose authority to transact business in this Commonwealth shall have been suspended in this manner shall not be again authorized or permitted to transact business herein until it shall have paid the amount of any such penalty, and shall have filed in the office of the Department a certificate, signed by its president or other chief officer, to the effect that the terms and obligations of the provisions of this act are accepted by its as a part of the conditions of its right and authority to transact business in this Commonwealth.

Pennsylvania Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 504, 40 PS Sec. 634.

Section 2809. Foreign and Alien Insurers to Do Business Through Resident Agents; Exceptions.—A. A foreign or alien insurer which is authorized to transact business in this Commonwealth shall not make, write, place, or cause to be made, written, or placed, any policy, duplicate policy, or contract of insurance of any kind or character, or any general or floating policy, upon property situated or located in this Commonwealth, until the risk has been approved in writing by an agent who is a resident of or whose principal place of business is in this Commonwealth, who is regularly licensed to transact insurance business herein, who shall countersign all policies so issued, and receive the commission thereon when the premium is paid, in order that the Commonwealth may receive the taxes required by law to be paid on the premiums collected for insurance effective in this Commonwealth.

B. Policies of life insurance issued in this Commonwealth shall not be required to have the counter-signature of a resident agent thereon, if the resident agent is required to sign the application for insurance, and if such application or an exact copy thereof is attached to the policy when it is issued.

C. Nothing in this section shall be construed to prevent any such foreign or alien insurer from issuing policies or bonds at its principal or department offices effective in this Commonwealth if such policies are issued upon applications procured and submitted to such insurer by agents who are residents of this Commonwealth and licensed to transact the business of insurance herein and who shall receive the commission thereon when paid.

D. The provisions of this section shall not apply to direct insurance covering the rolling stock of railroad corporations, or property in transit while in the possession and custody of railroad corporations or other common carriers, or to the property of such common carriers used or employed by them in their business as common carriers of freight, merchandise, or passengers.

E. The provisions of this section, except as to payment of taxes, shall not apply to foreign exchanges and fraternal benefit societies authorized to transact business in this Commonwealth, which maintain no office in this Commonwealth, and pay no commissions to agents or representatives in this Commonwealth.

F. The Department may, under such regulations and restrictions as may be deemed necessary, issue licenses to non-resident agents who are licensed in the state in which they reside, but such agents shall not countersign any policy or contract of insurance. All such policies and contracts shall be signed only by resident agents.

Comments:

This section consolidates the provisions of the Insurance Company Law requiring registered agents, i. e., Section 501, requiring foreign fire companies to do business through registered agents, and Section 610, requiring the same of foreign companies other than fire companies.

Section 2810. Acquisition of Real Property by Foreign and Alien Insurers; Titles Confirmed.—A. Any foreign or alien insurer authorized to transact business within this Commonwealth may acquire, hold, mortgage, lease, and transfer real property in this Commonwealth in the same manner and subject to the same limitations as domestic insurers. All the rights, privileges and duties now by law accorded to and imposed upon lien creditors purchasing at judicial sales are hereby extended to such foreign and alien insurers.

B. Nothing herein contained shall be deemed to prevent or relieve real estate acquired, held, mortgaged, leased, or conveyed, by any insurer, under the provisions of this act, from being taxed in the same manner as other real estate within this Commonwealth is taxed.

C. The title to any real estate acquired, held, mortgaged, leased, or conveyed, by any foreign or alien insurer, pursuant to the provisions of any of the laws of this Commonwealth repealed by this act, is hereby validated, and such real estate now held by any such insurer shall be taken, held, mortgaged, leased, or conveyed, with the same effect as if acquired pursuant to the provisions of this act.

Section 2811. Issuance of Certificate of Authority; Filing.—A. After a certificate of authority to do business in this Commonwealth has been issued by the Department to any foreign or alien insurer, the insurer may transact in this Commonwealth any of the business referred to in the certificate of authority and no other, subject, however, to the right of the Commonwealth to cancel or revoke such certificate of authority, as provided by law.

B. Upon the issuance of such certificate of authority, the Insurance Department shall transmit a certificed copy of the certificate of authority, together with a duplicate copy of the charter which has been filed with it pursuant to the provisions of this article, to the Department of State, which shall file and record such copies of the charter and certificate of authority.

Section 2812. General Powers of Foreign and Alien Insurers.—A foreign or alien insurer which shall have received a certificate of authority under this act, so long as such certificate of authority shall not be revoked or cancelled, shall enjoy the same rights and privileges as a domestic insurer, but no more, and, except as in this act otherwise provided, shall be subject to the same liabilities, restrictions, duties and penalties now in force or hereafter imposed upon domestic insurers, to the same extent as if it had been organized under this act to transact the business set forth in its certificate of authority.

Comments:

This provision is similar to Section 1009 of the proposed Business Corporation Code. It carries out the policy of equalizing foreign and domestic companies. Furthermore, it renders foreign and alien insurers subject to the general body of insurance laws contained in this draft, and eliminates any doubt which now exists as to the applicability of the present insurance laws to foreign companies.

Section 2813. Amendments to Charters of Foreign or Alien Companies.—Upon amendment of the charter of any foreign or alien company authorized by a certificate of authority to transact business in this Commonwealth, such insurer shall forthwith file with the Insurance Department duplicate copies of such amendment, duly authenticated by the proper official of the state or country under the laws of which such company is organized. The Insurance Department shall transmit one duplicate copy of such amendment to the Department of State, which shall file and record it. The filing of any such amendment shall not, of itself, enlarge or alter the nature or kind of business which such company is authorized to transact in this Commonwealth, nor authorize such company to transact business in this Commonwealth under any other name than the name set forth in its certificate of authority, unless such company shall apply for and receive from the Department a new certificate of authority.

Section 2814. Merger of Foreign or Alien Companies.—Whenever a foreign or alien company authorized by a certificate of authority to trancast business in which Commonwealth shall be a party to a statutory merger permitted by the laws of the state or country under which it is organized, and such company shall be the surviving company, it shall forthwith file with the Insurance Department duplicate copies of the articles of merger, duly authenticated by the proper officer of the state or country under the laws of which such statutory merger was effected. The Insurance Department shall transmit one duplicate copy of the articles of merger to the Department of State, which shall file and record it. It shall not be necessary for such company to procure a new certificate of authority to transact business in this Commonwealth, unless the name of such company be changed thereby, or unless the company desires to transact in this Commonwealth other or additional business than that which it is then authorized to transact in this Commonwealth.

Section 2815. Surrender of Certificate of Authority.—A. Any foreign or alien insurer may withdraw from doing business in this Commonwealth and surrender its certificate of authority by filing with the Department an application for a certificate of withdrawal, executed under the seal of the insurer, and signed and verified by two duly authorized officers thereof, which shall set forth:

(1) The name of the insurer.

(2) The state or country of its incorporation or organization.

(3) The date on which it received a certificate of authority to do business in the Commonwealth.

(4) A statement that it surrenders its certificate of authority to do business in this Commonwealth.

(5) A statement that it consents that process against it in an action or proceeding upon any liability or obligation incurred, or any policy or contract of insurance issued, within this Commonwealth before the issuance of the certificate of withdrawal may be served upon the Commissioner after the filing of such certificate.

(6) The post office address to which the Commisisoner may mail a copy of any process against it that may be served upon him.

B. Upon the filing of such application and the return for cancellation of the insurer's certificate of authority, or the filing of proof that it has been lost or destroyed, the Insurance Department, after all bonus, taxes, fees and charges have been paid, as required by law, shall concel the certificate of authority, if any, and shall issue, in duplicate, a certificate of withdrawal. The Insurance Department shall return one of such certificates of withdrawal to the insurer, or its representative, and shall send the other to the Department of State, which shall record and file the same. Upon the issuance of the certificate of withdrawal, the authority of the insurer to do business in this Commonwealth shall cease and determine, and no such insurer doing business in this Commonwealth after the issuance of such certificate shall maintain any action in this Commonwealth upon any contract made by it in this Commonwealth subsequent to the issuance of such certificate of withdrawal. The issuance of such certificate shall not, however, affect any action pending at th etime thereof, or affect any right of action on any policy or contract made by such insurer in the Commonweaith before the issuance of the certificate. Process against the insurer in an action upon any liability or obligation incurred within this Commonwealth upon any policy or contract made before the issuance of such certificate may be served thereafter upon the Commissioner.

Comments:

This section protects creditors and policyholders of foreign and alien insurers by providing that the withdrawal of the insurer shall not determine pending litigation or prevent suit against the insurer arising out of business done prior to its withdrawal.

ARTICLE XXIX

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS; PROHIBITIONS AND PENALTIES.

Section 2901. Forfeiture of Articles of Incorporation.—A. The articles of incorporation of an incorporated insurer shall be automatically forfeited by operation of law, when

(1) The capital, surplus, and expense fund required by law have not been paid in within two years after the issuance of its certificate of incorporation.

(2) The incorporated insurer has not in any manner exercised at least one of the powers conferred upon it by its articles of incorporation within one year after the issuance thereof.[2]

(3) The incorporated insurer which has formerly exercised any of the powers conferred upon it by its articles of incorporation, has not exercised for a period of two years at least one of such powers.

(4) The Commissioner has taken possession of the business and property of an incorporated insurer, as receiver, and has commenced to liquidate its assets.

B. Whenever it shall appear to the Department that any of the conditions exist which under the provisions of this section shall affect the forfeiture of the articles of an incorporated insurer, it shall issue a certificate of forfeiture of the articles of incorporation and of the certificate of authority, in quadruplicate originals. One quadruplicate original shall be filed with the Insurance Department, one sent to the last known address of the incorporated insurer, one to the Department of State, and one to the recorder of deeds of the county in which the place of business of the insurer is or was located, to be recorded without charge by such recorder of deeds.

C. If the articles of incorporation of a company have been forfeited in the manner provided by this section, the corporate powers may, whenever necessary to liquidation and winding up of the business and property of such company, continue for a period of three years, but they shall not be considered in existence for any other purposes whatsoever.

Reference:

Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 339, 40 PS Sec. 461.

Comments:

There does not seem to be any reason for not permitting an automatic forfeiture of charter without court action whenever any of the circumsances outlined in this proposed section are existent. Of course, a company would have the right to appeal to the courts from any order of the Department causing the forfeiture of its articles of incorporation or certificate of authorization whenever it felt that such forfeiture was effected contrary to the provisions of this act.

1. The term "incorporated insurer" is used here, because it includes, in addition to companies, incorporated societies.

2. Section 339 of the Insurance Company Law of 1921 provides for petition to the court by the Attorney General for a decree of dissolution. There is no reason why this proceeding should be necessary.

Section 2902. Books, Records, and Accounts of Insurers; Penalties.A. The total liabilities of each insurer shall be set out in full upon its books or other records, and in all reports and statements required by law. It shall be unlawful for any insurer to reduce such liabilities for the purpose of concealing unadjusted losses, expense charges, or loans. All such losses, expense charges, or loans shall be set up in separate accounts on the books or other records of the insurer until adjusted or charged off.

B. An insurer shall not conceal any of its assets in any manner whatsoever upon its books or other records or in any report or statement required by law, but an accurate and complete record shall be kept of such assets. An insured shall not by any system of accounting or any advice of bookkeeping, directly or indirectly, enter any of its assets upon its books in the name of any other corporation or person, or under any title or designation, that is not truly descriptive thereof.[1]

C. An insurer shall not, except with the written approval of the Department, enter, or at any time carry, on its books, any real or personal property owned by it, at a valuation exceeding its actual cost to such insurer.[2]

D. Any officer, director, or employe of an insurer who knowingly violates any provision of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall, upon conviction thereof, be subject to imprisonment not exceeding one year, or a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or both.

Reference:

Act of June 12, 1907, P. L. 525, 7 PS Secs. 324, 325, and 326.

Comments:

1. This provision is based upon Section 3 of the Act of 1907, supra.

2. This proposed subsection is new. It merely enacts into law a rule which is enforced by the Banking Department today in its supervision of institutions. Its wisdom is apparent. The banking laws of a number of other states, including New York, California, and New Jersey, contain a similar prohibition.

Section 2903. Relationssip of Company with Employes of Department.—A. An insurer shall not grant or give any sum of money or other property, whether as a gift, credit, loan or otherwise, either directly or indirectly, to the Commissioner, or to any deputy, examiner, clerk, or other employe of the Department.

This section shall not be construed to prohibit the Commissioner, or any deputy, examiner, clerk or other employe of the Department from becoming a member or policyholder of any insurer.

B. Any officer, director, agent, or employe of an insurer, who knowingly violates the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall, upon conviction thereof, be subject to imprisonment for a period not exceeding one year, or a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or both; he shall also be subject to a further fine of a sum equal to the amount of the gift, credit, loan, or other sum of money, or the value of any other property given in violation of this section.

Comments:

The seriousness of the consequences which may result from the granting of loans or gratuities by a company to employes of the Department is so great that to render such acts criminal offenses seems not only justified but clearly necessary. Our law should contain a prohibition upon such practices and a penalty for violations of such prohibition.

Section 204 of the proposed Insurance Department Code prohibits all officers, agents or employes of the Department from being interested in an insurer as a stockholder, officer, director, etc.

Section 2904. Use of Unapproved Policies, Contracts, or Certificates Prohibited.—.A An insurer shall not issue, sell, or dispose of any policy, contract, or certificate, covering life, health and accident, fire, liability, and casualty insurance, or use applications, riders, or endorsements, in connection therewith, until the forms of the same have been submitted to and approved by the Department and filed therein, except riders or endorsements relating to the manner of distribution of benefits, and to the reservation of rights and benefits under any such policy, and used at the request of individual policyholders.

B. Any person, corporation, or insurer, that shall, either as principal or agent, issue, or cause to be issued, any policy or contract of insurance within this Commonwealth, contrary to this section, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars.

The Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 354, as added by the Act of June 23, 1931, P. L. 904, 40 PS Sec. 477 B.

Comments:

Fire insurance policies and riders are included in this draft although Section 354 of the present law does not include them. There seems to be no reason why they should be excluded.

The paragraph prescribing a course of action by the Commissioner is here eliminated, since that is covered fully in Section 2922 of this draft.

Section 2905. Execution of Insurance Policies.—Policies of insurance of any stock or mutual company shall be subscribed by the president, or such other officer as may be designated by the directors for that purpose, shall be attested by the secretary or other designated officer, and, when so subscribed and attested, shall be obligatory on the company. The corporate seal need not be affixed thereto.

Section 2906. Application, Constitution, By-Laws, and Rules as Part of Policy and Contract.—All insurance policies and contracts issued by insurers, in which the application of the insured, the constitution, by-laws, or other rules of the insurer form party of the policy or contract between the parties thereto, or have any bearing thereon, shall contain, or have attached thereto, correct copies of the application as signed by the applicant, or the constitution, by-laws, or other rules referred to; and, unless so attached and accompanying the policy, such application, constitution, or by-laws, or other rules shall not be received in evidence in any controversy between the parties to, or interested in, the policy or contract, nor shall such application, constitution, by-laws, or other rules be considered a part of the policy or contract between such parties.

The Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 318, 40 PS Sec. 441.

Section 2907. Reinsurance Regulated.—A. A domestic insurer shall not reinsure its entire schedule of policies unless it first secures the approval of the Department.

B. Any insurer authorized to transact business in this Commonwealth, may reinsure all or any part of its liability under one or more or its policy contracts with any other insurer doing the same or a similar class of business, authorized to transact business in this Commonwealth or authorized to transact business in any of the United States, if the insurer with which the reinsurance is effected is and remains of the same standard of solvency and meets other eequirements fixed by the laws of this Commonwealth for insurers transacting the same class of classes of business within this Commonwealth.

C. Any domestic, foreign or alien insurer authorized to transact business in this Commonwealth, shall pay to his Commonwealth taxes required on all business taxable within this Commonwealth and reinsured, as provided herein, with any foreign or alien insurer not authorized to transact business in this Commonwealth.

The Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 319, 40 PS Sec. 442.

Section 2908. Actions by and against Insurers.—It shall be lawful for any insurer to maintain and defend judicial proceedings. In every judicial proceeding to which an incorporated insurer is a party, its incorporation shall be taken to be admitted unless it is put in issue by the pleadings. Any person or persons, body politic or corporate, who or which has a cause of action against any domestic insurer or against any foreign or alien insurer that has an agency established in this Commonwealth, may bring suit in a court of common pleas or before any justice of the peace, alderman, or magistrate, in any county where such company transacts business or the property insured is located, or, in cases of live stock insurance, where the owner resides, and to direct any process to the sheriff or constable of any of the counties in this Commonwealth.

The Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 344, 40 PS Sec. 466.

Section 2909. Copies of Lost Policies and Contracts.—A. Whenever any policy or contract of insurance issued in this Commonwealth, has been lost or destroyed, the insurer bound thereunder shall, on proof of the loss or destruction thereof, supported by affidavit, furnish to the person or persons whose policy has been so lost or destroyed, a copy thereof together with the transfers, which have been approved and recorded on the books of such insurer, if any, which may have been made by the original, or any subsequent grantee of such policy to the person or persons having the same, at the time of the loss or destruction thereof.

B. The copy so made shall be as effectual for the security and indemnification of the person or persons holding it as the original, and it shall subject to transfer in the same manner as the original.

C. Upon refusal of the insurer to comply with the request for a copy of such policy or contract, application may be made to the Department for an order on the insurer to provide such copy in the event the Department determines the facts warrant such order.

Act of March 4, 1850, P. L. 126, 40 PS Secs. 467, 468, and 469.

Comments.

The provisions for resort to the court of common pleas by the party seeking a copy of his policy n refusal of the insurer to furnish one are considered obsolete and are not included in this draft.

Section 2910. Limitation on Acting as Insurer and Penalties.—Except as herein provided, the doing of any insurance business in this Commonwealth, as prescribed in this act, by any private individual, association, partnership, or corporation other than an insurance company, is prohibited. Any person who solicits or obtains, within this Commonwealth, applications for insurance by any such private individual, association, partnership, or corporation, contrary to the provisions of this act, shall be liable to a penalty of one hundred dollars, for the use of the Commonwealth, for every application obtained, to be sued for and recovered by the Department of Justice or by the district attorney of the proper county, either by action of debt or criminal prosecution. Any person who has paid to any agent of such unauthorized individual, association, partnership, or corporation, any premium moneys for insurance granted or to be granted, shall be entitled to recover such moneys, by an action at law, from such agent or from the person, association, partnership or corporation for which he acted. This section does not prohibit the doing of an insurance business by Lloyds associations, nor the exchange of inter-insurance or reciprocal contracts of insurance authorized by this act, nor shall the same prevent any individual from becoming and being accepted as personal surety, or guarantor, including mortgage guarantor, or self-insured employer.

Section 2911. Annual Statements; Penalties.—A. Every insurer transacting business in this Commonwealth shall annually, on or before the firht day of March, file in the office of the Department a statement which shall exhibit its financial condition on the thirty-first day of December of the previous year, and its business of that year.

B. Any insurer which neglects to make and file its annual statement in the form or within the time herein provided shall forfeit one hundred dollars for each day during which such neglect continues, and, upon notice by the Department its authority to do new business shall cease while such default continues.

C. Any person, company, corporation or association wilfully making a false annual or other statement or making oath to or subscribing such statement required by law, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof shall be sentenced to pay a fine of not less than five hundred dollars nor more than five thousand dollars.—A person who wilfully makes oath to such false statement shall be guilty of perjury.

The Insurance Company Law of 1921, Section 320, 40 PS Sec. 443.

Comments.

The provisions in Section 320 of the Insurance Company Law of 1921 for the furnishing of blank forms for reports is eliminated as it appears in the proposed Insurance Department Code, Section 404.

Refer to Section 2806 of this draft, wherein the provisions relating to the annual statements of foreign and alien insurers are set forth.

Section 2912. Discrimination Prohibited.—A. Discrimination between individuals of the same class in the amount of premiums or rates charged for any policy of life, health or accident, fire, liability, or casualty insurance, except fidelity of surety bonds, covered by this act, or in the benefits payable thereon, or in any of the terms or conditions of such policy, or in any other manner whatsoever, is prohibited.

B. Any person, corporation, or insurer that shall, either as principal or agent, issue, or cause to be issued, any policy or contract of insurance within this Commonwealth, contrary to this section, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars.

Reference:

The Insurance Company Law of 1921, Sections 353 and 626, 40 PS Secs. 477A and 761.

Comments.

Section 353 of the present law as added by the Act of June 23, 1931, P. L. 904, is more comprehensive than Section 626 of The Insurance Company Law of 1921 and is used here for that reason. The present draft includes fire policies, since there seems to be no reason why they should be excluded. Section 1318 of this draft follows the present law (Section 546) with respect to discrimination in fire rates by fire insurers and fire rating bureaus. The section above supplements the provisions of Section 1318. Furthermore, it provides that a violation is a misdemeanor, as does Section 353 of the present law.

The paragraph prescribing a course of action by the Commissioner is here eliminated, since that is covered fully in Section 2922 of this draft.

Section 2913. Purchase of Proxies Prohibited.—A. It shall be unlawful for any person, firm, or corporation, or the officers, directors, employes, attorneys, or representatives of any domestic, foreign or alien insurer authorized to transact business in this Commonwealth, to give or promise money or anything of value to the owners or holders of shares of any domestic stock company, or to the members of any domestic mutual company, with intent to secure the voting proxy of any share or shares or of any members; and no proxy or proxies so obtained shall be voted at any stockholders' or members' meeting of any domestic insurer.

B. Any person violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or undergo imprisonment for a period not exceeding one year, or both.

Act of May 5, 1921, P. L. 350, Sections 1 and 2, 40 PS Secs. 478 and 479.

Section 2914. Rebates and Inducements Prohibited.—A. An insurer by itself or by its officers or members, attorney-in-fact, or by any other party, shall not offer, promise, allowed, give, set off, or pay, directly or indirectly, any rebate of, or part of, the premium payable on the policy, or on any policy or agent's commission thereon, or earnings, profit, dividends, or other benefit founded, arising, accruing, or to accrue thereon or therefrom, or any special advantage in date of policy or age of issue, or any paid employment or contract for scervices of any kind, or any other valuable consideration or inducement, to or for insurance on any risk in this Commonwealth, now or hereafter to be written, which is not specified in the policy or contract of insurance; nor shall any such insurer, personally or otherwise, offer, promise, give, option, sell, or purchase any stock, bonds, securities, or property, or any dividdents or profits accruing or to accrue thereon, or other thing of value whatsoever, as inducement to insurance or in connection therewith, which is not specified in the policy. Any person, corporation, or insurer that shall violate the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be sentenced or undergo imprisonment for a period not exceeding six months, or both.

B. Nothing in this section shall be construed to prevent the taking of a bona fide obligation, with legal interest, in payment of any premium nor prevent a company transacting industrial insurance from returning to policyholders, who have made a premium payment for a period of at least one year, the percentage of premium which the company would otherwise have paid for the weekly collection of such premium.

Section 2915. Embezzlement by Directors, Officers, Agents.—A. If any director, officer, agent, or other person connected with, or doing business for or with, any domestic, foreign, or alien insurer shall fraudulently embezzle or appropriate to his use or the use of any other person or persons any money or other property belonging to such insurer, or left with or held by it in trust, he or they, on conviction thereof, shall be fined in the amount so appropriated or embezzled, or be sentenced to undergo an imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term not exceeding five years, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

B. In the indictment and trial of any case under this section, it shall not be necessary, in order to establish a prima facie case for the Commonwealth, to set forth or prove the incorporation of any incorporated insurer, except by the verbal testimony of any competent witness.

Section 2916. Fraud in Procuring Insurance or in Collecting Claims.—A. Any person who is knowingly concerned in, or who, for profit, gain, benefit, favor, or otherwise, makes any false oral statement, misrepresents, substitutes persons or realty or goods, subscribes to or prepares, or helps to prepare, any fraudulent letter, document, application, aqidavit, inventory, financial or other statement, or in any methods or manner attempts to deceive, for the purpose of obtaining for himself, herself, or others, any of the classes of insurance provided for by this act; and any person knowingly concerned for profit, gain, benefit, favor, or otherwise, in preparing or forwarding any fraudulent application, affidavit, proof of loss, or claim, or attempting to collect or collecting anw wholly or partly frauduent claim or money demand from any insurer, whether any policy or agreement of insurance was lawfully procured or procured by fraud, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to undergod imprisonment for not more than one year or less than six months, and, in addition, to pay a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars or less than one hundred dollars.

B. The provisions of this section shall apply whether or not insurance was actually in force and whether or not the offending person or persons received profit, gain, benefit, or favor from the attempt to defraud or from the consummation of the fraud.

Comments.

The clause added by the 1931 amendment giving the Commissioner the right to take action against an offending agent or solicitor of an insurer is not retained here as this is fully covered in the proposed Insurance Department Code, Section 1204.

Section 2918. Misrepresentations to Induce Changes in Insurers Prohibited.—An insurer and any member, officer, director, or attorney-in-fact thereof, or any other person in its behalf, shall not make any misrepresentation or incomplete comparison of policies, oral, written, or otherwise, to any person insured in any insurer for the purpose of inducing or tending to induce a policyholder in any insurer to lapse, forfeit, or surrender his insurance therein, and to take out a policy of insurance in another insurer insuring against similar risks.

Section 2919. Misrepresentations of Policy Terms, Future Dividends, Etc. Prohibited.—A. An insurer and any member, officer, director, or attorney-in-fact thereof, or any other person in its behalf, shall not issue, circulate, or use, or cause or permit to be issued, circulated, or used, any written or oral statement or circular misrepresenting the terms of any policy issued or to be issued by such insurer or make an estimate, with intent to deceive, of the future dividends payable under any such policy.

B. Any person, corporation, or insurer that shall violate the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to pay a fine of not more than five hundred dollars for each violation, or undergo imprisonment for a period not exceeding six months, or both.

Comments:

The penalty provided by Section 350 of the present law for violation of various sections is included in the redraft of this section. The clause prescribing a course of action by the Commissioner is here eliminated, since that is covered fully in Section 2922 of this draft.

Section 2920. Automobile Protection Contracts Prohibited.—A. It shall be unlawful for any person, corporation, or protective or co-operative company or association, organized or formed for the purpose of doing business within this Commonwealth, to solicit and accept premiums of dues and sell policies or contracts guaranteeing to owners of automobiles, motorcycles or trucks the services of attorneys in event of damage to persons or property arising out of the operation of automobiles, motorcycles or trucks, or providing for the towing of any damaged automobile, motorcycle or truck, or to hold himself or itself out or to represent himself or itself to the public as being engaged in the insurance business or as being an insurer authorized to engage in any kind of insurance business, or to do the kind of business usually transacted by insurers, although transacted under some other name or description, unless such person, company or association is legally incorporated or organized and doing business under the laws of this Commonwealth as an insurer.

B. Any person, company, corporation or association violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, be sentenced to pay a fine of not less than five hundred dollars or more than one thousand dollars, or such person or the members or officers of any corporation, company or association responsible for the violation of this act shall undergo imprisonment for a term of not less than six months or more than one year, or both.

C. The provisions of this section shall not apply to automobile clubs duly incorporated in this Commonwealth and not conducted for profit.

Section 2922. Revocation of Certificate of Authority and Imposition of Penalties by Department for Violation of Act.—A. Upon satisfactory evidence of this act by any insurer authorized to transact business in this Commonwealth, the Department may, in its discretion, pursue any one or more of the following courses:

(1) Suspend or revoke the certificate of authority of such offending insurer;

(2) Refuse, for a period not to exceed one year thereafter, to issue a new certificate of authority to such person, partnership, or corporation;

(3) Impose a penalty of not more than one thousand dollars for each act in violation of this act.

B. Before the Department shall take any action as above set forth, it shall give written notice to the insurer accused of violating the law, stating specifically the nature of such alleged violation, and fixing a time and place, at least ten days thereafter, when a hearing on the matter shall be held. After such hearing, or upon failure of the accused or its representative to appear at such hearing, the Department shall impose such of the above penalties as its deems advisable. When the Department shall take action in any of the ways above recited, the insurer aggrieved may appeal therefrom to the Court of Common Pleas of Dauphin County.

COMMUNICATION RELATIVE TO EMBARGO ON IMPORTATION OF RUSSIAN ANTHRACITE COAL

Office of
(Seal) TREASURY DEPARTMENT
Assistant Secretary Washington 5-12

Feb. 13, 1933

Mr. A. Boyd Hamilton, Secretary,
Senate of Pennsylvania,
Harrisburg, Pa.

Sir:

Your letter addressed to the Secretary of the Treasury under date of January 30, 1933, transmitting a concurrent resolution adopted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania urging an embargo against the importation of Russian anthracite coal, has been referred to me for attention.

In considering the question of an embargo on Russian anthracite coal, it must be borne in mind that there is but one provision of law which might be invoked to that end. This provision is found in Section 307 of the Tariff Act of 1930, which prohibits the importation of goods, wares, articles and merchandise mined, manufactured or produced in whole or in part by convict labor or/and forced labor or/and indentured labor and under penal sanctions. The burden of proof under this section rests upon the government.

Early in 1932 a petition was filed in the Treasury Department by certain of the domestic producers of anthracite coal alleging that anthracite coal is produced in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics by forced labor. This allegation was challenged by the importers of anthracite coal from the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and hearings were granted both to domestic producers and to the importers and were held on March 24, 30 and 31, 192.

At these hearings only a small amount of evidence of probative value in support of the petition of domestic producers was introduced by those seeking the general exclusion, certainly not enough to sustain the allegation, as but one witness testified on the basis of first-hand information and he admitted that he had not been in Russia for a year. A great preponderance of the testimony was to the effect that forced labor was not used in the mining of anthracite coal in the Donetz Basin which is the region where Russian anthracite exported to the United States appears to be mined. It therefore would be entirely unjustifiable for the Secretary of the Treasury to approve the issuance of a general exclusion order in this case.

The domestic interests were informed not long after the hearings that the testimony submitted in support of the petion to exclude this coal was insufficient and that additional evidence was required to establish a prima facie case. At the time an officer of the Anthracite Institute of New York City offered to bring in additional competent witnesses but to date such witnesses have not been introduced. However, certain affidavits and other documents bearing on the use of forced labor in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics just received from the Anthracite Institute are now receiving consideration.

Respectfully,
s/ S. LOWMAN,
Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

To the Honorables, The Legislatures of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the State of New Jersey and the Council of the City of Philadelphia.

Traffic and receipts of the Delaware River Bridge in 1932 reflected by their decrease the depressed condition of business pervailing throughout the country. With less money to spend, due to unemployment, patrons of the bridge made fewer trips and used their automobiles more rarely than in 1931, when the traffic figures of the bridge reached their peak to date.

The business history of the bridge is shown in the following table since the opening on July 1st, 1926:

Year	Traffic	Gross Receipts	Expenses	Net Receipts
1932	10,804,557	$3,091,576.91	$471,351.83	$2,620,225.08
1931	12,308,225	3,479,837.93	430,856.72	3,048,981.21
1930	12,285,359	3,517,730.64	500,597.53	3,017,133.11
1929	11,615,609	3,331,754.46	398,496.20	2,933,258.26
1928	9,725,470	2,827,786.83	378,590.01	2,449,196.82
1927	8,593,201	2,435,784.40	346,678.59	2,093,921.89
1926 (½ year)	4,137,674	1,110,108.38	158,109.47	946,682.83

As shown above, expenses of operating and maintaining the bridge increased in 1932 but included in the total of $471,351.83 were several items of extraordinary expense. For example, the Delaware River Joint Commission built a permanent wooden fender around the Philadelphia pier in the Delaware River in order to protect passing shipping from damage through possible collision with the stonework. This cost $13,488.00. Again, the Commission let a contract in the amount of $37,450.00 for repainting the entire under side of the bridge. This particular expense should not occur again for five years. The Commission also expended $14,951.00 for the preparation of preliminary plans for the proposed high speed rail transit line across the bridge. All of these expenses were met out of toll receipts.

Reduction of receipts first became apparent in February and as compared with the corresponding months of 1931 continued throughout the year. While the net receipts fell to $2,620,-225.08 and were therefore less than those of the preceding three years, the amount available for distribution to the State of New Jersey, the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the City of Philadelphia was neverthless greater than the return for 1928 and 1927. There was less pleasure riding in 1932 than in the three prior years and this was particularly apparent in our Sunday and holiday traffic. Back in 1929 the bridge averaged 45,194 vehicles on Sundays and holidays throughout the year. In 1931 this was reduced to 44,226 and in 1932 fell further to 38,011.

Commission Reduces Debt

The bus business, from which a considerable portion of the revenues of the bridge is derived, was similarly affected. Fewer people rode to and from between their homes and places of business in southern New Jersey and Philadelphia. In 1930, 1,484,443 buses crossed the bridge and in 1932, 1,179,259. However, more heavy trucks used this span last year than in any preceding year. These numbered in 1932 235,057 as compared with 225,977 in 1931 and only 111,460 in 1927.

The daily average traffic in 1932 was 29,520 with daily receipts of $8,446.93.

The policy of returning the entire net receipts to the two states and city was maintained in 1932. The Joint Commission directed that distribution be made in the amount of $1,310,-112.54 to New Jersey, $655,056.27 to Pennsylivania and a similar sum to Philadelphia. Inasmuch as the interest upon the indebtedness of the Joint Commission amounted to approximately $1,300,000, it was possible by this distribution to reduce the Commission's obligation to $30,963,556.81. This reduction of course will be reflected in a lessening of the interest charge for 1933.

The Commission has always been mindful that under the Acts of Pennsylvania and New Jersey creating the body, it is required to repay as quickly as practicable the indebtedness incurred when the revenues and the maintenance of the structure were entrusted to it on July 1st, 1931. Despite repeated efforts to sell bonds which would enable the Commission to discharge its debt in its entirety and to meet the cost of building the proposed transit line, the investment bankers representing the largest financial institutions in the country steadfastly maintained that the bond markets in 1932 were not in a condition to absorb the issue. The Commission declined to consider anw proposal which would entail the mortgaging of the earnings of the bridge for a period of thirty or fifty years at a rate of interest entirely out of proportion to the value of the security it could offer.

Congress Ratifies Compact

Early in the year the Commission was advised by the bankers that the bonds would be more attractive if the Congress of the United States ratified the agreement between New Jersey and Pennsylvania creating the Joint Commission. They raised the point that a constitutional question might be involved if this ratification were not procured. Accordingly the Commission took up with both branches of Congress the necessity of securing ratification and the following resolution was adopted by Congress and approved by the President.

Public Resolution—No. 26
72d Congress
(S. J. Res. 41)

JOINT RESOLUTION

Granting consent of Congress to a compact or agreement between the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the State of New Jersey creating the Delaware River Joint Commission and specifying the powers and duties thereof.

Whereas, pursuant to act numbered 200 of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, approved June 12, 1931, and chapter 391 of the Laws of New Jersey, approved June 30, 1931, the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the State of New Jersey have entered into a certain compact or agreement, which said compact or agreement has been duly executed and delivered by the Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania on behalf of said Commonwealth, and by the New Jersey Interstate Bridge Commission on behalf of said State; and

Whereas the aforesaid agreement or compact is in substantially the following form, that is to say:

(Agreement printed in full in 1931 report of JOINT Commission)

Now, Therefore, Be It

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the consent of Congress is hereby given to the aforesaid compact or agreement, and to each and every term and provision thereof: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to affect, impair, or diminish any right, power, or jurisdiction of the United States or of any court, department, board, bureau, officer, or official of the United States, over or in regard to any navigable waters, or any commerce between the States or with foreign countries, or any bridge, railroad highway, pier, wharf, or other facility or improvement, or any other person, matter, or thing, forming the subject matter of the aforesaid compact or agreement or otherwise affected by the terms thereof; And provided further, That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this resolution or any part thereof is hereby expressly reserved.

Approved, June 14, 1932.

Immediately after the ratification by Congress was noted, the Commission directed its Finance Committee to confer in the Administration Building with the two syndicates which together took in the most prominent banking houses in the country, in order that the bonds might be sold without delay.

The Commission's intention was to advertise for competitive bids. The conference was held on June 23rd, 1932.

Bankers Advise Delay

The spokesman for one group, representing largely New York bankers, advised against any attempt on the part of the Commission to float a bond issue of either $32,000,000 or $40,000,000 at the time. In response to a question he said definitely that his syndicate would not offer a bid for the bonds in the event they were then adverised. He pointed out that the Delaware River Bridge bonds would probably be compared by investors with the George Washington Bridge bonds issued by the Port of New York Authority which were selling at the time in small quantities on a 5½ to 5¾ per cent basis. Another member of the syndicate said that he was quite sure that the Joint Commission would be unable to sell a 5 per cent bond at par.

All spoke in strong terms against any attempt to pledge the revenues of the bridge for thirty or forty years upon a high rate of interest. They declared that some inprovement was being noted in the market for the highest grade of tax exempt municipal and state bonds. This improvement, they thought, might fairly be expected to continue so that market conditions for the proposed Joint Commission's bonds might be favorable later in the year. At the time they held out no hope that the issue could be floated. They expressed themselves as well satisfied with the financial showing of the bridge during the year of depression and reiterated that their present attitude was not to be construed as doubt of the ultimate worth of the bridge bonds.

The other syndicate, headed by the leading banking house of Philadelphia, strongly urged the Committee not to attempt to advertise the bonds at the time. The representative present said that in his opinion the market could not absorb either the $32,000,000 issue that would provide repayment to Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Philadelphia or the $40,000,000 issue that would combine repayment with the cost of building the proposed high speed rail transit line. He said that when conditions improved it would probably be easier to float the $32,000,0000 issue and that it was possible the syndicate might require a commitment from the Joint Commission that it would not attempt to fianance the high speed line until the bridge earnings had reached a substantial higher level and had maintained themselves for several years.

Partial Offer Made

On September 16th, 1932 the New York syndicate again conferred with the Finance Committee in the Administration Building.

The leader of the group announced that the syndicate would be willing to recommend to its associates the purchase of $15,000,000 Delaware River Bridge bonds with an option of 90 days upon the remaining $17,000,000 portion of an issue of $32,000,000. The Commission would be required to sell the bonds to the syndicate at 97 with an interest coupon of 5%. In the event the syndicate were able to dispose of the $15,000,000 worth of bonds the option for the remaining portion of the issue would be exercised but the syndicate would not commit itself definitely to taking more than $15,000,000 worth until the reaction of the securities market to the issue was definitely ascertained. The Commission could fix a lower interest rate than 5% but in that event the discount from par must be proportionately larger.

The bankers would require a pledge from the Commission that the proposed high speed line over the structure either be definitely abandoned or the Commission agree that no attempt be made to finance this project until the net earnings of the bridge improved to a point where they would be double the interest charges upon an issue of $40,000,000 or approximately $4,000,000 annually.

The proposal was dicusssed at considerable length by the Committee. The members pointed out that at the present time the Commission was paying 4% interest to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and 4¼% to the State of New Jersey and the City of Philadelphia. The bankers' proposal meant that the refinancing would be done at approximately a 5¼% basis or an addition of $310,000 annually to the expense of bridge operation.

The Committee reported to the Joint Commission the terms of the proposal. The Commission formally recided acceptance of the offer would be against the best interests of the public.

Turn to R. F. C.

At the September meeting of the Commission the Finance Committee was authorized to confer with officials of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation at Washington regarding the possibility of obtaining a loan sufficient to repay the states and city and to build the hihg speed line. The Committee visited Washington and was told definitely that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation could not lend funds for the refinancing but that it might be possible to obtain $8,000,000 to be used excusively for construction of the transit line.

On October 21st, 1932 the Finance Committee recommended to the Joint Commission adoption of the following resolution relative to borrowing funds for the transit project:

> Resolved: That the Joint Commission apply to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for a loan not to exceed $8,0000,000 to be used to construct a high speed transit line from the vicinity of Eighth and Race Streets, Philadelphia, to the vicinity of Haddon Avenue and Carman Street, Camden, upon terms substantially as follows:
>
> 1. The Commission to give a note for the maximum amount to be borrowed; which note shall provide that installments of principal due thereon shall be paid out of the general net income of the Commission only after payment of interest on existing indebtedness of the Commission to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, the State of New Jersey and the City of Philadelphia.
>
> 2. In the event such existing indebtedness can be refunded at a later date the obligation to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation shall not prevent such refunding and shall be then evidenced by the bonds of the Commission subordinate to the bonds issued to pay the two States and the City.
>
> 3. In the event the Commission is enabled by refinancing to secure sufficient cash from the sale of its bonds to pay its obligations to the two States and the City, it will then give subordinate bonds in payment of its obligation to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Commission reserving the right at any time to dicharge its indebtedness or any part thereof to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation by the payment of principial remaining due together with interest to the date of payment.
>
> 4. The Commission shall not be obligated to accept the loan, either in whole or in part, until consent to connect the high speed line with the Eighth Street-Locust Street subway, has been given by the City of Philadelphia.
> 5. The exact terms and conditions upon which the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is willing to make the loan shall be paid before the Commission before final commitment is made.

Inasmuch as the preliminary plans for the transit line were then in course of preparation by Mr. Ralph Modjeski, Chief Engineer, the Commission voted to defer making formal application to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation until the plans were completed. By the close of the year the plans were in the hands of the Transportation Committee, which intended to report to the Commission in January 1933.

Transit Plans Completed

The Transportation Committee has been busy from the beginning of the year endeavoring to work out a solution to the rather complicated problem of bettering communication between Philadelphia and the southern part of New Jersey. The Committee met on January 15th, 1932 with the City Commissioners of Camden. On the part of the general public there was a pronounced opposition to the admittedly inadequate transportation service furnished by the many bus lines crossing the bridge. These buses found it difficult to neogtiate the narrow crowded streets in Philadelphia leading from the plaza and in particular congested Market Street to such a degree that traffic could proceed only snails-pace. The passengers bound for outlying New Jersey communities were forced to wait upon street corners unreasonably long. It may be stated that this condition still prevailed at the close of the year and that no improvement can be expected until provision is made for transporting the public on rails through an extension of the Philadelphia subway system across the bridge to a centrally located bus terminal and a railroad station.

Camden Officials Approve

At the conference with the Camden City Commissioners the subject of constructing a high speed rapid transit line across the Delaware River Bridge was discussed in detail.

It was pointed out that the Joint Commission had been given authority by the Legislatures of Pennsylvania and New Jersey to build this improvement from the vicinity of Eighth and Race Streets, Philadelphia to the vicinity of Haddon Avenue and Carman Streets in Camden. The route of the line in Camden as appearing in the 1930 report of the Delaware River Bridge Joint Commission was approved by the Camden City Commissioners. They expressed themselves individually and collectively as favoring a subway in Fifth Street with a station in front of the new Camden City Hall and a terminus adjacent to the Broadway Station of the Pennsylvania Railroad. It was agreed that the Joint Commission would be called upon to defray the expenses of building the line underground and on the bridge. The proposed bus terminal at the Camden City Hall would be built by the City of Camden.

The Joint Commission wouul build the station platforms of the subway at this point but the overhead structure and the facilities for the operation of the bus lines would be paid for by the City of Camden. After going into the entire situation the Camden City Commissioners expressed their desire to have the Joint Commission build the proposed line as speedily as possible, connecting in Philadelphia with the Eighth Street-Locust Street subway.

The Camden Commissioners agreed to study their problem of financing and erecting the bus terminal and to aid the high speed project in every particular by the granting of any ordinances and permits that might be requested by the Commission.

Philadelphia Asked to Aid

A similar conference was held on June 22nd, 1932, with the Honorable J. Hampton Moore, Mayor of Philadelphia, officials of City Council and the Director of City Transit in Mayor Moore's office.

Mayor Moore explained that the conference was called in response to a request voiced at the meeting of the Delaware River Joint Commission, June 17th, when the point had been made that the consent of City Council to connect the proposed high speed bridge transit line to the Eighth Street subway was necessary before bonds for the construction of the line could be sold. A frank and full discussion of the relative position of Council and the Joint Commission followed. It was pointed out that the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company had offered to pay to the Commission 2½ cents per passenger out of each 10-cent fare collected for transportation across the bridge. This would still leave the Company 7½ cents out of which payment could be made to the City of Philadelphia for the use of the Eighth Street subway now being built by the City.

The Chairman of the Transportation Committee explained that the Commission felt that 25,000,000 passengers would be transported annually across the bridge and that this great influx of traffic would give to the Eighth Street-Locust Street subway a financial stability which it otherwise lacks.

The representatives of the City of Philadelphia agreed that plans for the line would be carefully considered when presented.

At the meeting of the Joint Commission on August 19th, 1932, a resolution was adopted directing that application be made for permission to construct a subway from the plaza to Eighth and Race Streets and at that point to make connection with the Eighth Street-Locust Street subway. The following formal application was then sent to the Mayor and the President of City Council:

Hon. Edwin R. Cox, President,
Philadelphia City Council,
City Hall, Philadelphia, Pa.
Hon. J. Hampton Moore,
Mayor, City of Philadelphia,
City Hall, Philadelphia, Pa.

Dear Sir:

The Delaware River Joint Commission respectfully requests the consent of the City of Philadelphia to the construction of a subway beneath a portion of the bed of Sixth Street, Franklin Street, Eighth Street and Race Street and under part of Franklin Square and the additional consent of the City to the connection of this section of subway with the Eighth Street-Locust Street subway built and owned by the City of Philadelphia at a point at or near Eighth and Race Streets.

The Act of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania approved June 12, 1931, P. L. 575 and of the Legislature of New Jersey approved June 30, 1931, charge the Delaware River Joint Commission with the following duty and responsibility: (Article I—Section h)

"The effectuation, establishment, construction, operation and maintenance of railroad or other facilities for the transportation of passengers across the said bridge, including extensions thereof to the vicinity of Race Street and Eighth Street in the City of Philadelphia and to the vicinity of Carman Street and Haddon Avenue in the City of Camden."

The Joint Commission earnestly hopes that Council and the Mayor will approve this request in order that a much needed public improvement may be built and the Delaware River Bridge of which the City of Philadelphia is a part owner be made of greater service than is now possible. The Bridge was opened to highway traffic on July 1, 1926. In the building of the structure provision was made for the great loads accompanying high speed rail service. Up to this time the rail spaces are unused and the full worth of the investment unrealized.

By the construction of a short length of subway in Philadelphia from the east house line of Sixth Street under Franklin Square to Eighth and Race Streets and by the building of another short stretch of subway in Camden the high speed rail system of Philadelphia, which as a property of the City is a most valuable asset, will be extended to the business center of Camden. All the expense of this construction will be borne by the Delaware River Joint Commission and no financial obligation of any kind will be laid upon the City of Philadelphia.

In anticipation that a physical connection will be made between the Eighth Street-Locust Street subway and the proposed bridge line the City of Philadelphia has already expended one-half million dollars in the building of a third track in Eighth Street for the bridge service.

It is respectfully pointed out that the Eighth Street-Locust Street subway will be most valuable by linking it up with the bridge line. Following a survey of passenger traffic between Philadelphia and Camden, it has been estimated that the bridge line will contribute 22,000,000 passengers a year to the city-owned Eighth Street-Locust Street subway. The benefits of this patronage not only to the subway but to the business men of Philadelphia at whose doors these passengers will be delivered are incalculable.

The Commission asks that under the provisions of Article V of the Act of Assembly the formal consent of the municipality be given to the building of the subway through and under city-owned property and to the construction of a physical connection with the Eighth Street-Locust Street subway.

Respectfully submitted,
Delaware River Joint Commission
By: Joseph K. Costello,
Secretary.

August 26, 1932.

Anticipate 22,500,000 Passengers

Mr. Modjeski submitted his plans for the transit line to the Transoprtation Committee on November 16th, 1932. In his report he said:

The States of Pennsylvania and New Jersey and the City of Philadelphia made an investment of $36,000,000 in a bridge, fully $10,000,000 of which was for the purpose of providing better transit facilities between the two sides of the river. No return in money or service has yet been had from these four tracks. Progress and change in transportation indicates that the two spaces provided for trolley cars can better be utilized for a future widening of the vehicular roadway. The two outer tracks can carry twice the number of passengers that are now crossing the Delaware River by the bridge and ferries combined.

The City of Philadelphia has an additional investment of approximately $500,000 in the Eighth Street-Locust Street subway, made solely to provide for the connection of the bridge line, and which can be put to no other use. The bridge will bring 11,250,000 passengers to Philadelphia in its first year of operation according to the most authoritative estimate. This will mean 22,500,000 more fares for the Eighth Street-Locust Street subway if it carries the brige trains The 66,000 people to travel daily over the line will include more shopers and pleasure seekers than it will wage earners and business men. With the improvement in transportation facilities, that this line will provide, there will follow a noticeable stimulation in this inter-city movement to the mutual advantage of both communities.

There are two classes of passenger movement between Philadelphia and Camden, just as between central Philadelphia and the sections or communities north, west and south of it. One is a matter of mass transportation within a radius of—say, thirty miles—and the other of carrying smaller groups to widely separated points outside the suburban and commuting zone. The quick movement of large numbers of people is best handled by the type of equipment that has been developed for rapid transit lines or by that adopted by the railroads for electrified suburban service.

The extension of the Philadelphia rapid transit system to Camden by the bridge line will supply a service and fill a need distinct from those possible through railroad operation. When the time comes that the interstate rail business will justify and support a tunnel under the river, that will be the step to take. But such a tunnel will not supplant nor lessen the usefulness of the bridge rapid transit line that will have prepared the way for it.

Carrying the railroad lines over the Philadelphia-Camden bridge is not a feasible alternative to the rapid transit line covered by this report.

Mr. T. J. Skillman, Chief Engineer of the Pennsylvania Railroad and Mr. George I. Wright, Engineer Electric Traction of the Reading Company, made the following joint statement December 2, 1930:

"Summing up the entire situation, the use of the Delaware River Bridge between Philadelphia and Camden for either Pennsylvania or Reading suburban service, for through service, is not economical or desirable, and could not possibly meet the service demands, either present or future, as adequately or satisfactorily as a tunnel in a proper location under the river, designed for high speed service and bearing in mind not only the needs of Camden and its immediate vicinity but the larger needs to meet the future development of South Jersey."

The reasons given for this conclusion were the known fact that the bridge was not designed to carry electric locomotives such as would be required to pull through trains and that the grades of 4 per cent and 5 per cent could not be climbed by the typ of multiple-unit cars in use on the railroad's electrified suburban service without such changes as would render them unsuited to their regular service.

In addition, estimates show that to bring the rail lines over the bridge would cost at least five times as much as to bring the Philadelphia subway trains to the heart of Camden Even if it were possible to find funds to meet this capital expenditure, the car-rider would not pay the seven or eight cents additional fare each way required to carry the interest on the investment.

The consolidation of the Pennsylvania and Reading lines New Jersey would require a greater number of train movements across the river than two tracks could accommodate Two tracks would be the limit that could be used on the bridge for railroad purposes because only trolley car loadings were assumed on the other two tracks in the original design.

The bridge rapid transit line connecting to the City of Philadelphia subway system is Step No. 1 in the recommendations of the South Jersey Transit Commission:

"A high speed connecting line from railroad terminals, or a union station in Camden, through a suitable bus terminal and crossing the Delaware River Bridge to a proper connection with the subway system in Philadelphia."

Step No. 2 of this same Commission's program will be feasible when the development of these communities will support it,—"a tunnel under the Delaware River to suitable terminals in Philadelphia for joint operation, or use, by two railroad systems."

The Transportation Committee held a number of conferences during the latter part of November and throughout December and considered in addition to Mr. Modjeski's report, a number of suggestions and designs submitted by others. Particular attention was devoted to the relative merits of building the line to Haddon Avenue and Carman Street or temporarily ending at the Camden Plaza.

Safeguard Commission Funds

A change in the manner of protecting deposits of Joint Commision funds was made during the year. The Commision agreed to accept from depositories, either corporate surety bonds or securities of the United States Government, the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania or the State of New Jersey. The Commission requires that such securities shall be in the amount of 110 per cent of the maximum deposit. It further provides that bonds, when issued by the Commission, shall be received in the amount of 100 per cent. At the end of the year, United States Government bonds aggregating $534,000 had been deposited by the institutions with the First Camden National Bank and Trust Company, fiscal agent of the Commission. These bonds were submitted by several institutions. All other depositories furnished corporate surety.

During the year repairs were made to the asphalt paving on the main and side spans of the bridge. A total of 2,831 square yards, which had been in use since the bridge opening, was removed and replaced in four days during April, with no interruption of traffic. Grass and shade trees were planted on plots of ground adjacent to the bridge and owned by the Joint Commission. The appearance of the Administration Building was improved by the planting trees on the sidewalks surrounding it.

Numerous minor repairs and adjustments were made upon the bridge during the year. In the final inspection the bridge was found to be in excellent condition.

Forty accidents were reported upon the bridge during the year and one person was killed. Four committed suicide by jumping from the footwalk. Fifteen fires in automobiles were extinguished by the bridge police 557 disabled cars towed from the structure.

At the beginning of the year David J. Smyth, Esq., Pennsylvania Counsel for the Commission during the construction of the bridge and for the first five and one-half years of operation, resigned to become City Solicitor of Philadelphia. The Attorney General of Pennsylvania, on January 5th, 1932, assigned Harold D. Saylor, Esq. as Pennsylvania Counsel.

The financial operation of the bridge during the year is set forth in detail in the appendix and complete analysis of bridge traffic appears in the charts in this report.

The Delaware River Joint Commissitn takes this opportunity of inviting the Legislatures of Pennsylvania and New Jersey and the Council of the City of Philadelphia to inspect the bridge and to go into the details of operation at any time.

Respectfully submitted

COMMUNICATION FROM THE UNEMPLOYED COUNCILS

UNEMPLOYED COUNCILS

919 Locust Street, Philadelphia, Pa., February 15, 1933.

To the Speaker of the House, State Legislature, Harrisburg, Pa.

Sir:

One thousand delegates representing employed and unemployed workers of Pennsylvania, elected from labor unions, fraternal societies, churches and neighborhoods, will come to Harrisburg on March 1st to present to the Legislature demands for immediate relief appropriation and Unemployment Insurance.

This delegation will come from all parts of the state in a State wide Hunger March to demand immediate action to relieve the misery of the unemployed, which the State Legislature has so far completely neglected. We demand that a hearing be granted to the Hunger Marchers at the joint session of the House and Senate on March 2nd.

Since these Hunger Marchers will remain in Harrisburg for two days, without having any funds for food and lodging, we therefore demand that the Legislature makes a special appropriation to feed the 1,000 Hunger Marchers and lodge them in State-controlled buildings.

We trust that you will reply to us on the above matters.

Very truly yours,

(Signed) EDWARD BENDER,
Secretary.

PROPOSED BUILDING AND LOAN CODE

To the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

By the 1931 General Appropriation Act, the Legislature directed this department to prepare for presentation at this session, a revision of the banking and building and loan association laws.

We have already presented to you a proposed Department of Banking Code and a proposed Banking Code as a part of our compliance with the Legislature's directions.

Herewith we present a proposed Building and Loan Code. This proposed code deals with the organization and powers and duties, and particularly the limitations upon the powers, of building and loan associations. The Department of Banking Code, already submitted, deals, among other things, with supervision by the Department of Banking over building and loan associations, and with the handling of closed building and loan associations by the Secretary of Banking as receiver.

This draft was prepared by Assistant Deputy Attorney General Bernard G. Segal, in consultation with Deputy Attorney General Harold D. Saylor, the Attorney General, and Secretary of Banking William D. Gordon, and with the valuable assistance of Special Deputy Attorney General Charles Klein and Mr. Horace H. Eshbach, Chief, Building and Loan Bureau, Department of Banking.

Respectfully submitted,

WM. A. SCHNADER,
Attorney General.

Effective Date and Repealer

Section 1301. Effective Date
Section 1302. Acts and Parts of Acts Specifically Repealed
Section 1303. General Repeal of Acts

An Act relating to the business of building and loan associations; providing for the organization and voluntary dissolution of such associations; defining the rights, powers, duties, liabilities, and immunities of such associations, and of their officers, directors, shareholders, attorneys, and other employes; prohibitng the transaction of business in this Commonwealth by foreign building and loan associations; conferring powers and imposing duties upon the courts, recorders of deeds, and certain State departments, commissions, and officers; establishing limitations of actions; imposing penalties; and repealing certain acts and parts of acts.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, as follows:

Comments:

It seems more logical to introduce the entire act by the enacting clause rather than to include this clause as part of the section on the short title. The entire act, and not any single section alone, is being enacted.

This is the procedure followed in "The Third Class City Law," except that there the enacting clause is "Section 1." It seems illogical, however, to have a "Section 1" before an "Article 1."

The above proposed for mis the one used in many states. It is followed in the proposed Department of Banking Code and Proposed Banking Code.

ARTICLE I

SHORT TITLE AND PRELIMINARY PROVISIONS

Section 1. Short Title.—This act shall be known, and may be cited, as the "Building and Loan Code."

Comments:

The title "Building and Loan Code" has been selected for this proposed act. It is planned to term the proposed act which deals with the powers and duties of the Department and the powers and duties of the Secretary in possession of an institution as receiver, the "Department of Banking Code," and to call the proposed act which treats of banks, bank and trust companies, savings banks, and private banks, the "Banking Code."

Section 2. Definitions.—A. The following terms shall be construed in this act to have the following meanings except in those instances where the context clearly indicates otherwise:

"Articles" includes the original articles of incorporation, any or all amendments thereto, articles of merger or consolidation, and also what have heretofore been designated by law as certificates of incorporation or charters.

"Assets" includes all the property and rights of every kind of the association.

"Association" includes any building and loan association organized under this act or heretofore organized under or by virtue of any other law of this Commonwealth.

"Authorized Capital" means the sum of the par value of the shares authorized to be issued in the articles of incorporation, or in any amendment thereto.

"Corporation" means a corporation or a joint stock association, organized under the laws of this Commonwealth, of the United States, or of any other state, territory, foreign country, or dependency.

"Department" means the Department of Banking of this Commonwealth.

"Incorporator" means a signer of the original articles of incorporation.

"Mortgage Loans" means loans which are secured, pursuant to the provisions of this act, by the bond of the borrower, by a mortgage on real property, and by installment shares.

"Person" means an individual, or an unincorporated association, including a partnership, a limited partnership, or any other form of unincorporated enterprise owned by two or more individuals.

"Shares" means the units into which the shareholders' rights to participate in the control of a building and loan association are divided.

"Share Certificate" means a written instrument signed by the proper corporate officers are required by this act, and evidencing the fact that the corporation or person therein named is the registered owner of the shares therein described; it also includes the term "certificate of stock" as used in existing laws.

"Share Loans" means loans which are secured, pursuant to the provisions of this act, by the note of the borrower and by prepaid or installment shares.

"Shareholder" means a registered owner of shares in a building and loan association.

"Subscriber" means one who subscribes for shares in a building and loan association whether before or after incorporation.

"Written" includes printed, typewritten, engraved, lithographed, telegraphed, cabled, radiogramed, photographed, photostated, telephotographed, or other form of recorded or transmitted message.

B. Article and section headings shall not be construed to affect in any manner the scope or meaning of any article or section of this act.

C. The singular shall be construed to include the plural. The masculine shall be construed to include the feminine and the neuter and conversely the neuter shall be construed to include the masculine and the feminine.

Section 3. Applicability of Act.—Every association, heretofore organized and incorporated under the act approved the twenty-ninth day of April, one thousand eight hundred seventey-four (Pamphlet Laws, seventy-three) entitled "An act to provide for the incorporation and regulation of certain corporations" its amendments and supplements, and every association heretofore created by any special act or formed under any general act, which has accepted in any manner whatsoever the Constitution of Pennsylvania and which, if not existing, would be required to incorporate under this act, shall hereafter be subject to the provisions of this act without formal reorganization hereunder, and shall be deemed to exist under this act. Except as herein otherwise specifically provided the provisions of this act shall govern all such associations heretofore incorporated in this Commonwealth.

Comments:

The repeal of a general corporation law cannot be construed, in the absence of express provisions, as intended to repeal the charters of corporations formed under it, especially where the manifest purpose of the repealing act is to substitute a new law, extending the provisions of the old and perfecting its details, but not changing its general policy. Under such circumstances the corporations continue to exist and to be governed by the provisions of the act under which they were organized except so far as the Legislature had power to alter such act in its application to corporations under the various constitutional provisions. 1 Thompson on Corporations, Section 371, Page 468.

Every association in this Commonwealth existent at the present time is operating under the provisions of the General Corporation Act of 1874 and has accepted the provisions of the Constitution of 1874, Article XVI, Section 10 of which provides: "The General Assembly shall have the power to alter, revoke or annul any charter of incorporation now existing and revokable at the adoption of this Constitution, or any that may hereafter be created, whenever in their opinion it may be injurious to the citizens of this Commonwealth, in such manner, however, that no injustice shall be done to the corporators. * * *"

Therefore, this act can constitutionally be applied to all such associations.

Some of the provisions of this act cannot equitably be applied to existing associations at all, or at best, until the lapse of a reasonable time. In such cases, specific exception is made in this act. This is the reason that this proposed section states that this act applies "except as herein otherwise specifically provided."

Section 4. Saving Clause.—A. The provisions of this act, in so far as they are the same as those of existing acts, shall be construed as a continuation of such acts, and not as new enactments. The repeal by this act of any existing act or of any part thereof shall not be construed to revive any act or part of any act heretofore repealed or superseded.

B. Except as otherwise specifically provided in this act, the provisions of this act shall not affect any act done, liability incurred, or right accrued, nor affect any suit or prosecution pending or to be instituted to enforce any right or penalty or to punish any offense under the authority of any act repealed or superseded by this act.

C. The repeal of any act by this act shall not affect the corporate existence of any association heretofore created under any law of this Commonwealth.

D. Any person holding office under any act repealed by this act shall continue to hold such office until the expiration of his term, subject to the conditions attached to such office prior to the passage of this act.

E. All resolutions, regulations, and rules made pursuant to any act repealed by this act shall, unless inconsistent with any provision of this act, continue with the same force as if such act had not been repealed.

Comments:

These provisions are formal ones. They are necessary to cover the many phases of transition between existing laws and this draft.

Section 5. Constitutional Construction.—It is hereby declared to be the legislative intent that if this act cannot take effect in its entirety because of the decision of any court holding unconstitutional any part hereof, the remaining provisions of the act shall be given full force and effect as completely as if the part held unconstitutional had not been included herein.

Section 6. Construction of References.—A. Any reference in this act to any act by title or otherwise shall be construed to apply to and include any codification wherein the provision of the act referred to are substantially reenacted.[1]

B. Any reference in this act to the provisions of law on any subject shall apply to statutes and decisions becoming effective after the effective date of this act, as well as those then in existence.[2]

Comments:

1. This is merely a formal provision. However, it seems useful to take care, in general, of the codifications of any laws which are referred to in this draft.

2. This is also merely a formal provision. Frequently, in this act, the words "as provided by law" are used. They refer to statutes and decisions enacted or handed down after as well as before the effective date of this act.

This would seem to be a normal interpretation even without this subsection, and perhaps therefore Subsection B is unnecessary. However, it precludes any different interpretation.

Section 7. Jurisdiction of Courts.—Except where otherwise specifically provided, the provisions of this act shall not be deemed to curtail in any manner whatsoever the equity jurisdiction and powers of the courts of this Commonwealth.

Comments:

The Act of June 16, 1836, P. L. 784, Section 13, 17 PS Sec. 281, provides: "* * * the several courts of Common Pleas, shall have the jurisdiction and powers of a court of Chancery, so far as relates to—

* * * * * *

"V. The supervision and control of all corporations other than those of a municipal character * * *"

While the equity powers conferred by the Act of 1836 are circumbscribed within certain limits as to individuals, they are general and unlimited over corporations. In the exercise of their equity jurisdiction over corporations, such courts possess all the powers and jurisdiction of a court of chancery by bill, injunction, or otherwise, as the equity of the case may require. Sanford v. Railroad Company, 24 Pa. 378 (1855); Titusville Oil Exchange's Dissolution, 2 Pa. Super. 508 (1896); Sarver and Others' Appeal, 81 Pa. 183 (1874); Central Printing and Publishing House v. Gross, 38 Pa. C. C. 21 (1910); McDougall, et al., Appellants, v. Huntingdon and Broad Top R. and C. Company, 294 Pa. 108 (1928); Schwab, Appellant, v. Miller, et ux., 302 Pa. 507 (1931); First Regular Baptist Church v. Allison, 304 Pa. 1 (1931).

Also, the courts have held that the Act of April 9, 1856, P. L. 293, 15 PS Sec. 501, which provides the procedure for the voluntary dissolution of corporations, must be understood as referring to the equity jurisdiction given to the courts of common pleas by the Act of June 16, 1836, P. L. 784, Titusville Oil Exchange's Dissolution, 2 Pa. Super. 508 (1896); Commonwealth v. Exchange Operators, Inc., 32 Dau. 59 (1928).

The proposed Department of Banking Code likewise gives to the courts certain powers over corporations and persons under its supervision. It is intended that the provisions of this act shall not affect these powers.

This proposed section corresponds to Section 6 E of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 6 of the proposed Banking Code.

Section 8. Notices to Corporation and Persons. — Unless expressly provided otherwise all written notices required by this act to be given to any corporation or person shall be (1) served in the manner now or hereafter established by law for the service of writs of summons, except that such service need not be made by the sheriff, or (2) mailer or sent by telegram, charges prepaid[1] (a) in the case of an individual, to his last known residence or place of business, (b) in the case of an unincorporated association, or a corporation organized under the laws of this Commonwealth, to its principal office, and (c) in the case of a corporation incorporated under the laws of some other state, to its registered office in Pennsylvania, or, if it has no registered office in Pennsylvania, to its home office in the state of incorporation or in any other state.[2]

If a notice is sent by mail, or by telegraph, such notice shall be deemed to have been given to the corporation or person addressed, when it is deposited in the United States mail or with a telegraph office for transmission to such corporation or person.[3]

References:

Act of June 15, 1923, P. L. 809, Section 3 (b), amended by Act of May 5, 1927, P. L. 762, Section 2, 7 PS Sec. 3 (b).

Comments:

1. The provision for the giving of notice by telegram is new. However, it seems clearly desirable.

2. The provision for the mailing of notices outside the Commonwealth is new. Notice to foreign corporatiosn is provided for throughout this act. It is apparent, therefore, that provision should be made for the manner in which such notices should be given.

3. This paragraph is new. Considerable confusion exists under existing law as to the time intended, for example, by a provision that the last day for the performance of a particular act is designating number of days after the "giving" or "serving" of notice. This proposed paragraph is intended to eliminate this confusion.

Section 9. Advertisement or Notice in Newspapers.[1]—A. Unless expressly provided otherwise, any advertisement or notice in a newspaper of general circulation, required by this act, shall be published in a newspaper of general circulation in the county, as defined by the Newspaper Advertising Act, approved the sixteenth day of May, one thousand nine hundred twenty-nine (Pamphlet Laws, one thousand seven hundred eighty-four), its supplements and amendments, in which the place of business of the association is, or in the case of a proposed institution will be located and which is published in the city, borough, or township in which such place of business is or will be located.

If there is no newspaper of general circulation published in the city, borough, or township, then the advertisement or notice shall be inserted in a newspaper of general circulation in the county, published at the county seat. If no newspaper of general circulation in the county is published at the county seat, then such advertisement or notice shall be inserted in the newspaper of general circulation published nearest to the city, borough, or township in which the place of business of such association is located and within the county. If there is no newspaper of general circulation published within the county, then the advertisement or notice shall be inserted in the newspaper of general circulation published nearest to such city, borough, or township in an adjoining county.

B. Unless expressly provided otherwise, any advertisement or notice in a legal newspaper, required by this act, shall be published in the legal newspaper published within the county, as defined by the Newspaper Advertising Act, in which the place of business of the association is, or in the case of a proposed institution will be, located.

C. Unless expressly provided otherwise, if this act requires advertisement or notice to be made both in a newspaper of general advertisemnt or notice to be made both in a newspaper of general circulation and in a legal newspaper, and if there is no legal newspaper published within the county in which the place of business of the association is, or in the case of a proposed institution will be, located, the advertisement shall be made in two newspapers of general circulation in the county, except that if two newspapers of general circulation are not published in the county, then such advertisement or notice shall be made in only one newspaper of general circulation, published in the county, or if none is published there, then in one newspaper published in an adjoining county, as provided by this section in any case in which a newspaper of general circulation is not published in the county.

D. Any proof of publication required by this act shall be in accordance with the requirements set forth in the definition of proof of publication contained in the Newspaper Advertising Act.

E. Any notice of advertisement in a newspaper, required by this act, shall be construed to refer to a newspaper published in the English language.[2]

Comments:

1. This is a general section, included in the preliminary provisions to this draft, in order to preclude the necessity of repeating them in each section in which advertising is required. It is based upon Act of June 15, 1923, P. L. 809, Section 3 (a), amended by Act of June 22, 1931, P. L. 876, Section 1, 7 PS Sec. 3 (a), but is of course changed to meet the requirements of this proposed act. The statement of what constitues a legal newspaper, and the definition and requirements of the proof of advertisement are omitted, since they are set forth in detail in the Newspaper Advertising Act to whcih reference is made. To include any of its provisions in this draft would seem to necessitate the inclusion of all.

The number of advertisements to be inserted is omitted in this proposed section. It will vary in each case, and will, therefore, be stated in the particular sections which provide for the advertisement.

2. It seems clear that the type of notice or advertisement required by this draft to be published in a newspaper is such that it should be published in a newspaper in the English language. In several opinions, starting with In re Chartiers Ferry Company (Op. Atty. Gen.), 2 Chester 91 (1875), the Department of Justice has ruled that, even without a specific requirement, advertisement in an English newspaper was intended, and, therefore, that advertisement in a German newspaper did not fulfill the requirements of the act. However, the above proposed subsection makes it clear that all advertisements required by this draft must be inserted in newspapers published in the English language.

Section 10. Waiver of Notice.—Any notice required by this act, or by the articles or by-laws of any association governed by the provisions of this act, to be given to any corporation or person, may be waived by such corporation or person, either before or after the day prescribed for the giving of such notice. Such waiver shall be in writing and signed by such corporation or person.

Comments:

This section corresponds substantially to Section 8 of the proposed Business Corporation Law, which is based upon the business corporation laws of Illinois (Section 144), Indiana (Section 8), and New Jersey (Section 16).

It seems clear that where notice is required for the protection of certain corporations or persons, waiver of such notice by such corporations or persons should be permitted.

It is a general principle that where notice is required for the benefit of shareholders of a corporation, they may waive such notice, see 5 Fletcher, Cyclopedia Corporations (Permanent Edition), Section 2011, and cases there cited.

Article XVI, Section 7 of the Constitution of Pennsylvania provides, inter alio: "* * * The stock and indebtedness of corporations shall not be increased except in pursuance of general law, nor without the consent of the persons holding the larger amount in value of the stock, first obtained at a meeting to be held after sixty days notice given in pursuance of law." In 1883, the Department of Justice advised that the sixty days' notice required by the Constitution and by the enabling act might be waived by consent of all the shareholders, see In re Bellefonte and Buffalo Run Railroad Company, 2 Chester 128 (1883).

The same has been held true of the provisions of the constitution and statutes of Missouri, requiring sixty days' notice of a meeting called for the purpose of voting on the issuance of bonds or the increase of capital, State v. Cook, 178 Mo. 189, 77 S. W. 559; Reisterer v. Horton Land and Lumber Company, 160 Mo. 141, 61 S. W. 238.

Accordingly this draft permits the waiver of notice.

Section 11. Effect of Filing or Recording Papers Required to be Filed.—The filing or recording of the articles or amendments thereto, or of any other papers or documents, by an association, pursuant to the provisions of this act, is required for the purpose of affording the public the opportunity of acquiring knowledge of the contents thereof, but no corporation or person dealing with the association shall be charged with constructive notice of the contents of any such articles or papers by reason of such filing or recording.

Comments:

This section supplements Sections 313 and 315 as an attempt to improve the state of law with regard to ultra vires transactions. These sections, dealing with the doctrine of constructive notice and the doctrine of limited capacity, would remove two of the causes of greatest confusion in ultra vires cases,—the chief obstacles to uniform decisions. These obstacles spring from an interpretation of legislative intention, and can be removed only by legislation. This proposed section corresponds to Section 9 of the proposed Business Corporation Law.

Section 12. Fees.—Except as otherwise specifically provided,[1] any prothonotary or recorder of deeds, and any State department, board, commission, or officer, shall be entitled to receive for services performed as required by this act, such fees as it lawfully charges for such or similar services.[2]

Comments:

1. See Sections 1101, 1113, and 1204, in this draft.
2. Numerous acts establish the charges to be made by prothonotaries, recorders of deeds, the Secretary of the Commonwealth, or similar officials for the filing or recording of documents with them. This draft does not reenact these fees specifically but merely declares the existing fees acts to be applicable.

Section 13. Certificates and Certified Copies of Certain Documents to be Received in Evidence.—All certificates issued by the Department of State in accordance with the provisions of this act, and all copies of documents filed with the Department of State in accordance with the provisions of this act, when certified by the Secretary of the Commonwealth, shall be taken and received by all courts, public offices, and official bodies, as prima facie evidence of the facts therein stated. A certificate by the Department of State under the seal of the Commonwalth, as to the existence or non-existence of the facts relating to corporations which would not appear from a certified copy of any of the foregoing documents or certificates, shall be taken and received by all courts, public offices, and official bodies as prima facie evidence of the existence or non-existence of the facts therein stated.

Comments:

This proposed section corresponds to Section 11 of the proposed Business Corporation Law. Instead of providing in the different sections of this draft relating to the filing of certificates or documents with the Department of State, that cerified copies of them may be received in evidence, this act combines these provisions into one section.

Provision is not made in this draft for the admissibility into evidence of copies of papers, or the evidential value of information filed with the Department of Banking, since this is covered by Sections 9 and 10 of the proposed Department of Banking Code.

ARTICLE II

NAMES AND PLACES OF BUSINESS OF ASSOCIATIONS

Section 201. Association Name; Change of Name—A. The name of an association may be in any language, but it shall be expressed in English letters or charatcers.[1] It shall contain the words "building and loan association."[2] The name of an association shall not contain the words "trust," "bank," "deposit," discount," or any other word which may deceptively lead to the conclusion that it is authorized to perform any act or conduct any business which is forbidden to it by law, by its charter, or otherwise. The name of the association shall not contain the words "Pennsylvania," "Commonwealth," "State," "Government," "Official," "Federal," "National," or "United States."

The name of an association shall not be deceptively similar to that of any other corporation authorized to transact business in this Commonwealth, or the name of any unincorporated body whatsoever, registered with the Department of State under any act, unless such other corporation or unincorporated body is about to change its name or to cease doing business, or is being wound up, or, in the case of a foreign corporation, is about to withdraw from doing business in this Commonwealth, and the written consent of such other corporation or unincorporated body to the adoption of its name or a deceptively similar name has been given and is filed with the Department of State and with the Department of Banking.[3]

B. The provisions of this section shall not apply to any name which is in existence upon the effective date of this act. However, if the association bearing this name shall desire to change its name in any manner whatsover, pursuant to the provisions of this act, the new name shall comply in every detail with the requirements of this section. A change in name shall be effected in the regular manner provided by this act for amending its articles.[4]

C. This section shall not be construed to abrogate or limit the law as to unfair competition or unfair practices, nor derogate from the common law, the principles of equity, or the statutes of this Commonwealth with respect to the right to acquire and protect trade names.[5]

D. The assumption of a name in violation of this section shall not vitiate or otherwise affect the corporate evistence, but the Court of Common Pleas of Dauphin County may, upon application of the Attorney General acting on his own motion or at the instance of any administrative department, board, or commission of the Commonwealth, and the court of common pleas of any county may, upon the application of any corporation or person adversely affected, enjoin the association from using or continuing to use a name assumed in violation of this section.[6]

Comments:

1. In Deutsch-Amerikanischer Volkfest-Verein, 200 Pa. 143 (1901), it was held that the corporate name may be expressed in a foreign language. This proposed section requires the name to be expressed in English characters or letters, and, in this respect follows Section 202 of the proposed Business Corporation Law, and Section 201 of the proposed Banking Code, both of which follow the Uniform Act, supra.

2. This proposed section requires that the key words "building and loan association" shall be uniform in the case of all future building and loan associations. Section 201 of the proposed Banking Code requires that the name of every future bank contain the word "bank," that the name of every futuer bank and trust company contain the words "bank and trust company and the name of every savings bank the words "savings bank." It seems equally desirable that every building and loan assotion should bear a name descriptive of it and that such name should be forbidden to all other corporations or persons. Section 202 of the proposed Business Corporation Law prohibits the use of these words by any other type of corporatoin.

3. This provision, with minor changes follows Section 202 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 201 of the proposed Banking Code, both of which are based in part upon the Uniform Act, supra. There is no similar statutory provision in Pennsylvania. The Act of 1917, supra, prohibits the assumption by any corporation not for profit of a name similar to the name of any agency of the Commonwealth; the Act of 1923, supra, provides for the registration and protection of names of unincorporated bodies and corporations of the first class. This provision was drafted to extend the provisions of these acts to names of building and loan associations.

In practice the Department of State as well as the Department of Banking, will not permit an association to adopt a name deceptively similar to the name of any other corporation or unincorporated association. As pointed out in the note to the Uniform Act, thirty-eight jurisdictions in their general corporation laws, prohibit the assumption of a name similar to that of an existing domestic corporation. Twenty-two American jurisdictions have the further provision that the name shall not be similar to that of any foreign corporation authorized to do business in the state. This rule would apply with very much more force to the case of buidling and loan associations.

4. Of course, it is obvious that this draft should not require any existing association to change its name.

As to a voluntary change of name, prior to the Act of 1903, supra, the name of a corporation of the second class was changed by an amendment to its charter under the general provisions of the Act of June 13, 1883, P. L. 122, Section 1, 15 PS Sec. 401, see Fort Pitt Building and Loan Association, 159 Pa. 308 (1893). Now, however, under the Act of 1903, the corporate name is changed by filing a certficate of the change of name with the Secretary of Commonwealth, after a two- thirds vote of the shareholders has been obtained. The Secretary of the Commonwealth, in turn issues a certificate authorizing the use of the new name upon the filing of the certificate in the office of the recorder of deeds of the proper county.

As the Uniform Act and the laws of most states, including Delaware, New Jersey, and New York require a business corporation to amend its articles in order to change its name, for the sake of uniformity, the proposed Business Corporation Law restores the former practice in Pennsylvania of changing the name of any business corporation by an amendment to its articles. This procedure is followed in the proposed Banking Code and is therefore adopted in this draft. See Article VII of this draft for the amendment procedure.

5. This provision follows Section 202 of the proposed Business Corporation Law, and Section 201 of the proposed Banking Code, which are based on Section 4 of the Uniform Act, supra. As pointed out in the note to the Uniform Act, this provision seems desirable to prevent the provision of this draft from being construed as excluding rights and limitations under existing law.

6. This provision is the same as Section 202 of the proposed Business Corporation Law, and Section 201 of the proposed Banking Code, which are taken from the Uniform Act, Section 4 (VIII). In the absence of a statutory provision, an individual or corporation may obtain injunctive relief against the use of his or its name, both because of the injury to his or its property right in the name, and because of the possible deception of the public by the use of the name; but the mere identity or similarity of names does not furnish ground for relief. There must be either (a) probable deception of the public, or (b) an appropriation of a property right in a name. As both the possible deception of the public and the plaintiff's property right in an assumed name are dependent upon such use of that name as causes it to be associated with the plaintiff and his business, the common law affords no protection except in a territory where the name has been used for a length of time. Thus, one who has used a name in one state only cannot prevent its use in another state. American Clay Manufacturing Company v. American Clay Manufacturing Company, 198 Pa. 189 (1901); Erie Printing Company v. Erie Lithograhping and Printing Company, 31 Pa. C. C. 1 (1905); The New Method Steam Laundry Company v. Tomlinson, et al., 17 D. R. 362 (1908); Savide on Pa. Corps., Volume 1, Section 893, Page 709. See also, Fletcher Cyclopedia Corporations (Permanent Edition), Volume 6, Sections 2422 and 2423.

By the inclusion of this provision, the remedy of injunction is extended to that group of cases not governed by common law principles. Furthermore, the object of the provision is to prevent the unlawful assumption of a corporate name from being considered as a defect in incorporation. The remedy is to enjoin a validly incorporated company from the use of an improper name. The statutes of Massachusetts and Vermont and the English Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, have similar provisions as to the use of the injunction.

Section 202. Reservation of Association Name.—The exclusive right to the use of a name may be reserved[1] (1) by any person intending to organize an association, or (2) by any association intending to change its name. Such reservation shall be made by filing with the Department of State, duplicate originals of an application to reserve a specified name, executed by the applicant. If the Department of State shall find that such name is available, it shall send one duplicate original of such application to the Department of Banking. If the Department of Banking decides that such name is satisfactory to it,[2] it shall forthwith give its written assent to the Department of State. The Department of State shall then reserve the name for the exclusive use of such applicant for a period of sixty days. The right to the exclusive use of a specified name so reserved may be transferred to any corporation or person, who, except for such prior reservation, would be entitled under the provisions of this act to reserve such name. Such transfer may be made by filing with the Department of State, duplicate originals of a notice of such transfer, which notice shall be executed by the applicant for whom such name was reserved and shall specify the name and address of the transferee. The Department of State shall send one such duplicate original to the Department of Banking.

Comments:

1. While the present laws of Pennsylvania do not provide for the reservation of a name either by a corporation or by an association, it seems desirable to permit such reservation. The recent Indiana, Illinois, and California general corporation acts have recognized the desirability of such a provision and have provided by statute for reservation of a corporate name. The Indiana and California acts permit such reservation for a period of thirty days and the Illinois act for a period of sixty days. In Delaware, the Secretary of State without statutory authority but as an administrative matter, will reserve a corporate name on application. This draft, like Section 203 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 202 of the proposed Banking Code, permits the reservation of a corporate name for a period of sixty days, as this period will be ample in any case but still will not permit any corporation or person to obtain an option on a corporate name for an undue length of time.

2. Just as in the incorporation procedure, provided for in this draft, the Department of State remains the clearing house for all incorporations, so it should continue to serve in this capacity in the case of all registered names. This proposed section, therefore, provides that the reservation of the name shall be granted by, and shall go through, the Department of State, but requires the assent of the Department of Banking.

Section 203. Place of Business; Change of Place of Business.—A. An association shall not hold any of the regular meetings of its directors, grant any loans, or transact any business, except at the place of buiness designated in its by-laws, but the collection of dues and the holding of shareholders' meetings shall not be construed to be the transaction of business within the meaning of this section.

B. An association may change its place of business to any place within the city, borough, or township named in its articles in the manner provided in its by-laws. An association, upon changing its place of business, shall forthwith give notice of such change to the Department of Banking and the Department of State.

Comments:

The Act of 1830, supra, applicable to all corporations, permits the directors or the shareholders, by a two-thirds vote of either, to change the place of meeting of either group. The Corporation Act of 1874, supra, provides that the by-laws shall prescribe the place of meeting of a corporation, the inference, of course, being that a change of place of business should be effected by amending the by-laws. The Act of 1893, supra, provides that a change in the location of its principal office or in the place of its annual or other meetings of its shareholders may be effected by a vote of two-thirds of its members approved by two-thirds of its shareholders.

There is no uniformity among building and loan associations today in the method whereby they effect a change in their meeting place, most, associations permitting a change of meeting place by a vote of the directors. Most building and loan associations do not maintain buildings of their own for the transaction of their business, but lease a single room or even a portion of a room in a bank, in a real estate office, or in the office of their solicitor, conveyancer, or some other person connected with the association. It therefore frequently becomes necessary to effect a change in the place of business of an association without a great deal of notice, for example, if the solicitor of an association moves his law office or if a bank should close its doors an association would have to change its place of business immediately. It therefore seems undesirable to provide that, in order to change its place of business, an association must amend its articles. Consequently, Section 303 of this draft merely requires that the articles set forth the city, borough, or township in which an association will have its place of business. This leaves it for the by-laws to determine the place of business.

There is no association in this Commonwealth which transacts business at places other than its place of business, but a few of the largest and most financially strong building and loan associations employ collectors to collect on behalf of the association, dues from members who are resident at a distance from the meeting place of the association. Therefore, this proposed section includes a specific exception permitting the collection of dues at places other than the place of business of the association.

Since the place of business of the association is frequently too small to hold a meeting of all its shareholders, this proposed section excepts from its operation the holding of meetings of shareholders. Section 501 of this draft provides that the by-laws may state the place or the method of selecting the place at which meetings of shareholders may be held.

Section 204. Branch Offices and Sub-agencies.—An association shall not establish, maintain, or operate, either directly or indirectly, any branch association, branch office, agency, sub-office, sub-agency, or branch place of business within this Commonwealth for the holding of the regular meetings of its directors, the granting of any loans, or the transaction of any part of its business, but all of the business of such association shall be carried on solely and exclusively at its place of business. The collection of dues and the holding of shareholders' meetings shall not be construed to be the transaction of business within the meaning of this section.

Comments:

The statutory law of Pennsylvania is silent on the matter of branch offices of building and loan associations. However, Attorney General Hampton L. Carson in an opinion under date of January 5, 1905, advised Commissioner of Banking Robert McAfee that building and loan associations could not establish branch offices. As a matter of fact there is no association in this Commonwealth which maintains a branch office. This proposed section therefore merely enacts into law the opinion of Attorney General Carson and the uniform practice among building and loan associations in this Commonwealth. The laws of New Jersey contain a similar provision.

ARTICLE III

FORMATION, ORGANIZATION, AND GENERAL CORPORATE POWERS OF ASSOCIATIONS

Section 301. Formation.—An association may be formed, pursuant to the provisions of this act, by fifteen[1] or more incorporators. Such incorporators shall be natural persons[2] of full age[3] and of either sex, married or single.[4] At least two-thirds of them shall be citizens of the United States or of its territories or possessions;[5] at least two-thirds shall be residents of this Commonwealth[6] and residents of the county[7] in which the place of business of the proposed association is to be situated.

References:

The references in this draft will be cited under two headings: General and Associations. Under General will be cited all references which relate to all corporations of the second class. Since in general the provisions of the General Corporation Act of 1874, its amendments and supplements, apply also to building and loan associations, most of the references will, of course, be cited under the heading General. A number of the sections in this draft correspond to those in the proposed Business Corporation Law. Where this is the case the references upon which the Business Corporation Law is based will be cited; in such case the name of another state followed by a section number will refer to the corporation law of such state. A reference to Uniform Act will refer to the Uniform Business Corporation Act drafted by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws. Under the heading of Associations will be cited the acts specifically applicable only to building and loan associations.

Comments:

1. In its original form, the Corporation Act of 1874 required at least five incorporators to form any corporation of the second class, including bank and trust companies formed as title insurance companies. This number was reduced to three by the supplementary Act of 1901, as amended, supra.

Because of the peculiar nature of a building and loan association, it seems desirable to require the same number of incorporators as in the case of savings banks, see Section 301 of the proposed Banking Code.

2. Under the provision of the Corporation Act of 1874 that "five or more persons" may form a corporation, the term "person" has been construed to mean only a natural person, In re The Decorative Trades Association of Philadelphia, 18 D. R. 180 (1909); Board of Real Estate Brokers, 21 D. R. 59 (1911). The Act of 1901, supra, which reduced the number of incorporators to three, made no change in this respect. The Uniform Act specifically requires the incorporators to be "natural persons."

See, however, Section 1001 of this draft, which provides that in the case of consolidation, the constituent corporations may be named as incorporators in the articles of incorporation of the new consolidated corporation.

3. Under our case law, incorporators must be of full age, Lady Foresters of America, 18 D. R. 780 (1909). This qualification is also contained in the Uniform Act.

4. Formerly, a married woman could not be an incorporator, —Potter Gas Company, 15 Pa. C. C. 347 (1883),—but the right of a married woman to act as an incorporator is now expressly given by the Act of 1919, supra.

5. It has been held that a majority at least of the subscribers to a proposed corporation of the first class should be citizens of the United States. Chinese Club, 1 D. R. 84 (1891) and later cases. However, in Mount Sharon Cemetery Company, 3 D. & C. 179 (1922), it was held unnecessary to state that the petitioners were citizens of the United States.

The Uniform Act specifically requires "at least two-thirds" of the incorporators to be citizens of the United States or of its territories or possessions. This draft follows the Uniform Act in this respect. This provision is a part of the proposed Business Corporation Law, and of the proposed Banking Code, and seems particularly desirable in the case of banking institutions.

6. The Act of May 29, 1901, P. L. 326, amended by Act of April 23, 1903, P. L. 272, 15 PS Sec. 5, requires that at least one of the incorporators of a corporation of the second class be a citizen of this Commonwealth. The Act of May 20, 1889, P. L. 246, Section 1, 7 PS Sec. 511, covering savings banks, requires that two-thirds of the incorporators reside in the county where a proposed savings bank is to be located.

Section 201 of the proposed Business Corporation Law, after quoting from a footnote in the Uniform Act and after citing the 1931 corporation codifications of California, Illinois, and Michigan, follows these recent authorities in failing to include any requirement that incorporators be residents of this Commonwealth. However, the nature of a building and loan association is such that it seems clearly desirable to require that a good proportion of incorporators be residents of the Commonwealth. This is, of course, at present the requirement with reference to saving banks.

7. The Corporation Act of 1874 contains no specific requirement that any proportion of the incorporators of a corporation of the second class be resident in the county in which the proposed corporation is to be situated. Section 201 of the proposed Business Corporation Law likewise contains no such requirement.

The Act of May 20, 1889, P. L. 246, Section 1, 7 PS Sec. 511, covering savings banks, requires that at least two-thirds of the incorporators shall reside in the county where the proposed savings bank is to be situated. The reasons for including such a provision in the case of a savings bank seem equally applicable in the case of a building and loan association ,and therefore this requirement is included in this draft.

Section 302. Prohibition upon Payment of, or Contract for Promoters' Fees.—It shall be unlawful (1) for any fee, commission, or compensation to be paid to any corporation or person for the promotion or organization of an association, or (2) for any part of the money collected or to be collected from subscribers or shareholders to be applied to the payment of promoters' fees for obtaining subscriptions or selling shares or for services in starting such association; whether such fee, commission, or compensation is provided for by the contract with the proposed association, with the promoters, with the subscribers, or otherwise.

In any case in which there has been a violation of this section, the Department shall have the power to disapprove the articles upon this ground alone.

Comments:

The existing law applicable to the formation of building and loan associations is silent on the question of promoters' fees. The Act of March 9, 1923, P. L. 9, Section 1, 7 PS Sec. 73, specifically prohibits the payment of any promoters' fees for the organization of any bank or bank and trust company.

Section 302 of the proposed Banking Code contains a specific prohibition upon payment of, or contract for promoters' fees, and Section 306 of that proposed act places upon the Department the duty to ascertain whether such fees have been paid or contracted for. This proposed section is based upon Section 302 of the proposed Banking Code. It seems clear that the same safeguard against the payment of or contracting for promoters' fees should apply in the case of building and loan association as in the case of banks, bank and trust companies, or savings banks. Section 306 of this draft, like Section 303 of the proposed Banking Code, places upon the Department the duty to ascertain whether such fees have been paid or contracted for.

Section 303. Articles of Incorporation.—Articles[1] shall be signed in triplicate originals[2] by each of the incorporators, and acknowledged by at least five of them before any officer within this Commonwealth authorized to take acknowledgments.[3]

The articles shall set forth, in the English language:

(1) The name of the proposed association.[4]

(2) The city, borough, or township in which it will establish its place of business.[5]

(3) A precise and accurate statement of the purpose or purposes for which it is organized, as well as a statement that it is organized under the provisions of this act.

(4) The term for which it is to exist.[6]

(5) The par value of its shares.[7]

(6) A statement of all expenses connected with the organization of the corporation and the procuring of subscription, including a declaration that no fee, commission, or compensation of any kind has been or is to be paid to any corporation or person for the promotion or organization of the association, or for the procuring of subscriptions, or the sale of its shares.[8]

(7) The name, occupation, citizenship, place of residence, and post office address of each incorporator.[9]

(8) The name, occupation, citizenship, place of residence, post office address, and term of office of each of the first directors, and the number of shares to which he has subscribed.[10]

(9) Any provision not inconsistent with law which the incorporators may choose to insert for the regulation of the business and the internal affairs of the association, and which the Department shall approve.[11]

Comments:

1. The incorporation acts in Pennsylvania, supra, use the terms "certificate," "certifiate of incorporation," "charter," and "charter of incorporation" indiscriminately. This draft, like the proposed Business Corporation Law and the proposed Banking Code, adopts the title "articles of incorporation" for the statement executed by the incorporators. The articles of incorporation become the charter of the corporation upon being approved by the Department of Banking and the Department of State. The certificate of incorporation hereinafter required by this draft to be issued by the Department of State, with the consent of the Department of Banking, constitutes official evidence that the articles of incorporation have been approved by those two departments and that the corporation has come into existence. Therefore, when the charter of the association is amended, it is the articles of incorporation which are amended. The certificate of incorporation issued by the Department of State is incapable of amendment. The Uniform Act and the laws of most other states use similar terms. However in any event this draft should for purposes of uniformity correspond in terminology to the proposed Business Corporation Law. This it does.

2. The various incorporation acts cited, supra, require the filing of a single copy of the articles. The proposed Business Corporation Law requires the incorporators to prepare and file duplicate originals of the articles of incorproation. This draft, like the proposed Banking Code, requires triplicate originals. The reason for the addition of one original in this draft, and in the proposed Banking Code, as compared with the proposed Business Corporation Law, is that it is felt that although the Department of State is still retained as the clearing house for all incorporation procedure, the Department of Banking should, in order competently to examine institutions, have a copy in its files of the articles of each association.

Under the procedure prescribed by this draft, one set of the articles will be retained by the Department of State for its records, one set will be retained by the Department of Banking to open its files for the particular association, and the third set will be returned to the incorporators, who will thus have in their possession a triplicate original of their charter. It is believed that the practice of filing executed documents in triplicate is decidedly in the interest of accuracy and is preferable to the present method of copying the contents of the articles in a book kept by the Department of State, particularly as the articles under this draft will be more volunminous than the articles under former incorporation statutes, due to the additional information required by this draft to be set forth in them. As stated, the third triplicate original seems necessary for the files of the Department of Banking.

3. Formerly, a certificate of incorporation of a corporation formed under the Corporation Act of 1874 was required to be acknowledged before the recorder of deeds of the proper county. In the case of banks and savings banks the certificate was required to be acknowledged before a judge or notary public. However, under the Act of April 7, 1925, P. L. 183, 15 PS Sec. 24, such certificates or any amendments thereof may also be acknowledged and sworn to before a notary public or a justice of the peace of the Commonwealth. This proposed section contemplates recorders of deeds, justices of the peace, and notaries public, by authorizing the articles to be acknowledged before any officer within the Commonwealth authorized to take acknowledgments.

4. See Section 201 of this draft for provisions regulating the choice of name, and Section 202 for provisions permitting the reservation of a chosen name.

5. See Section 203 of this draft for provisions concerning the place of business of an association. Since that section permits a change of place of business to be effected by an amendment of the by-laws of an association, it would be illogical to require here, as do the Business Corporation Law and the Banking Code, that the articles state the exact location of the place of business.

6. The permissible duration of corporate existence is covered by Section 314 of this draft.

7. See Section 601 for provisions governing par values of shares.

8. See Section 302 of this draft.

9. A portion of this clause is made necessary by the requirement concerning the residence of incorporators. The occupation of the incorporators is of particular significance in the case of building and loan associations.

10. The reason for the inclusion of this clause is the same as those for the inclusion of Clause (8) concerning incorporators, except for the statement concerning the number of shares to which each director has subscribed. This seems necessary in view of the requirement of Section 402.

A note to the Uniform Act, supra, points out that states are now divided between the practice of naming the first directors in the articles, and the practice of having no directors until the first ones are elected after incorporation. The first practice seems preferable. The incorporators cease to be incorporators immediately upon the incorporation of the association. A corporation can act only through its board of directors. Therefore, it ought to be equipped with a board of directors the moment it comes into existence. Consequently this draft follows the Uniform Act in this respect.

11. In general this proposed section requires information to be set forth in the articles which is deemed necessary to the commencement of corporate activity. Administrative provisions should be covered by the by-laws, which may be changed without an amendment to the articles.

Section 304. Advertisement of Articles.—The incorporators shall advertise their intention to file articles one time in a newspaper.[1] Advertisements shall appear at least three days prior to the day the articles are filed with the Department of State, and shall set forth briefly:

(1) The name of the proposed association,

(2) A statement that the application is made under the provisions of this act, and

(3) The time when application will be made to the Department of State.[2]

Comments:

1. See Section 9 of this draft for the general provisions covering advertisement.

2. The provision concerning the time of advertisement and the number of advertisements is virtually the same as the requirements of Section 3 (b) of the Corporation Act of 1874, supra. That act also provides that the advertisement "shall set forth briefly, the character and object of the proposed corporation to be formed and the intention to make application therefor." In the case of building and loan associations, since there can be but a single purpose, this is omitted in this proposed section.

Query: Whether advertisement of intention to apply for a charter of an association should be required.

The laws of most of the states, including New York, Delaware, New Jersey, Maryland, California, Michigan, Indiana, and Illinois, and the Uniform Act, do not require advertisement as a prerequisite to the incorporation of any business corporation. There seems to be even less reason for advertisement in the case of banks, bank and trust companies, or savings banks. The name is carefully checked by the Department of State and the Department of Banking to determine whether it is deceptively similar to any existent name; the need for such an incorporated institution in the particular locality is carefully studied by the Department of Banking; and in general the examination by such Department would uncover any reason for not permitting the incorporation of such an institution.

Section 305. Filing of Articles; Payment of Fees or Charges.—A. On the day specified by the incorporators in the advertisement of their intention to file articles of incorporation, they shall deliver, or cause to be delivered, to the Department of State, a proof of publication of such advertisement, and the triplicate originals of the articles required by this act.[1]

B. The Department of State shall examine the proof of publication and the articles to determine whether they contain all the information and are in the form required by this act, and whether the name of the proposed association is the same as one already adopted or reserved by any other corporation or person, or is so similar thereto that it is likely to mislead the public.[2]

C. After all the fees and charges established by law have been paid, the Department of State shall, if the proof of publication and the articles contain the information and are in the form required by this act, and if the name of the proposed association does not violate any provision of this act, forthwith endorse its approval upon each of the triplicate originals of the articles and transmit them to the Department of Banking.[3]

D. If the Department of State shall disapprove the articles, pursuant to the provisions of this act, it shall forthwith give notice thereof to the proposed incorporators, stating in detail its reasons for doing so, and indicating how the incorporators can remedy their nonconformance with the provisions of this act. Upon remedying the defect, the incorpoartors may in the same manner file the same or amended articles, whichever the particular case may require.[4]

Corporation Act of 1874, Section 3, as amended, 15 PS Sec. 21; Act of May 15, 1874, P. L. 186, 15 PS Sec. 27.

Comments:

1. Under the Corporation Act of 1874, supra, articles are to be filed with the Department of State. This draft follows the general policy of that act and of The Administrative Code of making the Department of State the clearing house for all incorporations. Therefore all papers relating to incorporations are required to pass through the Department of State.

2. In accordance with the general policy stated in the preceding footnote, the duties of the Department of State with respect to incorporated institutions are merely formal ones.

3. This proposed subsection, like Subsection B, imposes upon the Department of State the formal duties with respect to incorporation. All fees and charges are to be paid through the Department of State, since it has the machinery for determining and collecting such charges. No mention is made of the bonus, since under the Act of April 20, 1927, P. L. 322, Section 3, 72 PS Sec. 1823, building and loan associations are exempted from payment of the bonus. In accordance with the general policy adopted in the incorporation procedure under this draft, the Department of State, if it approves all the formal incorporation requirements, then transmits the articles to the Department of Banking.

4. Since the only grounds upon which the Department of State is authorized to disapprove the articles in the case of a building and loan association are formal ones, provision is made for the incorporators to file corrected articles, or to file the same articles if the defect is outside of such articles.

Section 306. Approval of Articles by Department of Banking.—A. The Department of Banking shall, immediately upon the receipt of the articles from the Department of State, conduct such investigation as it may deem necessary to ascertain from the best sources of information at its command:

(1) Whether the name of the proposed association is likely to mislead the public as to its character or purpose.

(2) Whether the convenience and advantage of the public will be served by the proposed incorporation and whether the density of the population in the neighborhood designated for the place of business of such proposed association and in the surrounding country affords reasonable promise of adequate support for the enterprise.

(3) Whether the responsibility, character, and general fitness for the business, of the incorporators and directors named in the articles are such as to command the confidence of the community and to warrant the belief that the business of the proposed association will be honestly and efficiently conducted in accordance with the intent and purpose of this act.

(4) Whether any fee, commission, or compensation has been paid to any corporation or person for the promotion or organization of such association or whether any part of the money collected or to be collected from subscribers or shareholders has been or is to be applied to the payment of promoters' fees for obtaining subscriptions or selling shares or for services in starting such association, whether such fee, commission, or compensation is provided for by contract with the proposed association or by contract with the subscribers to the shares.[1]

B. Within thirty days after the receipt of the articles from the Department of State, the Department of Banking shall, upon the basis of the facts disclosed by the investigation provided for by this section, either approve or disapprove the articles. It shall immediately notify the Department of State in writing of its action. If it shall approve the articles, it shall sign its approval upon the triplicate originals. It shall retain one of the triplicate originals and return the other two to the Department of State.

C. If the Department of Banking disapproves the articles, it shall return them to the Department of State, stating in detail its reasons for doing so. The Department of State shall immediately give notice to the proposed incorporators, of the action of the Department of Banking and of the reasons therefor as stated to it by that Department. The proposed incorporators may, within thirty days after the Department of State gives them notice of the disapproval of their articles, appeal from such disapproval to the Governor, who shall hear such appeal promptly, and, within thirty days thereafter, decide the matter and certify his decision to the Department of Banking. The decision of the Governor shall be conclusive and not subject to any review. The Department of Banking shall act in accordance therewith.[2]

Comments:

1. Under the Corporation Act of 1874 the Department of Banking is given no authority to approve or disapprove the incorporation of a building and loan association. However, as a matter of practice, charters are not granted to building and loan associations at the present time without the consent of the Department of Banking, which, at the present time conducts an investigation prior to granting such approval. This draft follows Section 306 of the proposed Banking Code, and enacts into law the existent practice.

It seems clearly desirable that the Department of Banking should have complete charge of determining whether or not a new building and loan association should be permitted to be incorporated in this Commonwealth. The Commonwealth, on behalf of its citizens, has a very definite interest in the formation of such associations. The standards established by this proposed section for guiding the Department in determining whether or not to approve the formation of a new building and loan association are those generally accepted as controlling the desirability of permitting the starting of a new association. They are the tests established by the laws of numerous other states as a guide to their banking officials in determining whether to permit the formation of new banking institutions, for example, New York, New Jersey, Wisconsin, Texas and Michigan. The provision as to promoters' fees corresponds with that contained in Section 306 of the proposed Banking Code. Such payment is made illegal by Section 302 of this draft.

2. While the Department is best qualified, upon the basis of the standards established by this proposed section, to determine whether or not the articles should be approved, it seems desirable to provide for an appeal to the Governor.

Section 307. Issuance of Certificate of Incorporation.—Immediately upon receipt of the two signed triplicate originals of the articles of an association from the Department of Banking, the Department of State shall file and record one of the triplicate originals and shall issue a certificate of incorporation. The remaining triplicate original of the articles and the certificate of incorporation shall be sent by the Department of State to the incorporators or their representative, who shall then have them recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds of the county in which the place of business of the proposed association is or will be situated. The triplicate original of the articles, upon being recorded by the recorder of deeds, shall be returned to the incorporators, or their representative, and shall constitute the charter of the association.

Comments:

This proposed section makes a radical change in the method of procuring charters. Under the Corporation Act of 1874, supra, all charters are required to be approved by the Governor. If he approves them, he is required to issue letters patent.

This draft follows the change instituted in Section 206 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and in Section 307 of the proposed Banking Code, and eliminates the requirement that the Governor approve the articles or issue letters patent. Penn-incorporation of a business corporation, or of any other type of corporation, to be presented to and approved by the Governor. In practice, the articles are also approved and signed by the Secretary of the Commonwealth. The Pennsylvania practice not only places an undue burden upon the Governor, but because of the number of signatures and approvals required, results in delay.

The Uniform Act and the incorporation laws of the other states uniformly require the articles of incorporation of a business corporation to be presented to and approved by the administrative official in charge of the department corresponding to our Department of State, or of the head of the Banking Department, and authorizes that officer to issue a certificate of incorporation. The procedure instituted by this proposed section will make the law of Pennsylvania uniform with the laws of the other states.

The certificate of incorporation provided for by this draft stands in lieu of the letters patent which are now issued by the Governor, and constitutes official evidence that the articles have been filed by the Department of State, and that the association has come into existence.

Section 308. Effect of Issuance of Certificate of Incorporation.—Upon the issuance of the certificate of incorporation of any association by the Department of State, the corporate existence shall begin.[1] The certificate of incorporation shall be conclusive evidence of the fact that the association has been incorporated but proceedings may be instituted by the Commonwealth to dissolve, wind up, and terminate an association which should not have been formed under this act, or which has been formed without a substantial compliance with the conditions prescribed by this act as precedent to the provisions of this act.[2]

Pennsylvania

Corporation Act of 1874, Section 3 (d), 15 PS Sec. 21.

Comments:

1. The Corporation Act of 1874, supra, makes the recording of articles, "in the office for the recording of deeds, in and for the county where the chief operations are to be carried on," a condition precedent to corporate existence. Upon the recording of the articles, corporate existence begins, Guckert v. Hacke, et al., 159 Pa. 303 (1893); Tonge v. Item Publishing Company, Appellant, 244 Pa. 417 (1914); Deniston's Estate, 70 Pitts. L. J. 59 (1921). This draft follows Section 207 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 308 of the proposed Banking Code and changes the Pennsylvania law in this respect, in that corporate existence begins upon the issuance of the certificate of incorporation by the Department of State. The commissioners on uniform laws strongly recommend that corporate existence begin on the issuance of the certificate of incorporation, and the laws of most states contain such a provision. Section 310 of this draft, however, prohibits the corporation from incurring any indebtedness or beginning the transaction of any business, except after the issuance of the certificate of incorporation. In other words, the recording of the articles is not a condition precedent to the corporate existence, but a condition precedent to the right to do business.

2. The object of this section, which follows Section 207 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 308 of the proposed Banking Code is to solve the de facto problem. According to a note contained under this section in the Uniform Act, it is believed that the section, as worded, does not alter the present case law as to the right of the state. According to present law, the state may intervene: (a) when the corporation is one that should not have been incorporated under the act; and (b) when there has been a failure substantially to comply with such conditions precedent to incorporation as are considered mandatory. If, however, the conditions not complied with are found to be directory rather than mandatory, the default on the part of the incorporators is held to be unassailable even by the state. If, also, there has been substantial compliance with mandatory provisions, the state is not permitted to object that there has not been literal compliance. The proposed section treats all conditions prescribed by this act as precedent to incorporation as mandatory provisions, but declares substantial compliance to be sufficient. The line of distinction between mandatory and directory provisions is not defined with exactness, but it is believed that in most cases the distinction between mandatory and directory provisions is in a large part one between conditions precedent to incorporation and conditions precedent to the right to do business.

The present section goes further than the case law in defining collateral attack upon the legality of incorporation. To deny collateral attack, the cases hold that (a) there must have been a real attempt to incorporate, and (b) the corporation must have been one that was formable under the statute. The present section would make the certificate of incorporation conclusive in all cases.

Section 309. Fees for Investigation by Department of Banking.—In addition to any other fees or charges provided by law in the case of any corporation, the incorporators of an association shall pay to the Department of State at the time they file their articles, such reasonable fees, as shall be established by rule and regulation by the Department of Banking, for the investigation made by the Department of Banking pursuant to the provisions of this act, to determine whether the articles should be approved. Such fees shall be paid by the Department of State, through the Department of Revenue, into the Banking Department Fund.

Comments:

This provision seems necessary in view of the additional duties imposed upon the Department of Banking to conduct an examination in the case of every building and loan association proposed to be formed. It seems desirable, too, to provide for payment upon the filing of the articles since, if the articles are not approved, it will frequently be very difficult to recover the expenses of the investigation from the incorporators. The cost would then have to come out of the Department of Banking Fund and consequently be assessed against existent associations. This would clearly be unjust.

This proposed section corresponds to Section 309 of the proposed Banking Code, except that reference to bonus is omitted for the reason stated in footnote 3 to Section 305 of this draft.

Section 310. Conditions Precedent to Beginning Business; Penalty for Violation.—A. An association formed under this act shall not incur any indebtedness, grant any loans, or begin the transaction of any business except such as shall be incident to its organization or to the obtaining of subscriptions to, or payment for, its shares until:

(1) A duplicate original of its articles has been recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds, pursuant to the provisions of this act.[1]

(2) The by-laws of the association have been filed with the Department of Banking.

B. If an association shall transact any business in violation of this section, the officers who participated therein and the directors, except those who dissented therefrom and caused their dissent to be filed at the time in the Department of Banking, or who, being absent, so filed their dissent upon learning of the action, shall be severally liable for the debts and liabilities of the association arising therefrom.[2]

Comments:

1. As pointed out in footnote 1 to Section 308 of this draft corporate existence begins under this draft upon the issuance of the certificate of incorporation by the Department of State. Under this draft the recording of the articles in the office of the recorder of deeds and the filing of the by-laws with the Department of Banking are conditions precedent to the beginning of business by the existing association.

Section 310 of the proposed Banking Code provides that a bank, bank and trust company, or savings bank cannot transact any business until the Department issues a certificate of authorization. Since there are no requirements of capital, surplus, or expense fund in the case of building and loan associations, the need for such procedure is not present. Therefore, this proposed section follows in so far as possible the provisions of Section 208 of the proposed Business Corporation Law, except that in this proposed section the requirement of the filing of by-laws is added. This is made necessary by the fact that the Department of Banking under this draft has the power to disapprove any provision of the by-laws.

2. This penalty is also imposed by Section 208 of the Business Corporation Law and Section 310 of the proposed Banking Code. It is taken from Section 8 of the Uniform Act. The corporation Act of 1874 makes the recording of the articles a condition precedent to corporate existence. It has been held that failure to record the articles will render the incorporators personally liable to the persons who deal with them without knowledge of the corporation. Guckert v. Hacke, et al., 159 Pa. 303 (1893). Since under this draft corporate existence begins upon the issuance of the certificate of incorporation and not upon the recording of the articles, this penalty is necessary. Under this draft, there will be an association, but the right of the creditor against the officers and directors who are responsible for a violation of the section is not conditioned upon the creditor's ability to prove that he was deceived.

Section 311. Organization Meetings.—A. After the issuance of the certificate of incorporation of an association, the first meeting of the shareholders shall be held within this Commonwealth at the call of the incorporators, or a majority of them, for the purpose of adopting by-laws, if the articles of incorporation do not provide for the adoption thereof by the directors, and for such other purposes as shall be stated in the notice of the meeting. The incorporators so calling the meeting shall give at least ten days' notice thereof, by mail, to each shareholder, which notice shall state the time, place, and purpose or purposes of the meeting.

B. After the issuance of the certificate of incorporation of an association, an organization meeting of the board of directors named in the articles shall be held within this Commonwealth at the call of a majority of the directors, for the purpose of adopting by-laws, if the articles authorize the directors to adopt by-laws, for the purpose of electing officers, and for the transaction of such other business as may come before the meeting. The directors calling the meeting shall give at least five day's notice, by mail, of the time and place of the meeting to each director named in the articles.

Comments:

This proposed section is based primarily upon Section 210 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 311 of the proposed Banking Code. There is no statutory provision in Pennsylvania regulating organization meetings of the shareholders or directors. This proposed section of the draft sets forth the usual practice in Pennsylvania. The general provisions relating to waivers, contained in Section 11 of this draft, permits the holding of either of the organization meetings on waiver of notice.

The provision of the proposed Business Corporation Law and of the proposed Banking Code permitting the meeting of the directors to be held outside the Commonwealth does not seem desirable in the case of an association.

"The General Assembly shall have the power to alter, revoke or annul any charter of incorporation now existing and revokable at the adoption of this Constitution, or any that may hereafter be created, whenever in their opinion it may be injurious to the citizens of this Commonwealth, in such manner, however, that no injustice shall be done to the corporators. No law hereafter enacted shall create, renew or extend the charter of more than one corporation."

Section 313. Corporate Capacity and Authority.—An association formed under this act shall have the capacity to act possessed by natural persons, but shall have authority to perform only such acts as are necessary or proper to accomplish its purpose or purposes, and which are not repugnant to law.

Comments:

This section is supplementary to Section 11 of this draft. Section 11 abolishes the doctrine of constructive notice of the contents of the charter of a building and loan association.

This proposed section abolishes another prop of the ultra vires structure, namely the doctrine that a corporation has a limited capacity measured by its statutory powers. This section, in effect, restores the common law rule that a corporation has the capacity of natural persons; that is, the capacity to do an unauthorized or even an illegal act. This proposed section, as well as Section 11 and Section 315 of this draft, follows almost verbatim Sections 9, 301, and 303 of the proposed Business Corporation Law.

A note to Section 11 of the Uniform Act points out:

"The fundamental conflict in the authorities may be represented by the statement of Justice Gray in Central Transportation Co. v. Pullman Car Co., 139 U. S. 24, 59, that 'The objection to the contract is, not merely that the corporation ought not to have made it, but that it could no make it. The contract cannot be ratified by either party, because it could not have been authorized by either. No performance on either side can give the unlawful contract any validity, or be the foundation of any right of action upon it,' as opposed to the statement of Comstock, J., in Bissell v. R. R., 22 N. Y. 258, 264, that 'To say that a corporation has no right to do unauthorized acts, is only to put forth a very plain truism; but to say that such bodies have no power to capacity to err, is to impute to them an excellence which does not belong to any created existence with which we are acquainted. The distinction between power and right is no more to be lost sight of in respect to artificial than in respect to natural persons. * * * When we speak of the powers of a corporation, the term only expresses the privileges and franchises which are bestowed in the charter; and when we say it cannot exercise other powers, the just meaning of the language is, that as the attempt to do so is without authority of law, the performance of unauthorized acts is a usurpation which may be a wrong to the state, or, perhaps, to the shareholders. But the usurpation is possible. In the same sense natural persons are under restraint of law, but they may transgress the law, and when they do they are responsible for their acts.' The first view may be said to prevail in the federal courts and a minority of the state courts, while the second view probably obtains in the courts of all but eight of the states.

"The first view is based upon the conception of limited corporate capacity; the conception that a corporation cannot do what it has not been given authority to do. * * * This doctrine of limited capacity, like the doctrine of constructive notice, is the result of a judicial interpretation of legislative intention. * * * At common law, a corporation had the capacity of natural persons, i.e., the capacity to do an unauthorized or even an illegal act. * * *

"Sections 10 and 11 of this draft, by abolishing the doctrine of constructive notice and the doctrine of limited capacity, would remove two of the sources of greatest confusion in the ultra vires cases, the chief obstacles to uniformity in decisions. As suggested, these obstacles, springing from an interpretation of legislative intention, can be removed only by legislation. Further legislation than this in connection with the ultra vires problem seems to be unnecessary. * * *"

Query: Is it desirable to abolish the ultra vires doctrine to as great an extent as does this draft in the case of building and loan associations?

Section 314. General Powers.—Subject to the limitations and restrictions contained in this act or in its articles, every association shall have authority:

(1) To continue as an association for the time limited in its articles or, if a time limit is not specified therein, then perpetually, subject to the power of the General Assembly, under the Constitution of this Commonwealth;[1]

(2) To sue and be sued, complain and defend in its corporate name;[2]

(3) To have a corporate seal which may be altered at pleasure, and to use the same by causing it or a facsimile of it to be impressed or affixed, or in any manner reproduced;[3]

(4) To make, alter, amend, and repeal by-laws not inconsistent with its articles or with law, for the administration and regulation of the affairs of the association;[4]

(5) To elect or appoint and remove officers and agents of the association, and to define their duties and fix their compensation;[5]

(6) To have and exercise all of the powers and means necessary to effect the purpose or purposes for which the association is formed;[6]

(7) To dissolve and wind up.[7]

The powers herein enumerated shall not be construed as limiting or enlarging any grant of authority specifically granted elsewhere in this act, or as limiting the purpose or purposes for which an association may be organized, as set forth in its articles. It shall not be necessary to set forth in the articles of an association any of the powers enumerated in its articles. Except as otherwise provided in this act or in the by-laws of a particular association the powers herein enumerated shall be exercised by the board of directors of the association.

Comments:

1. This is practically a restatement of a provision in the Corporation Act of 1874, supra, which provides that a corporation shall have power: "To have succession by its corporate name for the period limited by its charter, and when no period is limited thereby, or by this act, perpetually, subject to the power of the general assembly, under the constitution of this commonwealth." This provision is the same as that contained in Section 302 of the proposed Banking Code. This draft does not specifically limit the corporate existence of any association; therefore the italicized provision is not included in this draft. This provision is the same as that contained in Section 302 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 314 of the proposed Banking Code. In the general corporation laws of twenty-eight states corporate existence may be perpetuated; in twenty-four it must not exceed a certain maximum period, which varies from twenty to one hundred years. Of these twenty-four, however, seventeen permit an extension of corporate existence by amndment or renewal.

Since building and loan associations continually issue new series of shares at intervals, each new series is in effect a renewal of the term of existence of a building and loan association. Therefore, it seems that such an association should be permitted to have perpetual existence. Thus it would exist as long as any single series is still unmatured. Thus, at the present time almost all the building and loan associations in this Commonwealth have the right of perpetual existence.

2. The Act of 1874 provides that every corporation shall have the power: "To maintain and defend judicial proceedings." This draft restates the Pennsylvania provision.

3. The existent provision in Pennsylvania law is as follows: "To make and use a common seal and alter the same at pleasure."

4. The Corporation Act of 1874 authorizes a corporation: "To make by-laws not inconsistent with law, for the management of its property, the regulation of its affairs and the transfer of its stock." This proposed provision is practically a restatement of the existent provision, except that it specifically permits an association to alter, amend, and repeal its by-laws.

5. The Corporation Act of 1874 contains a similar provision: "To appoint and remove such subordinate officers and agents as the business of the corporation requires, and to allow them a suitable compensation."

6. This provision is not contained in the Corporation Act of 1874, but it seems desirable to include it in this draft. It is likewise included in the proposed Business Corporation Law and in the proposed Banking Code. It is a statement of the implied power theory and was taken from the general corporation act of Illinois.

7. This provision, which does not appear in the Corporation Act of 1874, does appear as Clause (15) of Section 302 of the proposed Business Corporation Law, which was taken from the Uniform and the Illinois Acts. A similar provision appears in the laws of many other states.

Section 315. Defense of Ultra Vires.[1]—A. No limitation upon the business, purpose or purposes, or powers of an association, express or implied in its articles or implied by law, shall be asserted in order to defend any action at law or in equity between the association and a third person, or between a shareholder and a third person, involving any contract to which the association is a party or any right of property or any alleged liability of whatsoever nature; but such limitation may be asserted:

(1) In an action by a shareholder against the association, to enjoin the doing of unauthorized acts or the transaction or continuation of unauthorized business. If the unauthorized acts or the business sought to be enjoined are being transacted pursuant to any contract to which the association is a party, the court may, if all of the parties to the contract are parties to the suit, and if it deems the same to be equitable, set aside and enjoin the performance of such contract, and in so doing shall allow to the association, or the other parties, as the case may be, compensation for the loss or damage sustained by either of them, which may result from the action of the court in setting aside and enjoining the performance of such contract, but anticipated profits to be derived from the performance of the contract shall not be awarded by the court as a loss or damage sustained.

(2) In an action at law or in equity by the association, whether acting through a receiver, trustee, or other legal representative, or through shareholders in a representative suit, against the officers or directors of the association for exceeding their authority.

(3) In any proceeding in which the Department is defending any action taken by it against the association, or is seeking to enforce an order against such association, or to enjoin it from the transaction of unauthorized or unlawful business.[2]

B. No conveyance or transfer by or to an association of property, real or personal, of any kind or description, shall be invalid or fail because in making such conveyance or transfer, or in acquiring the property, real or personal, the board of directors or any of the officers of the association, acting within the scope of the actual or apparent authority given to them by the board of directors, have in so doing exceeded any of its objects, purposes, or powers.

Comments:

1. Like Section 11 and Section 313 of this draft, this proposed section follows in general Sections 9, 301, and 303 of the proposed Business Corporation Law. Again the question arises whether it is desirable to apply these provisions to building and loan associations.

Fletcher Cyclopedia Corporations (Permanent Edition) Volume 7, Section 3439 (1931), at Page 589, states of the ultra vires doctrine, as applicable to any corporation:

"Until a few years ago, there were no statutes in this country relating to ultra vires as a defense. However, the conflict and confusion in the decisions as to the effect of ultra vires, and the desire of many to abolish the doctrine as between the parties to the ultra vires act, have resulted in the past few years in numerous proposed codifications and restatements of the ultra vires doctrine and also in the enactment of statutes in several states either limiting or abolishing the doctrine of ultra vires as between the parties to the alleged ultra vires transactions. These statutes may be classified as (1) those adopting wholly or in substance the Uniform Business Corporation Act, and (2) statutes in states not adopting this act. This first class of statutes does not go so far, and is not as comprehensive, as the latter class of statutes."

The Uniform Act merely attempts to make uniform the decisions relating to the defense of ultra vires by abolishing two doctrines which give rise to most of the confusion in such decisions; namely: (1) the doctrine of constructive notice of the contents of the charter, and (2) the doctrine of limited corporate capacity. If these two doctrines are abolished, the effect will be to bring the few states in this country which follow the Federal rule in line with the majority of the states, which do not follow the Federal rule in the field of ultra vires. This draft, in Sections 9 and 301, follows the suggestion of the Uniform Act.

It is submitted, however, that the elimination of the doctrines of constructive notice and limited corporate capacity will make little change in the present Pennsylvania law. In Pennsylvania an unexecuted corporate act or agreement which is ultra vires can ordinarily be repudiated by the corporation,—Pittsburgh and Steubenville Railroad Company v. Allegheny County, 79 Pa. 210 (1875); Twelfth Street Market Company v. Jackson, 102 Pa. 269 (1883),—but a corporation may not avail itself of ultra vires as a defense where a contract has been entered into and executed in good faith by the other party and the corporation has received the benefit of the performance. This rule is founded upon the doctrine of estoppel rather than ratification, and relates to all contracts except those absolutely void on the ground of public policy,—Boyd v. The American Carbon Black Company, 182 Pa. 206 (1897); Presbyterian Board v. Gilbee, 212 Pa. 310 (1905); Lemmon v. The East Palestine Rubber Company, 260 Pa. 28 (1918); Doylestown and Danborough Turnpike Railroad Company v. Philadelphia and Easton Electric Railway Company, 49 Pa. Super. 381 (1912). If an ultra vires contract is partly executory, a corporation may, if the contract is easily divisible, avoid the executory portions, because of their ultra vires nature,—Thomas, et al., v. West Jersey Railroad Company, 101 U. S. 71 (1800); Gloninger v. Pittsburgh & C. R. Company, 139 Pa. 13 (1891); Bosshardt v. Crescent Oil Company, Ltd., 171 Pa. 109 (1895),—otherwise the doctrine of equitable estoppel is applicable to the partly executory contract,—Leslie and Company, Ltd., v. Baird Manufacturing Company, 66 Pitts. 753 (1918). Also, in Pennsylvania this doctrine may be set up by stockholders, the State, or by creditors, but not by a stranger to the transaction,—Hazelwood Brewing Company v. Siebert, 255 Pa. 9 (1917). Generally speaking, the defense of ultra vires is not looked upon favorably by the courts of this Commonwealth. As is stated in Wright, et al., v. The Pipe Line Company, 101 Pa. 204 (1882). "The law never sustains a defense of this nature out of regard for a defendant; it does so only where an imperative rule of public policy requires it."

On the other hand, in very recent years, Vermont, Ohio, California, Illinois, and Michigan have abolished the defense of ultra vires between the corporation and a third party or a stockholder and a third party. Ohio, however, expressly retains theultra vires doctrine as aginst a person having actual knowledge of the want of authority of the corporation. These states, however, permit such defense to be set up between the corporation and the stockholders. None of the statutes enacted by these states changes the law as to the power of the State to forfeit or oust because of ultra vires, or the power of the corporation or its stockholders to prevent ultra vires transactions, or to obtain redress therefor as against corporate officers. This draft follows the proposed Business Corporation Law and goes further than the Uniform Act and abolishes the doctrine of ultra vires between the corporation and third parties or shareholders of the corporation and third parties. The provisions of this section are taken from the Illinois and California acts, which were adopted in 1931.

The proposed Business Corporation Law queries whether Pennsylvania should follow the Ohio act and permit the corporate body to use the defense of ultra vires against a third party which dealt with the corporate agents knowing that the transaction was ultra vires and that the agents had no authority from the corporation to engage in this transaction.

2. Clause (3) follows the corresponding clause in Section 315 of the proposed Banking Code. It is completely different from the proposed Business Corporation Law but seems necessary by virtue of the special powers given to the Department of Banking over building and loan associations, which are much broader than those given to the Department of State over general business corporations.

Section 316. By-Laws; Adoption, Amendment, or Repeal; Approval by Department.—A. Except as herein otherwise provided, the shareholders shall have the power to make, alter, amend, and repeal the by-laws of an association. The authority to make by-laws may be expressly vested by the articles in the board of directors, subject to the power of the shareholders to change or repeal such by-laws, but the board of directors shall not make or alter any by-laws fixing their qualifications, classification, term of office, or compensation, or any by-laws regulating the proportion of the profits of the association or the rate of interest paid to a withdrawing shareholders. Unless the articles or by-laws otherwise provide, (the by-laws may be adopted, altered, amended, and repealed by a majority vote of the board of directors, or of the shareholders, as the case may be, at any regular or special meeting duly convened after notice to the shareholders or directors of that purpose.[1]

B. The by-laws of an association may contain any provision for the regulation and management of the affairs of such association not inconsistent with law or the articles.[2]

C. Immediately upon the adoption of the by-laws or of any additions thereto or any alteration, amendment, or repeal thereof, notice of such fact and a copy of such by-law or such alteration, amendment, or repeal shall forthwith be sent to the Department of Banking. The Department of Banking shall have the power to disapprove any such by-law or any such alteration, amendment, or repeal thereof, but such by-law, alteration, amendment, or repeal shall be effective until the Department actually disapproves it and gives notice thereof to the association.[3]

Corporation Act of 1874, Section 5, amended by Act of May 14, 1891, P. L. 61, 15 PS Sec. 41.

Comments:

1. This proposed section corresponds to Section 304 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 316 of the proposed Banking Code. Section 5 of the Corporation Act of 1874, supra, as amended, provides that the by-laws "shall be made by the stockholders or members of the corporation at a general meeting called for that purpose, unless the charter prescribes another body or a different mode." While the recent general corporation acts of Illinois and Indiana and a few other states vest the powers to make by-laws primarily in the board of directors, unless the articles provide otherwise, this draft in accordance with the Uniform Act and the General Corporation Act of this Commonwealth, vests this power primarily in the shareholders. The general rule is now, as it was under the common law, that the power to adopt by-laws resides inherently and primarily in the shareholders—Fletcher Cyclopedia Corporations (Permanent Edition) Volume 8, Section 4172,—and there seems to be no reason for shifting this inherent power from the shareholders to the board of directors.

2. Section 304 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 316 of the proposed Banking Code authorize the by-laws to provide a maximum penalty of twenty dollars for the breach of any of the provisions thereof. This draft does not grant the authority to any building and loan association to impose such penalty.

3. This draft requires the articles of any building and loan association, as well as any amendments thereto, to be approved by the Department. Section 316 makes the same requirement in the case of banks, bank and trust companies, and savings banks.

Under existing law there is no requirement that the by-laws of a building and loan association be approved by the Department. It seems clear that the Department should have the power to exercise some supervision over the contents of the by-laws of an institution. However, to require that the Department approve them, or any amendments to them, before they become effective would serve as a hardship upon the association. Therefore, this draft provides that the by-laws shall remain effective until actually disapproved by the Department.

Section 317. Parties Bound by By-Laws; Execution of Instruments.—The by-laws of an association shall operate merely as regulations among the members of the association, and shall not affect contracts or other dealings with other corporations or persons, unless such corporations or persons have actual knowledge of such by-laws, or unless the association has given to such corporations or persons a copy of such by-laws.

Any form of execution provided in the by-laws to the contrary notwithstanding, any note, mortgage, evidence of indebtedness, contract, or other instrument of writing, or any assignment or endorsement thereof, executed or entered into between an association and any other corporation or person, when signed by the president or vice-president and by the secretary or treasurer of such association, shall be held to have been properly executed for and in behalf of the association.

Comments:

The Act of 1925 overruled the cases (1) which held that a person dealing with a corporation is charged with notice of the by-laws, and (2) which held that parties acting under agreements with a corporation are bound by the form of execution provided for in the by-laws or resolutions authorizing the specific contracts.

ARTICLE IV

DIRECTORS AND OFFICERS

Section 401. Number and Election of Directors; Executive Committee.—Subject to the provisions of this act, the number qualifications, terms of office, manner of election, time and place of meeting, compensation, and powers and duties of the directors of an association may be prescribed from time to time by the by-laws. Except as otherwise provided in the by-laws:

(1) A director shall be elected for a term of one year.[1]

(2) The number of directors shall be the same as that stated in the artciles.[2]

(3) Vacancies in the board of directors shall be filled by the remaining members of the board, and each person so elected shall be a director until his successor is elected by the shareholders, who may make such election at the next annual meeting of the shareholders or at any special meeting duly called for that purpose and held prior thereto.[3]

(4) The regular meetings of the board of directors shall be held at the place of business of the association, but special meetings may be held at such place within this Commonwealth as a majority of the directors may from time to time designate.[4]

(5) A majority of all the directors shall be necessary to constitute a quorum for the transaction of business, and except as otherwise provided in this act, or in the articles or by-laws of a particular association, the acts of a majority of the directors who are present at a meeting at which a quorum is present shall be the acts of the board of directors, but if the directors shall severally or collectively consent in writing to any action to be taken by the association, such action shall be as valid corporate action as though it had been authorized at a meeting of the board of directors.[5]

(6) The board of directors may, by resolution passed by a majority of the whole board, delegate three or more of its number to constitute an executive committee which to the extent provided in such resolution, shall have and exercise the authority of the board over the ordinary operations of the business of the association between the dates of the monthly meetings of the board. Every such committee shall keep full minutes of all business transacted by it and shall present detailed reports of all such transactions at each monthly meeting of the board.[6]

Comments:

1. This is in accord with existing law.

2. Section 303 requires the articles to set forth the number, names, and addresses of the first directors of a building and loan association. After incorporation, the number of directors may be changed by amending the by-laws, but until this is done, the number stated in the articles will govern.

3. These provisions for the filling of vacancies are in accord with existing laws.

4. Section 402 of the proposed Business Corporation Law permits meetings to be held within or without the Commonwealth. In accordance with the general policy of this draft, as expressed in several sections, and with Section 501 of the proposed Banking Code, meetings of the directors like meetings of the shareholders may be held only within the Commonwealth. Section 203 of this draft provides that regular meetings of the directors must be held within this Commonwealth.

5. This proposed subsection is in accord with the existing law of Pennsylvania.

It is also the common law rule that a majority is necessary to constitute a quorum, and that is the number usually required by statute in the absence of a contrary provision in the articles of incorporation or by-laws.

The proviso to the proposed subsection is new. It follows Section 402 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 501 of the proposed Banking Code, which are taken from Section 13 (4) (d) of the Michigan general corporation act.

6. This proposed subsection is new. It is an adaptation, with limitations, of Section 402 of the proposed Business Corporation Law, and is substantially the same as a corresponding clause in Section 501 of the proposed Banking Code. It is quite true that the demands of a modern building and loan association require many matters of importance to be acted upon promptly. Except where the board is small and all members readily available, it is frequently impossible to procure the requisite board action without undue delay. However, in the case of building and loan associations, the special limitations imposed by this act that the business transacted by the executive committee shall be only such as is transacted in the ordinary course of business, and that full minutes of the meetings of the executive committee should be presented to the whole board seem to be clearly desirable.

Section 402. Term of Office and Qualification of Directors.—A. The business and affairs of every association shall be managed by a board of at least five directors.[1] Except as otherwise provided by this act or by the articles or by-laws of the association, such board of directors shall exercise all the powers and fulfill all the duties granted to, or imposed upon, the association by this act.

B. Each director shall hold office for the term for which he is elected and until his successor shall have been duly elected and qualified. The names and terms of office of the first directors shall be stated in the articles.[2] Except as otherwise provided in this act for the filling of vacancies, directors, other than those constituting the first board of directors, shall be elected by the shareholders.

C. Every director shall, during the term of office, be a citizen of the United States, at least two-thirds of the directors shall, during their terms of service, be bona fide residents in this Commonwealth, and at least two-thirds shall, during their terms of office, be bona fide residents in the county in which the association has its place of business.

D. Every director shall be a shareholder of the association. Any director who, during his term of service, ceases to be a shareholder shall forthwith cease to be a director of the association, and his office shall be vacant. He shall not be eligible for reelection as a director of such association for the remainder of the term for which he was elected and for a further period of one year from the expiration of his term. Any vacancy thus occurring shall be filled in the regular manner for filling vacancies in the board.[3]

Corporation Act of 1874, Section 5, as amended by Acts of May 14, 1891, P. L. 61, and May 6, 1927, P. L. 828, 15 PS Sec. 43.

Comments:

1. Section 401 of the proposed Business Corporation Law requires only three directors in the case of general business corporations. This draft in accordance with the provisions of Section 502 of the proposed Banking Code, which are applicable to banks and bank and trust companies, requires five directors.

2. This draft requires that the directors be named in the articles. The Corporation Act of 1874, supra, likewise requires that the certificate of incorporation (articles) must set forth, inter alia: "the number of its directors and the names and residences of those who are chosen directors for the first year." The purpose of this requirement is merely to show an organization in proper form for incorporation, and not to restrict to the individuals named in the certificate, the personnel of the board of directors during the first year after the creation of the corporation. Accordingly, a Pennsylvania corporation, organized under the Corporation Act of 1874, may, during the first year, elect directors in place of those named in the certificate, Commonwealth et al. v Helms et al., 8 Pa. C. C. 410 (1890). This draft will make no change in the existing Pennsylvania practice.

As pointed out in the Uniform Act in the case of general corporate law, states are now divided between the practice of naming the first directors in the articles and the practice of having no directors until the first ones are elected after incorporation. The first practice seems preferable. Incorporators cease to be incorporators and become shareholders to the extent that their shares are full paid immediately upon incorporation. A corporation cannot act through its shareholders, but only through its board of directors; therefore it ought to be equipped with a board of directors the moment it comes into existence.

3. Under the existent laws, a director of a building and loan association need own no shares in the association. It seems desirable that a director should be a shareholder.

Section 403. Classification of Directors.—If the by-laws of an association so provide, the directors may be classified in respect to the time for which they shall severally hold office. In such case, each class shall be as nearly equal in number as possible, the term of office of at least one class shall expire in each year, and the members of a class shall not be elected for a shorter period than one year, or for a longer period than four years. At each ensuing election of directors after such classification, only the number of directors equal to the number of the class whose terms expire at the time of the election shall be elected, and such directors shall be elected for the longest term for which any class may have been elected as provided in this section.

Pennsylvania

Act of June 17, 1887, P. L. 411, Section 1, 15 PS Sec. 48.

Comments:

This proposed section corresponds to Section 403 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 503 of the proposed Banking Code. It is substantially similar to the Act of 1887, supra, which applies to all corporations of any kind formed under any law of this Commonwealth. A similar provision is contained in the laws of many states. The purpose of such classification is that the terms of all the directors shall not expire at the same time, the directors of one class only being elected each year.

While the Act of 1887, supra, permits classification of directors by a majority vote of the shareholders, this draft, like the laws of the other states, permits classification of the directors only if the articles or by-laws so provide. This draft, like the present acts of Pennsylvania and New Jersey, permits directors to be classified into four classes. Some states, particularly Delaware and Illinois, permit the classification of directors into not more than three classes. Also, the new general corporation act of Illinois permits classification of directors only if the corporation has nine or more directors.

Section 404. Meetings of Board of Directors; Notice Thereof.—A. The board of directors of every association shall hold a regular meeting at its place of business at least once in each month.[1] Meetings of the board of directors shall be held upon such notice as the by-laws may prescribe. Attendance of a director at any meeting shall constitute a waiver of notice of such meeting, except where a director attends a meeting for the express purpose of objecting to the transaction of any business because the meeting was not lawfully called or convened. Neither the business to be transacted at, nor the purpose of, any meeting need be specified in the notice or waiver of notice of such meeting.[2]

B. The board of directors shall keep complete records of their proceedings in a minute book kept for that purpose. When a director shall request it, the vote of each director upon a particular question shall be recorded in the minutes.[3]

Comments:

1. The existent law contains no requirement as to when meetings of directors shall be held. It seems clear that a proper safeguarding of the interests of shareholders of a building and loan association requires that its directors meet regularly. It certainly does ont seem to be imposing a hardship to require that they meet once a month. As a practical matter, the boards of most associations meet once a month. This corresponds to Section 505 of the proposed Banking Code. The requirement that regular meetings of the directors shall be held at the place of business of the association corresponds to the requirement of Section 203 of this draft.

2. The provision that attendance at a meeting constitutes a waiver of notice of such meeting correpsnods to Section 404 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 505 of the proposed Banking Code. A general provision that notice of any meeting of directors may be waived in writing by any director is contained in Section 10 of this draft.

3. This proposed subsection is based on Section 505 B of the proposed Banking Code.

Section 405. Compensation of Directors.—The directors of an association shall be entitled to such compensation for their services as directors as is provided in its articles or by-laws. A director may also be a salaried officer of the association.

Comments:

The Act of 1917, supra, authorizes directors of corporations to receive compensation for their services, and the Act of 1891, supra, authorizes salaried officers to serve as directors.

This proposed section corresponds to Section 506 of the proposed Banking Code and Section 401 of the proposed Business Corporation Law.

Section 406. Examination and Report by Board of Directors.—A. The board of directors of every association shall, at least once in each year, make or cause to be made by at least three of its members or by accountants employed for the purpose, a detailed examination of the books, papers, and affairs of the association and the loans thereof, with the special duty of ascertaining the safety and present value of the loans and investments of the association and the value of the collateral security, if any, held in connection with any loans, and into such other matters as the Department may require. The board of directors shall have the power to employ such assistants as they may deem necessary to make such examinations.

B. As soon as any such examination is completed, a detailed written report thereof, signed under oath or affirmation by the directors or certified to by the other persons making such examination, shall be sent to the Department. A copy thereof shall be placed on file in the association and properly noted on the minutes.

Comments:

This proposed section is based upon Section 507 of the proposed Banking Code. As a matter of actual practice, the boards of directors of most associations make annual examinations. This proposed section merely enacts into law the existing practice.

Section 407. Communications from Department of Banking.—Every official communication directed by the Department to an association, or to any officer thereof, shall be transmitted by the officer receiving it to the board of directors at the next meeting of such board and shall be duly noted in the minutes of such meeting.

Comments:

This proposed section corresponds to Section 508 of the proposed Banking Code and is new in Pennsylvania law. It is intended to assure the disclosure to the board of directors of any official communications received by an association or by any officer thereof.

Section 408. Disqualification of Directors.—If a director shall, for six successive months, or such shorter period as is established by the by-laws, fail to attend any of the regular meetings of an association, without having been, during such period excused by the board for such failure to attend, his office shall forthwith become vacant but he shall be eligible for re-election.

Comments:

This proposed section corresponds to Section 509 of the proposed Banking Code, except that it permits the by-laws to specify a shorter period than six months. This provision is introduced so that this draft will not affect the existent rule in many associations, the by-laws of which specify a three-month period.

Section 409. Officers of Associations; Removal; Compensation.—A. Every association shall have a president, a vice-president, a secretary, a treasurer, and a solicitor, and may have such additional officers as shall be provided for in the by-laws. Any two or more offices may be held by the same person except that the same person shall not at the same time be holder of more than one of the following offices: president, vice-president, secretary, treasurer, and solicitor; in addition, when an association has a conveyancer, the president, vice-president, secretary, or treasurer of an association shall not at the same time be the conveyancer of the association.[1]

B. The officers of an association shall be selected at least annually[2] by the board of directors, unless the by-laws provide a different method. The president, vice-president, secretary, treasurer, solicitor and conveyancer of an institution shall be required to be members of the board of directors of the association.[3]

C. Unless specifically provided otherwise in the by-laws, the board of directors shall fix the compensation of all officers.

D. Any officer may be removed by the board of directors whenever in its judgment the best interests of the association will be served thereby, but such removal shall be without prejudice to the contract rights, if any, of the person so removed.[4]

E. Unless specifically provided otherwise in the by-laws, the board of directors shall have the power to fill any vacancies created by the death, removal, resignation, or otherwise, of any officer.

F. The officers, as between themselves and the association, shall have such authority and perform such duties as shall be specified by the by-laws.

Building and Loan Associations

Act of April 29, 1909, P. L. 289, Section 1, amended by Act of July 5, 1917, P. L. 680.

Comments:

1. Section 5 of the Corporation Act of 1874, supra, applicable to all business corporations, provides that every corporation shall have "a president, * * * a secretary or clerk, a treasurer, and such other officers, agents, and factors as the corporation authorizes for that purpose, and nothing in any way contained shall be construed to prohibit the vice-president, treasurer, solicitor, or other officer of any corporation * * * from being a director of such corporation * * *" This proposed section like Section 510 of the proposed Banking Code, requires each association to have a vice president. This proposed section also requires each association to have a solicitor and conveyancer, both of which offices may be held by the same person. The activities of a building and loan association are such that it seems necessary to have an officer or officers to whom the duties of such offices may be assigned.

The provision as to which offices may be held by the same person corresponds exactly to the requirements of the Act of 1909, supra.

2. There is nothing in existing law which requires the election of officers annually. However, this seems a desirable provision and is therefore included in this draft. It is likewise included in Section 510 of the proposed Banking Code.

3. Section 5 of the Corporation Act of 1874, as amended, supra, provides that an officer may be a director of a corporation and may receive at the same time compensation for his services as such officer and as director. The Act of 1891, supra, provides that any vice-president, treasurer, or other salaried officer of a corporation may likewise be a director of such corporation. This proposed section provides that the president, vice-president, secretary, treasurer, solicitor, and conveyancer of an association must at the same time be directors of such association. It seems clearly desirable that the holders of the offices named, who actually have the day to day control of the affairs of an association, should also be members of the board of directors of such association. The proposed Banking Code likewise requires that the key officers of a bank or a bank and trust company shall be members of its board of directors.

4. The general rule is that officers selected by the directors may be removed by them without any cause being assigned, Brindley v. Walker, 221 Pa. 287 (1908); Spahn v. Bielefeld and Spahn Company, et al., 256 Pa. 543 (1917). If an officer lawfully elected has been improperly removed, mandamus will lie to prevent his further exclusion from office, Spahn v. Bielefeld and Spahn Company, supra; also, Riddell v. The Harmony Fire Company, 8 Phila. 310 (1871).

This provision corresponds ro Section 405 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 510 of the Proposed Banking Code.

Section 410. Bonds of Officers and Employes.—A. The officers and employes of every association, as well as any directors who are authorized to receive payments of moneys or to handle negotiable securities on behalf of such association, shall, before entering upon the performance of their duties, furnish to it bonds in such amount as is specified, with such corporate surety as is approved, by the directors. Such bond shall be conditioned upon the faithful performance of the duties of such officers or employes. The cost of such bonds may be paid by the association.

B. The Department shall have the power to require any such officer, employe, or director, at any time during his term of office or employment, to furnish a bond in an amount greater than that required by the board of directors, or it may require new or additional corporate surety.

Comments:

Under Section 5 of the Corporation Act of 1874, supra, the only officer of a corporation who is required to furnish bond is the treasurer. Most building and loan associations today likewise require bonds of their secretaries. Recent experience with defaulting building and loan officials seems to require a change in existing law. Consequently the provisions of this proposed section, which correspond to Section 512 of the proposed Banking Code, have been introduced.

Section 411. Women May Be Directors or Officers.—Women, married or single, may serve as officers or directors of an association.

Act of April 18, 1919, P. L. 67, 15 PS Sec. 593.

Comments:

In view of the doubt existing in Pennsylvania prior to the Act of 1919, as to the eligibility of a married woman to act as incorporator, director, or officer of a corporation, it seems advisable to include the provisions of the Act of 1919 in this draft. See Section 301, which makes married women eligible to be incorporators of building and loan associations.

This proposed section is based upon Section 408 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 513 of the proposed Banking Code.

Section 412. Relation of Directors and Officers to Association.—Officers and directors shall be deemed to stand in a fiduciary relation to an association, and shall discharge the duties of their respective positions in good faith and with that diligence, care, and skill which ordinarily prudent men would exercise under similar circumstances in like positions.

Uniform Act—Section 33, Michigan—Section 47.

Comments:

This proposed section corresponds to Section 407 in the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 514 of the proposed Banking Code. According to a note contained under this section in the Uniform Act, the section is necessary in view of the unsettled state of the case law upon the question of the relation of directors to the corporation. Some cases like the relation of directors to the corporation to that of a trustee to a cestui que trust (Bent v. Priest, 86 Mo. 475); other cases liken directors to mandataries (Spering's Appeal, 71 Pa. 11 (1872); The Citizens Building, Loan and Savings Association of Plainfield V. Coriell, et al., 34 N. J. Eq. 383 (1881); still other cases hold that directors are agents of the corporation (Ten Eyck v. R. R., 74 Mich. 227; Briggs v. Spaulding, 141 U. S. 132 (1891); Hun v. Carey, 82 N. Y. 65 (1880). There is a conflict also in the decisions as to whether directors should use that degree of care that the ordinary prudent man would use in his own business (Hun v. Carey, supra; Hanna v. Lyon, 179 N. Y. 107 (1904); Kavanaugh v. Commonwealth Trust Company, 223 N. Y. 103, or that amount of care that an ordinary prudent director would use (Briggs v. Spaulding, supra; Allen v. Roydhouse, 232 Fed. 1010 (1916); Stone v. Rottman, 183 Mo. 552 and Spering's Appeal, supra). The draftsman of the Uniform Act states that the weight of authority supports the rule adopted in this draft, and that this rule is the most fair and the most practicable.

This proposed section will effect a change in Pennsylvania law. In 1872, Judge Sharswood, in Spering's Appeal, supra, said: "It is by no means a well-settled point what is the precise relation which directors sustain to stockholders. They are undoubtedly said in many authorities to be trustees, but that as I apprehend is only in a general sense, as we term an agent or any bailee intrusted with the care and management of the property of another. It is certain that they are not technical trustees. They can only be regarded as mandataries—persons who have gratuitously undertaken to perform certain duties, and who are therefore bound to apply ordinary skill and diligence but no more."

It is held in Pennsylvania that directors receiving no compensation are required to exercise only ordinary skill and diligence, and are personally liable only for fraud or for such gross negligence as amounts to fraud, and for acts clearly ultra vires. Spering's Appeal, supra.

In Commonwealth v. Anchor Building and Loan Association, 20 Pa. Super. 101 (1902), it was stated: "This rule of law is based upon the fact that directors are gratuitous mandatories. * * * the insignificant payments to directors when attending meetings of the board, were not compensation and did not change the measure of duty and liability of the directors."

In Swentzel v. Penn Bank, 147 Pa. 140 (1892), Judge Paxson, in reiterating the rule of ordinary care laid down in Spering's Appeal, stated: "The ordinary care of a business man in his own affairs means one thing; the ordinary care of a gratuitous mandatory is quite another matter. The one implies an oversight and knowledge of every detail of his business; the other suggests such care only as a man can give in a short space of time to the business of other persons, from whom he receives no compensation. * * * care must be taken that we do not hold mere gratuitous mandatories to such a severe rule as to drive all honest men out of such positions."

From the foregoing, it is obvious that in Pennsylvania today a director is held to but the ordinary skill and diligence of a director in the business of the corporation and not to the ordinary skill and diligence which a man takes of his own business.

Section 413. Power of Attorney to Make Entries of Record.—A. Every association shall, by power of attorney filed of record in the office of the recorder of deeds in any county in which it may have occasion or in which it may be required to enter acknowledgment of payments, assignment, extension, postponement, release or satisfaction of, or to take any other action affecting the lien of any mortgage which appears upon the records in such office, designate a person or persons who shall be authorized in the name of such association to make such entries. The officer or employe of an association who has custody of the mortgage papers of such association shall not be designated to make such entries.

B. Such recorder of deeds shall not permit any person, other than the person or persons so designated to act in such manner for such association.

C. Any entry on any record in an office of a recorder of deeds, if made in violation of this act, shall be of no effect.

Act of May 24, 1921, P. L. 1071, Section 1, amended by Act of April 1, 1925, P. L. 102, 21 PS Sec. 626.

Comments:

This proposed section is a summary of the Act of 1921, as amended, supra, and corresponds to Section 515 of the proposed Banking Code except that this proposed section prohibits the treasurer or other officer who has custody of mortgage papers to act as attorney in fact to make entries. It does not seem desirable to permit a single person to fulfill these duties.

Section 414. Acceptance of Fee or Commission by Director, Officer, Attorney, or Employe.—A. A director, an officer, an attorney, or an employe of an association shall not stipulate for, or agree or assent to receive, or receive, any fee, commission gift, or other proporey of value from any corporation or person, for procuring or for endeavoring to procure for such corporation or person, or for any other corporation or pesons, any loan from, or any investment by, such association. This prohibition shall not be construed to affect the right of a solicitor or a conveyancer of a building and loan association to stipulate for or agree or assent to receive, or receive a reasonable fee or charge from any corporation or person for his services in making searches of title of real property offered to the association as security, or in drawing any papers incident to the loan for which such real property is given as security, or in performing similar duties or to affect the right of the officers, directors, or employes to stipulate for or agree or assent to receive a reasonable fee for examining and appraising real property offered as security for a mortgage loan.

B. Any director, officer, attorney, or employe of an association, who knowingly violates the provisions of this section, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction thereof, be subject to a fine not exceeding a sum equal to three times the amount of the value of the property, which he receives as such fee, commission, or gift. In addition he shall be disqualified from acting as a director, officer, attorney, or employe of any association within this Commonwealth, for a period of five years after the date of such conviction.

Comments:

In Welch v. Harrigan, 79 Pa. Super. 142 (1922), the Superior Court in a unanimous opinion held that a director of a building and loan association could not make a secret profit by obtaining a commission from a borrower from such association. In Quell V. Boyajian, 90 Pa. Super. 386 (1926), a unanimous court approved the decision of Welch v. Harrigan and again decided that an officer and director of an association could not legally make a secret profit by charging to a borrower of such association a commission for procuring for him the loan from the association. Judge Henderson, speaking for the court said, at Page 389:

"* * * The objection raised is not that there was any actual wrongdoing, but that the claim sought to be enforced is contrary to sound business principles and inconsistent with the good faith and loyalty to the company which is imposed on its officers and agents. The funds of a building and loan association are held in trust for the stockholders who generally speaking are investors of moderate amounts and who must necessarily commit their savings to the care of the officers of the association. The funds of the company are held for investment and the security of the investment depends on the value of the property with respect to the amount borrowed. It is manifest that the officers of the company sustain an important fiduciary relation. In acting for their principal, good faith requires that their interest should not be divided. The anicent principle that no man can serve two masters is still deeply rooted in the law. It has been held as a general rule that out of consideration of the weakness of human nature, the law will not permit real estate brokers and others occupying fiduciary relations to place themselves in a position where they are open to the claims of conflicting duties or to the claims of duties conflicting with self-interest: Wilkinson v. McCullough, 196 Pa. 205. The same principle is upheld in a long catalog of cases, English and American. It was said in Ex-parte Bennett, 10 Vesey 381, that "he that is intrusted with the interests of others cannot be allowed to make the business an object or interest to himself, because from a frailty of nature one who has the power will be too readily seized with the inclination to use the opportunity for serving his own interests at the expense of those for whom he is intrusted. The danger of temptation from the facility and advantage for wrongdoing which a particular situation affords does, out of the mere necessity, work a disqualification.' This case was cited with approval in Everhart v. Searle, 71 Pa. 256. Nor is it a matter of consequence that there was no fraud meditated and no injury done. The rule is not intended to be remedial of actual wrong, but preventive of the possibility of it. While the case last cited applied to the sale of real estate, the principle involved is far reaching. A clear and illuminating discussion of the general subject is found in the opinion of Justice Sadler in Allegheny By-Product Coke Co. v. J. H. Hillman et al., 275 Pa. 191, in which many authorities are cited supporting the general doctrine. A director of a corporation is a trustee for the stockholders, and an obligation of his office is that he give his best judgment to the interests which he represents uninfluenced by pecuniary profit to himself: Bird Coal & Iron Co. v. Humes, 157 Pa. 278; Keystone surgical supply Mfg. Co. v. Bate, 187 Pa. 460. In discussing the rule of good faith and the obligation of a director of a corporation to have an eye single to the welfare of the interests which he represents, the court said in Porter v. Healy, 244 Pa. 437, 'these general rules work no hardship to anyone, they simply mean that those intrusted with the management of a corporation must be above board, fair and honest with its stockholders in all matters concerning the common enterprise or its control, and that one so situated will not be permitted to "derive any personal profit or advantage by reason of his position, distinct from his co-shareholders."' * * *"

This opinion by Judge Henderson, involving the situation of the taking of commissions by an officer and director of a building and loan association, adequately states the compelling reasons of logic and equity which necessitate the prohbiitions contained in this proposed section. Section 414 of this draft requires that virtually every important officer of a building and loan association be a member of the board of directors. As a member of the board of directors, the argument against the accepting of commissions by officers for the placing of loans with their association becomes even more potent.

These opinions of the Superior Court are based upon doctrines which have always been considered axiomatic in the law of England and of this country. In the case of a building and loan association the doctrine applies with peculiar force. The shareholders of the average association are for the most part people of moderate means who must of necessity place great confidence in the officers and directors of their association. It is the fundamental duty of the Legislature to protect the interest of such shareholders to the greatest extent consistent with constitutional requirements.

The proposed Banking Code in Section 516 likewise prohibits the acceptance of fees, commissions, or gifts by directors, trustees, officers, or employes of a bank, bank and trust company, or savings bank, for the procuring of loans from or investments by the institution with which they are connected.

Section 415. Purchases from and Sales to Directors, Officers, Attorneys, or Employes.—A. An association shall not contract for or purchase from any of its directors, officers, attorneys, or employes, any securities or other property, unless such purchase is made in the regular course of business upon terms not less favorable to the association than those offered to any other corporation or person, unless such purchase could not be made from another reliable source at a more favorable price or upon more favorable terms, and unless such purchase is authorized by the vote of a majority of all the members of the board of directors, of such association, who are not interested in such transaction except in their capacity as directors of the association.

B. An association shall not sell securities or other property owned or held by it to any of its directors, officers, attorneys, or employes, unless such sale is made in the regular course of business upon terms not less favorable to the association than those offered to any other corporation or person, unless such sale could not be made elsewhere at a more favorable price or upon more favorable terms, and unless such sale is authorized by the vote of a majority of all the members of the board of directors of such association, who are not interested in such transaction except in their capacities as directors of the association.

C. For the purpose of this section, a purchase from or a sale to, a corporation of which any director, officer, attorney, or employe described in this section owns ten per centum or more of the outstanding shares, or a purchase from or a sale to, an unincorporated association of which any such director, officer, attorney, or employe, is a member shall be considered a purchase from or a sale to, such director, officer, attorney or employe.

D. Any director, officer, attorney, or employe of an association, who knowingly violates the provisions of this section, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction thereof, be subject to an imprisonment not exceeding one year, or a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or both; he shall also be subject to a further fine equal to any profit which he shall have made upon the transaction.

Comments:

This proposed section corresponds to Section 519 of the proposed Banking Code. Its purpose is obvious. It seems that a proper safeguarding of the interests of the shareholders of an association makes the inclusion of the provisions of this proposed section necessary. This proposed section does not prevent purchases and sales in which the directors and officers are either purchasers or vendors and conversely the association is either the purchaser or vendor. It merely attempts to prevent such sales or purchases to be made to the detriment of the association.

In general an individual stands in a very high fiduciary relationship to the association of which he is an officer or director. A sale of the assets of an individual to an estate of which he is a trustee, or a purchase by him of any of the assets of such estate has always been looked upon with suspicion by the law. There is certainly as much reason, if not more, for a careful circumscribing of the authority to engage in such transactions by the directors, officers, or employes of a building and loan association. Finally, it should certainly be the privilege of all the directors of a building and loan association to know of any business transaction being conducted between one of their number and the association.

ARTICLE V

MEETINGS, RIGHTS, AND LIABILITIES OF SHAREHOLDERS

Section 501. Meetings of Shareholders.—A. Meetings of the shareholders of an association shall be held within this Commonwealth[1] at such place as may be provided in the by-laws of the association. Unless the by-laws provide otherwise, all meetings of the shareholders shall be held at the place of business of the association.

B. The by-laws may provide for the number and the time of meetings of shareholders, but at least one regular meeting of the shareholders shall be held in each calendar year for the election of directors at such time as shall be provided in the by-laws.[2] If the annual meeting shall not be called and held within one month after the designated time, any shareholder shall have the power to call upon the Department to issue an order in the manner provided by law to compel the calling and holding of such meeting.[3]

C. Special meetings of shareholders may be called at any time by the president, the board of directors, the holders of not less than one-fifth of all the shares outstanding and entitled to vote at the particular meeting, and by such other officers or persons as may be provided in the articles or by-laws. At any time upon written request of any person entitled to call a special meeting, it shall be the duty of the secretary of the association to call a special meeting of the shareholders to be held at such time as the secretary of the association may fix, not less than ten nor more than sixty days after the receipt of the request. If the Secretary shall neglect or refuse to issue such call, the person or persons making the request shall have the power to call upon the Department to issue an order in the manner provided by law to compel the calling and hoding of such meeting.[4]

D. Any annual or special meeting may be adjourned for any period of time, but any meeting at which directors are to be elected shall be adjourned only from day to day until such directors have been elected.[5]

Comments:

1. Section 501 of the proposed Business Corporation Law provides that meetings may be held within or without the Commonwealth. This changes the existent Pennsylvania law. However, in the case of a building and loan association, it seems clear that it is undersirable to permit meetings of the shareholders to be held outside the Commonwealth. Section 601 of the proposed Banking Code has the same provision.

2. Section 501 of the proposed Business Corporation Law provides that failure to hold the annual meeting at the designated time shall not work any forfeiture or dissolution of the corporation. It is unnecessary to make any such provision in the case of a building and loan association, since the proposed Department of Banking Code provides for the rights of the Department upon the commission of any offense by an association. Consequently, this draft, like the proposed Banking Code, does not include such a provision.

3. Section 5 of the Corporation Act of 1874, supra, provides that the by-laws "shall prescribe the time and place of meeting of the corporation." Under existing law, directors are required to be elected annually, unless they are divided into different classes. See Sections 401 and 403 of this draft for election of directors.

4. Section 501 of the proposed Business Corporation Law provides that if the secretary shall neglect or refuse to issue a call for a special meeting, the person or persons making the request shall do so. However, in the case of a bank or a bank and trust company, it seems desirable to provide for such person or persons to call upon the Department to compel the calling of the meeting. The Department is the proper authority for the compelling of compliance with the laws regarding the business of a building and loan association. In addition, this provision will make more certain the Department's learning of undersirable practices by an association or its officers. This provision corresponds to a similar provision in Section 601 of the proposed Banking Code.

5. This provision is substantially similar to Section 501 D of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 601 D of the proposed Banking Code both of which are taken from Section 27 (III) of the Uniform Act and expresses the general rule on adjournments of meetings of shareholders. See Savidge on Pa. Corps., Volume 1, Section 729, Page 596. The provision relating to the adjournment of meetings called for the purpose of electing directors is intended to insure the election of directors by preventing indefinite adjournments.

Section 502. Notice of Meetings of Shareholders.[1]—Written notice of every meeting of the shareholders of an association shall be given by, or at the direction of, the person authorized to call the meeting, to each shareholder of record entitled to vote at the meeting, at least five days prior to the day named for the meeting, unless a greater period of notice is required elsewhere in this act.[2] The notice shall specify the place, day, and hour of the meeting, and, in the case of a special meeting, the general nature of the business to be transacted. When a meeting is adjourned it shall not be necessary to give any notice of the adjourned meeting or of the business to be transacted at an adjourned meeting, other than by announcement at the meeting at which such adjournment is taken, unless otherwise provided in the by-laws.

Comments:

1. There is no general statutory provision in Pennsylvania on the subject of notice. Particular statutes prescribe the period of notice required of meetings called for increasing capital stock or indebtedness, for amending charters, or for merger or consolidation proceedings, and the like.

Generally speaking, the by-laws, in the absence of statutory regulation, usually provide how much notice shall be given in advance of a meeting. If the statute and the by-laws are silent on the subject, the notice must be given a reasonable time before the day of the meeting. The Mercantile Library Hall Company v. The Pittsburgh Library Association, et al., 173 Pa. 30 (1896). This proposed section, which follows Section 502 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 602 of the proposed Banking Code, prescribes a minimum period of five days.

Unless unusual business is to be transacted, it is not necessary for notice of a regular meeting to specify the character of the business to be transacted. Bagley v. Reno Oil Company, 201 Pa. 78 (1902). Unless the by-laws otherwise provide, shareholders are not entitled to any notice of an adjourned meeting other than that implied in the adjournment. Savidge on Pa. Corps., Volume 1, Section 729.

Section 10 of this draft permits the waiver of notice of a shareholders' meeting.

2. The details as to notice which are contained in Section 502 of the proposed Business Corporation Law are omitted in this proposed section, since Section 8 of this draft contains general provisions on notice applicable to all sections in this draft in which notice is required. This same procedure is followed in the proposed Banking Code.

Section 503. Quorum of Shareholders.—A shareholders' meeting duly called shall not be organized for the transaction of business unless a quorum is present. Unless otherwise provided in the by-laws:

(1) The presence in person, or by proxy, of the holders of a majority of the outstanding shares entitled to vote shall constitute a quorum.[1]

(2) The shareholders present at a duly organized meeting can continue to do business until adjournment notwithstanding the withdrawal of enough shareholders to leave less than a quorum.[2]

(3) If a meeting cannot be organized because a quorum has not attended, those present may, except as otherwise provided in this act, adjourn the meeting to such time and place as they may determine, but in the case of any meeting called for the election of directors, those who attend the second of such adjourned meetings, although less than a quorum as fixed in this section or in the articles, shall nevertheless constitute a quorum for the purpose of electing directors.[3]

Pennsylvania

Corporation Act of 1874, Section 6, 15 PS Sec. 60.

Comments:

1. This proposed section is in general based upon Section 503 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 603 of the proposed Banking Code. However, those sections effect a change in Section 6 of the Corporation Act of 1874, supra. Section 6 of the Corporation Act of 1874 provides that if any number of shares, other than a majority, are to constitute a quorum in the case of a particular corporation, such provision shall be contained in the by-laws, while the proposed Business Corporation Law and the proposed Banking Code provide that such a change shall be stated in the articles. The by-laws of virtually every existing association contain a provision stating that a number of shares much less than a majority shall be sufficient to constitute a quorum. The reasons for this is that, unlike the ordinary business or banking corporation, the shareholders of a building and loan association customarily evince little interest in its affairs and only rarely attend any meetings. They consider themselves more in the light of depositors in a bank than of shareholders in a corporation. It seems desirable, therefore, to continue the provisions of Section 6 of the Corporation Act of 1874 in this draft, rather than to copy the provisions of Section 503 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 603 of the proposed Banking Code.

2. This provision is identical with Section 503 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 603 of the proposed Banking Code, which are taken from Section 30 of the Uniform Act, and is consistent with the Pennsylvania view that a meeting properly constituted cannot be deprived of the right to transact the business for which it was called by the refusal of certain members present to participate therein, or by their capricious withdrawal. Commonwealth v. Vandergrift, 232 Pa. 53 (1911); Lutz V. Webster 249 Pa. 226 (1915). A few other states, representing the minority view on this point, hold that there must be a quorum present at the time of voting. Bridgers v. Staton, 150 N. C. 216.

3. This provision is likewise the same as Section 503 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 603 of the proposed Banking Code which are taken from Section 30 (II) (c) of the Uniform Act. The purpose of this provision is to insure the election of directors by preventing indefinite adjournments, or by preventing the majority from defeating a quorum by failing to attend the meeting. Without the latter part of this provision, an intrenched board of directors could prevent the holding of an election.

As pointed out in a note to the Uniform Act, the provisions of this subdivision should accelerate the settlement of controversies over management and accord to any minority group of shareholders the right of such preferential representation on the board of directors as their shares entitle them to. It is provided by statute in New York (Section 30, G. C. L.), that if directors are not elected at a regular meeting, a special meeting may be called, and at such special meeting "the members attending shall constitute a quorum."

Section 504. Shareholders May Vote in Person or by Proxy.[1] Every shareholder of record of an association shall have the right, at every shareholders' meeting, to one vote for every share standing in his name on the books of the association. Every shareholder may vote either in person or by proxy executed in writing by the shareholder, or by his duly authorized attorney in fact, and filed with the secretary of the association. A proxy, unless coupled with an interest, shall be revocable at will notwithstanding any other agreement or any provision in the proxy to the contrary, but the revocation of a proxy shall not be effective until notice thereof has been given to the secretary of the association. No unrevoked proxy shall be valid after eleven months from the date of its execution, unless coupled with an interest. A proxy shall not be revoked by the death or incapacity of the maker unless before the vote is counted or the authority is exercised, written notice of such death or incapacity is given to the secretary of the association.[2] A shareholder shall not sell his vote or execute a proxy to any person for any sum of money or anything of value.

Comments:

1. This proposed section of the draft is almost the same as Section 504 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 604 of the proposed Banking Code, both of which are modelled on Section 28 (IV) of the Uniform Act, and is substantially similar to the Act of 1903, supra, except that it changes the time limit on proxies and except that it no longer requires a witness to a proxy. Under existing law, the statutory time limit of a proxy is two months. Under the Uniform Act, the validity of a proxy that contains no time limit will automatically expire in eleven months, but a definite time limit contained in the proxy will be given effect up to, but not exceeding, three years. The proposed Business Corporation Law and the proposed Banking Code both contain a similar provision. However, this draft omits the three-year provision. This seems too long a period in the case of a building and loan association.

2. Section 504 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 604 of the proposed Banking Code except from the provision that every share shall be entitled to one vote, any different rule established elsewhere in that act or in the articles of a particular corporation. This is omitted in this draft since every share in a building and loan association shall have the same rights as every other share, see Section 603 of this draft.

Section 505. Election of Directors; Cumulative Voting.—Unless otherwise provided in the by-laws, elections for directors need not be by ballot, except upon demand made by a shareholder at the election and before the voting begins. In all elections for directors, every shareholder shall have the right, in person or by proxy, to multiply the number of votes to which he may be entitled by the number of directors to be elected, and he may cast his whole number of such votes for one candidate or he may distribute them among any two or more candidates. The candidates receiving the highest number of votes up to the number of directors to be chosen shall be elected.

Comments:

In Pennsylvania, the right to cumulative voting is conferred and guaranteed by Article XVI, Section 4, of the Constitution. This right is also expressly conferred by the Act of 1876, supra. This proposed section is the same as Section 505 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 605 of the proposed Banking Code which is taken from Section 28 (III) of the Uniform Act.

Section 506. Voting by Trustees and Pledgees.—Shares of an association held in a fiduciary capacity by a fiduciary appointed by last will and testament or by decree of the orphans' court shall be voted by such fiduciary, either in person or by proxy, in the manner and under the circumstances provided by law.[1] Shares standing in the name of a fiduciary other than one appointed by last will and testament or by decree of the orphans' court, or shares held by an assignee for the benefit of creditors, or by a receiver, may be voted by such fiduciary, assignee, or receiver, either in person or by proxy. A shareholder whose shares are pledged to anyone other than the association shall be entitled to vote thereon, in person or by proxy, until the shares have been transferred on the books of the association to the pledgee, and thereafter the pledgee shall be entitled to vote the shares in person or by proxy.[2] A shareholder whose shares are pledged to the association shall be entitled to vote such shares in person or by proxy.[3]

Comments:

1. The voting of shares by fiduciaries, subject to the orphans' court, is now covered by Section 43 of the Fiduciaries Act of 1917, which is a restatement of Section 1 of the Act of 1905, supra, which formerly governed the voting of shares by all fiduciaries. The Fiduciaries Act repealed the Act of 1905 only in so far as it related to fiduciaries subject to the jurisdiction of the orphans' court, as the "act of 1905 is apparently intended to include trustees appointed by the common pleas, though it makes no provision as to trustees appointed by deed." Report of Commission Appointed to Codify and Revise the Law of Decedents' Estates (1917) Page 209.

While practically all corporation statutes have provisions covering voting rights of fiduciaries, Section 43 of the Fiduciaries Act of 1917 was not embodied in this draft, as it was deemed unwise to mutilate that act, but in order to preclude the interpretation that this act implied by amendment the Fiduciaries Act, it has been expressly incorporated into this act by reference.

This proposed section corresponds to Section 506 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 606 of the proposed Banking Code.

2. This provision is taken from Section 28 (V) of the Uniform Act, and makes a change in existing law. Section 3 of the Act of 1893, supra, directs that as between the pledgee and pledgor of shares, the pledgor shall be entitled to vote the shares unless the agreement provides otherwise. Under the Uniform Act, and this draft, the pledgor may vote the shares as long as they are registered in his name on the books of the bank or bank and trust company, otherwise, the pledgee may vote them.

3. Unlike Section 506 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 606 of the proposed Banking Code, this proposed section provides that a shareholder whose shares are pledged to the association shall be entitled to vote such shares. This is necessitated by the fundamental building and loan practice of granting loans to shareholders on the collateral of their shares in the association.

Section 507. Voting by Joint Holders of Shares.—Where shares of an association are held jointly by more than one corporation or person, the will of the majority of such joint holders shall control the manner of voting or the giving of a proxy. If the shares are held jointly by two or any other even number of corporations or persons, and a majority does not agree to vote one way, the shares shall not be voted. If only one of the joint holders is present in person or by proxy, he shall have the right to vote all such shares, and all of the shares standing in the names of such corporations or persons shall be deemed to be represented for the purpose of determining a quorum. The same shall be true in the case of fiduciaries, other than those appointed by last will and testament or by decree of the orphans court, unless such fiduciaries have been appointed under an instrument or a decree of court which directs otherwise. Where in any case, such fiduciaries are equally divided upon the manner of voting the shares jointly held by them it shall be lawful for the court of common pleas, upon petition filed by any of the fiduciaries, or by any beneficiary, to direct the voting of such shares in the manner which, in the opinion of the court, will be for the best interests of the parties beneficially interested in the shares.

Where shares of an association are held jointly in a fiduciary capacity by two or more fiduciaries appointed by last will and testament or by decree of the orphans' court, they shall be voted in the manner and under the circumstances provided by law.

Comments:

The provisions of this proposed section relating to voting by joint holders, other than fiduciaries, were taken from Section 320 (c) of the new California act. Shares standing in the name of a firm on the books of a building and loan association may be voted by any partner, but if the partners disagree as to the vote, neither can vote the shares. The same is true where shares are owned by two or more persons jointly, Fletcher Cyclopedia Corporations (Permanent Edition), Volume 5, Section 2038; Savidge on Pa. Corps., Volume 1, Section 758.

In regard to executors, administrators, guardians, and trustees, the Act of 1905, supra, and Section 43 of the Fiduciaries Act of 1917, permit a majority of such fiduciaries to determine how shares held jointly by them may be voted. The Act of 1905 was repealed by the Fiduciaries Act of 1917 in so far as it related to fiduciaries under the jurisdiction of the orphans' court. Accordingly, the Act of 1905 now applies only to trustees appointed by deed or by the court of common pleas. This distinction is maintained by this section of the draft by specific reference to existing law.

The provision authorizing a petition to the common pleas court by fiduciaries in a deadlock is similar to a provision in Section 43 of the Fiduciaries Act of 1917, permitting fiduciaries who cannot agree to petition the orphans' court for advice.

This proposed section corresponds to Section 507 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 607 of the proposed Banking Code.

Section 508. Voting Shares Held by a Corporation.—An association or other corporation owning shares in an association or in any other corporation may vote them by its president, or by proxy appointed by him, unless some other person, by resolution of its board of directors, shall be appointed to vote such shares, in which case such person shall be entitled to vote the shares upon the production of a certified copy of such resolution.

Comments:

This proposed section is based upon Section 508 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 608 of the proposed Banking Code which deals with voting of shares in one corporation held by another corporation. This proposed section deals with the case of a building and loan association, or any other corporation, which owns shares in a building and loan association; it likewise deals with the case of shares in any other corporation owned by a building and loan association. Both these provisions seem necessary in order to supplement the provision of the proposed Business Corporation Law.

Section 508 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 608 of the proposed Banking Code are substantially similar to Subsections (VI) and (VII) of Section 28 of the Uniform Act, and are practically the same as the Act of 1901, supra, which provides that a corporation which owns the stock of another corporation "may exercise all the rights, powers and privileges of ownership, including the right to vote thereon."

Section 509. Determination of Shareholders of Record.—A. Unless the by-laws otherwise provide, the board of directors of an association may fix a time, not less than ten or more than forty days, prior to the date of any meeting of shareholders, as a record date for the determination of the shareholders entitled to notice of, and to vote at, any such meeting. In such case, only the shareholders of record on the date so fixed shall be entitled to notice of, and to vote at, such meeting, notwithstanding any transfer of any shares on the books of the association after any record date fixed, as aforesaid. The board of directors may close the books of the association against transfers of shares during the whole or any part of such period, and in such case written or printed notice thereof shall be given at least ten days before the closing thereof to each shareholder of record at the address appearing on the records of the association or supplied by him to such association for the purpose of notice. While the stock transfer or other books of such association are closed, no transfer of shares shall be made thereon.[1] Unless a record date is fixed by the by-laws or the board of directors for the determination of shareholders entitled to receive notice of, or to vote at, a shareholders' meeting, transferees of shares which are transferred on the books of the association within ten days next preceding the date of such meeting shall not be entitled to notice of or to vote at such meeting.[2] Nothing herein contained shall be deemed to abridge the constitutional requirement of sixty days' notice of a meeting called for the purpose of increasing the authorized capital stock of an association incorporated prior to the effective date of this act or to deprive anyone who was a shareholder of record sixty days prior to such meeting of his right to vote at such meeting.[3]

B. Holders of matured shares, or holder of shares which have been voluntarily or involuntarily withdrawn, or holders of shares who have not assented to or have dissented from a merger or a consolidation, shall be entitled to notice of, and to vote at, any meeting of shareholders, until they shall have been paid in full the amount lawfully due them on account of their shares. The exercise of such rights to vote at a meeting shall not constitute waiver of, or in any way affect, any rights granted by law to such shareholders by virtue of the maturing of their shares, or of their withdrawal from the association, either voluntarily or involuntarily, or of their failure to assent to, or their dissent from, a plan of merger or consolidation.[4]

C. Shareholders whose shares have been issued less than sixty days prior to the date of a meeting,[5] or shareholders who are in default for a period of at least ninety days in the payment of dues, interest, premiums, fines, or other lawful charge[6] made by or due to the association shall not be permitted to vote such shares at any meeting of the association.

Pennsylvania

Act of April 30, 1929, P. L. 903, 15 PS Secs. 140-142.

Comments:

1. This proposed section is, in so far as possible, based upon Section 709 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 609 of the proposed Banking Code. However, since a building and loan association does not have the complicated capital structure of other corporations, all mention of changes or conversions in shares, et cetera, has been omitted.

This part of this proposed section is taken in part from Section 28 (I) of the Uniform Act, and is substantially similar to the Act of 1929, supra.

2. This provision is taken by the proposed Business Corporation Law and the proposed Banking Code from the new Indiana and Michigan corporation acts, and appears to be desirable in view of Section 502 of this draft, which provides that a shareholder must receive at least five days' notice of a shareholders' meeting.

3. This provision appears necessary in view of Article XVI, Section 7, of the Constitution of Pennsylvania, which requires sixty days' notice to be given of a meeting called to consider an increase of the capital stock or indebtedness of a corporation. In this respect, the Act of 1929, supra, provides "No transfer or transfers of shares of such corporations, within sixty days of any election or meeting of stockholders, shall deprive the holder of said shares of the right to vote in respect of the same at such election or meeting, if otherwise entitled thereto."

4. Since the classes of shareholders designated in this proposed subsection shall have their financial interest in the affairs of the association, it seems necessary to accord to them a voice in managing the affairs of the association. This proposed subsection therefore provides that until such shareholders have been paid in full they shall continue to have the right to vote at meetings.

The saving sentence is included in order to preclude any interpretation that an exercise of such voting right acts as a waiver of their rights, respectively, as the holders of withdrawn or matured shares or as nonassenting or dissenting shareholders.

5. Since in a building and loan association shares may be issued at any time and to any amount, it would be possible to control an election by issuing installment shares ten days prior to any meeting, and then to withdraw them immediately after the meeting. This proposed subsection adds a safeguard against such procedure, which although not conclusive, seems to be the furthest step which can reasonably be taken to guard against such a practice.

6. It seems clear that where a shareholder has been in default on his shares for a period of ninety days, he should no longer be permitted to exercise the right to vote, unless he pays the amount to which he is in arrears.

Section 510. Judges of Election.—A. In advance of any meeting of shareholders of an association, the board of directors may appoint judges of election to act at such meeting or any adjournment thereof. If judges of election be not so appointed, the chairman of any such meeting may, and on the request of any shareholder or his proxy shall, make such appointment at the meeting. The number of judges shall be one or three. If appointed at a meeting on the request of one or more shareholders or proxies, the majority of shares present shall determine whether one or three judges are to be appointed. No person who is a candidate for office shall act as a judge.

B. In case any person appointed as judge fails to appear or fails or refuses to act, the vacancy may be filled by appointment made by the board of directors in advance of the convening of the meeting, or at the meeting by the person or officer acting as chairman.

C. The judges of election shall determine the number of shares outstanding and the voting power of each, the shares represented at the meeting, the existence of a quorum, the authenticity, validity, and effect of proxies, receive votes or ballots, hear and determine all challanges and questions in any way arising in connection with the right to vote, count and tabulate all votes, determine the result, and do such acts as may be proper to conduct the election or vote with fairness to all shareholders. The judges of election shall perform their duties impartially, in good faith, to the best of their ability, and as expeditiously as is practical. If there be three judges of election, the decision, act, or certificate of a majority shall be effective in all respects as the decision, act, or certificate of all.

D. On request of the chairman of the meeting, or of any shareholder or his proxy, the judges shall make a report in writing of any challenge or question or matter determined by them, and execute a certificate of any fact found by them. Any report or certificate made by them shall be prima facie evidence of the facts stated therein.

Comments:

This proposed section corresponds to Section 512 of the proposed Corporation Law and Section 612 of the proposed Banking Code, which are substantially similar to Section 321 (b) of the new California general corporation act. It changes existing law in that (1) judges need not be appointed unless those participating in a meeting desire them, (2) the judges are not required to go through the formality of taking an oath, and they are not subject to penalties prescribed in the election laws.

Under the Act of 1903, supra, three judges are required, and under the Act of 1874 they must take an oath and are subject to all the penalties imposed by law on election officers for the violation of their duties.

QUERY: Is it desirable to deviate from the general corporation law in the case of building and loan associations and require judges of election?

Section 511. Informal Action by Shareholders.—Except for the action required by this act for increasing the capital of an association incorporated prior to the effective date of this act, any action required by this act to be taken at a meeting of the shareholders may be taken without a meeting, if a consent in writing, setting forth the action so taken, shall be signed by all of the shareholders who would be entitled to vote at a meeting for such purpose and shall be filed with the secretary of the association.

This proposed section corresponds to Section 513 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 613 of the proposed Banking Code which are substantially similar to Section 146 of the new Illinois act. The exception is necessary in view of Article XVI, Section 7 of the Constitution of Pennsylvania, which provides: "The stock and indebtedness of corporations shall not be increased * * * without the consent of the persons holding the larger amount in value of the stock, first obtained at a meeting to be held after sixty days notice * * *." Comments:

This porposed section differs from existing law and from Section 514 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 614 of the proposed Banking Code. Under the Corporation Act of 1874, supra, and under the proposed Business Corporation Law and the proposed Banking Code, a shareholder of any corporation is personally liable for the salary or wages due to the laborers and employes of such association. This liability is omitted in this draft. In the case of almost all building and loan associations, virtually the only salaries or wages are those which are paid to the officers of the association. Considering the peculiar nature of shareholding in building and loan associations it does not seem either logical or equitable to provide that the shareholders should be personally liable for the salaries of the officers of the association.

ARTICLE VI

CREATION, TRANSFER, WITHDRAWAL, AND MATURITY OF SHARES

Section 601. Authorized Capital; Par Value of Shares and Change Therein.—A. Unless specifically otherwise provided in the articles of an association, the number of shares which it may issue shall be unlimited.[1]

B. The shares of an association shall have a par value of not less than one hundred dollars each nor more than two hundred dollars each, but every share issued by an association shall have the same par value as every other share.[2] This provision shall not affect the right of any association which prior to the effective date of this act has issued shares of a par value less than one hundred dollars or more than two hundred dollars to continue issuing shares of such par value, nor shall it affect the right of any association which upon the effective date of this act has issued and outstanding shares of more than one par value to continue to issue such shares.[3]

Any association may be amending its articles in the manner prescribed by this act, change the par value of its shares, but such change shall not be to an amount less than one hundred dollars each nor more than two hundred dollars each. Whenever such change in par value is made, every holder of a share for which a share certificate has been issued shall return such share certificate to the association, and upon the surrender and cancellation of such share certificate, the association shall issue to such shareholder the proper number of share certificates at the new par value.[4]

C. An association may issue fractional shares.[5]

Building and Loan Associations

Corporation Act of 1874, Section 37, Clause 2, 15 PS Sec. 911.

Comments:

1. Section 37 of the Corporation Act of 1874, supra, provides that the capital stock of an association shall not consist of more than one million dollars. In actual practice this limitation is no longer enforced, since it has been interpreted that the Act of 1901, supra, which permits the capital stock of any corporation to be increased without limitation supersedes Section 37 of the Corporation Act of 1874. This draft therefore provides that except as otherwise provided in the articles, the number of shares which may be issued by an association shall be unlimited. In the case of any association which has a specified capital in its articles, it may amend its articles in the regular manner provided by this act to permit an unlimited issuance of shares. This is the provision in the laws of numerous other states, for example Massachusetts. There seems to be no reason for continuing the provisions of the Corporation Act of 1874, since there is no capital stock tax or bonus on the shares of an association, and since the sale of shares by an association is very much in the nature of the acceptance of deposits by a savings bank.

2. Section 37 of the Corporation Act of 1874, supra, provides that the shares of an association shall have a par value not exceeding five hundred dollars each. In actual practice, however, there is only one association in the Commonwealth which issues shares of a par value exceeding two hundred dollars. There are no associations in this Commonwealth issuing installment shares of a par value less than one hundred dollars. Therefore, this proposed section is enacting into law what is virtually the universal practice. However, in the case of the single association which issues shares of a par value exceeding two hundred dollars, this proposed section specifically provides that it may continue doing so. This seems desirable in order to preclude the necessity of a complete reorganization of that association.

There is no provision in existing law requiring that every share of an association have the same par value as every other share, although this is provided with respect to banks and bank and trust companies in the proposed Banking Code. There is very good reason for the inclusion of such a limitation in the case of building and loan associations. The nature of building and loan associations is such that it is desirable to keep their financial set-up as simple as possible. However, there are three associations in the Commonwealth which at the present time place a different par value upon their full paid shares from their installment shares. It does not seem desirable to require a complete reorganization of the financial set-up of such an association and therefore this draft permits them to continue this practice.

3. See footnote 2, supra.
4. This provision corresponds to a similar provision in Section 408 of the proposed Banking Code.
5. Section 37, Clause 4 of the Corporation Act of 1874 provides "That a stockholder may borrow such fractional part of the amount fixed by charter as the full value of a share, as the by-laws may provide." This seems to contemplate the issuance of fractional shares, in order that the maturity value of the shares pledged shall have exactly the same value as the loan. This is the uniform practice followed by building and loan associations in this Commonwealth.

Section 602. Issuances of Shares; Series.—A. The shares of an association may be issued in a single series, they may be issued in any number of series, or they may be issued non-serially, at such times and in such manner as shall be stated in the articles or by-laws of the association.[1] Except as otherwise specifically provided in the articles or by-laws of an association, the number of shares which it may issue in a single series shall be unlimited.[2]

B. Except as otherwise specifically provided in the articles of an association, the issuance of shares of a new series shall operate to close the prior series and the association shall not thereafter issue any share in such prior series.[3]

C. Except as otherwise specifically provided in the articles of an association, shares which have been withdrawn, whether voluntarily or involuntarily, or shares which have been cancelled, whether because of failure to pay dues, installments, fines, premiums, or for any other reason, shall not, after the holders of such shares have received full payment or credit due them on such shares, be reissued nor new shares issued in their stead.[4]

Building and Loan Associations

Corporation Act of 1874, Section 37, Clause 2, 15 PS Sec. 911.

Comments:

1. This provision is based upon the Corporation Act of 1874, supra.
2. The Corporation Act of 1874, supra, provides that "no such series shall at any issue exceed in the aggregate five hundred thousand dollars." As a matter of actual practice, however, this limitation is almost meaningless. An association could under the Corporation Act of 1874 issue a series consisting of shares of an aggregate par value of five hundred thousand dollars in the morning and new series for a like amount in the afternoon. Under Section 601 of this draft, the number of shares which an association may issue is unlimited. Therefore there can be no reason for the continuance of the prohibition upon the aggregate amount of a single series.
3. This provision is new in Pennsylvania law. Since the number of shares which an association may issue is unlimited and since the number of shares which may be issued in a single series is unlimited, there is no reason for an association to issue shares of a prior series after a new series is created. It is desirable to keep the financial structure of an association as simple as possible, and the effect of this provision will be conducive to producing this result. However, this draft permits any association which wishes to continue this practice to do so if it is specifically authorized in its articles.
4. This provision is new in Pennsylvania law. The practice of building and loan associations in the past has been to reissue shares which have been withdrawn or forfeited, or to issue new shares in lieu thereof, in order to maintain the maximum authorized capital stock of the association. Since Section 601 of this draft permits associations to issue an unlimited number of shares, the reason for the continuation of such practice disappears. However, this draft permits individual associations still desiring to reissue withdrawn or cancelled shares, or to issue new shares in lieu thereof, to continue to do so, provided that the association is specifically so authorized in its articles.

Section 603. Prohibition on Preferred Shares; Shares as Personal Property.—A. An association shall not issue preferred shares.[1]

B. Shares of an association shall be deemed personal property.[2]

Comments:

1. This provision merely enacts into law the universal practice in the case of building and loan associations in this Commonwealth. A few states follow various plans, such as the plan in California under which associations issue guarantee shares which really constitute the capital of such association. Pennsylvania is the birthplace of building and loan associations in this country. Since the very beginning of building and loan associations in this Commonwealth, the present plan, under which an association is fundamentally mutual and issues no preferred shares has been followed in this draft. It dose not seem desirable to deviate from this principle.
2. Shares of corporations are uniformly recognized in Pennsylvania as personal property. Section 601 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 407 of the proposed Banking Code likewise provide that shares of an association shall be deemed personal property.

Section 604. Membership Fees.—An association may charge a membership fee not exceeding one per centum of the par value of each share issued. Where a membership fee is charged, it shall be paid in cash at the time of the subscription, and a receipt shall be given to the subscriber for the amount thereof. All membership fees so paid shall be credited to the general profit account of the association and shall not be credited, as dues, in the pass book or other receipt issued to the shareholder.

Comments:

This proposed section substantially reenacts the provisions of the Act of 1927, supra, but does not mention withdrawal fees. Withdrawals fees are considered in Section 612 of this draft.

Section 605. Payments for Installment, Full-Paid, and Prepaid Shares.—An association may issue shares under any or all of the following plans of payment:

(1) Shares, the par value of which is to be paid in part by periodical payments in cash at such times and in such amounts as shall be established by the articles or by-laws and in part by accrual of earnings on such shares. Such periodical payments shall be known as dues and such shares shall be known as installment shares.

(2) Shares, the par value of which has been paid by a single cash payment at the time of their issuance. Such shares shall be known as full-paid shares.

(3) Shares, the par value of which has been paid in part by a single cash payment at the time of their issuance and in part by accrual of earnings on such shares. Such shares shall be known as prepaid shares.

Building and Loan Associations

Corporation Act of 1874, Section 37, Clause 2, 15 PS Sec. 911.

Comments:

This proposed section enacts into law specific provisions covering the three types of shares which as a matter of practice are issued today by building and loan associations in this Commonwealth. The Corporation Act of 1874, supra, contains provisions governing installment shares, but does not define or provide for the payments on prepaid or full-paid shares. The statutory law, it seems, should, as does this proposed section, clearly define each type of share and the method of payment therefor.

In the case of dues on installment shares, the Corporation Act of 1874, supra, provides that no installment may exceed two dollars. As a matter of practice, this provision of the Corporation Act of 1874 has been completely ignored by associations which have adopted the optional-payment plan. Therefore, this draft does not establish any maximum limitation, but leaves this to the discretion of the Department to be exercised by it in approving or disapproving the articles or by-laws of an association.

Section 606. Lien on Installment Shares.—Every installment share shall be subject to a lien for the payment of unpaid dues and for the payment of any other charges which are incurred on such shares under the provisions of the articles or by-laws of the association. The by-laws may prescribe the manner of enforcing such lien.

Comments:

This proposed section is substantially similar to the Corporation Act of 1874, supra.

Section 607. Share Certificates; Issuance and Preservation.—A. Every association shall furnish to each holder or record of an installment share a copy of the by-laws of the association and of all amendments thereto, and a receipt, by pass book or otherwise, for all dues, premiums, fines, or other payments made to the association by him, but an association shall not be required to issue a share certificate to any holder of an installment share.[1]

B. Every association shall furnish to each holder of record of a prepaid[2] or a full-paid share a share certificate,[3] which shall state:[4]

(1) That the association is incorporated under the laws of this Commonwealth.

(2) The name of the registered holder of the shares represented thereby.

(3) The date of the issuance of the shares[5]

(4) The type of shares which the certificate represents, that is whether they are prepaid or full-paid.[6]

(5) The number of shares which the certificate represents.

(6) The par value of each share represented, and, in the case of prepaid shares, the amount of the single cash payment made on each share by the shareholder.[7]

C. Every share certificate shall be signed by the president and the secretary, or by such officers as the by-laws may provide, and sealed with the corporate seal. In case any officer who has signed any share certificate shall have ceased to be such officer because of death, resignation, or otherwise, before the certificate is issued it may be issued with the same effect as if the officer had not ceased to be such at the date of its issue.[8]

D. Share certificates shall bear printed consecutive numbers and shall be issued from a bound share certificate book, containing a stub for each certificate. Each stub shall bear the same number as the share certificate which was attached to it, the name and address of the person in whose name the share certificate is issued, the number of shares represented by the certificate, and the date of the issuance of the certificate. The president and the secretary, or such officers as the by-laws provide, shall certify on each stub that the information contained thereon is correct and in accordance with the share certificate bearing the same number.[9]

E. Upon the withdrawal of prepaid or full-paid shares and upon payment by the association, the certificate representing such shares shall be surrendered to the association and preserved by it indefinitely.[10] Likewise, any share certificate for which the association has issued a substitute certificate, or which for any other reason has been surrendered to the association, shall be preserved by it indefinitely.

Comments:

1. The Act of 1907, supra, provides that every building and loan association shall furnish to each shareholder a receipt in full by pass book or otherwise for all moneys received. This draft substantially reenacts the provisions of that act, except that it specifically sets out all the types of payment for which receipts must be given, in order to preclude any doubt on the question.

Building and loan associations do not today, as a matter of practice, issue share certificates for installment shares. Therefore, this proposed section provides that an association shall not be required to issue such certificates for such shares. However, it does not prohibit any association from doing so if it so desires.

2. Althought the Act of 1927, supra, was passed to provide specifically for share certificates of building and loan associations, it refers only to certificates for full-paid shares. However, it is probable under the Act of 1895, as amended, supra, that an association would today be bound to issue a share certificate for prepaid shares. Therefore, this proposed section requires the same type of share certificate in the case of prepaid shares as in the case of full-paid shares.

3. Certificate 607 D of the proposed Business Corporation Law provides that "a share certificate shall not be issued by corporations to any shareholder until the shares represented thereby have been fully paid for." This provision is taken from Section 16 (1) of the Uniform Act and makes a change in Pennsylvania law. Under the Act of 1895, as amended, supra, a shareholder who has not paid for his shares in full is entitled to share certificate. Under Section 607 D of the proposed Business Corporation Law just quoted, a certificate cannot be issued until shares are fully paid for. Such a limitation is unnecessary in this draft, since by definition a prepaid share or a full-paid share is a share on which the total payment which is required to be made by the shareholder has been made in the form of a single cash payment at the date of the issuance of the share.

4. Except as specifically pointed out in these footnotes, the information required to be contained in share certificates is the same as that required by Section 607 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 406 of the proposed Banking Code.

5. The requirement that the date of the issuance of the shares be required on the certificate is not contained in the Business Corporation Law or in the proposed Banking Code. It is added in this draft, however, since it is required in the case of certificates representing shares in a building and loan association by the Act of 1927, supra.

6. Since there are two types of shares for which certificates are issued by building and loan associations, it is obvious that the certificate should state the type of shares it represents.

7. The provision as to the additional information in the case of prepaid shares is necessary since without it the certificate whould not contain a true statement of the investment by the shareholder in the association.

8. This proposed provision corresponds to Section 607 B of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 406 B of the proposed Banking Code, and is a restatement of Section 1 of the Act of 1895, as amended, supra, and is substantially similar to corresponding provisions in the Uniform Act and the laws of other states. However, as in the Banking Code, all reference to transfer agents, transfer clerks, or registrars is omitted, since they seem to have no particular application to building and loan associations.

Most statutes prescribe the particular officers by whom share certificates must be signed, but as different associations may delegate different types of duties to its officers, it seems desirable to permit the provisions of this draft to be varied in this respect by the articles or by-laws. In the general corporation laws of Idaho, Illinois, Maine, Michigan, Rhode Island, Texas, and Virginia, this may be regulated by the by-laws. In Arizona, Mississippi, Missouri, and Nebraska there is no statutory provision as to the manner of executing share certificates and this subject must, therefore, be covered by the by-laws. In the District of Columbia it seems that the statutes do not specifically require share certificates. In the general corporation laws of New Hampshire, Oregon, Pennsylvania and West Virginia, the statutes provide for execution by one named officer and such other officer as the by-laws require. The Act of 1927, supra, applicable only to building and loan association, requires the stub to be signed by two officers, but makes no requirement for the certificate. Under this draft the by-laws may prescribe the officers who are to sign share certificates.

9. The provisions of this subsection are not contained either in the proposed Business Corporation Law or in the proposed Banking Code. They are introduced, however, in this draft, since they are contained in the Act of 1927, supra, applicable only to share certificates issued by building and loan associations. The Act of 1927 was passed as a result of the disclosures made in the prosecutions of officers of certain building and loan associations in Philadelphia, where facts uncovered indicated widespread fraud in the issuance of full-paid shares. It was believed that the provisions for the retention of stubs by the association and for the issuance only of numbered certificates would at least to some extent, prevent such practice in the future by providing more complete information to the examiners of the Department. Therefore this draft retains these provisions. This draft substantially reenacts these provisions.

10. This provision reenacts the one contained in the Act of 1927, supra, which provides that upon the withdrawal of full-paid shares, the certificates shall be surrendered to the association, which shall preserve it indefinitely.

Section 608. Shares Held in Name of Minor.—Any association may issue shares to or in the name of minors not less than sixteen years of age, and shall pay the dividends or earnings thereon, as the case may be, as well as the withdrawal or maturity value of such shares, as the case may be, to such minor, without the assent of his parent or guardian. The receipt, acquittance, or other action required by the association to be taken by the minor shall be a valid release to the association of its liability on such shares, or any part thereof, as the case may be. The parent or guardian of such minor shall not in his capacity as parent or guardian have the power to attach, or in any manner transfer, any shares issued to or in the name of such minor.

Section 609. Shares Held in Name of Two or More Persons.—A. Whenever shares of an association shall be issued in the names of two or more persons, the association shall not pay any dividends or earnings thereon, as the case may be, or the withdrawal or maturity value thereof, as the case may be, except upon proper receipt, acquittance, or other action, as the case may be, of both or all of such persons, unless at the time of subscribing to the shares a definite arrangement shall have been specifically provided for, or unless at a subsequent time all the parties agree to a definite arrangement.[1]

B. Whenever shares of an association shall be issued in the names of two or more persons, and such shares shall have been subscribed for under an arrangement with the association, whereby the dividends or earnings thereon, as the case may be, or the withdrawal or maturity value thereof, as the case may be, may be paid upon receipt, acquittance, or other action, as the case may be, of either or any of such persons, the association may pay such dividends, earnings, withdrawal value, or maturity value, as the case may be, upon such receipt, acquittance, or other action, as the case may be, of either or any of such persons, pursuant to the arrangement provided for in this section, notwithstanding the fact that one or more of the other persons may be dead and the association has notice thereof.[2]

C. This section shall not be construed to affect shares subscribed for in the names of a husband and his wife.[3]

Comments:

1. This proposed section is new in Pennsylvania law, and corresponds to similar provisions in the case of deposits by two or more persons in Section 903 of the proposed Banking Code.

2. The provision of Subsection A is in accordance with the uniform practice of most building and loan associations in this Commonwealth. This provision seems logical and corresponds to a similar provision in Section 903 B of the proposed Banking Code with respect to joint deposits which is based on the laws of thirty-eight states. If one of two or more joint shareholders is permitted during the lifetime of the other or others to receive payments of the dividends or earnings on shraes or of the withdrawal or maturity value, on his own signature and without the consent of the other shareholder or shareholders, there seems to be no reason why this power should not continue after the death of the other shareholder or shareholders.

3. It seems clear that shares subscribed for in the names of a husband and his wife, like deposits made in a bank in the name of a husband and wife are held by entireties, and upon the death of either, the survivor is entitled to the shares. This would seem consistent with the holding of the Supreme Court in the case of deposits in a bank in the name of husband and wife in Klenke's Estate (No. 1), 210 Pa. 572 (1905). It does not seem advisable for this section to try to enact into statutory law the case law and the general practice covering tenancies by the entireties.

Section 610. Death of One Holding Shares as Trustee.—Whenever shares of an association shall be issued to any person describing himself in subscribing for such shares, as trustee for any person who is not less than sixteen years of age, and no other notice of the existence and terms of a valid trust than such description shall have been given to the association, the dividends or earnings, as the case may be, on such shares, as well as the withdrawal or maturity value of such shares, as the case may be, shall in the event of the death of the person so described as trustee, be paid to the person for whose benefit the shares were stated to have been subscribed. If the person for whose benefit the shares were stated to have been subscribed is a minor not less than sixteen years of age, such payment shall be made to him under the same conditions as in the case of shares originally subscribed for by such minor.

Section 611. Transfer of Shares.—A. Installment shares shall be transferable in the manner provided by the by-laws of the association.[1]

B. The transfer of prepaid or full-paid shares and the certificates representing them may be regulated by the by-laws, provided such by-laws are not inconsistent with the provisions of the Uniform Stock Transfer Act, approved the fifth day of May, one thousand nine hundred eleven (Pamphlet Laws, one hundred twenty-six), its amendments and supplements.[2]

Uniform Act—Section 21.

Pennsylvania

Corporation Act of 1874, Section 11, amended by Act of May 9, 1889, P. L. 180, 15 PS Sec. 132.

Comments:

1. Subsection A merely enacts into law the uniform practice followed by building and loan associations today.

2. This provision follows Section 613 A of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 410 of the proposed Banking Code, which are taken from the Uniform Act, supra. Section 11 of the Corporation Act of 1874, as amended, supra, provides: "the shares of the capital stock of every such company may be transferred on the books of such company in person or by attorney; subject to such regulations as the by-laws may prescribe."

As the Uniform Stock Transfer Act applies also to corporations beyond the scope of this act, that act is not included in this draft. A note to the Uniform Act points out that this proposed section is necessary as Sections 1 and 15 of the Uniform Stock Transfer Act expressly refer to possible by-law or other corporate regulation of transfer. By the inclusion of this proposed section this act and the Uniform Stock Transfer Act would be made to dovetail without unnecessary repetition. The general corporation law of Michigan has a similar provision.

Section 612. Voluntary Withdrawals.—A. Any shareholder may, upon giving written notice to the association, withdraw any shares, whether full-paid, prepaid, or installment, which are not pledged to the association as security for a loan granted by it. The secretary or other officer designated by the by-laws of the association shall endorse, on the written notice of an intention to withdraw required by this section, the date of its receipt by the association.

B. The association shall pay to a shareholder who has withdrawn his shares, the amount paid to the association by him on such shares, less all fines or other charges due by him, plus such proportion of the earnings of the association or such rate of interest as may be prescribed by the by-laws of the association, but the board of directors may, by general rule or regulation and with the prior written consent of the Department, change such proportion of earnings or such rate of interest. The amount payable to a shareholder who has withdrawn his shares shall be known as the withdrawal value of his shares. Except as herein otherwise specifically provided such amount shall become due thirty days after presentation by the shareholder of the written notice required by this section at a meeting of the association, or if not presented by him at a meeting, then thirty days after the first meeting of the association held after the receipt of such notice at the place of business of the association.

C. Except as hereinafter otherwise specifically provided, withdrawals shall be paid only in the order in which the amounts due on such withdrawals become due, but where such amounts become due on the same day, they shall be paid pro rata.

D. An association shall not charge a withdrawal fee to any of its shareholders.

Comments:

This proposed section is substantially similar to the Corporation Act of 1874, supra, as modified by implication by the Act of 1879, supra, except that this act permits a written notice to be given to the association at any time whether at a stated meeting or not, but it does not permit such notice to become effective until the meeting following the receipt of such notice. In addition this draft specifically places upon the secretary the duty of endorsing the time of receipt of such notice, rather than making such an endorsement a condition precedent to the effectuating of the notice. In addition, this proposed section adds the requirement that shares which are withdrawn at the same meeting shall be paid pro rata.

The Act of April 27, 1927, P. L. 404, Section 1, 15 PS Sec. 934, permits the charging of a withdrawal fee not exceeding one per centum of the par value of the shares withdrawn. The only possible justification for the charging of a withdrawal fee is in the case of a shareholder who withdraws before his shares have earned any money. This case can be adequately taken care of by the charging of a membership fee, which is authorized by Section 604 of this draft, and by the fixing of the withdrawal value of the shares.

This draft permits the board of directors, with the consent of the Department to change the withdrawal value of the shares. It seems desirable to accord this power to the directors, particularly since the approval of the Department will serve as a check. Of course, the change may still be effected by action of the shareholders.

Section 613. Involuntary Withdrawal of Prepaid or Installment Shares.—A. An association may compel withdrawal of prepaid or installment shares which have not yet matured and which are not pledged to the association as security for loans granted by it, but it shall not have the power to compel withdrawal of any prepaid or any installment share, as the case may be, unless it shall have on hand suffcient funds to pay such withdrawals immediately and until all prepaid or all installment shares, respectively, issued prior to the date of issuance of such shares have first been voluntarily or involuntarily withdrawn. In the case of installment shares issued in series, such compulsory withdrawal shall be pro rata among the shares of the same series.[1]

B. The association shall pay on each prepaid share thus involuntarily withdrawn the full amount of the cash payment made thereon by the shareholder at the time of the issuance of such share, plus the full portion of the accumulated earnings of such association properly apportionable to such share.[2]

C. The association shall pay on each installment share thus involuntarily withdrawn the full amount of the dues paid thereon by the shareholder, plus the full portion of the accumulated earnings of such association properly apportionable to such share.[3]

Comments:

1. It is not clear whether the Act of 1879 applies to prepaid shares. It seems desirable to permit compulsory withdrawal of all classes of shares.

The Act of 1879 provides that withdrawal may be compelled "at or before maturity." The words "at maturity" were probably introduced into the statute inadvertently since to permit compulsory withdrawal of shares at maturity would be opposed to fundamental building and loan practice.

The only provision in the Act of 1879 as to the order in which the withdrawal of shares may be compelled is that such withdrawal shall be pro rata among the shares of the same series. No reference is made either to the situation of prepaid shares or non-serial installment shares, this proposed section follows the same plan as is established in Section 614 of this draft in the case of full-paid shares. The reasons therefor are stated in the footnotes to that section. The provision as to installment shares issued in series is substantially similar to that contained in the Act of 1879.

2. The Act of 1879 merely provides "That not less than legal interest shall be credited and allowed to each share so withdrawn and cancelled." In the case of prepaid shares this draft provides that the association shall repay to the shareholder the amount of the case payment which he has made on such share plus an equitable proportion of the earnings. It seems clear that a shareholder who is forced out of an association by action of the association should not be deprived either of the amount which he has paid in or of his full share of the net earnings.

3. For an explanation of the plan of payment provided in the case of involuntary withdrawal of installment shares, see footnote 2, supra.

Section 614. Involuntary Withdrawal of Full-Paid Shares.—An association may compel withdrawal of full-paid shares which have been issued at least two years prior to the date of such involuntary withdrawal, but it shall not have the power to compel withdrawal of any full-paid share unless it shall have on hand sufficient funds to pay such withdrawals immediately and until all full-paid shares issued prior to the date of issuance of such share have first been voluntarily withdrawn. The association shall pay on each share thus involuntarily withdrawn the same amount as it would be required by this act to pay if such shares were voluntarily withdrawn.

Building and Loan Associations
Act of April 10, 1879, P. L. 16, Section 3, 15 PS Sec. 993.

Comments:

This proposed section is new in Pennsylvania law. The Act of 1879, supra, provides for involuntary withdrawal but it is not at all clear whether it applies solely to installment shares or to any type of shares issued by a building and loan association.

It seems desirable to provide a method whereby an association may compel the withdrawal of full-paid shares. Since the business of building and loan associations in the final analysis depends upon the demands of a community for mortgage loans, occasions may arise when associations have large cash surpluses with no applications for loans or withdrawals. This proposed section enables such associations under such circumstances to retire full-paid shares.

The provision that the withdrawal of full-paid shares may not be compelled by the association until at least two years after the time of the issuance of such shares seem equitable. An association should not be permitted immediately after issuing a share, to compel its withdrawal. This type of situation under which an association finds it necessary to compel withdrawal of shares does not usually arise over night. If such a condition is imminent the association should not issue full-paid shares.

It seems necessary to prescribe a definite order in which an association may compel withdrawal of shares in order to prevent favoritism by the officers and directors.

Where an association compels withdrawal of full-paid shares, it seems clear that it should be forced to pay to the shareholder the same amount that it would have to pay him if he voluntarily withdrew. This draft so requires.

Section 615. Matured Shares.—A. An installment or prepaid share shall be declared matured by the board of directions of association, whenever, in the case of a prepaid share, the cash payment made thereon by the shareholder at the time of the issuance of such share, or, in the case of an installment share, the dues paid thereon by the shareholder, plus the the full portion of the accumulated earnings of such association properly apportionable to such prepaid or installment share, as the case may be, equal the par value of the share. Notice of such maturity shall forthwith be given to the holder of such share.

B. Except as hereinafter otherwise specifically provided, the par values of shares which have been declared matured and which are not pledged to the association as security for a loan, shall be paid in the order in which such shares are declared matured by the board of directors, but shares declared matured upon the same day shall be paid pro rata. However, the association shall, before making such payment, deduct an amount equal to any delinquent fines or other charges to it upon such shares.

C. If the shares thus declared matured have been pledged to the association as security for a loan which is secured also by a mortgage upon real property, then the mortgage shall be forthwith satisfied upon the payment of any delinquent fines or other charges due the association and upon the payment of the fee provided by law for the satisfaction of mortgages.

D. If the shares thus declared matured have been pledged to the association pursuant to a loan upon which the sole security is such shares, the note shall be forthwith cancelled and the amount of the loan together with the amount of any delinquent fines or other charges due the association shall be deducted from the matured value of such shares. The balance shall be payable to such shareholder in the same order as provided by this section in the case of shares which have been declared matured. which are not pledged to the association as security for a loan.

Comments:

This entire proposed section is new in Pennsylvania law. The sole statement in the statutory law of this Commonwealth which may even be construed to refer to the maturity of shares of a building and loan association is contained in Section 37, Clause 2, of the Corporation Act of 1874 as follows: "said stock may be paid off and retired as the by-laws shall direct." The declaration of the maturity of shares constitutes one of the important problems in building and loan associations and it seems clearly necessary that this draft enact into law specific requirements that the board of directors under certain conditions declare shares matured and at least the important results growing out of such declaration. The building and loan association laws of numerous other states include specific provisions on these questions. This proposed section attempts no substantive change but merely enacts into law the established practice in virtually all building and loan associations in this Commonwealth. This practice has been sustained by numerous decisions of the various courts of this Commonwealth over a period of a great many years.

Section 616. Funds Available for Payment of Matured or Withdrawn Shares; Actions at Law; Judgments.—A. At least two-thirds of the funds in the treasury of an association shall be applied to the payment of matured or withdrawn shares, whenever such amount is necessary for this purpose, but the association shall first deduct such amount as shall be necessary to pay current expenses and indebtedness of the association which is then due. Whenever two-thirds of the funds in the treasury, other than such funds as are necessary to pay current expenses and indebtedness which is then due, are insufficient to pay in full all matured or withdrawn shares, one-third of such funds in the treasury shall be applied to the payment of matured shares and one-third to the payment of withdrawn shares, but if less than one-third of such funds shall be sufficient to pay in full all matured shares, the balance of such one-third shall be applied to pay withdrawn shares, and conversely, if less than one-third of such funds shall be sufficient to pay in full all withdrawn shares, the balance of such one-third shall be applied to pay matured shares.

B. Whenever funds in the treasury are not available, in the manner hereinbefore provided, to pay any matured or withdrawn share upon which payment has been due for a period in excess of six months, all the funds in the treasury other than such funds as are necessary to pay current expenses or indebtedness which is then due, shall be applied to the payment of matured or withdrawn shares.[1] Whenever all of the funds in the treasury, other than such funds as are necessary to pay current expenses and indebtedness which is then due, are insufficient to pay in full matured or withdrawn shares, one-half of such funds shall be applied to the payment of matured shares and one-half to the payment of withdrawn shares, but all matured or withdrawn shares be prorated with all other matured or withdrawn shares, respectively, and paid in proportion to the amounts due upon them. If less than one-half of such funds shall be sufficient to pay in full all matured shares, the balance of such one-half shall be applied to pay matured shares.

C. Whenever matured or withdrawn shares have been paid by an association for a period of six months after payment has become due, owing to the fact that the funds in the treasury which, under this act, are to be applied to the payment of such shares, are insufficient to pay them in full, so much of their bonds or other obligations of the United States, of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, or of a Federal Home Loan Bank of the association as shall be necessary to pay such matured or withdrawn shares shall be sold and the proceeds paid into the treasury of the association to be used to pay such shares.[3]

D. For the purposes of this section, the words "funds in the treasury" shall be construed to include all moneys received or borrowed by the association from any source whatsoever.[3]

E. The holders of matured or withdrawn shares, payment of which has become due under the provisions of this act, shall have the power to sue for the amount due them on such shares, in an action at law, but any judgment obtained in such action shall not be a lien upon real property owned by such association.[4]

Building and Loan Associations

Corporation Act of 1874, Section 37, Clause 2; Savings and Loan Association Law of New York, Sections 397 and 398.

Comments:

1. As stated in the comments to Section 615 of this draft, the present statutory law is silent on the question of matured shares. The only provision regarding the payment of withdrawn shares, besides the Act of April 10, 1879, P. L. 16, Section 2, which provides for the payment in the order of presentation of the notices of withdrawals, is the Corporation Act of 1874, supra. The Corporation Act of 1874 provides "That at no time shall more than one-half of the funds in the treasury of the corporation be applicable to the demands of withdrawing stockholders without the consent of the board of directors.

Although a shareholder of a building and loan association corresponds in a great many ways to a shareholder in any other corporation, his position with relation to an association bears many of the incidents of a depositor in a savings bank. Most holders of free shares consider the manner in which they pay into a building and loan association in the light of savings, which they may withdraw upon thirty days' demand. It is a primary duty of the association to conduct its business in such a manner that such withdrawing shareholders, as well as the holders of matured shares, shall receive payment upon such shares when due, if at all possible. It would clearly be an injustice to such shareholders for an association to continue making loans with money which is really theirs, after their shares have been withdrawn or matured. Therefore, this draft like the New York law, supra, provides that whenever necessary, at least two-thirds of the funds in the treasury of an association shall be applied to the payment of such shares, and that when matured or withdrawn shares are unpaid for a period of six months or the funds in the treasury shall become available for this purpose.

The statutory law is silent on the question of preferences as between holders of matured shares and the holders of withdrawn shares. The decisions of the courts leave considerable doubt on this question. It seems desirable that this act, like the law of New York, specify that half of the funds available for payment of matured and withdrawn shares be applied to the payment of matured shares and half to the payment of withdrawn shares. While arguments could be advanced in favor of increasing this percentage one way or the other, an even division seems in the long run, in view of changing conditions and of differing conditions in various communities to be the most equitable arrangement particularly in view of the provision of the proposed section that when all the matured shares have been paid in full the balance of the funds available for payment of such shares shall be applied to the payment of withdrawn shares, and vice versa.

2. This provision is new in Pennsylvania law. Under existent law, the only investment which a building and loan association may make are in bonds of the United States Government issued for war purposes, which are authorized under the Act of April 18, 1919, P. L. 55, Section 1, 15 PS Sec. 1011. Section 804 of this draft enlarges the scope of investment which building and loan associations may make in any bonds or other obligations of the United States, of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, or of a Federal Home Loan Bank, such investments being permitted to the extent of twenty-five per centum of the amount paid in on shares. Since, therefore, this draft permits an association to invest funds in its treasury which would otherwise remain idle, it seems clear that such investments should be limited and the receipts therefrom returned to the treasury to be used to pay withdrawn or matured shares when the association is in arrears in its payments upon such shares for a period of six months.

3. This provision that all receipts shall immediately be construed to be funds in the treasury for the purpose of this section, is included in order to prevent evasion of the rules for payment established by this proposed section.

4. The authorities are in conflict as to the remedies of the holder of a matured share, some stating that since a suit by holder of a matured share always involves an act in the nature of accounting, his remedy at law is inadequate and he therefore must proceed in equity, while others, particularly cases in the curts of Philadelphia County, hold that he should proceed at law to enforce his rights. It seems clear that this draft should clarify the doubt created by these cases. This proposed section gives to the holder either of a matured or withdrawn share the right to proceed at law. Under Section 7 of this draft, any right which he may have under the general powers of courts of equity over corporations will not be affected. The provision of this section as to the obtaining of a judgment and as to the effect of such judgment is in accord with the order handed down by Judge Stein in Lipkin v. Argonne Building and Loan Association, decided by the Court of Common Pleas No. 2 of Philadelphia County, September Term 1930, No. 8765. That care, and this provision, are in accord with the general doctrine adopted by the Supreme Counrt of this Commonwealth with regard to building and loan associations and more recently enumerated in Stone v. New Schiller Building and Loan Association, 302 Pa. 544 (1931), that building and loan associations are essentially mutual associations and that one shareholder should not be permitted in any way to gain an unfair preference over other shareholders in the same situation. The effect of the rule of Lipman v. Argonne Building and Loan Association and of this section is that one holder of a matured or withdrawn share cannot by obtaining a judgment acquire a lien against the property of the association and thus gain a preference over other holders of matured or withdrawn shareholders, respectively.

Section 617. Fines.—A. Any association may impose fines upon its shareholders for failure to pay dues, interest, or premiums upon their shares, but a fine shall not exceed one per centum per month of the amount of the dues, interest, or premiums which are in arrears, for the period during which they have been in such arrears. Such fines may be deducted from or charged against the earnings of the association properly apportionable to the shares in the association on account of which such defaults are made, but they shall not under any circumstances be deducted from or charged against the dues paid by the shareholder upon such shares.

B. An association shall not impose fines upon the shares of a deceased shareholder, for defaults incurred after his death, unless his legal representative makes a payment upon such shares, in which case fines may be levied against such shares for all defaults after the date of such payment.

C. Fines levied pursuant to the provisions of this act shall not be deemed usurious.

Comments:

This draft substantially reenacts the provisions of the acts cited in the references, supra. However, it effects two principal changes:

(1) The maximum fine permitted is reduced from two per centum to one per centum. The tendency in this country and in Pennsylvania associations is toward a releasing of the stringency of the requirements concerning fines. It seems desirable that this draft follow the New York law in making such reduction in the maximum amount of fines.

(2) This proposed section provides that fines cannot be deducted from or charged against the actual amounts paid in on account of shares by a shareholder. It seems manifestly unjust for an association to have the advantage of using the money of a shareholder and still, at the same time, deduct from such money for a failure by him to pay in additional moneys. It seems more equitable to provide that the only sources to which an association can charge fines due on shares are the earnings properly apportionable to such shares. This provision likewise is based upon the building and loan association law of New York.

Section 618. Restriction on Dividends on Full-Paid Shares.—The cash dividend or periodical interest paid on full-paid shares shall not exceed the net rate of dividends earned each year on all the outstanding shares of the association, less the amount thereof, if any, set aside as a reserve for contingent losses.

Act of April 5, 1927, P. L. 110, Section 1, 15 PS Sec. 912.

Comments:

Until 1927, the statutory law was silent on the provisions contained in this proposed section, but Folk v. State Capital Savings and Loan Association, 214 Pa. 529 (1906) established the rule of this proposed section. The Act of 1927 codified the rule of that decision. This draft substantially reenacts the provisions of the Act of 1927.

Section 619. Cancellation of Shares by Association.—An association may cancel the installment shares of a shareholder for failure to pay dues upon them for a period of six months. In the event of such cancellation by such association, the shareholder shall be entitled to all the rights of a withdrawing shareholder.

Comments:

This proposed section is new in Pennsylvania. However, without any express statutory authority, practically every building and loan association in the Commonwealth follows the practice enacted by this proposed section.

Section 620. Reserve for Contingent Losses.—Every association shall set aside each year not less than five per centum and not more than fifteen per centum of its net profits for such year, as a reserve for contingent losses, until the total amount of such reserve shall equal at least five per centum of the assets of such association, but the Department may, at any time, require any association to set aside such additional amount as the Department shall deem necessary to safeguard the interests of the shareholders of such association. Such reserve for contingent losses shall be loaned or invested in the same manner as is authorized by this act in the case of other funds of the association. Such reserve for contingent losses shall not at any time exceed ten per centum of the assets of such association, except with the written approval of the Department.

If, due to a reduction of the assets of an association or due to any other cause whatsoever, the reserve for contingent losses shall exceed ten per centum of the assets of the association, or, if the Department has authorized a reserve for contingent losses in excess of such ten per centum, such reserve exceeds such percentage above ten per centum authorized by the Department, the amount above such ten per centum or such other percentage as has been authorized in writing by the Department, as the case may be, shall be transferred, at the next regular meeting of the board of directors, to the general profit account of the association.

Act of May 14, 1913, P. L. 205, Section 1 (a), amended by Act of April 8, 1927, P. L. 179, Section 1, 15 PS Sec. 1021.

Comments:

Under the Act of 1913, as amended, supra, an association is not compelled to establish a reserve for contingent losses, but it is authorized to set aside fifteen per centum thereof each year, as such reserve fund, until the total amount of such reserve fund aggregates fifteen per centum of the assets of the association. This proposed section makes it mandatory for an association to accumulate a reserve for contingent losses to an amount equal to at least five per centum of the assets of an association, permits an accumulation of a reserve to an amount equal to ten per centum of the assets, and forbids a reserve in excess of ten per centum except with the written approval of the Department.

Prior to the Act of 1927 an association was authorized, but not compelled to accumulate a reserve not to exceed five per centum, see Act of 1913, supra.

In the first place, it seems clear that an association should be required to maintain a reserve for contingent losses. Otherwise the holder of a matured share can take his money out of the association and realize on any profits made up to that date by the sasociation leaving the remaining shareholders to stand all possible losses which may subsequently be taken on the very assets which were on the books at the time the holder of matured shares left the association. It seems that the remaining shareholders should be assured some buffer for their protection.

However, it seems desirable to reduce the maximum reserve which may be established, without consent of the Department, to ten per centum. In general, a lower maximum reserve is necessary since associations will under this draft be prohibited from investing in second mortgages in which they do not hold the prior lien. If unusual circumstances justify a greater reserve, this draft makes specific provision for this by permitting any increase with the approval of the Department.

The provision that the Department may, at any time, require additional reserves, when necessary to safeguard the interests of the shareholders merely enacts into law the practice which, for years, has been followed by the Department.

Section 621. Reduction of Liability to Shareholders.—A. Whenever the losses of any association resulting from a depreciation of its securities or otherwise, exceed its reserve for contingent losses, so that the fair value of its assets is less than the total amount due its creditors and shareholders, the court of common pleas of the county in which the place of business of the association is located may, upon the petition of the association, approved by a majority of all its directors and the holders of a majority of all its shares, and approved also by the Department, order a reduction of its liability to its shareholders, in such manner as to distribute the loss equitably among such shareholders. Such petition may establish the withdrawal value of any shares withdrawn within a designated period after the issuance of the order permitting such reduction of liabilities.

B. If after the issuance by the court of the order permitting such reduction of liabilities, such association shall realize from its assets a greater amount than was fixed in the order of reduction, such excess shall be divided among corporations or persons, who, as shareholders, had their credits so reduced, but the excess shall be so divided to the extent of such reduction only.

Savings and Loan Association Law of New York, Section 404,

Comments:

This proposed section is based upon the Savings and Loan Association Law of New York, except as otherwise noted later in these footnotes and is entirely new in the law of Pennsylvania.

At the present time, if an association suffers losses due to a depreciation of its securities or otherwise so that the fair value of its assets is less than the total amount due its creditors and shareholders, it becomes insolvent, and its sole remedies are either to merge on an impaired basis or to go into liquidation. Particularly in view of present conditions, it seems that, if the directors and shareholders are in favor of a plan of reduction and if it secures the approval both of the Department and of the court, that the association should be permitted to continue in business, if there is any possibility of saving the association in this manner. This plan provides for an equitable distribution of the losses among all the shareholders in the same manner as if there were a liquidation, but permits the association to attempt to work out its own salvation. It also requires distribution to the shareholders who have had their credit so reduced, of any excess which later develops in the value of the assets over the amount fixed by the court.

This draft differs from the New York law in that it requires the approval of the shareholders. It seems clear that since their rights are so vitally affected they should be given an equal voice in determining whether a petition for an order of reduction should be submitted to the court. The provision permitting the petition to establish the withdrawal value of any shares withdrawn within a designated period after the issuance of the order of reduction is not contained in the New York law. Since, by hypothesis under this plan, the book value of shares will be reduced below the amount paid in on such shares, this provision seems necessary in order to assure the success of the plan it has been approved.

ARTICLE VII

AMENDMENT OF ARTICLES

Section 701. Amendment of Articles Authorized.—An association may, in the manner hereinafter provided in this article, amend its articles of incorporation from time to time in any manner whatsoever, provided that the articles as so amended would be authorized by this act as original articles of incorporation.

Comments:

Except for the Act of 1883, supra, there is no law in this Commonwealth applicable to business corporations in general or to buliding and loan associations in particular which treats generally of the power to amend their articles and the method for doing so. Numerous acts discuss the power to affect particular changes, such as increase or decrease of capital, change of place of business, assumption of fiduciary powers by a bank, et cetera, and this draft cites and discusses these acts in the sections which deal specifically with these particular subjects.

It seems desirable to provide a general method to be followed in making amendments of any kind whatsoever to the articles of a building and loan association. This is the method which has been uniformly followed in all the recent corporation codes adopted by other states, and it is likewise followed in the proposed Business Corporation Law. Fundamentally, this article is not dissimilar to the Act of 1883, supra.

The present article, which deals with amendments to the articles of building and loan associations for the sake of uniformity follows, in so far as possible, Article VIII of the proposed Business Corporation Law, which deals with the same subject in connection with business corporations.

Section 702. Proposal of Amendment to Articles.—Every amendment to the articles of an association shall first be proposed by the board of directors by the adoption of a resolution setting forth the proposed amenlment and directing that it be submitted to a vote of the shareholders entitled to vote thereon at a designated meeting, which may be either an annual or a special meeting of the shareholders entitled to vote on the amendment. The resolution shall establish the language of the proposed amendment to the articles by providing that the articles shall be amended so as to read as therein set forth in full, or that any provision thereof be amended so as to read as therein set forth in full, or that the matter stated in the resolution be added to or stricken from the articles.

Pennsylvania

Act of June 13, 1883, P. L. 122, 15 PS Sec. 401.

Comments:

While the Pennsylvania act does not specify who shall propose amendments to the articles, in practice, the directors usually do so by resolution adopted by a majority vote of the members of the board. This section of the draft makes no change in existing Pennsylvania law, and is similiar to provisions contained in the laws of many of the other states. The provision requiring the resolution to specify the amendments in full is taken from the California act, and appears to be very desirable. Unless the proposed amendments are set forth in the manner required by this provision, the occasion might easily arise where the shareholders assenting to amendments did not fully comprehend their provisions.

This proposed section corresponds to Section 802 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 802 of the proposed Banking Code.

Section 703. Adoption of Amendments.—Every proposal of an amendment to the articles of an association, made by its board of directors, shall be adopted at the shareholders' meeting designated for that purpose pursuant to the provisions of this act, upon receiving the affirmative vote of the holders of at least a majority of the outstanding shares entitled to vote at such meeting, unless the articles require a greater number. Any number of amendments may be submitted to the shareholders at one meeting.

Act of June 13, 1883, P. L. 122, amended by the Act of March 31, 1905, P. L. 93, 15 PS Secs. 401-403.

Comments:

The Act of 1883, supra, which authorizes the amendment of charters of corporations of the second class, does not specify the vote by which the proposed amendment must be approved by the shareholders. Accordingly, a majority vote is required, unless the articles specify a larger vote. The Act of 1901, authorizing an increase of the capital stock of a corporation, also requires a majority vote of the shareholders. The Act of 1903, authorizing corporations of the second class to change their names, requires a two-thirds vote of the shareholders.

The Uniform Act and the laws of most states, including Illinois, Delaware, and New Jersey, require a two-thirds vote of the shareholders to amend the articles of a corporation. The Uniform Act, however, permits a majority vote for the approval of an amendment changing the corporate name. The new acts of Michigan and California require a majority vote of the shareholders to amend the articles of a corporation.

This proposed section which follows Section 805 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 803 of the proposed Banking Code, continues the Pennsylvania practice of requiring a majority vote to amend the articles of a corporation, and also permits a change of the corporate name by a similar vote, unless the articles require a greater vote.

Section 704. Notice of Meeting to Adopt Amendments to Articles—Written notice shall, not less than ten days before the shareholders' meetings called by the board of directors for the purpose of considering any proposed amendment to the articles of an association, be given to each shareholder of record entitled to vote on the proposed amendment, except that written notice of any proposed amendment for increasing the authorized capital stock of the association shall be given to each shareholder entitled to vote thereon at least sixty days before such meeting. Such notice shall state the place, the day, and the hour of the meeting, and shall set forth the proposed amendment or a summary of the changes to be effected thereby. Notice of such meeting shall also be given by application in a manner similar to that prescribed in this act in the case of the formation of an association.

Comments:

The Act of 1883, supra, authorizing amendments to charters of corporations of the second class, requires the corporation to publish notices of its intention to apply for an amendment "in two newspapers of general circulation, printed in the county wherein the principal office or place of business of said corporation is located, once a week for three weeks". Here we have another anomalous situation in our existing corporation law. In the formulation of a corporation, advertisement must be made once for at least three days before the application for a charter is filed with the Secretary of the Commonwealth, but in order subsequently to amend the charter so obtained it is necessary to advertise once a week for three weeks before the application for amendment is filed with the Secretary of the Commonwealth. This draft requires the same amount of advertising in the case of an amendment of a charter as is required to obtain the charter of the corporation.

The Act of 1893, authorizing a reduction of the capital stock, requires notice of the shareholders' meeting to be published "once a week for sixty days prior to such meeting in at least one newspaper published in the county, city or borough wherein such office or place of business is situate." There is no constitutional requirement that sixty days' notice be given of a decrease in capital stock, and such a period of notice seems wholly unnecessary.

Under the Act of 1901, P. L. 3, notice of a meeting for increasing the capital stock of the corporation must be published "once a week for sixty days prior to such meeting in at least one newspaper published in the county, city, or borough wherein the chief office or place of business of the corporation is situate." This provision carries out the constitutional mandate of Article XVI, Section 7, that "The stock and indebtedness of corporations shall not be increased except in pursuance of general law, nor without the consent of the persons holding the larger amount in value of the stock, first obtained at a meeting to be held after sixty days notice given in pursuance of law." Accordingly, this draft requires that at least sixty days' notice be given of a meeting at which it is proposed to consider a proposed amendment authorizing an increase of the authorized capital stock of the corporation. The notice of such a meeting may be waived by unanimous consent of all the shareholders, although the meeting itself cannot be waived. Tally-on-Top Salesbook Company (Op. Atty. Gen.), 17 Pa. C. C. 199 (1895).

This section follows Section 803 of the proposel Business Corporation Law and Section 804 of the proposed Banking Code.

Section 705. Articles of Amendment.—After an amendment to the articles of an association has been adopted in the manner provided by this act, triplicate originals of the articles of amendment shall be executed under oath or affirmation and under the seal of the association, by two duly authorized officers of the association, and shall set forth:

(1) The name and location of the place of business of the association.

(2) The Act of Assembly under which the association was formed and the date when and the place where the original articles were recorded.

(3) The time and place of the meeting of the shareholders of the association at which the amendment was adopted, and the kind and period of notice given to such shareholders.

(4) The number of shares outstanding, the number of shares entitled to vote on the amendment, and the number of shares voted for and against such amendment.

(5) The amendment adopted, which shall be set forth in full.

Comments:

Under the provisions of the Act of 1883, supra, the corporation is required to "prepare a certificate, under its corporate seal, setting forth "the character and objects of the proposed improvement, amendment or alteration of their charter." That act does not enumerate what shall be set forth in the certificate of amendment. This draft specifically requires certain facts to be set forth which, in practice, are generally set forth in the certificate of amendment.

The Act of 1883 requires the corporation to prepare a certificate of amendment. While some other states use the same terminology, this proposed section which follows Section 806 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 805 of the proposed Banking Code follows the suggestion of the Uniform Act and designates the document to be filed by a corporation amending its charter as "articles of amendment." The new Illinois and Indiana acts use the same designation. Under the following section of this draft, the Department of State is authorized to issue a certificate of amendment, which constitutes official evidence that the articles of amendment have been filed in its office and that the charter of the corporation has been amended.

Section 706. Filing of Articles of Amendments; Payment of Fees; Approval by Department of State.—A. The triplicate originals of the articles of amendment and the proof of publication of the advertisement, required by this act, shall be delivered to the Department of State.

B. The Department of State shall examine such articles of amendment and such proof of publication to determine whether they contain all the information and are in the form required by this act. After all the fees, taxes, and other charges have been paid as required by law, except for the costs of any examinations made by the Department of Banking, pursuant to the provisions of this act, to determine whether to approve the amendment, or any other charges made by the Department of Banking,[1] the Department of State shall, if the articles of amendment and the proof of publication contain the information and are in the form required by this act, endorse its approval upon each of the triplicate originals of the articles of amendment and shall forthwith transmit them to the Department of Banking.[2]

C. If the Department of State shall disapprove the articles of amendment, pursuant to the provisions of this act, it shall forthwith give notice thereof to the association, stating in detail its reasons for doing so, and stating how such association can remedy the nonconformance with the provisions of this act. Upon remedying the defect such association may in the same manner file the same or amended articles, whichever the particular case may require.

Act of June 13, 1883, P. L. 122, Section 3, amended by the Act of March 31, 1905, P. L. 93, 15 PS Sec. 403.

Comments:

1. The procedure in this proposed section differs from that in Sections 305 and 309 of this draft. Those sections in dealing with the costs of the examination to be conducted by the Department of Banking to determine whether or not the articles should be approved by it, require such costs to be paid by the incorporators to the Department of State, at the time of the filing of the articles. This is necessitated by the fact that there have not yet at that time been any dealings between the incorporators and the Department of Banking. Therefore, the applications of the provisions of the proposed Department of Banking Code, relating to assessments by the Department upon institutions, could have no application. In addition, if the articles are disapproval, then the Department would have no means of reimbursement for the costs of the examination, except against the incorporators. However, when an amendment to the articles is being made it will, of course, always be by an existing association. In such case, there seems to be no reason for disturbing the well established procedure for assessment by the Department of Banking upon associations, in accordance with the provisions of Section 204 of the proposed Department of Banking Code.

2. This section of the draft makes a radical change in the procedure outlined in the Act of 1883 for the amendment of a charter of a corporation of the second class. Under the Act of 1883, a corporation is required to prepare a certificate acknowledged by its president and secretary. The certificate, together with proof of publication, is then required to be presented to the Governor. If the certificate is in proper form and all taxes due the Commonwealth have been paid, the Governor is required to approve the certificate and to direct letters patent to issue in the usual form, reciting the amendments. The certificate is then required to be recorded in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth and in the office of the recorder of deeds of the county where the principal office or place of business of the corporation is located.

This draft, as in the case of the formation of an association, does not require the Governor to approve articles of amendment. This duty is placed squarely upon the Department of State and the Department of Banking. The Uniform Act and practically all of the corporation laws of other states prescribe a similar procedure in the case of business corporations, except of course for the approval of the banking official.

This proposed section follows Section 807 of the proposed Banking Code. Like that proposed act, this proposed section requires the approval of the Department of Banking to amendments. The duties of the Department of State and the Department of Banking, respectively, regarding amendments to charters are the same as their respective duties regarding the granting of charters.

Section 707. Approval of Articles of Amendment by Department of Manking.—A. The Department of Banking shall, immediately upon the receipt of the articles of amendment from the Department of State, conduct such examination as it may deem necessary to ascertain from the best sources of information at its command, whether such amendment or amendments will be lawful, not injurious to the community, and in accordance with the purposes of the articles of incorporation. The costs of such examination, and any other charges of the Department of Banking, bearing upon the filing of articles of amendment, shall be assessed upon the association in the manner provided by law for assessments by the Department of Banking of costs of examinations or other charges.

B. Within thirty days after the receipt of the articles of amendment from the Department of State, the Department of Banking shall, upon the basis of the facts disclosed by the investigation provided for by this section, either approve or disapprove such articles. It shall immediately notify the Department of State in writing of its action. If it shall approve the articles of amendment, it shall sign its approval upon the three triplicate originals, and shall retain one of them.

C. If the Department of Banking disapproves the articles of amendment, it shall return them to the Department of State, stating in detail its reasons for doing so. The Department of State shall immediately give notice to the association of the action of the Department of Banking and of the reasons therefor as stated to it by that Department. The association may, within thirty days after the Department of State sends it notice of the disapproval of tis articles of amendment, appeal from such disapproval to the Governor who shall hear such appeal promptly, and, within thirty days thereafter, decide the matter and certify a decision to the Department of Banking. The decision of the Governor shall be conclusive and not subject to review. The Department of Banking shall act in accordance therewith.

Comments:

As stated in footnote 2 to Section 706 of this draft, the approval of the Department of Banking is required in the case of amendments to charters of building and loan associations in the same manner as it is required under Section 807 of the proposed Banking Code, in the case of amendments to charters of banks, bank and trust companies, and savings banks. This seems clearly desirable. An amendment may effect a fundamental change in an association. It seems that the Department of Banking should have the same power with respect to such change as it has in the original granting of the charter.

Section 708. Issuance of Certificate of Amendment.—Immediately upon receipt of the two signed triplicate originals of the articles of amendment of an association from the Department of Banking, the Department of State shall file and record one of the triplicate originals and shall issue a certificate of amendment. The remaining triplicate original of the articles of amendment and the certificate of amendment shall be sent by the Department of State to the association. The association shall then have the articles of amendment recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds of the county in which the place of business of the association is situated. The triplicate original of the articles of amendment, upon being recorded by the recorder of deeds, shall be returned to the association.

Comments:

This proposed section follows Section 808 of the proposed Banking Code.

Section 709. Effective Date of Amendment.—Upon the issuance of the certificate of amendment by the Department of State, the amendments shall become effective and the articles of incorporation shall be deemed to be amended accordingly. The certificate of amendment shall be conclusive evidence of the performance of all conditions required in this act in proceedings to amend the articles of incorporation, except as against the Commonwealth. No amendment shall affect any pending suit in which such association shall be a party, or the existing rights of persons, other than shareholders; and, in the event the corporate name shall be changed by the amendment, no suit brought by or against the association under its former name shall be abated for that reason.

Comments:

Under the Act of 1883, the amendment of a charter becomes effective upon the recording of the certificate of amendment in the office of the recorder of deeds of the proper county.

Under this proposed section, and under Section 808 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 809 of the proposed Banking Code, to which this proposed section corresponds, as well as under the Uniform Act and the laws of many states, the amendment becomes effective upon the issuance of the certificate of amendment by the Department of State. Before that department may issue such certificate, all taxes, fees, and other charges required by law first have been paid, but this draft does not require the corporation to state in its articles of amendment that all taxes have been paid. It is submitted that the Department of State may readily ascertain this fact from the Department of Revenue, and that there is no necessity for imposing upon the corporation the duty of stating this fact in the articles of amendment.

ARTICLE VIII

SPECIFIC POWERS AND LIMITATIONS UPON POWERS OF ASSOCIATIONS

Section 801. Powers of Association.—In addition to the general corporate powers granted by this act, and in addition to any powers specifically granted to an association elsewhere in this act, an association shall have the following powers, subject to the limitations and restrictions imposed by this act:

(1) To issue full-paid, prepaid, and installment shares.

(2) To borrow money, and in the case of the Federal Home Loan Bank, or any other agency or instrumentality of the United States Government, other than a national bank, to pledge collateral therefor.

(3) To grant loans to its shareholders.

(4) To grant loans to other associations.

(5) To make investments.

(6) To become a member of the Federal Home Loan Bank, or of any other corporation or agency established under the authority of the United States Government, and to comply with any of the provisions required for membership in the Federal Home Loan Bank or in such other corporation or agency, provided the association is authorized to do so by resolution of its board of directors.

(7) To purchase, improve, or lease real property for its accommodation.

Section 802. Power to Borrow Money; Issuance of Notes; Pledging of Collateral.—A. An association may, by resolution of its board of directors, borrow money to a total amount not exceeding thirty-five per centum of the amount paid in by shareholders on account of shares which have not, on the date of such borrowing, been matured or for which notice of withdrawal has not on such date been given.[1]

B. An association shall issue ti any corporation or person from whom it borrows money, except the Federal Home Loan Bank, or any other agency or instrumentality of the United States Government other than a national bank, a note for the amount borrowed. All such notes shall be issued in the following manner and in the following form only:

(1) Each such note shall have the corporate title of the association printed thereon.

(2) A copy of the resolution of the board of directors of such association authorizing the loan, certified by the secretary of such association or by such other officer as shell be determined by the by-laws, shall be permanently attached to such note, and each such resolution shall state the borrowing capacity of the association and the amount then owing by the association for borrowed money.

(3) Each such note shall be signed on behalf of the association by the president or vice-president and by the secretary or treasurer thereof.

(4) Such notes shall bear printed, consecutive, numbers, and shall be issued from a bound notebook, containing for each note, a stub bearing a number corresponding to the number on such note. The stub shall also bear the name and address of the payee of the note, the date on which the note was issued, the date of maturity, the amount of the note, and the rate of interest.

(5) The president and secretary of such association, or any other two or more officers of such borrowing association shall certify, on each stub, that the information contained thereon is correct and is in accordance with the note bearing the same number.

An association shall issue to the Federal Home Loan Bank, or to any other agency or instrumentality of the United States Government from which it borrows money, other than a national bank, its bond, obligation, or note in such form as is prescribed by the Federal Home Loan Bank or by such other agency or instrumentality of the United States Government.

Upon the repayment of such borrowed money the note, or the bond, obligation, or note, as the case may be, shall be surrendered to the association and shall be cancelled and preserved for a period of not less than seven years.[2]

C. An association shall not have power to pledge or hypothecate any of its assets for money borrowed by it, except in the case of money borrowed from the Federal Home Loan Bank or any other agency or instrumentality of the United Statesh Government, other than a national bank. An association may pledge or hypothecate to the Federal Home Loan Bank or to any other agency or instrumentality of the United States Government, other than a national bank, for money borrowed, its bonds and mortgages or other assets, including the shares pledged with the association as security, and it shall not be required to secure the consent of the owner of such shares in order to make such pledge.[3]

D. An association shall not grant any loan secured by bond and mortgage, until it has repaid all moneys borrowed by it from any source, except the Federal Home Loan Bank or any other agency or instrumentality of the United States Government, other than national banks.[4]

Building and Loan Associations

Act of June 2, 1891, P. L. 174, Section 1, amended by Act of June 25, 1895, P. L. 303, Section 1, 15 PS Sec. 981; Act of July 9, 1919, P. L. 808, Section 1, 15 PS Sec. 982; Act of July 28, 1932; Act of April 21, 1927, P. L. 333. Sections 7 and 2, 15 PS Secs. 983 and 984; Act of July 28, 1932, P. L. 11.

Comments:

1. The Act of 1891, as amended, supra, permits an association to borrow an amount not exceeding twenty-five per centum of the withdrawal value of the shares issued by an association. This appears to be raised to thirty-five per centum of the withdrawal value by the Act of 1932, supra. It requires that the rate of interest paid by the association for such money be less than six per centum.

This draft used as the basis for determining the amount of money which may be borrowed the amount paid in by shareholders on account of shares rather than the withdrawal value of shares. It is frequently an exceedingly difficult task, particularly in the case of non-serial associations, to compute the withdrawal value on all shares. In addition the method of computing the withdrawal value varies so greatly in different associations, that a statement in a statute limiting an association to an amount based on the percentage of the wihdrawal value of its shares would result in an application which would not be uniform. The amount paid in on shares is easily computable in all types of building and loan associations and would, of course, have uniform application to all associations. This draft therefore adopts the amount paid in on account of shares as the measure.

The purpose of placing a definite limitation upon the amount which may be borrowed by a building and loan association is in order to prevent the creation of an unduly large class of creditors whose status is preferred to that of the shareholders of the association. Where shares have been matured or voluntarily withdrawn it seems clearly undesirable to permit them to be computed in determining the amount which an association may borrow.

The amount which in normal times an association may borrow under this proposed section is substantially similar to that permitted by the Act of 1891, as amended, supra.

This proposed section omits the requirements that an association pay interest upon monney borrowed by it at a rate less than six per centum per annmu. Under the Act of 1891, as amended, supra, it would be permissible for an association to pay interest at the rate of 5.99 per centum. There seems to be no reason for continuing this provision.

2. This proposed subsection substantially reenacts the provision of 1927, supra, with the following changes:

(1) This draft requires that the copy of the resolution of the board of directors be certified by the secretary or by such other officer as is designated by the by-laws. The Act of 1927 is silent on this point.

(2) This draft designates the officers who shall sign the note of an association, the officers designated being consistent with those stated in Section 317 of this draft. The Act of 1927 is silent on this point.

(3) This draft designates the two officers who shall certify the facts stated on the stub, unless the by-laws designate other officers. The Act of 1927 does not designate the officers who shall certify these facts.

3. This proposed section reenacts the provisions of the Act of 1932, supra.

4. The Act of 1891, as amended, supra, provides that an association may borrow only when a series has matured, or when applications for loans by the shareholders exceed the accumulations in the treasury, and that it may in any event borrow only temporarily. The entire intendment of this act has been violated again and again by building and loan associations, frequently with diststrous results. As a safeguard against th econtinuance of such violations, this proposed subsection provides that an association which has borrowed bonew from a source other than the Federal Home Loan Bank or an instrumentality of the United States Government shall not be permitted to grant any mortgage loans.

Section 803. Temporary Loans to Other Associations.—Whenever an association has no withdrawn or matured shares unpaid, or obligations for borrowed money outstanding, it may, by resolution of its board of directors, grant loans to any other association, but an association shall not lend to any one association an amount in excess of ten per centum of the amount paid in on account of the shares of such lending association, nor shall such associations have outstanding at any one time loans to associations aggregating more than twenty-five per centum of the amount paid in on account of the shares of such lending association.

Act of May 14, 1913, P. L. 205, Section 2.

Comments:

This proposed section substantially reenacts the provisions of the Act of 1913, supra, except for the following changes:

(1) The Act of 1917 provides that such loans shall be temporary. As a matter of practice, where such loans are granted, they are for the most part long term loans. The circumstances under which such loans are granted are usually such that there is no harm to such long term loans. Since such loans are by definition granted only to associations under the supervision of the Department of Banking, there seems to be no necessity for continuing the limitation that they be "temporary", which as pointed out is not followed in practice.

(2) This draft omits the requirement that such loans be granted on interest bearing order, note, or bond. This is taken care of by Section 802 of this draft which requires an association borrowing money to give a note for all borrowings.

(3) The Act of 1913, supra, requires that the note shall not bear a higher rate of interest than the lawful rate. This seems unnecessary, since it is adequately covered by the usury laws.

(4) The Act of 1913, supra, computes the amount which may be loaned to one association, or the aggregate which may be loaned to all associations, as a basis for computing the percentages the amount paid in on account of shares of the lending association. This is a much more readily ascertainable amount, and is the basis for computing percentages for determining limitations in other portions of this draft.

Section 804. Authorized Investments.—A. Except as otherwise specifically provided in this act,[1] an association shall not make any investments except as follows:

(1) Bonds or other interest-bearing obligations of the United States, or those for the payment of the principal and interest on which the faith and credit of the United States is pledged.

(2) Bonds or debentures issued by a Federal Home Loan Bank under the provisions of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act, approved the twenty-second day of July, one thousand nine hundred thirty-two, its amendments and supplements.

(3) Bonds or other interest-bearing obligations of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, or those for the payment of principal and interest on which the faith and credit of this Commonwealth is pledged.

B. An association shall not at any one time have more than twenty-five per centum of the amount paid in on account of its shares invested in the bonds, debentures, or other interest-bearing obligations authorized by this section as investments for associations.[2]

Act of July 9, 1919, P. L. 808, Section 1, 15 PS Sec. 982; Act of July 28, 1932, P. L. 11.

Comments:

1. See Section 801 of this draft.

2. The Act of 1919, supra, authorizes building and loan associations to invest only in bonds of the United States Government issued for war purposes. In Kennett Square Building and Loan Associations case, 12 Dist. 630 (1903), the court held that a building and loan association may not invest in the obligations of a township. This proposed section, of course, increases the list of authorized investments. At the present time, the practice of building and loan associations is to deposit their uninvested funds with banking institutions as time deposits. It seems that where an association has large sums of uninvested funds in its treasury, it should be permitted to invest them in obligations for which the faith and credit of the United States or that of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania is pledged. This proposed section permits such a practice to the extent of twenty-five per centum of the amount paid in on account of its shares. Where an association has a large amount of uninvested funds and there is at the time no great demand, or where an association is accumulating funds in order to pay anticipated maturities, it seems desirable top rovide by law a safe means for the investment of such funds. The type of investment authorized by this proposed section is both liquid and safe.

Section 805. Restriction on Ownership or Holding of Real Property by an Association.—A. Except as otherwise provided in this act, an association shall not purchase, own, or hold any real property, except as follows:[1]

(1) Such real property as it occupies pursuant to the provisions of this act for its accommodation in the transaction of its business or such real property as it partly so occupies and party leases to others, pursuant to the provisions of this act.[2]

(2) Such as it shall purchase at sales under judgments, decrees, or mortgages held by it or as it shall otherwise acquire in good faith and in satisfaction of debts previously contracted to it, or in order to protect an interest it may otherwise have lawfully acquired in such property.[3]

B. An association shall not own or hold any real property, other than such real property as it occupies for its accommodation in the transaction of its business or such real property as it partly so occupies and partly leases to others pursuant to the provisions of this act, for a period longer than five years after the acquisition of such real property, but the Department may upon application of an association grant to it in writing the power to hold such real property for a longer period.[4]

C. An association shall not permit title to any real property of which it is in fact the owner to be carried in the name of any other corporation or person.[5]

L. 459, Section 1, 15 PS Sec. 1037.

Comments:

1. The acts cited above give to building and loan associations the powers to purchase real property or houses, and to erect houses. In the early days of building and loan associations in this Commonwealth, in order to aid in the development of communities, building and loan associations were given, and extensively used, these powers. However, as a result of changing conditions, the exercise of such powers by building and loan associations has steadily dwindled until today there is not a single building and loan association in the Commonwealth which engages in this practice. This draft therefore omits from the powers of building and loan associations the power to purchase real property for development or to erect houses.

This proposed section corresponds to Sections 1014 and 1214 of the proposed Banking Code.

2. See Section 805 of this draft.

3. This proposed clause is a catch-all in order to enable a building and loan association to purchase at a sheriff's sale such property as may be necessary to protect an equity it may already have in the property, or to accept property in settlement of debts.

4. Section 37, Clause 8, of the Corporation Act of 1874, supra, which supplanted Section 9 of the Act of April 12, 1859, P. L. 544, contains a provision similar to Clause (2) of this proposed section, but does not contain any provision compelling the sale of real property purchased or taken under the conditions set forth in that act. It seems clear that where property is purchased under such compulsion and would not otherwise constitute a legal investment for a building and loan association, it should be disposed of within a reasonable time. The existent acts relating to the acquiring of property in this manner by banks, bank and trust companies, and savings banks all specify a five year period, and Sections 1014 and 1214 of the proposed Banking Code reenact this limitation, adding, however, the proviso that the Department may in unusual circumstances, authorize such associations to hold such property for a longer period. A similar proviso is contained in the laws of most other states including New York, New Jersey, Mississippi, Kansas, Ohio, Texas, Wisconsin, and Illinois. It seems logical to enact a similar provision in the case of building and loan associations. The vesting of discretion by the Department seems desirable in order to prevent the necessity for the repetition of an act such as the Act of May 6, 1915, P. L. 271, Section 1, 7 PS Sec. 232, which, in a period when the value of real estate had depreciated considerably and numerous corporations had been compelled to purchase real estate under executions, provided that the period during which such corporations were authorized to hold such property be extended for a further period of five years.

5. This proposed provision is intended to curb the practice of holding property in straw names. It corresponds to a similar provision in Sections 1014 and 1214 of the proposed Banking Code.

Section 806. Limitation on Building Owned or Leased; Furniture, and Fixtures Therein.—A. The cost of the real property, including the building or buildings thereon, which an association owns and occupies for the transaction of its business, or partly so occupies and partly leases to others, together with the cost of furniture and fixtures therein which belong to the association, shall not at any time exceed in the agregate, five per centum of the amount paid in on account of its shares. However an association shall not purchase any real property or erect any building for its occupancy in the transaction of its business without the prior written approval of the Department.

B. An association shall not expend for the alteration, repair, or improvement of premises occupied but not owned by it, an amount which together with all prior alterations, repairs, or improvements on the same premises, exceeds five thousand dollars, without the prior written approval of the Department. The cost of such alterations repairs, or improvements, shall be amortized during the term of such lease or occupancy.

C. The foregoing provisions of this section shall not affect any real property and building or buildings owned or leased, and occupied, or furniture and fixtures owned and used by an association upon the effective date of this act for the transaction of its business, but such association shall not add to such real property, and shall not alter repair, or improve such premises if the cost of such additions, alterations, repairs, or improvements, together with any real property and building or buildings owned, or furniture and fixtures owned and used, or alterations, repairs, and improvements, of leased premises aggregate more than the maximum amount authorized by this section.

D. An association may lease to any other association or to any other corporation or person for offices or for any other legitimate purpose, premises which it owns or occupies for the transaction of its business.

Comments:

When building and loan associations began in Pennsylvania and until comparatively recently, the whole trend in Pennsylvania was toward small neighborhood associations with meeting places in a leased room. Comparatively recently, a number of associations have grown up, which conduct business on such a large scale that they have found it necessary to purchase and maintain buildings of their own in which to conduct their business. In other states likewise, this has been the trend.

In general, it is undersirable for an association to invest its funds in a permanent asset such as a building. It seems desirable, therefore, once the directors have determined to invest in a building, to provide that such action shall be authorized by the Department. The Department could base the determination of whether to approve such investment on the conditions in the community, the number of building and loan associations in the community, the general business trend in that locality, and the condition of the particular association. This section corresponds to that contained in the laws of Massachusetts, Illinois, and Michigan, except that the Massachusetts law limits an association whenever its assets amount to a maximum of one hundred thousand dollars, and the law of Michigan permits no association to erect a building unless its assets are five hundred thousand dollars or more.

The provisions as to leased buildings seem desirable. An association, should not, except in very unusual circustances, expend above five thousand dollars on the property of another corporation or person.

Section 807. Protection against Loss on Previous Loan or Investment.—The restrictions imposed by this act shall not be construed to prevent an association, in order to protect itself from loss upon a loan or investment previously made, lawfully and in good faith, from acquiring ownership of, or otherwise taking and holding, any kind of property or security, whether real or personal. Except as otherwise provided by this act any property so acquired, unless of the character and nature by this act authorized to be purchased or held by such association, shall be sold by it within five years, but the Department may, upon application of an association, grant to it, in writing, the power to hold such property for a longer period.

Comments:

This proposed section is new and corresponds to Sections 1017 and 1216 in the proposed Banking Code. An association should be permitted to take almost any kind of property where necessary to protect a prior loan or investment made in good faith. This proposed section gives it such power. The five year period seems long enough to dispose of almost any type of property which an association would thus acquire. However, additional flexibility is provided by the power of the Department, on special occasions, to grant authority to an association to hold such property for a period in excess of five years.

Section 808. Property Acquired before Effective Date of this Act.—This act shall not be construed to render unlawful the continued ownership or holding by an association of any loans, investments, or other real or personal property lawfully acquired prior to the effective date of this act. However, such loans and investments, or such other real or personal property shall be computed in determining the power under this act of an association to grant any addition loans or make any additional investments of the same or different kinds.

Comments:

This proposed section is new and corresponds to Section 1018 and 1217 of the proposed Banking Code. It seems clear that an association should not be required to dispose of a loan or an investment which, prior to the effective date of this act, was legal, but this should not enable it to continue to make such investments or loans.

Section 809. Segregation of Dues upon Order of Department.—A. Whenever it shall appear to the Department, that the affairs of an association are in a precarious condition, the Department may, by written order issued in the manner provided by law, prohibit such association from granting any further loans, from issuing any new shares, and from making any payments on account of withdrawn or matured shares, until the order is revoked in writing by the Department. The Department may also order that payments of dues made during the period during which such restrictions are in force, on account of installment shares, which have not been transferred and pledged to the association as security for loans, shall be segregated from the other assets of the association. Such order of the Department shall be known as an order of segregation. Such funds shall not be subject to any attachment issued on a judgment obtained by any creditor of the association and shall either be kept on deposit in a depository selected in the manner provided by this act, or invested in the bonds designated by this act as authorized investments for associations.

The money so deposited or the bonds so purchased shall be available exclusively for the benefit of the shareholders making such payments, and may be withdrawn during the period of segregation, upon thirty days' written notice.

All dues paid by shareholders whose shares are pledged to the association as security for loans during any period during which an order for segregation is in force, shall be applied as a credit against the principal of the loan so secured.

B. If the Secretary of Banking shall, in the manner provided by law take possession as receiver, of the business and property of an association, while an order of segregation is in force, or if liquidating trustees shall, pursuant to a plan of voluntary dissolution, take possession of the business and property of such association, while such order is in force, the payments on account of dues on shares which have not been transferred and pledged as collateral for any loan, which have been segregated pursuant to the order of segregation, shall be paid solely from the segregated funds or from the proceeds of the sale of the bonds, in which such segregated funds have been invested, and the shareholders, whose shares have been transferred and pledged as security for loans shall receive full credit for such payment on account of the principal of the loan so secured.

C. If an association, while an order of segregation is in force, shall enter into an agreement of merger of consolidation with another association or with other associations, or shall file a petition in the court of common pleas for a reduction of its liability to its shareholders, such payments made by holders of shares which have not been transferred and pledged as security for loans shall be returned to such shareholders, unless they agree in writing to such merger, consolidation, or reduction of liability, in which event such disposition shall be made of their portion of the funds which have been segregated on the bonds in which such segregated funds have been invested, as is provided in the agreement of merger or consolidation or such petition for reduction of liability to shareholders, shareholders whose shares are pledged as security for loans, shall be entitled to credit for payments made during the period during which the order of segregation was in force, if they repay such loans to the association within ninety days from the effective date of such merger, consolidation, or plan of reduction of liability. Otherwise such shareholders shall be persumed to have agreed to all the terms of the agreement of merger or consolidation, or the plan of reduction of liability.

D. The Department may revoke an order of segregation whenever it shall appear that an improvement in the condition of an association makes such action desirable. In such event, the association may exercise all the powers it could have exercised prior to the issuance of such order. It shall treat all payments on account of shares and otherwise, made by shareholders during the period during which the order of segregation was in force, in the same manner as all other payments on account of shares, whenever made.

Comments:

This proposed section is new in Pennsylvania law. However, it merely enacts into law a practice which has been followed by the Department of Banking for a number of years. In times of economic depression, some emergency power such as that granted to the Department in his proposed section is essential. In the past, it has permitted the Department and an association in a satisfactory manner to work out the difficulties of the association. This proposed section has been drawn to provide both for what should happen if the association is saved from the necessity of liquidating, merging, or consolidating, or reducing its liability to its shareholders, and what should happen if it should be forced to pursue any of these measures.

Section 810. Limitation on Loans and Investments.—An association shall not have the power to grant any loans or make any investments, except such loans or investments as are specifically authorized in this act.

Comments:

This draft sets forth in detail every type of loan and investment which an association is authorized respectively to grant or make. This proposed section is introduced merely for completeness to indicate that an association is barred from granting any other type of loans or making any other type of investment.

Section 811. Limitation of Power to Make Deposits.—An association shall not deposit any of the moneys received by it in any bank, bank and trust company, savings bank, or private bank, unless such institution is specifically approved by the board of directors of the association as a depository for the funds of the association.

Comments:

This proposed section is new in Pennsylvania law. It seems clear that where deposits of a building and loan association are made in banking institutions, the selection of such institutions should not be left to the treasurer of the association, but should be determined by resolution of the board of directors. This corresponds to a similar provision in Section 906 of the proposed Banking Code.

Section 812. Prohibition upon Accepting Deposits or Discounting Commercial Paper.—A. An association shall not receive money on deposit, except as payments on account of shares.

B. An association shall not purchase or discount any note, bill of exchange, draft, or other commercial paper.

References:

Act of May 8, 1857, P. L. 437, Section 1, 15 PS Sec. 1012.

Comments:

Section 1505 of the proposed Banking Code prohibits the accepting of deposits by any corporation or person other than a bank and trust company, a savings bank, or a private bank. Subsection A of this proposed section therefore merely supplements that section.

Act Act of 1857, supra, which has largely been supplanted by the Corporation Act of 1874 expressly prohibits building and loan associations from receiving moneys on deposit and from purchasing or discounting commercial paper. The courts have uniformly held that such powers are alien to the business of building and loan associations, see Manufacturers' and Mechanics' Savings and Loan Company v. Conover, 5 Phila. 18 (1862); Schober v. Accommodation Savings Fund and Loan Association, 35 Pa. 223 (1860); Building Association v. Seemiller, 35 Pa. 225n. (1860). It seems clear that receiving moneys on deposit or discounting commercial paper is not part of the legitimate business of a building and loan association.

ARTICLE IX

LOANS TO SHAREHOLDERS

Section 901. Method of Granting Loans to Shareholders; Bids; Premiums.—A. Mortgage loans shall be granted by an association pursuant to the provisions of this act, by one of the following methods.[1]

(1) At any regular meeting of the board of directors, or at any special meeting of which notice is given to all the shareholders, the directors may offer to lend funds of the association to the corporation or person who shall bid the highest rate of premium for the privilege of being granted such loan. The directors may receive bids orally or in writing, but all such bids shall be received in open meeting. The directors may establish any rules and regulations, not inconsistent with this act, for the receiving of such bids or the granting of such loans.

(2) At any regular meeting of the board of directors, or at any special meeting of which notice is given all the shareholders, the directors may offer to lend funds of the association to any corporation or person who shall agree in writing to pay a definite rate of premium for the privilege of being granted such loan, but such rate of premium shall not exceed one per centum per year of the amount of the loan. Loans may be granted in this manner without competitive bidding.[2]

(3) The premium paid, pursuant to the provisions of this section, by a borrower from an association, shall not be deemed usurious, although it exceeds the legal rate of interest, or when added to any interest paid upon such loan, it exceeds the legal rate of interest.[3]

B. Share loans may be granted by an association, pursuant to the provisions of this act in the manner provided by thsi section for the granting of mortgage loans, or in any other manner provided by its articles or by-laws.[4]

Comments:

1. In the early days of building and loan associations in this Commonwealth, there was a large demand for loans and a very small number of associations. Since building and loan associations are fundamentally mutual, the plan was devised of having shareholders, or corporations or persons intending to become shareholders to bid in open meeting for the privilege of being granted loans, the highest bidder being granted the loan. This method was incorporated into the Corporation Act of 1874, supra. As the number of associations steadily grew and the resources of associations which were available for loans increased, it seemed unnecessary to continue the cumbersome procedure of bidding for loans. The plan was devised of specifying a definite premium and allowing shareholders or corporations or persons intending to become shareholders, to agree in writing to pay such premium. The Act of 1901, supra, was intended to legalize such procedure. However, the courts held that a corporation or person could not be legally held to pay a premium which he had agreed in writing to pay if there had not been competititve bidding for the loan, see Equitable Building and Loan Association v. Thomas, 216 Pa. 571 (1907); Klein v. Pennsylvania Savings Fund and Loan Association, 216 Pa. 516 (1907); Keystone State Building and Loan Association v. Anderson, 70 Pa. Super. 231 (1918). The Act of 1913, as amended, supra, was passed to avoid the effect of these decisions.

As a matter of actual practice, almost no associations in this Commonwealth follow the method of competitive bidding in the granting of loans. However, this draft reenacts the provisions of existing law by permitting associations to grant loans either with or without competitive bidding. In this way, an association could determine the method of granting loans by the demand therefor.

2. The Act of 1913, as amended, supra, provides that where an association grants loans without competitive bidding, the rate of premium paid by the borrower cannot exceed two per centum per annum upon the amount of the loan. This draft, which substantially reenacts all the provisions of that act, changes the maximum percentage permitted to one per centum. Associations under this draft are limited in their loans upon the security of bonds and mortgages to first mortgages or split mortgages. Consequently the risk to the association is less than loans secured by second mortgages. As a matter of practice lower premiums have always been paid upon first mortgages than upon second mortgages. In view of the change effected by this draft in forbidding loans upon the security of second mortgages, except in the case of split mortgages, it seems desirable to reduce the maximum premium in cases in which there has been no competitive bidding from two per centum to one per centum.

3. This provision merely reenacts existing law.

4. The present law makes no distinction between the manner in which mortgage loans and share loans are granted. In actual practice, the law is disregarded and share loans are granted without competitive bidding and without requiring written agreements for premiums. This section, in addition to reenacting the present law, permits associations to follow the practices which they have established.

Section 902. Application for Mortgage Loan; Preservation of Application; Penalty.—A. An association shall not grant a mortgage loan, unless it shall first have obtained a written application, signed by the person for whose benefit the loan is to be made, which shall set forth:

(1) The name, address, age, and occupation of the applicant for the loan.

(2) The name and address of the employer of the applicant, if the applicant is employed.

(3) The location of the real property and the character of the improvements thereon.

(4) The name and address of the owner in fee of the real property at the time the application is made to the association.

(5) How and when title to the real property was acquired by the applicant, the actual cost of the real property, and the actual cost of any permanent improvements made thereon after the applicant acquired title, or, if the applicant does not have title at the time application is made, the date of the agreement of sale or option and the actual consideration to be paid for such real property.

(6) Whether any money or other thing of value has been or is to be paid to any person as a fee, commission, or gift by procuring or for endeavoring to procure such loan from the association or for services in making searches of title of real property offered to the association as security, or in drwing papers incident to the loan for which such real property is given as security, or for any other reason whatsoever, and if so, the amount or value of such fee, commission, gift, or other property of value, and to whom it has been or is to be paid.

(7) Whether in fact the applicant is the beneficial owner of the real property, and if not, who is the beneficial owner.

B. If the loan is granted by the association, such application shall be carefully preserved among the records of the association until the loan is fully repaid to it.

C. Any person who shall knowingly make any false or misleading statement in the application required by this section, or who shall knowingly conceal any material fact or facts required to be given in such application, or who shall falsify or mutilate any such application after it has been signed and delivered to the association or who shall abstract any such application from the records of the association, or who shall cause or induce any other person to make any such statement, conceal any such fact or facts, falsify, mutilate, or abstract any such application in the manner just described, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction thereof, be subject to imprisonment for a period not exceeding three years, or a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or both.

Act of April 25, 1929, P. L. 766, Sections 1 and 2; 15 PS Secs. 954 and 955.

Comments:

This proposed section substantially reenacts the provisions of the Act of 1929, supra.

Section 903. Security for Mortgage Loans.—A. An association shall grant mortgage loans to its shareholders, or to any person intending to become a shareholder, upon the following security only:

(1) The bond of the borrower, secured by the transfer and pledge to the association of installment shares in such association, which belong to the borrower and which have a par value at least equal to the amount of the loan, and further secured by a mortgage upon real property which belongs to the borrower, such mortgage being for at least the full amount of the loan.[1] A loan secured in this manner shall be known as a share-mortgage loan, and the mortgage securing such loan as a share mortgage.

(2) The bond of the borrower, secured by a mortgage upon real property which belongs to the borrower, such mortgage being for an amount not to exceed one-half of the amount of the loan, such portion of the loan to be known as the straight-mortem portion of the loan; and a bond for the remainder of the loan, secured by the transfer and pledge to the association of installment shares in such association, which belong to the borrower and which have a parvalue at least equal to the amount of such remainder of the loan, and further secured by a mortgage upon such real property, for an amount equal to such remainder of such loan, such remainder of such loan to be known as the share-mortgage portion of the loan. A loan secured by both a straight mortgage and a share mortgage, in this manner, shall be known as a split-mortgage loan.

The straight-mortgage portion of a split-mortgage loan shall not be secured by shares and an association shall not charge premiums or fines upon such portion of the loan.[2]

An association shall not demand payment of the straight-mortgage portion of a split-mortgage loan, except in a case of default by the borrower in the terms of the loan, until the share-mortgage portion of such loan has been repaid in full by the maturing of the shares assigned or pledged as security therefor or by any other method. Upon such payment of the share-mortgage portion of a split-mortgage loan, an association shall have the option either to demand and enforce payment of the straight-mortgage portion of the loan or to convert such loan to a share-mortgage loan upon the transfer and pledge to the association of installment shares in such association, which belong to the borrower and which have a par value at least equal to the amount of such loan.[3]

B. An association shall not grant any mortgage loan, unless the mortgage securing such loan (1) is a first lien[4] upon unencumbered, improved real property, or upon real property upon which a building is in the process of construction,[5] situated anywhere within the Commonwealth,[6] or where it is not a first lien upon such property, every equal or prior lien is owned by the association; and (2) does not, together with any other lien held by such association upon such property, exceed eighty per centum of the fair market value of such real property, plus the amount paid to the association, prior to or upon the day of the granting of such loan, upon shares to be assigned or pledged to the association as security for such loan.[7]

The provisions of this subsection shall not be construed to apply to a purchase money mortgage taken by an association upon such real property owned by it.[8]

C. An association shall not, directly or indirectly, grant to any one corporation or person, mortgage loans to a total amount exceeding five per centum of the amount paid to the association by its shareholders on account of its shares, but any association may grant to any one corporation or person, mortgage loans to a total amount of ten thousand dollars.

In computing the total mortgage loans made by an association to an individual, there shall be included all mortgage loans made by the association to a paortnership or other unincorporated association of which he is a member, all mortgage loans made either for his benefit or for the benefit of such partnership or other unincorporated association, and all mortgage loans to or for the benefit of a corporation of which he owns twenty-five per centum or more of the capital's stock.

In computing the total mortgage loans made by an association to a partnership or other unincorporated association there shall be included all mortgage loans to its individual members, all mortgage loans made for the benefit of such partnership or other unincorporated association or of any member thereof, and all mortgage loans to or for the benefit of any corporation of which the partnership or unincorporated association, or any member thereof, owns twenty-five percentum or more of the capital stock.

In computing the total mortgage loans made by an association to a corporation there shall be included all mortgage loans made for the benefit of the corporation and all mortgage loans to or for the benefit of any individual who owns twenty-five per centum or more of the capital stock of such corporation.

A mortgage loan shall be deemed to be made for the benefit of a corporation or person to the extent that the proceeds of such loans are credited or transferred to such corporation or person.[9]

D. An association shall not, upon the security of any one piece of real property, grant mortgage loans totalling more than twenty-five thousand dollars.[10]

Corporations Act of 1874, Section 37, Clause 4, 15 PS Sec. 951; Act of May 14, 1913, P. L. 205, Section 1 (b, c), amended by Act of April 8, 1927, P. L. 179, Section 1, 15 PS Sec. 954; Act of April 16, 1929, P. L. 527, Sections 1 and 2, 15 PS Secs. 957 and 958.

Comments:

1. This clause does not make any substantive change in the provisions of the Corporation Act of 1874, supra, but merely attempts to clarify the law on the subject of split mortgages.

2. This provision does not make any substantive change in the provisions of the Act of 1913, as amended, supra, but merely attemps to clarify the law on the subject of split mortgages.

3. As pointed out in subsequent footnotes in this proposed section, this draft provides that a mortgage loan can be secured only by a mortgage which is a first lien upon real property, unless the association holds all prior liens of such property. In view of that provision, it is probable that the split mortgage will come into very much more common usage by building and loan associations and will probably become the dominant type of mortgage security. In view of the this fact, this proposed section attempts in detail to provide for the various contingencies which may arise under the use of the split mortgage.

This provision makes the straight-mortgage portion of a split-mortgage loan the same type of long term mortgage loan as is the customary building and loan mortgage of today, that is, the share mortgage.

4. The proposed provision effects what is probably the most important single change proposed by this draft and enacts into law the uniform practice which is followed by building and loan associations in every portion of Pennsylvania, except in Philadelphia and in two or three surrounding cities. It provides that an association can accept as security for a mortgage loan, a mortgage which is a first lien upon real property, unless the association is the holder of every lien equal with or prior to such mortgage. Pennsylvania is virtually the only state in the United States in which building and loan associations flourish, with the possible exception of Maryland in which there is no state supervision of building and loan associations, which permits building and loan associations to lend without limitation on the security of mortgages which are not first liens upon real property. The great majority of states in the United States provide expressly that building and loan associations may accept as security for mortgages loans only mortgages which are first liens upon real property. These include Alabama, Arkansas, California, Connecticut, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio, Oregon, Texas, and Wisconsin.

The present depression has uncovered one significant fact with respect to building and loan associations. Although Philadelphia, the birthplace of building and loan associations in this country, has witnessed the almost complete collapse of a great many of its associations, the remainder of the state has fared comparatively well. The strongest single cause for the wide difference between the experience of the great many associations in Philadelphia and vicinity and that of the associations in the rest of the state is that the associations in Philadelphia and vicinity engage widely in the practice of granting loans upon the security of mortgages other than first liens upon property, while the associations in the rest of the state limit themselves exclusively to first mortgages.

It is true that the building and loan association should be today, as it was originally intended, an association to aid people of moderate means to become home owners. This provision can have no effect upon the carrying out of this purpose by associations. Under existent law an association cannot accept a mortgage upon any property to an amount exceeding eighty per centum of the value of such property plus the value of additional collateral given therefor. This provision does not make any change in this respect. An association can still grant a mortgage loan secured by a mortgage upon real property to an amount not exceeding eighty per centum of the value of the property. There can be no justification for continuing the rule that an association may accept second and third mortgages upon real property.

The Legislature has always considered itself the guardian of the building and loan association. In view of the experience described above in Philadelphia and vicinity, it seems apparent that the strongest single move the Legislature can take to rehabilitate building and loan associations in Philadelphia and vicinity is to require them to follow the practice pursued by building and loan associations in the remainder of Pennsylvania and in virtually every portion of the United States in which building and loan associations are a factor.

5. The present law contains no limitation, such as that in the laws of New York and numerous other states, that a building and loan association may grant mortgage loans only on the security of improved real property. It would seem that the only justification for lending on what might be construed unimproved property is to assist a home owner in erecting his home. This proposed section specifically authorizes such loans upon real property provided that the building is in the process of construction.

6. It seems that, as in the case of the proposed Banking Code with respect to banks and bank and trust companies, this draft should provide that a building and loan association can grant mortgage loans only upon the security of Pennsylvania real property.

This draft permits an association to take mortgages upon real property anywhere in the Commonwealth, regardless of where the office of the association is located. This merely enacts into law the practice of several of the strongest associations in Pennsylvania.

7. This draft substantially reenacts the provisions of the Act of 1929, supra.

8. Owing to the present economic depression, building and loan associations have had to take over on foreclosure thousands of properties. Without a provision such as this one, associations would be seriously hindered in disposing of such property. It seems that the Legislature should lend every possible aid to associations in disposing of the real estate which they are today forced to take.

9. The Act of 1929, supra, prohibits a building and loan association from lending to any one corporation or person an amount in excess of ten per centum of the total assets of the association. This draft reduces the figure to five per centum Recent developments and facts disclosed in the accounts of many associations which are in the process of liquidation indicate that it has been the practice in many cases for an association to lend a completely disproportionate amount of its assets to a single contractor or real estate sepculator, who dominated the board of directors. This is clearly a reprehensible practice. In addition to the fact that such practice frequently makes the financial stability of an association dependent upon the defaults of a single individual, it prevents the diversification of loans which is essential to the life of every building and loan association and which is so fundamentally a part of the function it should serve in the community. This draft reduces the figure to five per centum but we raise the question as to whether it is desirable to reduce this percentage further. This proposed section detailedly defines what shall be construed as a loan to one corporation or person, in order to prevent possible evasions from the operation of this rule.

10. During recent years, a practice has grown up among certain building and loan associations in Philadelphia county which were controlled and dominated by real estate speculators and operators, of lending gigantic sums of money upon hotels, office buildings, bowling alleys, garages, theaters, factories, warehouses, and other industrial and specialty buildings. Thus, for example a syndicated loan of $750,000.00 was made by Philadelphia building and loan associations upon the security of a large office building in the central part of Philadelphia, which was already subject to a first mortgage of $7,000,000.00. Another syndicated loan of over $1,000,000.00 was placed on a hotel in the central part of Philadelphia which was already subject to prior encumbrances of over $4,000,000.00. Such practices are reprehensible beyond expression and cannot be defended upon any ground whatsoever as being remotely germane to the legitimate purpose of building and loan associations. The building and loan association was originally conserved as an association to aid the prospective home owners to purchase or to build homes. It is still viewed in this light by the great majority of associations not only throughout the rest of the Commonwealth but in Philadelphia as well, and in the remainder of the country. Thus, for example, Massachusetts limits the maximum loan which may be made upon a single piece of property to $8.000.00. We suggest as a reasonable maximum a loan of $25,000.00 upon a single piece of property, leaving to the Legislature the question of whether this amount should be reduced still further. A maximum limitation of $25,000.00 embraces all types of mortgage loans which are properly wihtin the scope of building and loan associations.

Section 904. Limitation upon Disposal of Mortgages.—Except as otherwise specifically provided in this act,[1] an association shall not, except with the written consent of the owner of the real property upon which a mortgage or other encumbrances is secured, sell, transfer, or assign such mortgage or other encumbrances, and it shall not sell, transfer, or assign such mortgage or other encumbrance, until every subsequent mortgage or encumbrance owned by it upon such real property shall have been paid in full. The corporation or person to whom such transfer, sale, or assignment is made shall not have the power to charge fines or premiums, unless such corporation is a building and loan association.[2]

Comments:

1. See Section 801 of this draft.
2. Although the statutory law is silent on the power of a building and loan association to sell, transfer, or assign a mortgage even with the consent of the borrower, the Supreme Court in Quein V. Smith, 108 Pa. 325 (1885), held that an association has such power. Although the practice is not frequent in Pennsylvania, occasions arise when its use is advantageous.

Since this draft restricts associations to granting mortgage loans upon the security of other than first liens upon real property, but permits them to take liens other than first liens where they themselves are the owners of all prior liens, it seems clear that an association should not be permitted to transfer a first mortgage while the association still has a second mortgage. This proposed provision is introduced merely to preclue the possiblility of such practice.

Section 905. Reduction of Mortgage Loan by Application of Shares; Appropriation of Shares.—A borrower, with the consent of the association, may have the periodical installments of dues on his shares credited on account of the principal of the mortgage loan at any time and may participate in the profits of the association upon waiving his right to a reduction of interest, and of premium if any, the same as if the dues had not been so credited. The borrower in such case shall have the right, with the consent of the association, when the dues so credited on account of the principal of the loan and the profits or interest thereon as fixed in accordance with the by-laws of the association shall equal the par value of one or more shares, to have the number of shares reduced to such number that their aggregate par value shall not be less than the reduced amount or balance of the principal of the loan still remaining unpaid. The periodical installments of dues on the reduced number of shares, as well as the interest on the reduced principal of the loan, and the premium if any, shall be payable after the date of such reduction the same as if the shares had been originally issued in such reduced number as of such date and the loan made for such reduced amount. When the dues on the shares are so credited, such shares shall not be subject to losses beyond the profits thereon not credited on account of the principal of the loan. When the dues thus credited on account of the principal of the loan, together with the accumulated profits thereon, equal the principal of the loan or the balance thereof in case the number of shares has been reduced, the borrower shall revert to the association.

Act of June 12, 1931, P. L. 504, Section 1, 15 PS Sec. 962.

Comments:

This proposed section is a reenactment of the Act of 1931, supra, except for a few changes in phraseology necessitated in order to make that act consistent with the rest of this draft.

The Act of 1931 was drafted by experienced building and loan association men of eminence, recognized as leaders in the building and loan association field in this Commonwealth. In view of this fact, together with the fact that this act became law at the last regular session of the Legislature, we did not feel justified in altering its provisions in any manner whatsoever.

However, there are certain questions in connection with this act which we believe the Legislature should specifically consider and they are therefore presented as queries in this footnote.

The provision with regard to reducing the amount of the loan and the amount of the periodical payments by crediting the value of the stock is clearly advantageous to both the association and the borrower and is in accordance with the practice followed by most of the associations in Pennsylvania.

Query: With regard to crediting the dues, as paid, on account of the principal of the mortgage loan, there is a difference of opinion as to whether the shares should be permitted to participate in the profits of the association inasmuch as they are not subject to losses beyond the amount of profits apportioned to them. It seems more equitable for the borrower to share in both the profits and losses, or in neither. Should this proposed section adopt this viewpoint?

Query: Is Section 2 of the Act of 1931, supra, which is omitted in this proposed section necessary in view of the other provisions contained in this draft with regard to installment shares pledged as security for mortgage loans?

Section 906. Interest Reduction Loans.—A borrower, with the consent of the association, may have the periodical installments of dues on his shares credited on account of the principal of the mortgage loan at such times as shall be provided in the mortgage and also in its accompanying bond or other obligation, if any; and the interest, and the premium if any, thereon shall be computed on the balance of the principal of the loan in each case when the dues have been so credited. The borrower in such case may agree that the subsequent dues on his shares shall become automatically increased by the amount of the reduction of interest, and of premium if any, in each case when the dues have been so credited, so that the total of each monthly installment of dues and interest, and premium if any, shall remain the same until the loan has been paid in full, but the right to have the dues on the shares credited on account of the principal of the loan as well as the agreement, if any, that the dues on the shares shall become automatically increased as herein provided, shall be set forth in the mortgage and also in its accompanying bond or other obligation, if any.

The borrower shall have the right, with the consent of the association, when the dues so credited on account of the principal of the loan shall equal the par value of one or more shares, to have the iumber of shares reduced to such number that their aggregate par value shall not be less than the reduced amount or balance of the principal of the loan still remaining unpaid. The periodical installments of dues on the shares thus reduced, as well as the interest on the reduced principal of the loan, and premium thereon, if any, shall be payable after the date of such reduction the same as if the shares had been originally issued in such reduced number as of such date and such loan made for such reduced amount. When the dues on the shares are credited on account of the principal of the loan as herein provided, such shares shall not participate in the profits of the association nor be subject to losses. When the loan has been paid in full by the crediting of the dues thereon, as herein provided, the borrower shall be entitled to have his mortgage satisfied and the shares shall revert to the association.

Comments:

See footnote to Section 905 of this draft.

This section authorizes associations to grant interest reduction loans. The shares pledged as security for interest reduction loans do not participate in the profits of the association and are not subject to any losses. This seems to be more equitbale than the method of crediting dues to principal authorized by Section 905 of this draft.

Section 907. Foreclosure on Mortgage for Non-Payment of Dues, Interest, Premiums, or Fines.—In the case of a default in the payment of dues, interest, premiums, or fines due on a mortgage loan an association shall not have the power to enforce payment of the principal of such loan by legal proceedings, until such payments have not been made by the borrower for a period of six months in the case of a mortgage which is a first lien upon real property or for a period of three months in the case of a mortgage which is not a first lien upon real property.

Comments:

This proposed section substantially reenacts the provisions of the Act of 1879, as amended, supra.

Section 908. Withdrawal Value of Shares as Basis for Credit in Foreclosure.—In the event of a foreclosure by an association of a mortgage securing a loan, the credit which shall be allowed to the shareholder on account of his shares which are pledged as security for the loan, shall be withdrawal value of such shares.

Comments:

This proposed section substanially reenacts the provision of the Act of 1879A, as amended, supra, making the withdrawal value of the shares the determinant of the amount with which the shareholder is to be credited on account of his shares.

Section 909. Security for Share Loans.—An association may grant share loans to any of its shareholders upon the following security only: the note of the borrower, secured by the transfer and pledge to the association of installment or prepaid shares, which have not previously been trasnferred or pledged to anyone other than the association; the amount paid in on account of such shares prior to or at the time of the granting of any loan upon the seucity of such shares shall be at least equal to the total amount of all loans granted thereon.

Corporation Act of 1874, Section 37, Clause 4, 15 PS Sec. 951.

Comments:

The Corporation Act of 1874 merely requires that "good and ample security, as prescribed by the by-laws of the corporation, shall be given by the borrower to secure the re-payment of the loan". As a practical matter, however, associations grant share loans in the manner provided by this proposed section. It seems clear that the statutory law should set forth fully the security which may be accepted for share loans. This proposed section therefore enacts into law the existing practice on share loans.

Section 910. Repayment of Loans before Maturity.—A. A borrower shall have the right to repay a loan to an association at any time before the maturity of the shares securing such loan, at any regular meeting of the board of directors of such association.

B. When a borrower repays a loan to an association before the maturity of the shares securing such loan, he may

(1) Pay the amount of the principal of the loan in cash and have the shares securing such loan re-transferred to him by the association; or

(2) In the case of a mortgage loan, apply the withdrawal value of the shares securing such loan against the principal of such loan, and pay the balance in cash; or

(3) In the case of a share loan, take credit for the withdrawal value of the shares securing such loan up to the amount of the principal of the loan, and as to any balance remaining, acquire the rights of a withdrawing shareholder.

C. Upon paying a loan to an association in the manner provided in this section, a borrower shall be entitled, in the case of a mortgage loan, to the satisfaction of his mortgage, and in the case of a share loan, to the return of his note.

D. If a borrower shall repay a loan existent upon the effective date of this act, upon which the association has deducted premiums or interest in advance, such proportion of the premiums or interest, as the by-laws shall determine, shall be refunded to such borrower, unless the same amounts to two per centum or less of the amount of such loan, in which case no such refund shall be made, but an association shall not in any event retain more than one one-hundredth of such premiums for each calendar month that has expired since the date of the meeting upon which the loan was granted or more than the interest which, at the rtae of interest charged upon the loan would have been due up to the date of settlement, if the interest had not been paid in advance.

Act of April 10, 1879, P. L. 16, Section 4, amended by Act of April 30, 1929, P. L. 901, Section 1, 15 PS Sec. 959.

Comments:

This proposed section does not effect any important substantive change in existent law. It attempts to codify the Act of 1879, as amended, supra, and numerous decisions based upon that act, such as Consolidated Building and Loan Association v. Shipley, 95 Pa. Super. 232 (1928).

However, this draft provides that a borrower cannot compel an association to accept payment prior to the date of the maturity of the shares securing such loan except at a regular meeting of the board of directors. The reason for this is that most associations transact all of their business on their regular meeting days. This seems the proper time to provide that an association must accept payment of a loan before maturity. In addition, in the case of mortgage loans, it does not seem fair to the association to permit a borrower to tender repayment of his loan at any time at all, for example, a day after the last regular meeting, thus compelling the association to hold the money idle for perhaps a month, or until they meet again.

Section 911. Demand by Association of Payment of Mortgage or Share Loans.—A. An association shall not, except upon a default by the borrower, have the power to demand payment of any mortgage loan or share loan until the shares transferred and pledged to it as security for the loan have matured.

B. The prohibition of this section shall apply despite any provision to the contrary in the note, or in the bond and mortgage, respectively, upon which such loan is made.

Comments:

Although the statutory law is silent on the rule advanced by this proposed section, the decisions of the courts and the opinions of the text writers on building and loan associations have assumed that an association cannot demand payment of any loan, except in the case of default, until the shares pledged as security for such loan have matured. Despite the silence of statutory law on the subject, the courts have refused to permit building and loan associations to grant loans on the security of shares on terms other than those which fall within the scope of the building and loan plan of granting loans upon shares. Thus, Mr. Justice Fell said in Freemansburg B. & L. Association v. Watts, 199 Pa. 221 (1901), at 228:

"* * * Frequently, the obligations taken by building associations from borrowing members very imperfectly express the true relation of the parties to each other, as determined by the object in view and the rules for the government of the association, but they should never be considered as establishing a new relation at variance with the fundamental principles on which such associations are organized and conducted, unless the language used will admit of no other construction. * * *"

Section 912. Method of Collecting Premiums or Interest.—A. Any premium which is bid or is agreed to be paid to an association, pursuant to the provisions of this act,[1] shall be paid in equal periodical installments extending over the period of the loan. An amount not exceeding the amount of the first such payment shall be due in advance of or upon the day of the granting of the loan, and the remaining installments shall each be payable upon the same day as the dues upon the shares securing such loan.[2]

B. Interest upon a loan granted by the association shall not be charged or deducted in advance, whether such interest is charged in lieu of premiums or otherwise, but it shall be paid in equal periodical installments extending over the period of the loan.[3]

C. If the Secretary of Banking shall take possession of an association as receiver for the purpose of liquidating its business and property, or if a liquidating trustee or liquidating trustees shall take possession, pursuant to a plan of voluntary dissolution, a borrower, upon whose loan the association has prior to the effective date of this act deducted premiums or interest in advance, shall be entitled, upon the payment of such loan to the association, to receive the same credit for such premium or interest in advance, as he would have been entitled to receive had the association not been in the possession of the Secretary of Banking as receiver or of a liquidating trustee or liquidating trustees upon the date of such payment and had such payment on such date been a voluntary repayment before maturity of such loan. However, a borrower shall not, after such taking of possession by the Secretary of Banking as receiver, or by liquidating trustees, be entitled to any credit for premiums paid in periodical installments, except in the case of periodical installments which had been paid prior to, but which were not yet due upon, the day on which such possession was taken by the Secretary of Banking as receiver or by a liquidating trustee or liquidating trustees.[4]

Comments:

1. See Section 901 of this draft.

2. Under the Act of 1879, supra, three principal plans of payment of premium grew up in Pennsylvania: the interest in lieu of premium plan, the gross premium plan, and the installment premium plan. The first of these is not used by any association in the Commonwealth today. The gross premium plan is still in use among a comparatively few institutions in Pennsylvania. The overwhelming majority of building and loan associations in this state, as well as those in virtually all the other states in the United States, follow the installment premium plan which is the one substantially reenacted by this proposed section. Under the installment premium plan the bookkeeping is very much simpler than is the case in the gross premium plan. Under the gross premium plan a complicated system of bookkeeping involving earned and unearned premium accounts must be kept, in view of the fact that an association may have to return a portion of the premium if the borrower repays a loan prior to maturity. This becomes particularly complicated in the case of a serial association. It therefore seems desirable in this draft to prohibit the use of any plan in Pennsylvania but the installment premium plan.

3. Under the Act of 1879, the only plan under which interest was charged in advance by a building and loan association was interest in lieu of premium. As stated in footnote 2 to this proposed section, this plan has fallen into complete disuse in this Commonwealth. A charge of interest in advance in addition to a premium has never been considered legal in this Commonwealth. This proposed section therefore makes no substantive change in the existing law or practice in Pennsylvania.

4. This proposed provision is new in the statutory law of Pennsylvania, but it changes the existent case law. Under the rule of Strohen v. Franklin Savings and Loan Association, 115 Pa. 273 (1886), and subsequent cases, the borrower is, in the situation contemplated by this proposed subsection, entitled to the repayment of his premium in full, whether such premium has been paid in advance or has been paid in installments. The rule expressed by this proposed subsection, which differentiates the result in the case of premiums paid in advance from the result in the case of premiums paid in installments, seems more equitable.

ARTICLE X.

MERGER AND CONSOLIDATION

Section 1001. Merger and Consolidation Authorized.—Any two or more associations may, in the manner hereinafter provided in this act, be merged into one of such associations, hereinafter designated as the surviving association, or consolidated into a new association to be formed under this act.

Act of May 3, 1909, P. L. 408, Section 1, 15 PS Sec. 421.

Comments:

The Act of 1909, supra, applying to all business corporations is the only act in this Commonwealth covering merger or consolidation of building and loan associations. As used in that act, the words "consolidate" and "merge" appear to be used synonymously, whereas such words, technically, have different meanings. In a merger, only one of the constituent corporations survives, whereas the others lose their identities; while in a consolidation all the constitutent corporations lose their identities and a new corporation springs up in their place. This draft follows Section 901 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 1401 of the proposed Banking Code and like the Uniform Act and the acts of the states above listed, makes a clear distinction between a merger and a consolidation.

The proposed Business Corporation Law provides in detail for the merger or consolidation of domestic with foreign corporations. This draft includes no such provision since foreign building and loan associations are prohibited under this draft.

Section 1002. Approval of Joint Plan of Merger or Consolidation.—A. The board of directors of each of the associations which desire to merge or consolidate shall, by resolution adopted by at least a majority of all the members of each board, approve a joint plan of merger or consolidation, as the case may be, setting forth the terms and conditions of the merger or consolidation and the mode of carrying the same into effect, the manner and basis of converting the shares of each association into shares or other securities or obligations of the surviving or new corporation, as the case may be, and such other details and provisions as are deemed necessary.[1]

B. The Board of directors of each association, upon approving such plan of merger or plan of consolidation in accordance with the provisions of this act, shall, by resolution, direct that the plan be submitted to a [illegible] of the shareholders of such association entitled to vote thereon, at an annual or special meeting of the shareholders. Written notice shall, not less than fifteen days before such annual or special meeting, be given respectively to each shareholder of record. The notice shall state the place, day, hour, and purpose of the meeting, and a copy or a summary of the plan of merger or plan of consolidation, as the case may be, shall be included in or enclosed with such notice. Such notice shall also be published once a week for two consecutive weeks before such meeting in at least one newspaper of general circulation.[2]

C. The plan of merger or consolidation shall be ratified upon receiving the affirmative vote of the holders of at least a majority of the outstanding shares entitled to vote thereon of each of the merging or consolidating associations.[3]

Act of May 3, 1909, P. L. 408, Section 2, 15 PS Sec. 422.

Comments:

1. Under the Act of 1909, supra, the directors of each corporation are required to enter into a joint agreement for the merger and consolidation of the constituent corporations. The agreement is required to set forth: "the terms and conditions thereof, the mode of carrying the same into effect, the name of the new corporation, the number and names of the directors and other officers thereof, and who shall be the first directors and officers, and their places of residence, the number of shares of the capital stock, the amount or par value of each share, and the manner of converting the capital stock of each of said corporations into the stock of the new corporation, and how and when directors and officers shall be chosen, with such other details as they shall deem necessary to perfect the said consideration and merger." The word "consideration," which appears in the quoted petition of the Act of 1909, apparently should be "consolidation."

This provision of this draft is a restatement of the quoted portion of the Act of 1909, except that the joint agreement specified in that act is here designated as a joint plan of merger or consolidation. We have adopted this designation because this draft, in the succeeding section, requires articles of merger or consolidation to be filed with the Department of State and the Department of Banking. Under the Act of 1909, the joint agreement is required to be so filed.

This proposed section follows Section 902 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 1402 of the proposed Banking Code.

2. Under the Act of 1909, supra, after the directors of each corporation approve the joint agreement of merger and consolidation, the next step is to submit the joint agreement to the stockholders of each corporation at either special or annual meetings, after notice of "the time, place and object of which * * * meetings * * * [is] given by publication, once a week for two consecutive weeks before said respective meetings, in at least one newspaper in the county or in each of the counties in which the principal office of said respective corporations shall be situate * * *."

It will be noted that the Act of 1909 requires only constructive notice by publication to be given to the shareholders of the corporation. This draft, in addition to requiring constructive notice by publication, also requires written notice to be given to each shareholder, whether or not the shareholder is entitled to vote. The Uniform Act and the new corporation acts of Illinois, Indiana, and California do not require notice of a merger or consolidation to be given by publication. On the other hand, the laws of Delaware, New Jersey, and the new corporation act of Michigan require notice by publication, as well as written notice to each shareholder.

Query: Whether notice by publication is necessary, if written notice is required to be given to each shareholder.

Unlike the Act of 1909, this draft also requires that each shareholder shall receive a copy of a summary of the plan of merger or consolidation. This provision was taken from the new Illinois act and seems to be very desirable. A similar provision is contained in the new California ct.

3. Under the Act of 1909, supra, the vote of a majority in amount of the entire capital stock of each corporation is necessary to the adoption of the merger and consolidation agreement. On the other hand, the Uniform Act and the acts of Delawre, New Jersey, Michigan, Illinois, California, and many other states, require at least a two-thirds vote of the outstanding shares of a corporation for the approval of a merger or consolidation.

Section 1003. Articles of Merger or Consolidation.—Upon the approval, pursuant to the provisions of this act, of the plan of merger or the plan of consolidation by the shareholders of the associations desiring to merge or consolidate, triplicate originals of articles of merger or articles of consolidation, as the case may be, shall be executed under the seal of each association by two duly authorized officers of each association, and shall set forth:

(1) The name of the surviving or new association.

(2) The time and place of the meeting of the directors at which the plan of merger or consolidation was proposed, and the time and place of the meeting of the shareholders of each corporation at which the plan of merger or consolidation, as the case may be, was ratified, the kind and period of notice given to the shareholders, and the total vote by which the plan was adopted.

(3) In the case of a merger any changes desired to be made in the articles of the surviving association, or, in the case of a consolidation, all of the statements required by this act to be set forth in the original articles in the case of the formation of an association.

(4) The number, names, and addresses of the persons to be the first directors of the surviving or new association.

(5) The plan of merger or consolidation.

Pennsylvania

Act of May 3, 1909, P. L. 408, Section 2, 15 PS Sec. 422.

Comments:

This proposed section of this draft follows Section 903 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 1403 of the proposed Banking Code and makes a radical change in the procedure outlined in the Act of 1909 for the merger or consolidation of corporations. Under the Act of 1909, the directors and shareholders approve a joint agreement, which is filed with the Department of State. Under this draft, the directors and shareholders first approve a plan of merger or consolidation and then articles of merger or consolidation are drawn up for presentation to the Department of State and the Department of Banking. This seems to be more logical than the present practice in Pennsylvania. In the case of a merger, the surviving corporation certainly should not spring up in any manner other than that required for the formation of a corporation in the first instance, namely, by the filing of articles of incorporation. The procedure set forth in this draft was taken from the new Illinois act. The Uniform Act, in the case of a consolidation, requires articles of incorporation to be prepared and delivered to the secretary of state, together with the joint agreement. In the case of a merger, that act requires the agrement to be filed with the secretary of state.

Section 1004. Filing of Articles of Merger or Consolidation; Payment of Fees; Approval by Department of State.—A. The triplicate originals of the articles of merger or articles of consolidation, as the case may be, and the proof of publication of the advertisement, required by this act shall be delivered to the Department of State.

B. In addition to any taxes and charges provided by law in the case of any corporation, an association shall pay to the Department of State such reasonable fees, as shall be established by rule and regulation by the Department of Banking for the investigation made by the Department of Banking pursuant to the provisions of this act, to determine whether the articles of merger or articles of consolidation, as the case may be, should be approved. Such fee for the investigation by the Department of Banking shall be paid to the Department of State at the time of the filing with it of the articles of merger or articles of consolidation, and shall be paid by the Department of State, through the Department of Revenue, into the Banking Department Fund.

C. The Department of State shall examine such articles of merger or articles of consolidation and such proof of publication to determine whethey they contain all the information and are in the form required by this act, and also whether the name of the surviving or new association, as the case may be, conforms with the requirements of law for the name of such an association or, if the name is not the same as either or any of the merging or consolidating associations, whether it is the same as one already adopted or reserved by another corporation or person, or is so similar thereto that it is likely to mislead the public.

After all the taxes and other charges have been paid as required by law, if the articles of merger or articles of consolidation and the proof of publication contain the information and are in the form required by this act the Department of State shall endorse its approval upon each of the triplicate originals of the articles of merger or articles of consolidation and shall forthwith transmit them to the Department of Banking.

D. If the Department of State shall disapprove the articles of merger or the articles of consolidation pursuant to this act, it shall forthwith give notice thereof to the association, stating in detail its reasons for doing so, and stating how such association can remedy the nonconformance with the provisions of this act. Upon remedying the defect such association may in the same manner file the same or amended articles whichever the particular case may require.

Act of May 3, 1909, P. L. 408, Section 2, 15 PS Sec. 422.

Comments:

Under the Act of 1909, the secretary of each corporation, in a consolidation and merger proceeding, is required to issue a certificate that the joint agreement of merger was approved by a majority vote of the shareholders of the corporations. The certificate and the joint agreement are then required to be filed in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, who is required to present them to the Governor for his approval. Upon the agreement being approved by the Governor, and upon the issuance of new letters patent by the Governor, the merger becomes effective.

This draft, as in the case of the formation of associations, does not require the Governor to approve articles of merger or consolidation. This duty is placed squarely upon the Department of State and the Department of Banking. The Uniform Act and practically all of the corporation laws of other states prescribe a similar procedure.

This proposed section is based upon Section 904 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 1404 of the proposed Banking Code. Like the proposed Banking Code, this article on merger and consolidation of building and loan associations provides that the substantive questions determining whether or not the merger or consolidation would be desirable should be decided by the Department of Banking. The relationship of the Department of Banking and the Department of State, respectively, to the approval of a plan of merger or consolidation is the same as their respective duties in the case of the formation of an association or the approval of an amendment to the articles of an association.

Section 1005. Approval of Articles of Merger or Consolidation by Department of Banking.—A. The Department of Banking shall immediately upon the receipt from the Department of State of the articles of merger or articles of consolidation, conduct such examination as it may deem necessary to ascertain from the best sources of information at its command:

(1) Whether the name of the surviving or new association is likely to mislead the public as to its character or purpose.

(2) Whether the consolidation or merger is made for legitimate purposes.

(3) Whether the interests of the shareholders or creditors are adequately protected.

(4) Whether the surviving or new association meets all the requirements of this act and violates none of its prohibitions.

B. Within thirty days after the receipt of the articles of merger of articles of consolidation from the Department of State, the Department of Banking shall, upon the basis of the facts disclosed by the investigation provided for by this section, either approve or disapprove such articles. It shall immediately notify the Department of State in writing of its action. If it shall approve the articles of merger or articles of consolidation, it shall sign its approval upon the triplicate originals. It shall retain one of the triplicate originals and return the other two to the Department of State.

C. If the Department of Banking disapproves the articles of merger or the articles of consolidation, it shall return them to the Department of State stating in detail its reasons for doing so. The Department of State shall immediately give notice to the associations desiring to merge or consolidate, of the action of the Department of Banking and of the reasons therefor as stated to it by that Department. Such corporations may, within thirty days after the Department of State sends them notice of the disapproval of their articles of merger or articles of consolidation, appeal from such disapproval to the Governor who shall hear such appeal promptly, and shall, within thirty days thereafter, decide the matter and certify his decision to the Department of Banking. The decision of the Governor shall be conclusive and not subject to review. The Department of Banking shall act in accordance therewith.

Comments:

This proposed section corresponds to Section 1405 of the proposed Banking Code. As explained in the comments to Section 1004 of this draft, the relationship of the Department of Banking to the granting of articles of merger or consolidation is the same as that contained in the proposed Banking Code, and is substantially similar to that provided by this draft with respect to the granting of the original articles of incorporation and of any subsequent articles of amendment.

Section 1006. Issuance of Certificate of Merger or Certificate of Consolidation.—Immediately upon receipt of the two signed triplicate originals of the articles of merger or the articles of consolidation of an association from the Department of Banking, the Department of State shall file and record one of them and shall issue a certificate of merger or a certificate of consolidation. The remaining triplicate of the articles of merger or articles of consolidation and the certificate of merger or consolidation shall be sent by the Department of State to the surviving or new association, as the case may be, which shall then have the articles of merger or the articles of consolidation recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds in the county in which the place of business of the association is situated. The triplicate original of the articles of merger or articles of consolidation, upon being recorded by the recorder of deeds, shall be returned to the association.

Comments:

This proposed section corresponds to Section 1406 of the proposed Banking Code.

The Act of 1909 does not require the joint agreement of merger and consolidation to be recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds.

Kuyalowicz v. Schuylkill Gas and Electric Company, 1 D. & C. 159 (1921). See also Keller v. Riverton Consolidated Water Company, 34 Pa. Super. 301 (1907), in which a similar conclusion was reached under the Act of May 29, 1901, P. L. 349, which formerly authorized merger and consolidation proceedings in Pennsylvania. It is submitted that articles of merger or articles of consolidation should be recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds of the proper county, just as original articles of incorporation or articles of amendment are required to be recorded. Accordingly, this draft, like the proposed Business Corporation Law and the proposed Banking Code, provides for the recording of such articles. The Uniform Act and the acts of Delaware, New Jersey, Illinois, Michigan, California, and many other states contain a similar requirement.

Section 1007. Effect of Merger or Consolidation.—Upon the merger or consolidation becoming effective, the several associations parties to the plan of merger or consolidation shall be a single association, which, in the case of a merger, shall be that association designated in the plan of merger as the surviving association, and, in the case of a consolidation, shall be the new association provided for in the plan of consolidation. The separate existence of all associations parties to the plan of merger or consolidation shall cease, except, in the case of a merger, that of the surviving association. The surviving or new association, as the case may be, shall have all the rights, privileges, immunities, and franchises of each of the merging or consolidating associations, except that the surviving or new association shall not thereby acquire authority to engage in any business or exercise any right which cannot be acquired by, or which is forbidden to, any association which is incorporated under this act. All the property, real, personal, and mixed, of each of the associations parties to the plan of merger or consolidation, and all debts or obligations due to any of them, including subscriptions to shares and other choses in action belonging to either or any of them, shall be taken and deemed to be transferred to and vested in the surviving or new association, as the case may be, without further act or deed. The surviving or new association shall thenceforth be responsible for all the liabilities and obligations of each of the associations so merged or consolidated, in the same manner as if the surviving or new association had itself incurred such liabilities or obligations; but the liabilities of the merging or consolidating associations, or of their shareholders, directors, or officers, shall not be affected, nor shall the rights of the creditors thereof or of any persons dealing with such associations, or any liens upon the property of such corporations, be impaired by such merger or consolidation, and any claim existing or action or proceeding pending by or against any of such associations may be prosecuted to judgment as if such merger or consolidation had not taken place, or the surviving or new association may be proceeded against or substituted in its place. In the case of a merger, the articles of incorporation of the surviving association shall be deemed to be amended to the extent, if any, that changes in its articles are stated in the articles of merger; and in the case of a consolidation, the statements set forth in the articles of consolidation, and which are required or permitted to be set forth in the articles of incorporation of associations formed under this act, shall be deemed to be the articles of incorporation of the new association.

Comments:

The provisions of this proposed section correspond to Section 906 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 1407 of the proposed Banking Code and are taken from Section 47 of the Uniform Act and Section 68 of the new Illinois act.

The Act of 1909, supra, provides that upon a consolidation or merger becoming effective, the consolidating or merging corporations shall be:

"* * * one corporation under the name adopted in and by said agreement, possessing all the rights, privileges, and franchises theretofore vested in each of them; and all the estate and property, real and personal, rights of action, of each of said corporations, shall be deemed and taken to be transferred to and vested in the said new corporation, without any further act or deed: Provided, That all rights of creditors and all liens upon the property of each of said corporations shall continue unimpaired, limited in lien to the property affected by such liens at the time of the creation of the same, and the respective constituent corporations may be deemed to be in existence to preserve the same; and all debts not of record, duties, and liabilities of each of said constituent corporations shall thenceforth attach to the said new corporation, and may be enforced against it to the same extent and by the same process as if said debts, duties, and liabilities had been contracted by it. * * *"

This proposed section of this draft makes no change in existing law and similar provisions are contained in the laws of many other states.

Section 1008. Rights of Dissenting Shareholders.—A. If any shareholder of an association, which becomes a party to a plan of merger orconsolidation shall file with such association prior to or at the meeting of shareholders at which the plan of merger or consolidation is submitted to a vote, a written objection to such plan of merger or consolidation, and shall not vote in favor thereof, and such shareholder, within twenty days after the merger or consolidation was effected, shall make written demand on the surviving or new association for the payment of the fair value of his shares as of the day prior to the date on which the vote was taken approving the merger or consolidation, without regard to any depreciation or appreciation thereof in consequence of the merger or consolidation, the surviving or new association shall pay to such shareholder the fair value of his shares upon surrender of the share certificate or other evidence of his shares. The demand of the shareholder shall state the number and kind of the shares owned by him. Any shareholder failing to make demand within the twenty-day period shall be conclusively presumed to have consented to the merger or consolidation, and shall be bound by the terms thereof. If within thirty days after the date on which such merger or consolidation was effected, the value of such shares shall be agreed upon by the dissenting shareholder and the surviving or new association, payment thereof shall be made within ninety days after the date on which such merger or consolidation was effected, upon the surrender of the share certificate or other evidence of his shares. Upon the payment of the agreed value, the dissenting shareholder shall cease to have any interest in such shares or in the association.

B. If within such period of thirty days the shareholder and the surviving or new association do not so agree, then the dissenting shareholder may, within sixty days after the expiration of the thirty-day period, apply by petition to the court of common pleas within the county in which the place of business of the surviving or new association is situated for the appointment by the court of three disinterested persons to appraise the fair market value of his shares without regard to any depreciation or appreciation thereof in consequence of the merger or consolidation. The award of the appraisers, or of a majority of them, when confirmed by the court, shall be final and conclusive. The costs of such appraisal, including a reasonable fee to the appraisers, shall be fixed by the court and shall be assessed either upon the new or surviving association, or upon the dissenting shareholder, or upon both, in the discretion of the court. The award shall be payable only upon and simultaneously with, the surrender to the surviving or new association of the share certificate or certificates representing the shares of the dissenting shareholder. If the award shall not be paid by the surviving or new association within thirty days after the award was made by the appraisers, the amount of the award shall be a judgment against the surviving or new association, as the case may be, and may be collected as other judgments in such court are by law collectible. Upon the payment of the award or judgment, the dissenting shareholder shall cease to have any interest in such shares or in the surviving or new association. Unless the dissenting shareholder shall file a petition within the time herein limited, such shareholder and all persons claiming under him shall be conclusively presumed to have approved and ratified the merger or consolidation and shall be bound by the terms thereof. The right of the dissenting shareholder to be paid the fair value of his shares, as herein provided, shall cease if and when the association shall abandon the merger or consolidation.

Pennsylvania

Act of May 3, 1909, P. L. 408, Section 5, 15 PS Sec. 425.

Comments:

Section 5 of the Act of 1909, supra, provides that the shareholders voting against consolidation may, within thirty days after the adoption of the consolidation agreement, petition the court of the proper county to appoint appraisers to appraise the damages to such stockholders by the consolidation. It is the duty of the appraisers, so appointed, not only to award damages to the objecting stockholders, but to appraise the market value of their stock. The corporation may then elect to pay either the damages awarded or the value of the stock as ascertained, and if it elect to pay the value of the stock to the objecting holders, they are required to transfer the same to the corporation.

This proposed section is substantially similar to Section 907 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and Section 1408 of the proposed Banking Code and makes the following changes in the Pennsylvania law:

(a) The dissenting shareholder must look to the surviving or new corporation for payment of the fair value of his shares. Under the Pennsylvania act the shareholder must look to his own corporation. As the constituent corporations cease to exist upon the effective date of the merger or consolidation, it appears to be more logical for all dissenting shareholders of the constituent corporations to look to the surviving or new corporation for the fair value of their shares. The Uniform Act and the laws of Delaware, New Jersey, New York, Michigan, and many other states contain a similar requirement. On the other hand, California, like Pennsylvania, requires the demand to be made on the constituent corporation.

(b) A dissenting shareholder is entitled only to the fair value of his shares as of the day prior to the date on which the vote was taken approving the merger or consolidation, without regard to any depreciation or appreciation thereof in consequence of the merger or consolidation. Under the Act of 1909, the shareholder is entitled, in the discertion of the corporation, either to damages suffered by him as a result of the merger or consolidation, or the value of his stock. Pennsylvania appears to be the only state which contains such a provision. The laws of most states, including Delaware, New Jersey, Michigan, California, and others, permit a dissenting shareholder to recover only the fair value of his shares without regard to any depreciation or appreciation thereof in consequence of a merger or consolidation. Accordingly, this draft adopts the practice of other states in this respect, for the sake of uniformity.

(c) The shareholders and the surviving or new corporation are required to try to get together on the fair value of the shareholder's shares. If an agreement cannot be reached, then, and only then, are appraisers to be appointed. Under the Pennsylvania act a dissenting shareholder must, in the first instance, apply to the court for the appointment of appraisers to ascertain the value of the shares of the dissenting shareholder. It seems more logical to require the appointment of appraisers only in those instances where the new or surviving corporation and the dissenting shareholder cannot agree upon the fair value of his shares. The laws of Delaware, Illinois, Michigan, and California so provide.

This draft follows the Act of 1909 in providing for the appointment of appraisers to determine the fair value of the shares of a dissenting shareholder, and, in this respect, the provisions of other states are not uniform. In the California and Uniform Acts, if an agreement cannot be reached with the shareholder and the corporation, each appoints an appraiser and the two appraisers appoint a third one. In other states, as in Pennsylvania, the statutes provide for the appointment of appraisers and usually provide that their appraisal shall be submitted to the court, which may hear further evidence as to the fairness of the appraisal. It would seem that the practice of having the court appoint appraisers is unduly complicated, and that the practice suggested in the Uniform Act is more desirable. Discussion is invited whether it is desirable for Pennsylvania to follow the Uniform Act in this respect.

This draft differs from Section 907 of the proposed Business Corporation Law in that it gives absolute discretion to the court to asesss the costs of the appraisement necessitated by the petition of a dissenting shareholder upon the surviving or new association, or upon the dissenting shareholder, or upon both. This seems desirable in the case of building and loan associations.

This proposed section in effect covers the rights of both dissenting and non-assenting shareholders, and eliminates the rights existent under decision similar to Barnett v. Philadelphia Market Company, 218 Pa. 649 (1907). See also Nice Ball Bearing Company v. Mortgage B. & L. Association, decided by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, January 16, 1933, January term, 1932, No. 289.

Section 1009. Effective Date of Merger or Consolidation.—Upon the issuance of the certificate of merger or the certificate of consolidation by the Department of State, the merger or consolidation shall be effective. The certificate of merger or the certificate of consolidation shall be conclusive evidence of the performance of all conditions precedent to such consolidation or merger and the creation or existence of a new or surviving association, except as against the Commonwealth.

Comments:

Under the Act of 1909, "upon the issuing of new letters patent thereon by the Governor, the * * * merger shall be deemed to have taken place." Also, under the Act of 1909, no merger and consolidation shall be complete and no consolidated corporation shall do business of any kind until: (1) It shall have first obtained from the Governor of the Commonwealth new letters patent; (2) It shall have paid to the State Treasurer a bonus upon its capital stock in excess of the amount of capital stock of the several corporations so consolidating; and (3) It shall have filed with the Secretary of the Commonwealth a certificate from the Auditor General of the Commonwealth setting forth that all reports required by the Auditor General of the Commonwealth have been duly filed to the date of the proposed merger and that all taxes due the Commonwealth have been paid up to and including that date.

Under the proposed section, and under the sections in the proposed Business Corporation Law and the proposed Banking Code, upon which this proposed section is based, the merger and consolidation becomes effective upon the issuance of the certificate of merger or the certificate of consolidation by the Department of State. Before that department may issue such certificate, all taxes, fees and other charges required by law must first have been paid. The draft does not require the corporation to obtain from the Department of Revenue, which now carries out the functions formerly exercised by the Auditor General in the collection of taxes, a certificate that the taxes have been paid. It is submitted that the Department of State may readily ascertain this fact from the Department of Revenue, and that there is no necessity for imposing upon the association the duty of obtaining such certificate.

ARTICLE XI.

VOLUNTARY DISSOLUTION OF ASSOCIATIONS

Section 1101. Voluntary Dissolution by Incorporators.—A. The incorporators of an association, which has not issued any shares or commenced business, may effect the dissolution of the association by filing articles of dissolution with the Department of State. The articles of dissolution shall be executed in triplicate originals signed and verified by a majority of the incorporators, and shall set forth:

(1) The name of the association.

(2) The city, borough, or township in which it was to have its place of business.

(3) The date of its incorporation.

(4) That the association has not issued any shares or otherwise commenced business.

(5) That the amount, if any, actually paid in on subscriptions to its shares, less any part thereof disbursed for necessary expenses, has been returned to those entitled thereto.

(6) That no debts of the association remain unpaid.

(7) That two-thirds of the incorporators elect that the association be dissolved.

B. The triplicate originals of the articles of dissolution shall be delivered to the Department of State. If the Department of State finds that the articles conform to law, it shall endorse its approval upon each triplicate original, and when all fees and charges required by law have been paid, it shall forthwith transmit such triplicate originals to the Department of Banking which, if it shall approve the granting of the certificate of dissolution, shall sign its approval on the triplicate originals. It shall retain one such triplicate original and shall forthwith transmit the other two to the Department of State. The Department of State shall then issue, in duplicate, a certificate of dissolution. Upon the issuance of the certificate of dissolution, the existence of the association shall cease. The Department of State shall send one copy of the certificate of dissolution to the incorporators, or their representative, and shall send a copy of the articles of dissolution to the recorder of deeds of the county in which the place of business of the association in this Commonwealth was to be situated, who shall record the articles without fee therefor.

Comments:

This proposed section is based upon Section 1101 of the proposed Business Corporation Law and meets a contingency which is not provided for under existent statutes in Pennsylvania. If the incorporators of an association, decide before the expiration of two years after the procuring of a charter, to surrender their franchise it seems clear that they should be permitted to do so provided that they owe no debts, and this section of the draft provides the procedure for them to follow in order to accomplish such voluntary dissolution.

Section 1102. Voluntary Dissolution Permitted; Limitation.—Any association which has commenced business and which has issued shares, may elect to dissolve voluntarily and wind up its affairs in the manner and under the circumstances hereinafter provided by this act. However, if it shall appear to the Department, upon an examination of the business, assets, and affairs of the association, that its assets will probably be insufficient to pay in full its shareholders and creditors, it may, in its discretion, take possession of the business and property of the association, in which case the Secretary of Banking shall simultaneously and by operation of law take over possession and serve as receiver in the manner provided by law.

Comments:

The only provision in existent law applicable to the voluntary dissolution of building and loan associations is the Act of 1856, supra, which applies to all corporations, and which authorizes an association to petition the court for permission voluntarily to dissolve. The act does no more than empower courts to grant such permission. Yet at the present time there are hundreds of voluntary liquidations going on in this Commonwealth. It seems necessary that the statutory law at least outline the general plan for voluntary liquidations and ensure a proper safeguarding of the interests of creditors and shareholders.

It is planned in this proposed article to follow in so far as possible the voluntary plan of dissolution of a business corporation Law. Frequent deviations from that proposed act will, of course, have to be made herein. This proposed section provides that the Department may take possession in the regular manner provided by law if it shall appear upon examination that the assets of an association which decides to go into voluntary liquidation will in all likelihood be insufficient to pay in full the creditors and shareholders. It is to be noted, however, that this provision is permissive and does not place upon the Department the duty of taking possession.

Section 1103. Proposal and Ratification of Plan of a Voluntary Dissolution; Election of Liquidating Trustees.—A. A plan to dissolve voluntarily the affairs of an association shall be proposed, by resolution adopted by affirmative vote of two-thirds of all the directors of the association. Such resolution shall direct that the question of dissolution be submitted to a vote of the shareholders, at a meeting which may be either an annual meeting or a special meeting of the shareholders. Written notice stating that the purpose or one of the purposes of such meeting is to discuss the desirability of voluntarily dissolving the association shall be given to each shareholder of record entitled to vote at such meeting, within the time and in the manner provided in this act for the giving of notice for a meeting of shareholders. If such meeting be an annual meeting, such purpose shall be included in the notice of the annual meeting.[1]

B. The plan of voluntary dissolution proposed by the directors shall set forth in detail the number of liquidating trustees, which shall be one, three, or five, to be elected by the shareholders, the amount of the bond which shall be supplied by each of them, and the powers, duties, and compensation of such liquidating trustees.[2]

C. The resolution shall be declared adopted upon receiving the affirmative vote of the holders of at least a majority of the outstanding shares entitled to vote on the resolution if the resolution is adopted. The shareholders shall forthwith proceed to elect the number of liquidating trustees provided for in the plan of voluntary liquidation. If more than one liquidating trustee is to be elected, each shareholder shall have the right, in person or by proxy, to multiply the number of votes to which he may be entitled by the number of liquidating trustees to be elected, and he may cast his whole number of such votes for one candidate or he may distribute them among any two or more candidates. The candidates receiving the highest number of votes up to the number of liquidating trustees to be chosen shall be elected.[3]

Comments:

1. Section 1102 of the proposed Business Corporation Law, like the general corporation laws of many states, including Delaware, New Jersey, and California, provides that a business corporation may elect to dissolve voluntarily by written agreement signed by all the shareholders of record. That provision was introduced merely to take care of small corporations in which shares are owned by a very limited number of persons. It is, therefore, not included in this draft. Otherwise, the approval of the directors and the shareholders required by this proposed section is similar to that provided in the proposed Business Corporation Law.

2. It seems clear that the plan of voluntary liquidation formulated by the board of trustees should set forth in detail the powers and duties and the compensation of the liquidating trustees. As to the number of trustees, it seems that this should be permitted to vary according to the size of the association and the nature of its assets and securities. The number must, of course, be uneven, in order to avoid even divisions of opinion between or among the liquidating trustees. The amount of the bond required clearly should be set forth.

3. This provision permits the shareholders to vote cumulatively for liquidating trustees, where more than one is to be selected. This corresponds to the provision in Section 505 of this draft permitting shareholders to vote cumulatively for directors.

Section 1104.[1] Certificate of Election to Dissolve Voluntarily.—A. Upon the adoption at a meeting of the shareholders of a resolution for the voluntary dissolution of an association, pursuant to the provisions of this act, a certificate of election to dissolve shall be executed in triplicate, under the seal of the association, signed and verified by at least two duly authorized officers of the association, which shall set forth:

(1) The name of the association.

(2) The exact location of its place of business.

(3) The names and respective addresses, including the street an number, if any, of its officers.

(4) The names and respective addresses, including street and number, if any, of its directors.

(5) The number of directors voting for, and the number voting against, the proposed plan of voluntary dissolution.[2]

(6) The number of shares outstanding, the number of shares entitled to vote in respect to the dissolution of the association, and the number of shares voted for, and the number voted against the proposed plan of voluntary dissolution.

(7) The names and addresses of the proposed liquidating trustees who were elected at the shareholders' meeting, and the number of votes received by every candidate for the position of liquidating trustee.[3]

(8) The amount of the bond required to be supplied by each trustee.[4]

(9) The signed statement, under oath or affirmation, of each of the proposed liquidating trustees that he is willing to serve as liquidating trustee, subject to the provisions of this act and to the terms of the proposed plan of voluntary dissolution, that he will, so far as the duty devolves upon him, diligently and honestly liquidate the affairs of the association, and will not knowingly violate or permit to be violated any of the provisions of this act or of the proposed plan of voluntary dissolution.[5]

B. The triplicate originals of the certificate of election to dissolve shall be delivered to the Department of Banking. The Department of Banking shall then conduct an examination or an investigation or take such other action as it deems necessary, to determine whether to approve the plan of voluntary dissolution.[6]

Pennsylvania

Act of April 9, 1856, P. L. 293, 15 PS Sec. 501.

Comments:

1. Except as otherwise specifically noted, this proposed section corresponds to Section 1103 of the proposed Business Corporation Law. There is no statutory provision in Pennsylvania similar to this proposed section. Under the Act of 1856, supra, a corporation desiring to dissolve must file a petition with the court of common pleas. Under this and the succeeding sections of this draft a corporation may be voluntarily dissolved without a court proceeding. The provisions of this draft, which correspond to the provisions in Section 1103 of the proposed Business Corporation Law, are substantially similar to corresponding provisions in the general corporation Act of California and Illinois and in the Uniform Act.

2. Section 1103 of the proposed Business Corporation Law does not require the vote of the directors to be included in the certificate of election to dissolve. Since the assent of both the directors and the shareholders is required, it seems logical to introduce this provision in this draft.

3. The names and addresses of the liquidating trustees are, of course, important. Frequently the decision of the Department will be determined by the type of liquidating trustees who have been selected.

4. The amount of the bond required is of the greatest importance. It is essential as a protection for the shareholders and the creditors, and may be raised by the Department.

5. It seems desirable to require the certificate of election to dissolve to include a signed statement, under oath or affirmation, by the liquidating trustees that they are willing to serve as liquidating trustees under the provisions of this act and under the plan of voluntary dissolution. The Department should not be required to consider whether it should approve the plan until it is assured that the liquidating trustees are willing to serve. Also the filing of the oaths or affirmations of the liquidating trustees seems desirable.

6. Section 1103 of the proposed Business Coroporation Law, of course, provides that the certificates of election to dissolve shall be filed with the Department of State, who, having the papers in the proper form, shall approve the plan. It seems desirable, in the case of a building and loan association, to require that the certificate be sent directly to the Department of Banking, which shall then conduct such examination as shall be necessary to determine whether the plan of voluntary dissolution shall be approved. The duty of the Department of Banking to the shareholders of a building and loan association, is, as has been pointed out throughout the footnotes to this draft, very much different from that imposed by the Department of State with respect to business corporations. A proper safeguarding of interests of the shareholders of building and loan associations requires that the Department of Banking base its determination of whether to approve the plan of dissolution upon examination or investigation required to be made by this proposed article.

Section 1105. Aproval by Department of Certificate of Election to Dissolve Voluntarily; Filing; Commencing of Liquidation.—If the Department shall approve the certificate of election to dissolve, it shall sign its approval upon the triplicate originals of the certificate of election to dissolve. It shall retain one such triplicate original, it shall send one of the remaining triplicate originals to the Department of State for filing and one to the association, or its representative. The triplicate original shall be promptly recorded by the association or its representative, in the office of the recorder of deeds of the county in which the place of business of the association is situated. Upon the receipt by the association of the triplicate original of the certificate of election by the association, it shall cease to transact its business and the liquidating trustee or trustees, as the case may be, shall commence the liquidation of the association. The liquidating trustee or trustees shall thereafter be authorized to carry out, in his own name or in their own names as liquidating trustee or trustees, of the association, the powers granted to him or to them by the plan of voluntary liquidation.

Comments:

This proposed section provides that one of the triplicate originals shall be sent to the Department of State for filing. This is in order to keep the records of the Department of State complete with respect to the organic changes in every corporation.

The recording of the certificate of election to dissolve is, of course, necessary to keep the records of the recorder of deeds as to such association complete.

Query: Should this draft set forth in detail the powers and duties of a liquidating trustee, or should this be left to the individual plan of voluntary dissolution? As a partical matter the result will be that a uniform plan of voluntary dissolution, changed in certain details according to the requirements of particular associations, will be followed by most building and loan associations and will be recommended by the Department to such associations.

Section 1106. Notice to Creditors and Shareholders.—A. After the Department has approved the plan of voluntary dissolution and has transmitted to the association the triplicate original of the certificate of election to dissolve, bearing its signature, the liquidating trustee or trustees, as the case may be, shall forthwith give notice to all corporations or persons who appear upon the books or other records of the association as, or who are otherwise known to the liquidating trustee or trustees to be, creditors or shareholders of the association. Such notice shall be sent to or given at the address which appears upon the books or other records of the association for the partciular corporation or person, or if no address appears there, then to the last known address of such corporation or person.

The notice to each shareholder shall state the amount which the books or other records of the association show to be due to such shareholder. It shall also state that unless such shareholder shall present his claim, under oath or affirmation, within three months from the date of the giving of such notice, the amount shown to be due by the books of the association will be conclusively presumed to be correct.

The notice to each creditor, other than a shareholder, shall inform such creditor that he must present his claim, under oath or affirmation, within three months from the date of the giving of such notice, or else be barred from claiming an amount exceeding the amount shown to be due him on the books or other records of the association, and that he must present his claim, under oath or affirmation, within six months from the date of the giving of the notice or else be forever barred from sharing in any distribution of the assets of the association.

B. The liquidating trustee or trustees, as the case may be shall also forthwith advertise once a week for three successive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation, and in a legal newspaper, if any, that the association is being liquidated pursuant to a plan of voluntary liquidation; that all shareholders must present their claims, under oath or affirmation, within three months after the date specified in such advertisement, which shall not be earlier than the first day on which advertisement was made either in the newspaper of general circulation or in the legal newspaper, or be bound by the amount shown by the books or other records of the association to be due them, or if a shareholder does not appear upon the books or other records of the association to be a shareholder, that he must present his claim, under oath or affirmation, within six months from such date, or else be permanently barred from sharing in the distribution of the assets of the association; and that any creditor, other than a shareholder, must present his claim, under oath or affirmation, within three months from the date specified in the advertisement, whcih shall not be earlier than the first day on which advertisement was made either in the newspaper of general circulation or in the legal newspaper, or else be barred from claiming an amount exceeding the amount shown to be due him on the books or other records of the association, and that he must present his claim, under oath or affirmation, within six months from such date, or else be forever barred from sharing in any distribution of the assets of the association.

C. After the expiration of three months from the date of giving notice to creditors who appear as creditors upon the books or other records of the association, other than shareholders, the liquidating trustee or trustees, as the case may be, shall forthwith send a notice by registered mail to each creditor who has not yet presented his claim, under oath or affirmation, stating that unless he presents his claim, under oath or affirmation, within six months from the date upon which he was given the first notice required by this section, he will be forever barred from sharing in any distribution of the assets of the association. Such notice shall be sent to the address which appears for such creditor upon the books or other records of the asssociation, or if no address appears there, to his last known address.

D. The first insertion of an advertisement in the newspaper of general circulation or in the legal newspaper shall, in so far as possible, be made on the same day as the giving of notice to shareholders and creditors.

Comments:

This proposed section is entirely new. It is based, in so far as possible, upon Section 1001 of the proposed Department of Banking Code, which deals with the notice required to be given to shareholders and creditors by the Secretary of Banking in possession of a building and loan asosciation as receiver.

This proposed section requires that every corporation or person appearing on the books of the association as a shareholder or as a creditor be given notice in the manner required by Section 8 of this draft, that is, by personal service, by mail, or by telegraph. In addition, it requires that creditors, who have not presented their claim within three months after such notice be given an additional notice by registered mail. Finally, it provides for advertisement once a week for three successive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation and in a legal newspaper.

The notice thus required is greater than that provided in the proposed Department of Banking Code, but this seems desirable since a proceeding in voluntary dissolution does not involve the protection of the court which is present when the Secretary is liquidating as receiver.

The requirement that the notice contain the statements as to when the claim will be barred is necessitated by the provisions of Section 1107 of this draft.

Section 1107. Prohibition Upon Allowance of Claims.—The liquidating trustee or trustees, as the case may be, shall not allow any of the following claims:

(1) The claim of a shareholder who appears upon the books or other records of the association as a shareholder, for an amount in excess of the amount which the books or other records show to be due to him as a shareholder, unless he has presented such claim, under oath or affirmation, within three months after the giving of notice to him .

(2) The claim of a shareholder who does not appear upon the books or other records of the association as a shareholder, unless he has presented such claim, under oath or affirmation, within six months after the date of the publication of the first advertisement required by this act.

(3) The claim of any creditor, other than a shareholder, for an amount in excess of the amount shown to be due him on the books or other records of the association, unless he has presented such claim, under oath or affirmation, within three months after the giving of notice to him, or any claim at all of such creditor, unless he has presented such claim, under oath or affirmation, within six months after the giving of notice to him.

(4) The claim of any creditor, other than a shareholder, who does not appear upon the books or other records of the association as a creditor, unless he has presented such claim, under oath or affirmation, within six months after the date of the publication of the first advertisement required by this act.

Comments:

This proposed section is new in Pennsylvania law. It corresponds, in so far as possible, to the provisions in Article X of the proposed Department of Banking Code, but numerous changes have been made owing to the different nature of a voluntary dissolution. In most cases the reasons for each of the provisions in this proposed section are self-apparent. It is necessary to bar completely claims other than those of shareholders who appear as shareholders upon the books or other records of the association, in order to permit liquidating trustees to proceed with the liquidation of the association. It is believed that this draft protects, to the greatest extent possible, by the provisions for repeated notice, the interests of all shareholders and creditors. The provisions as to the barring of claims is necessary in all liquidations, and corresponds to those contained in the Department of Banking Code and in numerous statutes such as the Federal Bankruptcy Act.

Section 1108. Bonds of Liquidating Trustees.—Before any liquidating trustee shall enter upon his duties, he shall furnish to the association a bond in such amount as is specified in the certificate of election to dissolve, or in such greater amount as is required by the Department, with such corporate surety as is approved, by the Department, conditioned upon the faithful performance of his duties as liquidating trustee. The cost of the bond of a liquidating trustee may be paid out of the assets of the association. Such bond shall be filed with the Department.

Comments:

This provision is new in the law of Pennsylvania. The laws of virtually every state require that liquidating trustees give bonds to secure the faithful performance of their duties. This seems clearly necessary to safeguard the interests of shareholders and creditors. The ultimate control of the amount of such bond is placed in the Department, since it is believed that it is best qualified to determine the minimum amount which is necessary to protect the interests of those interested in the association.

Section 1109. Death or Resignation of Liquidating Trustees.—A. In any case in which a plan of voluntary dissolution provides for one liquidating trustee, and such liquidating trustee dies, resigns, or for any reason becomes unable to perform the duties of a liquidating trustee, the Department shall forthwith appoint a liquidating trustee to take his place.

B. In any case in which a plan of voluntary dissolution provides for three or five liquidating trustees, and one or more of such liquidating trustees die, resign, or for any reason become unable to perform the duties of liquidating trustees, the remaining liquidating trustees, if they constitute a majority of the whole number of liquidating trustees provided by the plan of voluntary dissolution, shall, by a majority vote, select a liquidating trustee or liquidating trustees to take the place of suc hdead, resigned, or incapacitated liquidating trustee, or trustees. If the number of liquidating trustees remaining does not constitute a majority of the whole number of liquidating trustees provided by the plan of voluntary liquidation, or if the number of remaining liquidating trustees constitutes such majority but they are equally divided in their votes for a new liquidating trustee or trustees, the Department shall forthwith appoint a liquidating trustee to take his place.

C. Any liquidating trustee appointed pursuant to the provisions of this section shall have the same powers and shall be subject to the same duties as the liquidating trustee, whose place he takes.

Comments:

This proposed section is new in Pennsylvania law. For the sake of completeness, it seems necessary to provide for what should happen in the case of the death or resignation of liquidating trustees. This proposed section attempts to cover every contingency which might occur.

Section 1110. Examination by Department; Taking Possession by Department.—A. The Department shall have the same power to examine or investigate the affairs of an association which is in the process of voluntary dissolution, and to assess the cost of such examination or investigation upon such association, as is provided by law in the case of associations which are not in the process of voluntary dissolution.[1]

B. The Department shall have the power to take possession of an association which is in the process of voluntary dissolution, and the Secretary of Banking automatically and by operation of law, to take over such possession as receiver, whenever it shall appear to the Department that the best interests of the creditors and shareholders of the association will be served by such action.[2]

Comments:

1. The supervision which the Department of Banking has over building and loan associations, should, in order to protect fully the interests of shareholders whose money is invested in such associations, continue until the association goes out of existence. In the case of a voluntary dissolution, where, different from a liquidation by a Secretary as receiver, the court does not supervise the liquidation, it seems clear that it is of particular importance that the Department continue to examine or investigate the affairs of the association.

2. As long as the assets of an association are in existence, the power of the Department to take possession whenever such action shall seem desirable and necessary in order to protect to the greatest possible extent the interest of the shareholders and the creditors of an association, should be continued. Numerous contingencies may develop in the voluntary liquidation of an association which would make the taking of possession by the Department necessary. This proposed section specifically enacts into law a practice which is frequently followed today.

Section 1111. Approval of Department Before Payment of Dividend.—A liquidating trustee or trustees, as the case may be, shall not distribute any of the assets of the associatoin in the form of dividends to shareholders, without the prior written approval of the Department.

Comments:

The plan of voluntary dissolution adopted by the shareholders will, according to the general set-up of this draft, contain the powers and duties of the liquidating trustee. However, since the liquidating trustee therein, like the Secretary as receiver of an association is required to file accounts before distributing dividends, it seems that a proper safeguard of the interests of creditors and shareholders of the association demand some check-up prior to the distribution of a dividend. Yet to institute a whole court procedure would defeat the purpose of a voluntary liquidation which is a saving of expense and a simplicity of procedure. Therefore, this draft places this duty upon the Department.

Section 1112. Order of Preference in Distribution.—A. The following shall be the order followed by the liquidating trustee or trustees, as the case may be, in the distribution pursuant to the provisions of this act, of the assets of any association which is being liquidated in pursuance of a plan of voluntary dissolution:

First, Any reasonable expense incurred by the liquidating trustee or trustees, as the case may be, in the management, liquidation, or distribution of the assets and affairs of the association; any fee or other debt owing to the Department for examinations, or other services rendered, or penalties incurred; any other claim of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania; and any other claim which is given a preference by law.

Second, Any claim of a creditor of the association, other than the claim of a shareholder arising from his ownership of shares.

Third, Any claim of a shareholder arising from his ownership of shares, whether such shares be installmnet, full-paid, prepaid, matured, or any other type. The amount of the claim arising from each share shall be the amount actually paid in on account of such share, less any amount lawfully deductible therefrom by the association, except in the case of a lawfully and properly matured share, in which case the amount of the claim shall be the actual par value of the share less any payment received on account thereof from the association and less any other amount lawfully deductible therefrom by the association.

B. Every claim enumerated above shall have the same rank and priority as every other claim in the same numbered paragraph, regardless of the order in which such claims are enumerated.

C. All claims provided for in this section shall be construed to refer only to claims presented to the liquidating trustee or trustees in the manner provided in this act and approved by him or them in accordance with the plan of dissolution.

Comments:

The order of preference in distribution required to be followed by liquidating trustees in this proposed section corresponds exactly, except for a minor change in terminology, to that contained in Section 1011 of the proposed Department of Banking Code. It seems clear that the liquidating trustees, in distributing the assets of an association, should follow the same order of preference as that established by law in the case of a liquidation by the Secretary of Banking as receiver.

Section 1113. Articles of Dissolution.—A. When the liquidating trustee or trustees, as the case may be, have completely liquidated and distributed the assets of an association in the manner provided by this act, articles of dissolution shall be executed in triplicate originals, signed and verified by the liquidating trustee or trustees, as the case may be, which shall set forth:

(1) The name of the association.

(2) The address, including the street and number, if any, of the place of business of the association.

(3) A statement that the association has theretofore filed with the Department of Banking and with the recorder of deeds of the county in which the place of business of the association is situated, a certificate of election to dissolve, and the date on which the certificate was approved by the Department of Banking.

(4) A statement that all the assets of the association have been liquidated and the distribution of the proceeds made, in the manner provided by this act.

(5) A statement that there are not suits pending against the association in any court.

B. The triplicate originals of the articles of dissolution shall be delivered to the Department of Banking. If the Department of Banking shall approve the articles, it shall endorse its approval upon each triplicate original, and shall issue in quadruplicate, a certificate of dissolution. Upon the issuance of the certificate of dissolution, the existence of the association shall cease. The Department of Banking shall retain one of the triplicate copies of the articles of dissolution and one of the quadruplicate copies of the certificate of dissolution; it shall send one such copy of the articles of dissolution and one such copy of the certificate of dissolution to the Department of State for filing; it shall send one copy of the articles of dissolution and one such copy of the certificate of dissolution to the liquidating trustee or trustees, as the case may be; and it shall send one copy of the quadruplicate certificate of dissolution to the recorder of deeds of the county in which the place of business of the association was situated, who shall record the certificate without fee therefor.

Comments:

The procedure outlined in this proposed section is entirely new to Pennsylvania law. Under the Act of 1925, supra, the Secretary of the Commonwealth is required to send to the prothonotary of the court in the county in which the place of business of the association is situated, a certificate of the receipt and recording of the certified copy of the decree and the prothonotary is required to record in the proper docket the receipt of such certificate. There is no provision for filing in the office of the recorder of deeds in which the original charter of the association is recorded, any evidence of the dissolution of the association. This proposed section follows, in so far as possible, Section 1105 of the proposed Business Corporation Law. However, it is the Department of Banking rather than the Department of State which issues the certificate of dissolution. This is obviously necessary under the whole plan established by this article for voluntary dissolutions. This proposed section provides for a copy of the articles of dissolution and of the certificate of dissolution to be sent to the Department of State, so that its files may be complete. The Department of Banking is also required to send to the recorder of deeds of the county in which the place of business of the association is located, a copy of the articles of dissolution and a copy of the certificate of dissolution. The recorder of deeds is required to record such documents without charge. The evidence of the dissolution of the association should be filed in the office of the recorder of deeds in which the original articles of the association are filed; otherwise the records of the recorder of deeds will not be complete.

ARTICLE XII

FORFEITURE OF CHARTER; GENERAL CRIMINAL PROVISIONS

Section 1201. Books, Records, and Accounts of Associations; Reports; Prohibitions; Penalty.—A. The total liabilities of each association to shareholders or creditors shall be set out in full upon the books or other records of the association, and in all reports required by law. It shall be unlawful for any association to reduce such liabilities for the purposes of concealing unadjusted losses, expense charges, loans, or for any other purpose. All such losses, expense charges, loans, or other items shall be set up in separate accounts on the books or other records of the association until adjusted or charged off. They shall not be charged in any manner whatsoever against dues or other payments made on account of shares or other credits for which the association may be liable.[1]

B. Whenever an association shall pledge or assign assets as security for any money borrowed by it, the amount of money borrowed, together with the assets pledged or assigned therefor, shall be set out in full on the books or other records of the association and in all reports required by law.[2]

C. An association shall not conceal any of its assets in any manner whatsoever upon its books or other records or in any report required by law, but an accurate and complete record shall be kept of the same. An association shall not, by any system of accounting or any device of bookkeeping, directly or indirectly, enter any of its assets upon its books in the name of any other corporation or person, or under any title, or designation, that is not truly descriptive thereof.[3]

D. An association shall not, except with the written approval of the Department, enter, or at any time carry, on its books, any real or personal property owned by it, at a valuation exceeding its actual cost to such association.[4]

E. An association shall preserve in such form and manner that they may be readily produced upon proper demand, all its records of original or final entries for a period of seven years from the date of making the las tentry on the same.[5]

F. An officer, director, or employe of an association, who knowingly violates any provision of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall, upon conviction thereof, be subject to imprisonment not exceeding one year, or a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or both.[6]

Comments:

1. This proposed subsection is based upon Sections 1 and 2 of the Act of 1907, supra.
2. This proposed subsection is based upon Section 3 of the Act of 1907, supra.
3. This proposed subsection is likewise based upon Section 3 of the Act of 1907, supra.
4. This proposed subsection is new. It merely enacts into law a rule which is enforced by the Department today in its supervision of building and loan associations. Its wisdom is apparent. This proposed subsection corresponds to Section 1501 of the proposed Banking Code, in which it is pointed out that a number of other states including New York, California, and New Jersey contain a similar prohibition.
5. This proposed subsection corresponds substantially to the Act of 1929, supra.
6. The criminal penalty corresponds to that imposed by Section 4 of the Act of 1907, supra. The Act of 1929, supra, does not contain a criminal provision but, since a violation of the prohibtion imposed by that act is as serious as, and can frequently become more serious than, a violation of the other provisions of this proposed section, a criminal provision should be included.

Section 1202. Repledging of Collateral.—A. Except as otherwise specifically provided in this act,[1] an association shall not repledge any property held by it in pledge or as collateral.

B. Any officer, director, or employe of an association, who knowingly repledges any property held by an association in pledge or as collateral, in any manner except as specifically authorized by this act shall be guilty of a misdeméanor and shall, upon conviction thereof, be subject to imprisonment for a period not exceeding one year, or a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or both.[2]

Comments:

1. See Section 802 of this draft.
2. This proposed section substantially reenacts the provisions of the Act of 1878, supra, except that the penalty is made uniform with that imposed by Section 1502 of the proposed Banking Code.

Section 1203. Relationship of Association with Employes of Department.—A. An association shall not grant or give any sum of money or other property, whether as a gift, credit, loan, or otherwise, either directly or indirectly, to the Secretary of Banking, or to any deputy, examiner, clerk or other employe of the Department. However any association may grant a loan to the Secretary of Banking, or any deputy, examiner, clerk, or other employe of the Department, if such loan is secured by a mortgage upon his own home, which meets all the terms and conditions provided by this act for mortgage loans and which in addition meets any additional conditions imposed and followed by such association in granting such loan.

B. Any officer, director, or employe of an association, who knowingly violates the provisions of this section, or who, on his own behalf, grants or gives any sum of money or other property, whether as a gift, credit, loan, or otherwise, either directly or indirectly, to the Secretary of Banking or to any deputy, examiner, clerk, or other employe of the Department shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall, upon conviction thereof, be subject to imprisonment for a period not exceeding one year, or a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or both; he shall also be subject to a further fine of a sum equal to the amount of the gift, credit, loan, or other sum of money, or the value of any other property given in violation of this section.

Comments:

This proposed section is the converse of Section 301 in the proposed Department of Banking Code. That section prohibits the accepting of any loan, gratuity, or credit by an employe of the Department from an association and this proposed section prohibits the granting of any such loan, gratuity, or credit by such association to an employe.

It seems desirable to permit the granting of mortgage loans provided that they are granted upon the same terms and conditions as provided by law and as otherwise imposed by the association. The New York law, which is one of the very few as strict in its provisions as this draft, makes this exception also

The penalties imposed in this proposed section correspond to those imposed in Section 301 of the proposed Department of Banking Code. Certainly our law should contain a prohibition upon such practices and a penalty for violation of such prohibition. The seriousness of the consequences which may result form the granting of loans or gratuities by an association to employes of the Department is so great that to render such acts criminal offenses seems not only justified but clearly necessary.

Section 1204. Forfeiture of Articles of Incorporation.—A. The articles of incorporation of an association shall be automatically forfeited by operation of law when

(1) It has not in any manner exercised at least one of the powers conferred upon it by its articles of incorporation, within two years after the issuance thereof.

(2) It has formerly exercised any of the powers conferred upon it by its articles but for a period of two years it has not exercised at least one of its powers.

(3) The Secretary after having taken possession of the business and property of an association, as receiver, has completely liquidated its assets.

(4) The Secretary, after having taken possession of the business and property of an association, as receiver, has surrendered possession to the association itself because he was without funds to liquidate the business and property.

(5) The Secretary, after having taken possession of the business and property of an association, as receiver, has surrendered to the association itself, or to any other corporation or person, the assets of the association in order to permit the carrying out of a special plan of liquidation.

(6) Liquidating trustees, pursuant to a plan of voluntary dissolution, have completely liquidated its assets, and the Department has filed the articles of dissolution with the recorder of deeds, pursuant to the provisions of this act.

B. Whenever it shall appear to the Department that any of the conditions shall, under the provisions of this section, effect the forfeiture of the articles of an association, it shall, except as otherwise specifically provided in this section, issue a certificate of forfeiture of the articles of incorporation in quadruplicate originals. One such quadruplicate original shall be filed with the Department, one sent to the last known address of the association, one to the Department of State, and one to the recorder of deeds of the county in which the place of business of the association is or was located, to be located, to be recorded without charge by such recorder of deeds.

C. If the articles of incorporation of an association have been forfeited in the manner provided by this section, the corporate powers may, whenever necessary to effect the liquidation and winding up of the business and property of such association, continue for a period of three years, but they shall not be considered in existence for any other purposes whatsoever.

Comments:

There seems to be no reason for not permitting an automatic forfeiture of a charter without court action whenever any of the circumstances outlined in this proposed section are existent. Of course, an association would have the right to appeal to the courts from any order of the Department causing the forfeiture of its articles of incorporation whenever it felt that such forfeiture was effected contrary to the provisions of this act.

Section 1205. Prohibition upon Doing of Business by Foreign Corporations.—A. Foreign corporations shall not transact the business of a building and loan association within this Commonwealth, nor maintain an office within this Commonwealth for the purpose of transacting such business. It shall be unlawful for any person to act within this Commonwealth as agent, solicitor, or local treasurer, to solicit or receive within this Commonwealth subscriptions to the shares of such corporation or payments therefor, to grant loans within this Commonwealth on behalf of such corporations, or to solicit applications therefor, or to receive within this Commonwealth on behalf of such corporation, interest, fees, fines, or premiums upon the shares or loans of such corporation, or in any other manner to transact business within this Commonwealth on behalf of such corporation.

B. Any individual who shall violate the prohibitions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof, shall be subject to imprisonment for a period not exceeding one year, or a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or both. He shall also be subject to a further fine equal to any moneys received by him within this Commonwealth in violation of this section. The corporation which such individual represents shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof, shall be subject to a fine of five thousand dollars; such corporation shall be subject to a further fine equal to the amount of any moneys received by such corporation or by its agent in violation of this section.

Building and Loan Associations

Act of May 11, 1901, P. L. 153, Section 1, 15 PS Sec. 3201-3220.

Comments:

The act of 1901, supra, established a complete system whereby foreign building and loan associations are authorized to do business in this Commonwealth. However, since the date of that act not a single foreign corporation has taken advantage of its provisions.

There is no need for foreign building and loan associations in this Commonwealth. Perhaps the best evidence of this is the fact that in the approximately thirty years since the enactment of the Act of 1901, there has not been a foreign building and loan association doing business in this Commonwealth. Therefore, this draft, like the law of New York, prohibits any foreign corporation from doing building and loan business in Pennsylvania. The criminal provisions are substantially similar to those contained in the Act of 1901, supra.

Section 1206. Perjury.—Anyone who shall wilfully and corruptly make a false statement under any oath or affirmation provided for in this act, or anyone who shall, by any means, procure or suborn any other person to do so, shall be guilty of the crime of perjury, and upon conviction thereof, shall be subject to the same punishment as is or may be provided by law for perjury.

Comments:

This provision is new.

The existent laws on corporations contain many provisions in which statements are required to be made under oath or affirmation. In some of these sections, the provisions that "any wilful false swearing" shall be perjury is included; in others it is omitted. Such procedure seems inadvisable. Therefore, in this draft, all mention of perjury is omitted, except in the above proposed general section.

It is probably not absolutely necessary to include any provision as to perjury. The Act of March 31, 1860, P. L. 382, Section 14, the section in the General Criminal Code dealing with perjury, provides that "if any person in taking any * * * oath or affirmation required, or that hereafter may be required by any act of assembly of this Commonwealth, shall be guilty of wilfully and corruptly making a false oath or affirmation," he shall be guilty of perjury. This seems clearly to cover the case of false swearing by an individual in the situations in which statements under oath or affirmation are required by this act, for example in reports of the condition of an institution, or in replies to the questions of an employe of the Department who is examining an institution.

However, there is some slight doubt as to the applicability of the portion quoted above from the Act of 1860, to oaths taken before administrative officers. Considering the importance of insuring good faith in the taking of the oath or affirmation required by this act, it seems advisable specifically to provide for the crime of perjury in this section of the proposed act.

Section 1207. Statute of Limitations for Violation of Act.[1]—Any prosecution for the commission of any criminal offense under the provisions of this act may be commenced at any time within six[2] years after the date upon which the alleged offense shall have been committed. However, if the person against whom such prosecution is brought shall not have been an inhabitant of this Commonwealth, or a usual resident therein, for six years, then such indictment may be commenced and prosecuted at any time within six years after he shall have become an inhabitant of, or usual resident within, this Commonwealth.

Comments:

1. The language of the Act of March 31, 1860, P. L. 427, Section 77, has been followed as far as possible in drafting this section. The law on criminal statutes of limitation is well settled on many points. It seems desirable, therefore, to follow the language in existence for the past sixty-five years or more, in so far as any substantive provisions or technical terms are involved.

2. The period of six years has been selected. Offenses committed under building and loan association laws are usually most difficult to discover. The longest period which can in fairness be imposed ought to be enacted into the law. Six years seems to meet this requirement. It is the period usually mentioned in recent criminal statutes regarding building and loan associations, such as the Act of April 25, 1929, P. L. 766, Section 3, 15 PS Sec. 956.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON UNEMPLOYMENT RELIEF

To the Members of the House of Representatives:

Your special committee appointed pursuant to House Resolution, Serial No. 14, "to study all resolutions and bills introduced with respect to unemployment and unemployment relief, and generally, to make a study of the situation in different parts of the Commonwealth, and the manner in which relief may be granted by the Legislature," respectfully submits the following report:

Your committee has held various meetings and considered in detail the problems which confront the Commonwealth, its subdivisions and its people. Early in its deliberations the committee came to the realization that any program which this Legislature could enact to relieve distress, arising from unemployment, would necessarily be planned to meet the needs of the immediate future, and that the Legislature of Pennsylvania was helpless to provide a program which would aid in any material degree in curing economic conditions in this State so long as Nation and world-wide conditions continued. Your committee, however, submits that any program which is adopted, which designed to meet the the needs of the immediate future, should at the same time, be planned to bring a return and sustain the morale of the greatest possible number of our unemployed.

Estimate of Unemployment

The latest figures available indicate that about 1,300,000 of our workers are totally unemployed or about 35 per centum of the working population. The number employed part-time is estimated at about 900,000. These figures are staggering. At the same time unemployment appears to be increasing, and, of course, every increase brings a steady decline in the resources upon which to draw to meet relief needs. Well-planned action is consequently required.

Traditions

The traditions of our people have always been that distress should be relieved by the people of the community in which it prevails, and prior to the present calamity the State has not appropriated any moneys to assist local communities to carry on relief work. Every small municipal unit, from the earliest days, was created a poor district. Beginning about 150 years ago, larger local units for the administration of poor relief were developed until today 52 counties are organized on the county unit basis. However, this development has been extremely slow, and in some parts of the Commonwealth is still resisted largely for traditional reasons. One township is willing to support its own citizens, but refuses to help the neighboring borough or township. No matter how these units may now be organized in various parts of the Commonwealth, the fact remains that they are the duly organized public relief agencies and are local and not State agencies.

Tendencies

When the depression suddenly came upon us, the resources of some of the people soon became exhausted and the burdens on the poor districts gradually increased. However, with the aid of welfare federations and community chests, relief work was successfully carried on by poor districts until April 1932, when, following the decision in the Talbot Act case upholding the action of the Legislature, poor district resources were supplemented by direct grants of money from the State. Not until September, 1932, did the State attempt to supplement the work of poor districts and charitable agencies through its own system of administering unemployment relief.

In the meantime, spurred by the efforts of President Hoover, all political units of government, to their fullest extent possible, accepted responsibility to stay the depression. Millions of dollars were poured into public works and improvements to provide made-work. But as the amount of direct relief necessarily increased, there was a slowing down of public work and a shift to a paternalism foreign to American institutions. Slowly, your committee believes, the idea is spreading that direct relief costs less than work relief and, with our limited resources, that form of relief which goes the farthest should be adopted.

Your committee believes this to be an unhealthy sign tending to destroy that spirit of responsibility traditional with communities and families, that their neighbors, relatives and friends must be taken care of by the community. If carried to its logical conclusion, it will result in breaking down the local charitable spirit of our people and in shifting the entire burden of relief to Government, which can provide the revenues to carry on only by means of taxation. The "dole" is the next step and its ultimate effect on the unemployed is graphically described in a recent report on the English system, in this language:

> "Long idle, they have dropped into a permanent rut, out of which full-fledged prosperity can not rescue them. Their muscles have become soft, their thoughts chronically soured and twisted. Their condition has been likened to shell shock, and some experts now refer to it as 'unemployment shock.'"

Consequently, in our planning we must be careful lest when prosperity arrives many of our people will be mentally and physically unable to take advantage of it. Employment must be provided to the fullest extent possible.

Your committee fully realizes that enough made-work can not be financed to give employment to all those now out of work, but at the same time if some made-work can be supplied comparatively as cheap as direct relief, the duty of the State seems clear. If amounts advanced by the State for direct relief can be expended for work performed, it should be our policy to encourage such a program.

The State has a duty to perform when other agencies fail, or when the emergency is so vast that only the State and Nation has sufficient strength to meet the unparalleled condition. The State, in view of present conditions, is justified in providing moneys to carry on necessary direct relief work, but these moneys should be expended only through the regularly organized agencies set up for that purpose and for work relief where possible. Its own efforts at administration should be limited to administering the made-work it can provide, and supervise the direct relief. If there are sections in the State where the present local relief agencies are incompetent or extravagant, then sufficient authority can be vested in a State agency to require that conditions be corrected or that a new agency be substituted. Your committee believes that in the main the poor districts are efficiently and economically administered, and that to secure a maximum result for the money expended agencies must be coordinated and duplication of effort must be avoided wherever possible.

Duties of Local Communities

Welfare agencies and community chests should be liberally supported by the people of every locality in order that local charities and character building agencies may continue, and that the community spirit of self-help and neighborhood-aid may be stimulated to its utmost. These agencies have a specific function to perform which is continuing and is entirely separate and apart from the problem of actually caring for the unemployed. All public moneys for unemployment relief, from whatever source derived, should be distributed through poor districts, either in the form of direct relief, or for work performed for governmental agencies, at least where these agencies are organized on a county-wide basis or include large territories densely populated.

Counties or poor districts should be given the power to levy an emergency relief occupation tax, equitably imposed on those able to pay to supplement taxes on real estate and State and Federal aid.

The Duty of the State

The State for many years has made appropriations to hospitals and homes for the care of the indigent sick, aged and dependent, has erected and is maintaining many mental health hospitals and is bearing a large part of the cost of maintaining mental patients therein, has erected and maintains sanatoria for tubercular patients and a hospital for crippled children, and is appropriating money specially for the education of the blind and deaf. These activities of the State should not be curtailed since they form a vital part of the program of relief.

In addition the State should continue to make available moneys for direct relief and supervise their expenditure by local political units. At the same time the State should provide for as much made-work as possible in order that the morale of at least a portion of the unemployed may be maintained, and these men held in readiness for absorption in industry when a revival of business comes.

Financial Program of the State

The Committee on Ways and Means is the proper one to suggest new or additional sources of revenue to provide moneys for unemployment relief, and your committee has no desire to trespass upon its functions, but it is charged in the resolution creating it with determining "the manner in which relief may be granted." Your committee consequently recommends:

(1) That through legislation which may be enacted as the result of the studies of the House Committee on State Government and the Joint Legislative Committee on Finances, sufficient moneys be saved out of the appropriations recommended by the Governor in his budget in order to enable the State to finance relief from June 1st to December 1st, of this year, and that this amount be not less than $5,000,000. This step will not unbalance the budget.

In the meantime the Committee on Ways and Means and the Committee on Appropriations should ascertain whether sufficient moneys are available in the present biennium to appropriate approximately $2,000,000 for the months of April and May to supplement the appropriation under the second Talbot Act.

(2) That to aid in maintaining a cash balance in the General Fund provision be made to secure an immediate return from the investment of the Commonwealth in the Philadelphia-Camden bridge. This probably can be accomplished by legislation such as Senate Bill No. 314 (which has passed the Senate), which authorizes the Bridge Commission to issue bonds to the State and the city of Philadelphia in lieu of selling these on the open market and paying over cash. With these bonds in the treasury, provision may be made for the sale of part of these bonds, from time to time, or the delivery to custodial funds of such bonds in lieu of transferring cash. The State of New Jersey should be urged to enact reciprocal legislation to accomplish this purpose. If New Jersey does not desire to accept these bonds and desires cash instead, it should be still willing to enact legislation to help Pennsylvaia.

(3) Your committee believes that the minimum amount which should be made available for the next biennium for unemployment relief should be not less than $20,000,000. As no additional taxes should be levied under present conditions, the only way to raise the money needed, over and above the savings effected, is by a bond issue.

At the special session of 1932 an amendment to the Constitution was adopted to authorize a bond issue of $25,000,000. This amendment suggested by the Governor in his call, was advanced by the Legislature of 1932 to meet the specific problem which now faces the State. While the State has heretofore adopted a wise "pay as you go" policy, we are now facing an unusual condition which must be met in an unusual manner. Pennsylvania is fortunate that not a single dollar of indebtedness exists against the General Fund. A debt of $25,000,000 is, in our opinion, justified under the circumstances.

Consequently, we recommend the enactment of Senate Bill No. 320 which provides that the question whether the State shall borrow $25,000,000 for current expenses be submitted to the electors in November of this year. The voters must be impressed with the fact that this borrowing is absolutely necessary if additional taxation is to be avoided, and that their failure to adopt the amendment will result in the convening of another special session, which will be forced to levy additional taxes to raise money for unemployment relief.

It may not be necessary to entirely exhaust this borrowing power if the $5,000,000 savings can be effected, and $2,000,000 appropriated in the current biennium, but it will at all times assure a balanced budget.

Your committee, of course, is proceeding on the theory that additional moneys will be made available by the Federal Government to supplement the efforts of the State, and that with a State appropriation of $25,500,000, a feasible program can be set up to provide relief until June 1, 1935, and further special sessions of the Legislature can be avoided.

Your commitee recommends a total appropriation for Unemployment Relief of $25,000,000 for the months of April and May this year, and for the next fiscal biennium. The sum of $1.-500,000 out of the proposed bond issue should at all times be held available for the expenses of issuing the bonds and for interest and sinking fund charges until June 1, 1935.

Of this $25,000,000, $2,000,000 would come out of the revenues of the present biennium, and $20,000,000 be appropriated to poor districts through the State Emergency Relief Board for direct and work relief for the next biennium, and $3,500,000 be retained for a State work program outlined hereafter.

State Work Relief Program

Your committee recommends that work camps be established in forest areas exclusively for unmarried residents and men without home responsibilities. Initially these men should be quartered in tents and be required to build their own barracks. They should be provided with clothing, bedding and board. No restraints beyond ordinary discipline should prevail. A wage of about $5.00 a month should be granted. Entry to the camps should be from all counties of the State on some equitable ratio. These men should be employed under proper supervision in preparing fire wood for needy families, clearing underbrush, establishing fire lanes, planting trees, building log huts for campers, etc. Such work would be performed under most healthful conditions and would not compete with existing industry.

A most important phase would be to establish a special forest camp or camps for migratory youths whose conditions are now giving concern to the whole nation. Many of these youths under proper training could no doubt be reclaimed for the future. Congress has recognized this problem and a bill is pending to house 88,000 of these young men in army camps.

It is believed that these men can be employed in this manner as cheaply as if they were maintained in their local communities under a direct relief system, and at the same time they would be employed in useful work which will be of lasting benefit.

To carry such a program into effect it is recommended that $3,500,000 be specifically appropriated to the State Emergency Relief Board, or such other body as may be set up, the details of organization and administration to be worked out by that board. This amount should be supplemented to the extent of at least $1,500,000 from Federal moneys if they can be made available for such purposes.

Your committee believes a very large number of men can be employed in this manner and the local communities relieved of a troublesome problem. These men by this kind of work will be fitted to be absorbed in industry when it revives.

The Department of Forests and Waters in its Bulletin No. 51 issued this year, says that reforesting Pennsylvania's idle land is a self-liquidating project. Four million acres await development. Forest consumption outruns present growth by about 40%, and Pennsylvania grows less than 16% of the lumber used in the State.

There are State-owned forest areas in 36 of our counties and there are possibilities of establishing acreas in at least 57 to 60 of our 67 counties. The program which we are submitting will aid to rapidly advance Pennsylvania forest activities and speed the day when this State can again become self-sustaining in its supply of lumber. There is an opportunity for Pennsylvania to become a leader in this movement and if it would be adopted Nation-wide it would result in the employment of several millions of men.

Your committee also believes that if the forestry program outlined in this report is adopted by the Legislature, that provision should be made for the future acquisition of additional State forest lands and recommends that a Constitutional amendment be proposed by the Legislature to authorize the borrowing of money for such acquisitions. This will enable the State to develop a comprehensive forestry program which may be coordinated with the Nation-wide program such as was suggested by the President in his program announced in the morning papers of March 11th, in which he recommends the establishment of camps which would be located at points strategic to some major reforestation, reclamation, flood control, or public construction project under Government supervision. A similar program was recommended by the chairman of this committee September 14th, 1931, to the Governor of Pennsylvania, and pamphlets describing this proposed program were at that time widely circulated. House Bill No. 751 proposes such a bond issue.

This same idea might also be extended to housing men on idle lands. A recent newspaper article summarizes the situation as follows:

> "If Pennsylvania utilizes its idle land and its idle men it can, barring drought, floods or frost, raise enough to eat, and at a comparatively small cost. It's ridiculous to suppose that the State will permit 500,000 men to stand idle all Spring and Summer while those who are working toil and save in order to feed the idle next Winter. There are mighty few counties in Pennsylvania that can not, if they mobilize the resources at their disposal, raise enough to eat next Winter. Unemployment relief demands can be reduced 60 per cent by intelligent concerted action during the coming Summer."

A plan is also attached to this report for the employment of families on farms by cooperative agreement with farmers.

Fact Finding Commission

In connection with the State work program the committee recommends that the State Emergency Relief Board set up a fact-finding committee of six persons, none of whom shall be paid nor members of the board, to study the possibilities of providing work relief and methods of financing the same and to contact other states and the Federal government with a view of framing a Nation-wide program.

Local Work Relief Program

Your committee recommends that so far as possible the moneys expended by local poor districts be used for work relief. It is not our purpose to outline in detail the plans to be adopted. Each community can work out the details of its own plan. There is appended to this report a statement showing the successful operation of such a plan in Dauphin County, in connection with the relief work of the Dauphin County Poor District. In addition there is attached to this report an outline of a program to employ families on farms with the voluntary cooperation of farmers, and for the establishment of exchanges where agricultural products produced on such farms may be bartered for goods manufactured by unemployed in idle factories. These are steps which may be taken voluntarily by communities and need no supporting legislation.

Other Pertinent Subjects

Your committee believes that consideration should be given to the plight of mortgagors and the loss of homesteads. This situation is an integral part of the unemployment problem. Homeless people constitute a specific problem and every means should be taken to stop the enlargement of this class. At least two bills already introduced merit the attention of the Legislature, and if enacted, may aid in relieving mortgagors and at the same time do no actual injustice to the mortgagees.

House Bill No. 962 seeks to protect the mortgagor where there is a foreclosure and the property purchased by the mortgagee, so that a credit will be given on the debt equal to the value of the property, This would prohibit the common practice of acquiring property at foreclosures for a nominal sum and at the same time still leave the major portion of the debt due.

House Bill No. 1053, which is similar to a law enacted in the State of Iowa, proposes to suspend mortgage foreclosures temporarily, in the mean time using the rents and profits derived from such real estate for taxes, insurance and maintenance, any amount in excess of these charges to be distributed by the Court.

Your committee also believes that one of the vital elements in any relief program is the reduction of local taxes on real estate, and to this end recommends that an additional one-half cent of the present gasoline tax be appropriated out of the Motor License Fund to counties on the same basis as the present one-half cent, and that each county be required to reallocate the amount it receives to cities and boroughs within its limits on a population basis and retain for the county that portion which represents the amount based on the population in the townships, and that these sums so allocated be expended for general purposes in order to relieve the tax on real estate.

Your committee also believes that a legislative agency should be set up with a sufficient and competent staff to gather, assemble and digest authoritative information for the benefit of the legislation branch of government, in order to enable the Legislature to have reliable financial and other information and studies of legislation which impose costs and expenses on government available which will enable it to make decisions when the Legislature is in session.

Summary of Recommendations

1. That $25,500,000 be appropriated for relief purposes, $2,000,000 for April and May of the present biennium, $20,000,000 for direct and local work relief for the next fiscal biennium and $3,500,000 for State work relief.

2. That the $20,000,000 appropriated by the State for direct and work relief be paid over to poor districts, with the possible exception of those counties which have only borough and township poor districts. That in such cases, the method of distribution and expenditure be determined by the State Emergency Relief Board—said Board to use the county commissioners where deemed feasible. That in Philadelphia the State-aid allowed to be given to the Department of Welfare of the city for the entire city, or that such other plan be adopted as is acceptable to that city and the State Emergency Relief Board.

3. That the State Emergency Relief Board be given an adequate appropriation to supervise the work of poor boards, and power to deny aid to any poor board which is incompetent or extravagant and to substitute another agency in its stead.

4. That poor boards or counties be given power to levy a special occupation tax in addition to the present occupation tax for unemployment relief purposes only, the measure to be permissive.

5. That the State Emergency Relief Board be empowered to set up work camps in or adjacent to State forests for single and migratory men resident in this State, and provide for the administration of the same, and for such purposes be given broad powers and be permitted to work out the details, and that this work relief program be coordinated with the work of other states and the National Government. That, if possible, provision be made to house families on agricultural areas.

6. That local welfare federations and community organizations be urged to stimulate local spirit and voluntary contributions of money to aid government to carry on without increased taxation.

7. That legislation be enacted to aid mortgagors.

8. That legislation be enacted to return an additional one-half cent of the gasoline tax to counties, cities and boroughs.

9. That a legislative agency be created to make studies for the legislative branch of Government.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

To the Committee on Unemployment Relief of the House of Representatives:

(Extracts from Report)

Gentlemen:

At the request of your Chairman, I have the honor to present to your committee the following with respect to unemployment relief work in Dauphin County.

The situation in Dauphin County presents many varied problems. This county has coal industry, steel plants, a large railroad industry, and large agricultural sections, and is inhabitated by a cosmopolitan population. Unemployment conditions are bad in most sections of the county, except around Hershey, which, with its neighboring territory, has a population of about 8,000 people. Here no problem exists due to the policy of the Hershey Chocolate Company. The influence of this company is felt also in a considerable portion of Lebanon County, and an interview with the management of this company and the way in which employment problems are handled by it, would be educational and instructive to the committee.

Dauphin County is wedded to work relief wherever it is feasible. Work may be provided on community projects, such as street grading and repairing, development of athletic fields, particularly in conjunction with public schools, work on sewers and sewer systems, disposal plants and comfort stations, and such other work as may be projected by school districts, boroughs, townships, and counties.

The borough of Hummelstown in Dauphin County for instance, has been organized as a center for the distribution of work relief. The area comprises all of Derry Township, and practically the lower end of Dauphin County. On November 12, 1932, work was begun on grading a 6¾ acre school plot as an athletic field, and the building of two blocks of highway along the boundaries of said plot. All stone for the highway was quarried from this plot. Approximately 9300 cubic yards of ground was excavated, and a like amount deposited as a fill. Because of favorable weather conditions during the month of January, the greater part of this work was completed by January 31st. The maximum number of men employed in any given week was 242, and the average per week for the entire month, was 220. No man was employed more than 2 days per week, and the work was distributed as follows: 1 day per week for single men, and 2 days per week for married men. At the end of January there were 322 relief cases in this section. Of this number, 38 were direct relief cases from whom no work could be expected, and all of the remainder 284 in number rendered either one or two days' work for the relief orders received.

Some men were also employed on a sewer construction project in addition to the school plot referred to above. The rate of compensation was thirty cents per hour for eight hours. No order for any week was in excess of $4.80. In a majority of the cases, the recipient also rendered service for additional fuel orders.

All relief work projected should be approved by the officers of the district furnishing the relief, and the prime object in view should be to relieve distress caused by unemployment, rather than to accomplish the greatest amount of benefit to the community from the use of the labor. Any project may be undertaken so long as it is of a public nature with no benefit to be derived therefrom by private interests.

Respectfully submitted,

RUSSELL B. STONER.

Part I Suggested Farm Improvements Unemployment Relief Program.

Part II Suggested Establishment of Exchanges for Agricultural Food Products and Manufactured Commodities in a Reciprocal Relief Program of Rural and Urban Areas.

Part I

A plan for the improvement of individual farm properties by returning to the land, from industrial centers, families whose unemployed members have a background of agricultural experience is proposed for the consideration of the relief authorities. The program would require definite cooperation of the farmers and would be subject to gradual development, on a county unit basis, through carefully planned procedure.

County officials receiving allocations of State funds for unemployment relief work would create a special committee, to include, among other members, the County Farm Agent, the County Superintendent of Schools and the Superintendent of Schools from the larger municipal units of the county.

Two primary functions to be performed by the committee or under its supervision, would be:

1. To list unemployed heads of families, residing in municipalities of the county, whose earlier years have been spent on farms and who consequently have practical knowledge of farm work.
2. To enroll farmers of the county who have unoccupied tenant houses on their farms and who agree to have such houses occupied by families, from urban districts, whose unemployed adult members have had experience in farm work.

Subsequent to the development of such records, the committee and the farm owner would, in each case after investigation and on a mutually acceptable basis, select the family to occupy the farm tenant house. The plan does not contemplate the supplanting or discharge of men now employed by farm owners. The new tenants would be expected to work exclusively at tasks of a character to build up the farmer's property and enhance his capital investment as—repairing, painting and improving generally buildings, fences and farm equipment; digging drainage ditches, clearing woodlots and performing other work of a similar nature.

Such tenancies would be definitely limited to one year, during which period financial relief factors would enter into the relationship and the general agreement would be on the following proposed basis:

1. The farmer would be entitled to the services of the adult members of the tenant family, including children over sixteen years of age, on the same basis as prevails in regular farm employment in the district.
2. The farmer would receive from the relief funds of the county, fifty cents weekly for each child in the family.
3. The farmer would provide suitable clothing and food stuffs for the use and maintenance of the family, in addition to the tenant house, without charge.
4. The county would provide the tenant family each week with twenty-five cents for each child and one dollar for the family as a unit for the purchase of commodities not included in the farmer's contribution of food and clothing.

The preceding arrangement would cost the county from relief funds, for an average family of five—parents and three children—$1.50 as a weekly subsidy to the farmer for providing food, clothing and residence, and $1.75 to the family direct for incidental commodities, a weekly total of $3.25.

The committee appointed by the county authorities in relief matters would exercise jurisdiction over the agreement during the year it remains in force, and would make any necessary adjustment or arrangement of conditions that might arise in the relationship during that period.

It is further proposed that the county provide for the erection of emergency tenant houses on farms where the owners agree to accept a family on the terms previously outlined, but where no tenant house is available.

If forest camps be established in the wooded areas of the Commonwealth for homeless and unmarried men without dependents, lumber could be prepared in such camps according to standard specifications for a uniform type of log cabin tenant house. The lumber and materials necessary for such structures would be furnished by the State and transported to the place of construction by trucks of the State Highway Department.

The county would provide the labor necessary for the erection of the buildings by selected crews of skilled workers from the forces of men engaged in work relief projects in the county. The cabins or tenant houses thus erected would remain the property of the State or county but could not be removed within a specified time. The farm land on which the buildings would be placed could be leased by the county from the farmer at a nominal sum for a designated period of time.

The general project of returning to the rural sections families with farm experience would alleviate municipal relief problems and remove from dangerous idleness many unemployed industrial workers who migrated to the cities in times of unusual industrial activity.

Limiting the initial contract between the farmer and the tenant family to one year would provide a basis for reestablishment of the tenant at the end of that period through his own efforts in the continuance of his rural residence.

As each project is on a county unit basis, provisions could be made by special legislation that any additional public school cost accruing to any district through the operation of the plan would be borne by the county.

Part II

Barter of farm produce for manufactured articles, essential to comfortable living, could be developed in the counties through definitely established warehouse exchanges for the mutual benefit of the agricultural and industrial sections. Such procedure could become an important and valuable phase of a county's relief program.

Relief authorities in a county could create committees, including commercial and industrial leaders, to:

1. Determine what idle factories in the county, equipped to produce apparel and similar living necessities, could be advantageously resored to operation on a work relief basis.
2. List experiences industrial workers, preferably unemployed heads of families, available for the operation of such factories.
3. Determine available and advantageously located buildings that could be utilized as central warehouse exchanges in receiving farm food products offered in barter for articles manufactured in the factories on the work relief basis.
4. Decide upon advisability of issuing warehouse scrip in denominations corresponding to currency for convenience in transactions that could not be immediately consummated on a barter basis.

Definite local associations could be organized to supervise and control the operation of the warehouse exchanges in the event that more than one were established in a county.

Transactions at the warehouses would be limited exclusively to barter among work relief beneficiaries in the industrial sections and the farmers whose tenant houses are occupied by work relief families in the agricultural districts.

Currency could not be accepted in any transactions and no portion of the stores of food stuffs or commodities would be entered in competition with regular business.

Current market values would fix the prices of all goods offered at the central warehouses and scrip would, when necessary for uncompleted barter transactions, be issued on that basis. The scrip would have negotiable value only at the exchanges and as offered by work relief registrants definitely on the records of the exchanges.

Details of overhead and raw material costs in connection with the operation of factories in the industrial sections would be considered by the committees as a part of the formulation of the general plan.

Development of the barter facilities within a county might later be followed by interchange of commodities between counties maintaining constantly the relief and non-competitive features of the general plan.

It is hoped that the plans proposed in this agenda may be determined feasible and of advantage in coping with the tremendous unemployment relief problem for which the responsibility unquestionably rests in a large measure upon the counties.

It will be necessary for the counties ultimately to recognize that responsibility and to build up experiences that will provide a broad basis for similar action by governmental units beyond the limits of Pennsylvania. National procedure will be based upon activities found to be practical and of value in the local districts.

To the General Assembly, Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, Session of 1933.

The Mineral and Forest Land Taxation Commission of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, respectfully submits the following report:

At the Legislative Session of 1931, the following joint resolution (1931 P. L. 1407) was duly enacted:

No. 357

A Joint Resolution authorizing the appointment of a commission to study, investigate, and report upon the taxation of forest and mineral lands, and the distribution and application of such tax; and making an appropriation.

Whereas, The present method of taxation of forest lands and minerals in the land is inequitable and not fair to the owner thereof, and a system which would levy a tax thereon based on the value of production of such lands might prove more equitable; therefore,

Section 1. Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, That a commission, consisting of two Senators to be appointed by the President pro tempore of the Senate, three Members of the House of Representatives to be appointed by the Speaker thereof, and four citizens of the Commonwealth to be appointed by the Speaker thereof, and four citizens of the Commonwealth to be appointed by the Governor, to be known as the Mineral and Forest Land Commission, is hereby created for the purpose of investigating, studying and reporting upon the existing method of taxing forest lands and minerals in the land and any other and more equitable method of collecting taxes on minerals and forests and ways for the distribution of the proceeds of any tax or taxes proposed.

Section 2. Said commission shall meet and organize upon the call of the Governor, and select one of the members thereof as its chairman and one as vice-chairman. The commission shall have power to sit after the adjournment of the Legislature and to hold its meetings at such times and in such places, within this Commonwealth, as it may deem advisable. The report of the said commission, including the draft or drafts of any act or acts of Assembly deemed necessary by it as a result of its study and investigation, shall be made to the Legislature of one thousand nine hundred and thirty-three upon the first day of its session or as soon thereafter as possible.

Section 3. Said commission shall have power to employ such attorneys, experts, stenographers, or other persons as it may consider necessary to assist in the proper performance of the duties imposed by this resolution, and to fix their compensation. The members of said commission shall serve without compensation for their services, but shall receive all necessary traveling and other expenses incurred by them in the performance of the duties imposed upon them by this resolution.

Section 4. The sum of ten thousand ($10,000) dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby specifically appropriated for the purpose of paying the expenses of the members of said commission and the compensation and expenses of its employes. The moneys hereby appropriated shall be paid according to law, upon requisition, on the Auditor General, signed by the chairman or vice-chairman of said commission.

Approved—The 26th day of June, A. D. 1931 in the sum of $5.000. I withhold my approval from the remainder of said appropriation because of insufficient State revenue.

GIFFORD PINCHOT.

I. Introduction and General Discussion

Pursuant to the foregoing resolution, the following persons were appointed members of the Commission:

By the President pro tempore of the Senate: Hon. Chauncey W. Parkinson, Waynesburg, Pa.; Hon. John W. Howell, Scranton, Pa.

By the Speaker of the House of Representatives: Hon. John M. Flynn, Ridgway, Pa.; Hon. Elder J. Peelor, Indiana, Pa.; Hon. Thomas B. Wilson, Bradford, Pa.

By the Governor of the Commonwealth: Mr. George W. Hibbs, Uniontown, Pa.; Mr. John L. Glenn, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Dr. Elmer A. Holbrook (Dean of the University of Pittsburgh Schools of Engineering and Mines), Pittsburgh, Pa.; Dr. F. P. Weaver (Head Department of Agricultural Economics of the Pennsylvania State College), State College, Pa.

The members of the Commission met with the Governor at Harrisburg, on November 24, 1931, after which it organized by electing Hon. Chauncey W. Parkinson, Chairman and Dr. E. A. Ziegler, Director of the Pennsylvania Forest Research Institute of Mont Alto, as Secretary of the Commission. Subsequently on December 8, 1932, the Commission employed Homer L. Burchinal, mining engineer of Uniontown, and Obed K. Price, attorney of Pittsburgh, and they participated in all its deliberations thereafter.

After its organization, meetings of the Commission were held as follows:

On December 14, 1931, an executive meeting at Harrisburg.

On January 14, 1932, an executive meeting at Harrisburg.

On February 25, 1932, a public hearing at Washington, for special consideration of bituminous coal land taxation.

On October 20, 1932, a public hearing at Scranton, for special consideration of anthracite land taxation.

On December 8, 1932, an executive meeting at Pittsburgh.

On December 19, 1932, a public hearing at Pittsburgh for special consideration of taxation with respect to oil and gas properties, followed by an executive session on December 20.

On January 3 and 4, 1933, an executive meeting at Harrisburg, and pursuant to previous invitation a brief conference was had with the Governor.

On January 11, 1933, an executive meeting at Harrisburg.

At the public hearings, formal papers were presented on different phases of the particular subject under consideration, numerous voluntary suggestions were offered and specific information was given, and the Commission has resorted to public records and other sources of authentic information within the range of its study.

In its public hearings, the Commission's studies have been confined to the taxation of anthracite and bituminous coal, petroleum (oil), and natural gas, on account of the fact that these represent the principal mineral resources of the Commonwealth and the further fact that its other mineral resources such as cement rock, limestone, building stones, slate, clays, shales, iron ore, sand and gravel, while representing valuable deposits, do not present such general problems with respect to taxation. Generally speaking, it will be found that the title to anthracite and bituminous coal, petroleum, and natural gas, where such minerals are operated com-mercially, are severed and held distinct from the titles to the remainder of the land, while in the case of other mineral resources, the titles for the most part remain unsevered and therefore are not separately taxed as minerals. The Commission accordingly decided to confine its inquiry in public hearings to the first named mineral resources. Forest land taxation was considered as a subject by itself.

The taxation of mineral lands in this Commonwealth, whether or not the titles thereto are severed from titles to the surface, is the taxation of real estate, and the present basis for such taxation is assessments based on market values. A solid immovable mineral deposit, such as coal, can be easily located and its quality and its extent fairly determined, and this has been done within the regions of commercial exploitation, and assessments for taxation purposes of such deposits have long been established under the general althority of the laws to assess all real estate. However, it has been recognized much more difficult to measure the extent of a deposit such as petroleum and appraise its value while still in the land, although developed commercially, and practically impossible in the case of natural gas.

The authority of the Commission as set forth in the joint resolution constituting it, suggests that a method of taxation based on the value of production of mineral and forest lands might prove more equitable than the existing method and directs the Commission to study the existing and any other more equitable method for the taxation thereof.

The idea of a production tax for mineral and forest lands has been developing for some time. In its valuable and informative report filed with the General Assembly at the Session of 1925, the Pennsylvania Tax Commission (headed by Hon. Franklin Spencer Edmonds and commonly referred to as the Edmonds Commission), in connection with its discussion of Local Revenues and Taxation, said:

"(d) The methods of assessment of lands containing minerals and metals deserve serious study. During the past years the assessments of coal lands have been materially increased, in a large number of localities, thereby leading to a well-founded complaint that assessment on the basis of market value ought not to be applied to lands containing unmined coal and other minerals, but that the assessment should be based upon a combination of the principles of market value and output. This question has been carefully considered in some of the western states where similar conditions exist and the Commission believes that the methods of these states should be carefully studied with reference to their applicability to Pennsylvania.

"The same arguments apply with some force to other natural resources, including perhaps timber. The case of timber is complicated by the distinction between mature and unmarketable or growing timber. There is the question whether the latter should not properly be treated simply as a crop. The output or yield tax as applied to timber is open to the objections of irregularity of revenue and possible arbitrary regulation at the time when the timber should be cut. No matter what the method employed, so long as there is excessive taxation, the practice of forestry on private lands will be restrained.
